Mr. Thein has traveled extensively throughout the southern and middle states, the Black Hills of Wyoming, and through the British possessions. In political matters he has always been affiliated with the Republican party. His upright and honorable career has brought him the success which is due his honest efforts, and should be an encouragement to the young men of the present generation, as in it they can see what thrift and industry, honesty and integrity can always accomplish. A progressive and wide-awake German citizen, Mr. Thein can well be proud of the reputation he has made in the surrounding community.

C. J. JOHNSON.

C. J. Johnson, of Newark township, Kearney county, Nebraska, has gathered about him an extensive estate by his diligence and good management, supplemented by honest dealings. He is a man of untiring energy, intelligence and good judgment, and well merits his high standing as an agriculturist and citizen.

Mr. Johnson is a native of this state, born in 1877. His father, B. A. Johnson, came to Nebraska in 1877, settling in this county, taking up a homestead in section 20, township 8, range 14, engaging in farming, and from the first was very successful, gradually adding more land to his first farm of one hundred and sixty acres until he was proprietor of about seven hundred acres. He died in 1899, aged sixty-three years, and his sons still own the farm to which they have added adjoining lands, their place in all containing twenty-two hundred acres which is owned by the six children—three brothers and three sisters. They attend strictly to the working of their ranch, and have a very valuable estate. Their father and mother came to America from Sweden in 1877, and with the customary industry of that nationality they labored hard and faithfully to build up their home and gain a competency, proving most worthy citizens and gaining the respect and esteem of all by their honesty and good citizenship. The brothers and sisters are extremely careful and industrious about all their affairs, and our subject, who is administrator of the estate of his father, is slow to act and thoughtful, weighing all matters of importance well before deciding a point, but after investigation he acts with decision and promptness. The father and mother of Mr. Johnson began on this farm in a very small way, and by great industry and frugality amassed a large fortune in this Platte river valley land, leaving a comfortable estate to each of their children, all of whom are highly esteemed. Whatever they aim to do each day on the ranch or elsewhere, they accomplish ere night falls, letting no objection or allurements turn them from the work or course marked out, and it is such young men and women as these who will contribute their share to making Nebraska a great and rich state. Mr. Johnson has six hundred acres of fine pasture, and farms eight hundred acres, all operated by himself and brothers, Frank J. and Oscar J., the three working together in perfect harmony. They handle from two to three hundred cattle and two hundred hogs each year. Each year they raise about twenty-five thousand bushels of grain. They rent out a part of their land also. The three sisters, Alma, Ada and Huldah, live on the ranch, and all of the children were born on their present homestead. They are members of the Lutheran church.

WILLIAM J. ALLEN.

One of the leading old settlers of Cherry county, Nebraska, who has aided materially in the development and growth of this section, is the gentleman whose name heads this review. He has experienced all the hard times that fell to the lot of the pioneers in Nebraska and later through the dry years suffered much loss and deprivation, and is glad that the time has come when these things are changed and the people of this section can live in peace and plenty and enjoy the fruits of their hard labors.

Mr. Allen was born in Green county, Kentucky, in 1842. He was reared and educated on his grandfather's farm there and in 1859 moved with his parents to Illinois. His father, Alexander Allen, and his mother, who was Mary Barrett before her marriage, were both natives of Kentucky, living on the farm belonging to the former's father until their family of eight children were reared. Our subject was the eldest, and at the age of twenty he enlisted in the One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois Regiment, Second Division, West Brigade, and served his country in the great struggle for freedom for three years. At the close of the war the family came west, locating in Johnson county, Nebraska, where our subject followed farming and freighting for a time, later being employed in railroad service. During the first years they were here his father was unable to raise anything, so our subject did not think the country was worth homesteading. He quit farming and followed freighting for four years, and then moved to Nebraska City and remained there up to 1886, when he settled in Springview, but only lived there about a year and then came to Cherry county, taking a homestead in section 24, township 34, range 26, and at once began improving the place, putting up a dwelling and outbuildings, fences, etc., and began to break the land. He still owns this place, and he has added adjoining land until he is now proprietor of four hundred acres of grazing and hay land, with about forty acres of bottom land, which is given to the plow. He keeps about a dozen horses, one hundred and thirty head of cattle, and half as many hogs, doing well in all these branches of stock raising.

Mr. Allen was married in 1871 to Miss Jane Swoggar, a native of Ohio, of English stock. They have a family of five children, named as follows: William A., Gertrude, Maude, Richard and Edwin, all born in Nebraska, and now living in the vicinity of their parents' home.

Mr. Allen is an Independent in politics, but cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, when he was a candidate for president for a second term.

C. W. HORNE.

As one of the early settlers in Nebraska, and a man who has been closely identified with the development and growth of the state, watching its progress for many years, the above named gentleman occupies a foremost place.

Mr. Horne was born in Rochester, New Hampshire, in 1849, and was a son of Luther P. and Abbie Downing Horne. The families of both the Hornes and Downings were among the pioneer settlers in New England. Our subject was reared and educated in Rollinsford, New Hampshire, and attended the academy at the town of South Berwick, Maine. In 1874 he came to Maxwell, Nebraska, in the service of the Union Pacific railway as operator at the station in that city. In 1876 he became agent at Brady, and remained in that position for five years, then returned to Maxwell and was appointed agent at that place, and has remained there ever since. During the time he has been here the business of the road has increased phenomenally, and the work grown much heavier, but he is a man of ability, and faithful in the performance of his duty, always looking after the interests of the company and advancing its affairs in every way possible.

Mr. Horne is interested in farming land in this locality, and is proprietor of a large ranch one and a half miles from Maxwell, the place comprising seven hundred and sixty acres, mostly of valley and hill land. For twelve years, from 1876 to 1888, he held the office of postmaster, five years at Brady and seven years at Maxwell, and was a popular and efficient official. He also held the position of treasurer for the Maxwell school for four terms. He has the distinction of being the second oldest man in the telegraph service of the Union Pacific railroad.

In 1877 Mr. Horne was married to Miss Clara Irene Smith, of Albany, New York. Two children resulted from this union, namely: Arthur W. and Erma S., both of whom are living.

JERRY H. HULSEMAN.

Jerry H. Hulsemann, a prominent ranchman and farmer of section 10, township 30, range 50, Dawes county, where his genial countenance and friendly spirit have made him hosts of well-wishers, which his manly character and genuine worth have long retained, was born on a farm in Oldenberg, Germany, in 1860. He was a son of Henry Hulsemann, a farmer, and Lizzie (Kuck) Hulsemann.

The boyhood days of our subject were spent in his native land, where he assisted his father in the cultivation of their land. When he had reached the age of twenty-three years he decided to seek his fortune in the new world, and landed in New York city, in 1883, came west to Floyd county, Iowa. Here he remained until 1885. It was in the month of May of the same year that he came to Valentine, Nebraska. He had no team, but walked to Dawes county, looked over the land there, filed a claim and walked back to Valentine. During the summer months he employed his time at railroad construction work, and in the fall went back to his farm in Dawes county. Here he built a log cabin, commenced the work of improving and developing his farm, and lived the life of a bachelor for seven years. The first two years here he had no team, but later invested in a team of oxen. He experienced the many hardships so familiar to the frontiersmen of this western country, but during the period of drouths he was fortunate in not experiencing a complete failure of crops. He worked hard, was economical and saved his money, and now has a ranch of ten hundred and thirteen acres of well appointed land, one hundred thirty acres of which are under cultivation. He has five hundred acres more which can be plowed but which is now used as hay land. Upon his farm he has erected a substantial home, good barns and a granary, two wells and windmills.

In 1892 Mr. Hulsemann was married to Miss Mary Sephas, who was born in Nebraska. Her father, Godfrey Sephas, was a farmer and a native of Germany. Her mother was Dora (Lang) Sephas. Henry, Edward, George, Dora, Minnie, Frederick and Anna are the seven children who came to bless this union.

As an old settler, Mr. Hulsemann has done his share toward the development of Dawes county. He has always been prominently identified locally, taking an active interest in the affairs of the surrounding community. He has assisted materially in the building of schools, and for many years has held various school offices. It matters not how many years this sketch of his life may be read, it will stand as an excellent example for any youth, showing as it does how a poor boy battled against adversity and finally won. Whether one meets Mr. Hulsemann in public circles, in business relations, or at his home fireside, he is the same genial, plain, intelligent, companionable man, who loves his home and appreciates its hallowed surroundings.

AL. JOHNSON.

Al. Johnson, one of the early settlers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, and a successful and highly esteemed farmer and ranchman of that locality, resides on section 30, township 16, range 46, where he owns a section of good land. He is a man of wide experience, and well merits the success which has attended him in his different enterprises.

Mr. Johnson was born in Lake county, Indiana, June 30, 1858. When he was about nine years of age his parents moved to Chicago and there he was raised and educated, and he remembers distinctly the terrible fire which swept that city in 1871. Mr. Johnson lived in Chicago until he was twenty-four years of age, then came to Nebraska, travelling as an emigrant in a "prairie schooner," the familiar mode of conveyance in those days. He arrived in Cheyenne county on April 23, 1884, and immediately pre-empted a claim and later homesteaded, also took a tree claim, all on the North river, and proved up on the land and afterwards sold it. He then located on his present ranch, in section 30, township 16, range 46, situated about twelve miles north of Lodgepole. Here he has a splendid ranch and runs a large bunch of cattle and some horses, also farms a small portion of his land, raising grains. He has a well-improved place, with good buildings, fences, wells, etc., and is one of the leading old-timers of Cheyenne county, although since coming here he has spent about nine years traveling through the western states, including Colorado, South Dakota, Idaho, Wyoming and into New Mexico, returning for permanent settlement in 1903.

Mr. Johnson was married in Cheyenne county, in 1889, to Miss Emma P. Johnson, and to them have been born three children, Frank, May and Ray, all attending school at present. The fathers of both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are dead, both mothers still living.

JOHN HENDERSON.

John Henderson, who holds a foremost place among the pioneer settlers of Deuel county, Nebraska, has built up a fine estate in Loss Creek precinct. He has since his early residence in this region done his full share in the upbuilding of his locality and has become one of the leading and substantial citizens of his community and enjoys the esteem and respect of all with whom he has had to do.

Mr. Henderson was born in St. Clair county, Michigan, on the third day of September, 1846, and made that his home up to 1859, when he removed to Ottawa county, Ohio. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Volunteer Infantry, Ohio Volunteers, and was in the Georgia and Atlanta campaigns, and was with Thomas during his entire campaign at Nashville. He was also in the battles of Franklin and Nashville, and saw much active service during his career as a soldier. He was mustered out at Greensboro, North Carolina, and received his discharge at Cleveland, and returned to Ohio, remaining there for several years. In the spring of 1888 he came to Nebraska, homesteading on section 8, township 17, range 43, and proved up on the land, there going through all the hardships and privations of the early settlers in the region.

Mr. Henderson is now located on section 23, township 17, range 44, where he has a well-improved farm, having every convenience in the way of substantial buildings, fences, well and windmill. He engages in mixed farming and stock raising, and has been successful in developing a good home.

On February 22, 1872, our subject married Elva V. Lattimore, in Ottawa county, Ohio, and they had a family of five children, Mrs. Henderson dying on April 10, 1905. Their children were named as follows: Oscar T., James W., Alta, William and Blaine. Oscar T. is married, also Alta, who is the wife of John Reed, they living in Oshkosh.

In political views Mr. Henderson is a Republican, and is active in local affairs. He was the first assessor in the precinct after Deuel county was organized.

WILLIAM H. JONES.

William H. Jones, a progressive and enterprising business man of Dunning, is one of the old settlers of Blaine county. He has spent the past fifteen years in that vicinity and is now classed among the substantial men of the town and has taken an active part in its career as a thriving commercial center. He is proprietor of the Burlington Hotel, a fine establishment which he built in 1908, after the old Burlington burned, having previously run the old Burlington Hotel which was destroyed by fire on December 26, 1907, the same year it was built. Mr. Jones also, in connection with his hotel business, runs a livery business.

Mr. Jones was born in Sheridan, Lucas county, Iowa, in 1859. He is a son of Walter Jones and Mary (Kinney) Jones, of old American stock. His father was an engineer by profession, who came to Kansas in 1868, where he was a pioneer in a colony of nine families. There they started to establish homes, and during an Indian uprising all were massacred by the redskins excepting himself and one other person, and he then came to Lincoln, Nebraska. Our subject was raised on the frontier among the Indians, where his father had a farm, and his boyhood was spent in farm work, receiving a very limited schooling through attending the country schools. In 1889 he left home and went to the vicinity of Omaha, where he lived a frontiersman's life, hunting and fishing for a living. He finally came to Blaine county about 1896 and started ranching, living about six miles from Dunning, starting without any capital practically and again fished and hunted for a living most of the time, and during the hard times periods in the vicinity he traveled all over the country in search of game to supply the market in Dunning and other small towns. He even went into South Dakota in his travels for wild game, and managed to make a fair income from this occupation. He witnessed all the pioneer times and incidentally has been an important factor in the development of this section.

He established himself in the hotel business in Dunning in 1905, first buying the Dunning Hotel, which he carried on for several years, then sold out and started the Burlington Hotel, which is a favorite hostelry for many commercial travellers through this part of Nebraska. He is a gentleman of pleasing personality, and makes a popular host, and his hotel is one of the best equipped in these parts, commending itself to all in search of first-class accommodations.

In 1882 Mr. Jones married Mary E. Gollands, of English parentage, and of their union the following children resulted: Maud, Albert, May and Myrtle, a bright and interesting group, and of which their parents are justly proud.

JOHN BRADY.

John Brady, owner of the Meadow Lawn Stock Farm, of Platte township, Buffalo county, Nebraska, is an active and progressive farmer and stock dealer of his section. Here he has built up a good home and farm, is one of the prosperous men of the locality and has gained the esteem and respect of his associates through his integrity and worthy citizenship.

Mr. Brady is a native of Wisconsin, and a son of John Brady, who came to Wisconsin in the pioneer days of that state from Detroit, Michigan, and he had the distinction and honor to have served in both the Mexican and Civil wars. Our subject was raised in Wisconsin and Minnesota, in the latter state having served in Fillmore county as county superintendent of schools, and devoting some years to teaching. In 1886 he came to Nebraska, and in 1890 established his present ranch and farm, located in Platte township. Here he owns seven hundred and seventy-five acres of the best valley land on the island, five miles northwest of Lowell, on the Burlington & Missouri railway, and about ten miles southwest of Gibbon, on the Union Pacific railway. Here he keeps over a hundred thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle, which are pronounced as good as any herd that can be found in the state. This herd is headed by Barons Glosster, a pure Scotch bull, and many of the herd are pure Scotch. Mr. Brady came to Kearney, Nebraska, in 1886, and for several years owned and operated the oatmeal mills there. His brother, Phil Brady, was mayor of Kearney,

RESIDENCE OF ALBERT PIKE,
Seven Miles West of Valentine, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN ANDERSON,

and is now residing at Seattle, Washington. Mr. Brady is a man of superior education, intelligent and active, giving both brains and energy to whatever he undertakes, and his success is evidence of his good judgment and ability. His ranch is improved with good farm buildings, and he has erected a handsome residence, and one of the valuable estates in his township. Mr. Brady is a Republican in politics, served in the legislature in 1895 and is at present chairman of the Republican county central committee, and takes an active part in the political affairs of the state.

Mr. Brady was married the second time, in 1908, to Miss H. E. Jones. She was a teacher in the Kearney public schools for twenty-six years and was very successful in her profession. From a former marriage Mr. Brady has one son, John H., who is now a resident of Seattle, Washington.

ALBERT PIKE.

Albert Pike, whose place among the bright and energetic young farmers of Cherry county, Nebraska, is assured beyond question, owns a quarter section of land in section 25, township 34, range 29, and by hard work, wise management and an unwearied industry is accumulating a full share of the comforts and rewards that attend the simple, honest and industrious man.

Joseph W. Pike, the father of Albert, was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, lived many years in Whitley county, Indiana, and moved to Page county, Iowa, in 1856. Residing in western Iowa until 1883, he came to Valentine early in that year and secured land from the government on homestead, pre-emption and tree claims, having his family follow in 1885. His wife, Lacy North, came of German lineage, and was the mother of a family of seven children, of whom Albert, the subject of this writing, was the youngest.

Albert Pike is a native of Page county, Iowa, where he was born September 20, 1872, and resided in Plymouth county from 1876 until the family moved to Nebraska, where they settled in the town of Sloan, in Cherry county. Here he attended the local schools of that community and so received a fairly good start in an educational way. In 1890 he returned to Plymouth county, settling about twelve miles from Sioux City, and in the fall of 1895, he, in company with his brother, Edward, bought a store in that city, which they operated until the spring of 1897.

In 1898 Mr. Pike started in life for himself, and then bought the farm on which he makes his home at the present time. To carry out his contract and meet his payments called for industry and economy in a high degree, but careful management and hard work brought him great success.

He was married in 1906 to Miss A. Gaskill, whose father, Jesse B. Gaskill, was an old settler in Sheridan county, not far from Hay Springs. Her mother was Maggie Hurley, and both father and mother belong to old German families. Mr. and Mrs. Pike have had one child, a daughter, Alberta Idel, born July 1, 1907. Mr. Pike is a member of the Crookston Lodge of the Modern Woodmen of America. A picture of Mr. Pike's residence will be found on another page of this volume.

JOHN ANDERSON.

For over thirty years the gentleman whose name heads this personal history has been closely associated with the agricultural interests of Cheyenne county, Nebraska. He is recognized as one of the representative citizens and is prominently known throughout the western part of the state as a man of sterling qualities by all who know him intimately, and a man also of the strictest integrity of word and deed. He passed through all the pioneer experiences, and succeeded in accumulating a competence, now owning a valuable estate, and gained an enviable reputation as a good business man of superior intelligence.

Our subject was born in the village of Wilestoft, Denmark, January 5, 1846, and grew up there, living with his parents, Hans and Johanna (Polson) Anderson, until he was a youth of twenty years, when he went to the town of Odense, and was employed as coachman most of the time until emigrating to America, February 26, 1872. He sailed from Copenhagen to a town in Scotland, proceeding thence by rail to Glasgow, where he was transferred by a small vessel to the ocean steamer at Londonderry, Ireland, sailing thence to Portland, Maine, where he landed in the latter part of March. He went direct to Grand Island, Nebraska, where he found work during the ensuing six months, and for the year following was employed on the Union Pacific railroad at North Platte. In the fall of 1873 he removed to Brownson, Cheyenne county, where for twenty years he was foreman on that section of the railroad. He went through pioneer experience and helped to develop that region, and has since that time taken part in the making of history of this state.

Mr. Anderson filed on his present homestead in section 9, township 14, range 51, while employed by the railroad. He added to his property, and now owns in all six hundred and forty acres. His residence is directly on the banks of the Lodgepole creek, where he has erected fine farm buildings. A dam at the home site supplies water for irrigating, and power to run a water mill which grinds all the feed used on the ranch and farm. He has two hundred acres irrigated, and some two hundred head of well-bred Hereford cattle and seventy horses on the place. The stone barn with high stone corrals furnish unusually warm and safe shelter for the stock. We present on another page a view of the home site with its picturesque surroundings. The creek above the dam furnishes excellent boating of which he has availed himself, having a light skiff moored at the dam. He farms about eighty acres, having the remainder of the land in hay or pasture.

Mr. Anderson was married June 19, 1872, at Grand Island, Nebraska, to Miss Mary Johansen, born and reared in Denmark, a daughter of Sonick and Anna K. (Hansen) Johansen. Seven children were born of this union, namely: Hannah Marie (now deceased), Charles, living near the old home, and of whom a sketch appears on another page; Susanna (also deceased), William P., Hilma M., now Mrs. L. Sherman, of Colorado; Grant and Edward, the latter still under the parental roof. Mr. Anderson's son, Grant, resides on a homestead in section 28, township 14, range 51, situated two miles southwest of his father's farm.

Our subject is actively awake to the interests of his community, and aids materially in its advancement along social and political lines. He votes independently, not being bound by party ties. He was reared in the Lutheran church. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic order at Sidney.

WILLIAM D. CLARKSON.

William D. Clarkson, a prosperous citizen and business man of Valentine, Nebraska, resides on a farm situated on the Minnechaduzza creek, near the town. Mr. Clarkson was born in Clay county, Illinois, October 13, 1859. His father, J. M. Clarkson, was a farmer of Pennsylvania-Dutch origin, born in Ohio, and was an early settler in Cherry county. His death occurred here in 1904. Our subject's mother was Miss Mary H. Brainerd, of Yankee stock. When he was seventeen years of age he moved to western Kansas with his parents where they were pioneers in Lyon county, and remained for eleven years. In 1885 the family again went through pioneer experience in this county, and our subject took up a pre-emption and tree claim located twenty miles northeast of Valentine, and put up a sod shanty in which he made his home for a time. He proved up on this land and then moved to Hay flats, fifteen miles south of Valentine, and there lived on several different places, occupying a sod house for two months while he erected a frame house which he put up on his homestead.

After starting there Mr. Clarkson went through many hard times, "batching it" for some time, and besides attending to his own interests was obliged to look after his parents. He hauled wood twenty miles to Fort Niobrara to get money for their living expenses, driving a team of two horses and two oxen. The trip took several days, and the nights were spent camped out under his wagon. He then went through the drouth seasons, losing his entire crop by hail, but stuck to his homestead through everything until he had proved up on it. He came to Valentine in 1898 and clerked in a grocery store, his family moving to the town in the fall of the following year. He also did contract work at Fort Niobrara for a time, and came to his present place in 1901, establishing himself in the ice business, and now controls the entire industry in Valentine. During the years 1887 to 1894 he ran a threshing machine all over this part of Cherry county, but during the dry years there was nothing to thresh, so was compelled to abandon the work.

March 28, 1888, our subject married Miss Georgia Presho, a native of New York, of Nebraska in 1880, and he was one of the men who helped build Fort Niobrara. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson, named as follows: Charles, Vivian, Flora, Grace and Irene.

K. B. EKAWL.

K. B. Ekwawl, residing in section 28, township 14, range 45, Deuel county, Nebraska, was born in Sweden, January 17, 1858. He was the third child in a family of eight, and was the only one to leave their native land. His parents are now both dead.

Mr. Ekwawl came to America in 1874, landing in August of that year, and located at Galesburg, Illinois, remaining for several years, then came to Kearney county, Nebraska. After spending a short time there he returned to Illinois, and made that state his home up to 1885, coming to Deuel county and taking a homestead on section 28, township 14, range 45, in October of that year. He started to improve the place and proved up on it in due time, passing through all the pioneer experiences, gradually being able to add to his original tract until he is now owner of four hundred and eighty acres. He has about one hundred acres cultivated, and has a fine bunch of cattle and horses. His ranch is improved with good buildings, fences, etc., and is one of the valuable estates in the region.

Mr. Ekwawl was married March 26, 1890, to Miss Anna Chingren, who is a native of Henry county, Illinois. They have no children. Mrs. Ekwawl's mother makes her home with her daughter on the ranch.

Our subject is moderator of school district No. 15, which was organized in the spring of 1886, and was one of the first in the region. In political sentiment Mr. Ekwawl is a Democrat, and takes a commendable interest in local and county affairs.

CHARLES N. NORTNASS.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is one of the foremost citizens of township 32, range 54, where, on section 10, he has developed a fine farm and enjoys a comfortable and pleasant home, surrounded by many warm friends and congenial neighbors. He has been a resident of Sioux county for the past twelve years, and although he has had a struggle to get along at times, has always stuck to his original plan of carving out for himself a name and fortune for his later years, and has succeeded in this determination in spite of many discouragements and failures.

Mr. Nortnass was born on a farm in Dane county, Wisconsin, sixteen miles southeast of Madison, February 14, 1858. His father, Nels P. Nortnass, was a native of Norway, as was his mother, whose maiden name was Annie Peterson. During his boyhood the family moved to Winneshiek county, Iowa, and remained in that vicinity for several years, and when Charles was eleven years old his parents made a trip back to Norway, returning to this country in 1869. They then settled in Hamilton county, Iowa, where they remained up to 1896, and our subject was married there on May 29, 1884, to Nellie Nelson, she having been born in Norway and came to America when she was a young girl of twenty-three, locating in Hamilton county, Iowa. The young couple went to housekeeping on a farm in that locality, and lived there up to 1896, when they came to Sioux county, where Mr. Nortnass filed on a homestead, and after he had become settled in his new home had just seventeen dollars left to carry on the place with. His first dwelling was a sod house, and they lived in it for many years. During the first few seasons his crops were very small and he was unable to make a living off the farm, so was obliged to cut wood for his neighbors in order to keep his family from want.

Mr. Nortnass soon grew able to improve his farm in good shape, and add to his original homestead, now owning four hundred acres which is beautifully situated on Pine Ridge, covered with many trees furnishing fuel and timber, and he farms a large portion of the place and raises good crops of small grains, besides using part of it as a stock ranch. He has improved it fully, all of which has been accomplished by his own individual effort, at various times meeting with bitter disappointments in the loss of crops, etc. He had just gotten nicely started in 1901, when he had the ill luck to have his barn and contents destroyed by fire, this disaster occurring on Christmas eve, the loss including fifteen tons of hay, fifty bushels of corn and other property, harness and many small articles so necessary to the equipment of an up-to-date farm and ranch.

To our subject and his good wife have been born twelve children, named as follows: Sena, Alexander, Henry, Adolph, Nels, Bennie, Nellie, Annie, Carrie, Allie and Carl, the latter being named after his deceased brother Carl. Four of the children were born in Sioux county, Nebraska, and eight were born in Iowa.

JAMES EDWARD BARKER.

James Edward Barker, a farmer of ability and progressiveness, resides in Brinkerhoff precinct, Rock county, where he has a fine home and farm, and may truly be classed among the self-made men of that locality.

Mr. Barker was born in New York state in 1851, and is a son of Nathaniel C. Barker, of English stock, following the trade of a mechanic. When our subject was twenty-one years old he started out for himself, teaching school for several years, then went to farming. The family had moved to Ford county, Illinois, in 1865, and after remaining there up to 1884, James came to Rock county and settled on a homestead on section 8, township 31, range 20. He afterwards commuted this, and moved to Long Pine, where he engaged in the stock business and lived there for eight years, and for the six succeeding years was in Bassett. In 1901 he took up a homestead under the Kincaid act, and has since resided on this ranch, the place consisting of seven hundred and twenty acres of good farm and hay land. Here he keeps one hundred head of cattle, and has broken up one hundred and twenty acres which he farms with good success, using the balance for pasture land. He has planted about seven acres of fine trees on his farm and has one of the pleasantest and best improved pieces of property in his locality. He has made all this through his own efforts, and has gone through many hardships and privations in building up his home. For some years the family lived in a log house, and the first year after getting a few acres broken for crops he lost his only team. He saw all the different phases of a pioneer's experience, and deeply appreciates the comfortable home and farm which he has won through so much hard labor.

Mr. Barker was married in Ford county, Illinois, November 2, 1878, to Miss Mary A. Donovan, of Irish stock, daughter of one of the early settlers in Rock county, who is now deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Barker six children have been born, namely: Virgil E., Maude M., Freeman C., Eva L. (deceased), and C., and also an infant who died unnamed.

Mr. Barker is a gentleman of public spirit, and although he has never taken a very active part in politics, lends his aid to the betterment of conditions in his community wherever needed. He is a strong Socialist, believing entirely in the principles of that party.

FRED GILMAN.

The gentleman above named is a prominent citizen of Redington and for many years has been engaged in the mercantile business, farming and ranching in Cheyenne county. He has passed through all the early Nebraska times and has been instrumental in a large measure in the success that has come to this region.

Fred Gilman was born in Grant county, Wisconsin, March 26, 1874, and a part of his boyhood was spent there, coming to Redington, Nebraska, with his parents, two brothers and two sisters, locating on a school section purchased by the father in Cheyenne county. Both parents are now living at Redington. The father was a native of Vermont, while the mother was born in Illinois. Our subject took a homestead on section 18, township 19, range 52, and during the early times in Cheyenne county established a general merchandise business. He has continued in this almost constantly, and has been most successful, building up a good trade and becoming one of the solid and substantial merchants of his town. Mr. Gilman owns considerable property in Redington.

On March 26, 1900, Mr. Gilman married Estelle Trowbridge at Redington. Mrs. Gilman was born in Colfax county, Nebraska, and her father is now residing in Banner county, but the mother is dead. Mr. and Mrs. Gilman have two children, Oscar and Ralph, now attending school. Our subject has two brothers, Sherman, married, living at Redington, and Richard, also married, living at Bridgeport, both having one child. One sister, Nina, wife of T. C. Wilcox, lives in Redington, and another, Ida, wife of F. D. Hayes, lives at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Mr. Gilman takes an active interest in all local affairs, at present serving as moderator of school district No. 11, and is also postmaster of Redington.

SAMUEL HESSELGESSER.

Samuel Hesselgesser, deceased, was for many years intimately connected with the activities of Loup county, Nebraska, and his well-spent life won him high regard. At his death the community lost one of her best citizens. He was born on a farm in Pennsylvania, in 1853, and died at his Loup county home in November, 1905.

Samuel Hesselgesser's parents were Robert and Jane (Hazelet) Hesselgesser, the father being of German descent. The family were reliable farmers of Pennsylvania and our subject acquired the good habits of thrift and earnestness of purpose that are inculcated by life on a farm.

The marriage of Mr. Hesselgesser occurred in 1874, when Miss Mary A. Watson became his helpmeet. The bride was a native of Pennsylvania and was a daughter of Thomas and Mary A. (Galbriath) Watson, the father being of Irish descent and the mother of Scotch ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Hesselgesser had seven children, all boys: Milton, Homer (deceased), Walter, Elmer, Samuel, Glen and Watson.

In 1884, in April, the family came to Nebraska, locating for one year in Fillmore county and then they came to Loup county, where they settled on their present farm in section 8, township 22, range 17. Coming at this early date, they were numbered among the earliest settlers and they encountered all the trials usually passed through by every pioneer. North Loup was the nearest trading point and all material for building purposes as well as supplies had to be hauled from that point and from Ainsworth. Our subject has camped out on many of these trips, sleeping under his covered wagon, fording streams and more than once the wagons have been mired in the mud. Their first buildings were constructed from the sods of the prairie and their first teams were ponies and oxen. Once a severe snow storm delayed the arrival of supplies for a couple of days and Mrs. Hesselgesser was obliged to grind corn for meal so she could have corn meal mush on which the family might subsist. But through all these hardships the family had good health and really enjoyed pioneer life. They went to church and Sunday-school and tried their best to see the bright side of things. The years of drouth came, bringing more privation, then the hail storms worked their ruin now and then, but through it all our subject and his family maintained stout hearts and with willing hands sought in every way to retrieve their losses and to constantly add to the improvements of their home. And their efforts were eminently successful in every way as now can be seen by the fine farm of five hundred and sixty acres, the good home, barns, fences and fine groves. Since our subject's death in 1905, Mrs. Hesselgesser has been managing the farm assisted by the younger boys.

Mr. Hesselgesser lives in the affectionate remembrance of his family and his many friends. He was a man whose strength of character endeared him to all with whom he came in contact and brought him in close touch with all matters pertaining to the general welfare of the community. He served with honor in several public capacities, such as school officer and assessor, and was prominent in political affairs.

Z. U. BUCK.

In compiling a list of the prominent business men of Franklin county, who have aided so materially in the upbuilding of the commercial interests of that locality, and are widely and favorably known, a foremost place must be given Z. U. Buck, who is engaged in the mercantile business at Naponee. Mr. Buck has been in business here since 1897, at that time opening a general merchandise store, and has built up a lucrative trade through his industry and honest dealing. He is highly esteemed as a citizen, and is one of the successful and prosperous residents of his county. In the past ten years his business has increased four hundred per cent., which is a pretty good gain.

Mr. Buck is a son of George Buck, who settled in Franklin county in 1871. the following year starting the first store in the county, and his was the first frame building ever erected in Franklin county, which was at Franklin. He and his partner, Mr. Greenwood, laid out that town site and gave away lots for a park, schools and churches, also to any settlers who would build there. They attended strictly to the business of the store, selling goods for a distance of fifty miles each way from the town. George Buck was a member of the Episcopal church, a strong Republican, high degree Mason and veteran of the Civil war, having been a member of a Vermont regiment, serving for four years.

Our subject's mother was Miss Lucella Hunt, of Franklin county, Vermont, daughter of Elijah Hunt. Mr. Buck has one brother, James E., residing in Lincoln, engaged in the life insurance business. Another brother, George, Jr., is associated with the Omaha Rubber Company, and lives at Omaha, while a sister, Cora, is married and living at Lincoln.

Mr. Buck married Miss Jennie Hart, of Brown county, Kansas, daughter of W. H. Hart, now of Seattle, Washington, a dealer in real estate at that place. He is a son of Thomas Hart, who came to Brown county, Kansas, in 1852, and took a prominent part in the early history of that state. To Mr. Buck and his wife the following children were born: Harold, aged twelve; Helen, aged six, and Lucile, four years old.

Soon after Mr. Buck settled in Franklin county he was elected deputy county treasurer, and served for four years, and later was postmaster at Franklin. He is a member of the school board, and active in local affairs. In political sentiment he is a Democrat.

JOHN RIGGS.

John Riggs is one of the best known and most prominent residents of this part of the country. He was appointed the first sheriff, later elected to fill a second term, and also was one of the organizers of Sheridan county.

Mr. Riggs was born in Washington county, Texas, in 1854. His father was of American stock, a farmer and stock raiser, and among the earliest settlers of Texas. His mother, Miss Anna Beauchamp, was born in Dublin, Ireland. Our subject was a baby, the youngest of three children, when he lost his mother. His father also died while he was yet a boy. When eleven years of age he went to New Mexico with John H. Chisham, staying with him until he sold the stock to Hunter & Evans, in 1878 going with the latter across the plains to Sheridan county. In 1879 he went back to Mexico after the balance of the stock. Here they remained until 1885, when settlement forced them to move, and taking fifty-five thousand cattle they went on to Montana. After helping to move the cattle Mr. Riggs bought the old H. C. Barr ranch, and lived there twenty years. He had invested considerable of his earnings in the Hunter & Evans Company, but the winter of 1885-86 caused them such a loss it broke the concern and our subject also sustained a heavy loss.

In 1884 Mr. Riggs married Miss Amma Irwin, a Texas girl, who was a daughter of Aek and Mrs. L. L. Irwin, both of American stock, among the earliest settlers of Texas. Mrs. L. L. Irwin still lives in Sheridan county, Nebraska, with her son. Two brothers were early settlers here and it was while on a visit here to see them that Mr. Riggs met Miss Amma Irwin at her brother's home on the N. Bar ranch, or better known as the old Newman ranch, which Mr. Riggs also helped to establish. It was here that Mr. Riggs and Miss Irwin were married. Two children have been born to them, Bennett and Effie.

After Mr. Riggs had served two terms as sheriff he settled on the old ranch, remaining there until 1898, when they moved to Kansas. There he was appointed deputy sheriff of Sherman county, and in attempting to capture two train robbers single-handed he was shot six times and so severely wounded that he was laid up for nearly three years, while the culprits were both killed during the encounter. He was offered large sums of money by the railroad companies for the brave deed, but would never accept a cent.

Afterwards he returned to this county on a visit and his children persuaded him to remain. He is now nicely located on the Niobrara river in section 10, township 30, range 43, about one mile from his first location, and contented to live quietly from now on, as he says he has seen all the frontier life he cares for. Mr. Riggs is a Democrat.

On another page of this volume we present an interesting picture of the "old pals on the ranch," showing John Riggs and three comrades.

JOHN C. DAM.

John C. Dam, the subject of this sketch, was born in 1859, raised in Denmark and received his education there, and is one of the many successful farmers of Sheridan county. His father, Christian M. Dam, never left the old country, and died when our subject was a young man, leaving a wife and five children. When twenty years of age he entered the army and served seventeen months, then started out to make his fortune. He came to America in 1884. Upon leaving Omaha, where he remained for one year, he located one mile north of his present home, taking pre-emption, and still holds this claim. He also homesteaded in the Sand Hills, selling this out for forty-eight hundred dollars.

In 1901 he was married to Miss Mary K. Jorgesen, who was born in Denmark in 1878 and came to this country with her parents in 1892. Three children were born to them, namely: Anna, Henry and Emma, all born in this locality.

Just as Mr. Dam was nicely started on his ranch the dry years came on and the best he could do was barely raise seed for the next year's crops. These were the darkest times for our subject, but he struggled along alone and in later years has had marked success in all his undertakings.

He has added to his homestead and now owns fourteen hundred and forty acres, half of which could be easily farmed, and now has under cultivation about three hundred acres, running one hundred and seventy head of cattle, with just horses enough for his own use. He is engaged exclusively in farming and the stock raising business, and has made many improvements on his ranch in the way of buildings, fences, etc., and feels well satisfied with what he has accomplished.

Although Mr. Dam is a Democrat, he has never been able to devote any time to taking active part in politics.

W. N. ROGERS.

W. N. Rogers is a prosperous business man and one of the best known breeders of thoroughbred Herefords in the western states.

Mr. Rogers was born and raised in Jo Davis county, Illinois, and it was in that locality that he first began the breeding of high-grade stock. He came to Nebraska in 1883, and in starting his work was convinced that the Herefords were the best breed in the west, as they will graze and rustle for themselves, grow fat and keep in good condition on the prairies where other breeds will starve, and besides are great beef cattle, and to raise good beef cattle is the principal aim of the stock raisers of the west. The Hereford cattle are the champions of the International Live Stock Exhibition.

Shadeland Park Herefords, the well known herd of whitefaces, was started in 1890, and there was then selected as a foundation cows bred by such breeders as John W. Smith, of Herefordshire, England, and G. W. Milikin, of Elyria, Ohio. These females were rich in the blood of Anxiety, Grove III, Lord Wilton, the monarchs of the breed. Then were added females from the well known herd of show cattle from the herd of Makin Bros., and later on Mr. Rogers went in person to the great show and breeding herd of Adams Earl, of Lafayette, Indiana, which then contained more of the blood of Lord Wilton and the Grove III than any herd in the world. From this herd was selected some of the best females that money would buy, and these added to the then choice lot of females made a foundation for a herd that any man might well feel proud of. There have been, from time to time, some choice females only added to this herd, consisting mostly of the tops at the great Hereford sales. As the bull is one-half the herd, it might be well to make mention of what has been used on the Shadeland Park herd of females. The first bought and used in this herd was Vincent II 42942, bred by Makin Bros., of Florence, Kansas. His sire Vincent 16691, by Sir Evelyn, by Lord Wilton 4057. Dam, Berrington II, by Leader, a son of the Grove III, a grand combination of the Lord Wilton and the Grove III blood. The sire of Vincent II 42942, Vincent 16691, was shown very successfully by Makin Bros., winning in the season of 1889-'90 seventeen first and sweepstakes and seven second prizes. Vincent II 42942 was also a prize winner. At the World's Fair in 1893 he won fourth in aged class and sweepstakes as produce of cow. He attained the weight of twenty-eight hundred pounds at the age of five years. The bull to follow him was Anxiety Monarch 63204, by the great breeding bull Juryman 30279, by Anxiety III 4466, bred by Tom Clark, of Beecher, Illinois.

Anxiety Monarch 63204, owned and bred by W. N. Rogers, at the age of five years attained the weight of twenty-eight hundred pounds. Anxiety Monarch 63204 was only shown at State Fair, Lincoln, Nebraska, in 1900, winning first in class. Headed the first prize aged herd. His two-year-old heifer winning first in class, and a yearling heifer third in class. Anxiety Monarch 63204 was very unfortunately injured in a railroad wreck while returning home from the State Fair, from which he died shortly after, leaving only a limited number of his sons and daughters in the Shadeland Park herd, yet the notoriety this herd now enjoys must be attributed to the blood of Anxiety Monarch 63204, who was pronounced by great judges to be one of the best Hereford bulls of the breed.

Beau Donald 28th 105168 was secured after the death of Anxiety Monarch 63204, at the price of one thousand dollars when ten months old, to be used in the Shadeland Park herd. It was also considered by Mr. Rogers, in order to carry out his views on breeding and establishing a type of Hereford cattle peculiar to his ideas, he must do it with the blood of Anxiety Monarch, and accordingly he has selected and put at the head of the herd the massive son of Anxiety Monarch 63204.

Monarch of Shadeland III 106787, owned and bred by Mr. Rogers, at the head of the Shadeland Park herd, weighed three thousand pounds at four years of age. This young bull was shown as a three-year-old and only at State Fair, Lincoln, 1903, winning first in class and sweepstakes; also sweepstakes as produce of cow, and sweepstakes one of four, as get of sire. In 1904 he was second in class, beaten only by Beau Donald 28th, headed first prize, aged herd and sweepstakes as produce of cow at Nebraska State Fair. He won first in class, headed first prize aged herd, sweepstakes as produce of cow and also stood at head of herd winning sweepstakes silver cup, all breeds competing (cup valued at two hundred and fifty dollars), at Interstate Fair, Sioux City, Iowa. Second in class aged bulls, sweepstakes as produce of cow at Topeka, Kansas, 1904.

It might also be of interest to mention some of the winnings of Beau Donald 28th 105168, who is the assistant of Monarch of Shadeland III. Beau Donald 28th won first in class aged bulls in 1902 as a three-year-old, and sweepstakes, senior class, two years or over. He also stood at head of first prize aged herd, Nebraska State Fair, in 1902. In 1903 he won second, being beaten by Monarch of Shadeland III, at Nebraska State Fair. In 1904 he was first in aged class and stood at head of second prize aged herd (first prize herd headed by Monarch of Shadeland III). He also won sweepstakes, two years or over, at the State Fair. He was first in aged class sweepstakes bull, also headed first prize aged herd at Topeka, in 1904; also first aged class sweepstakes bull and headed first prize aged herd at Hutchinson, Kansas, in 1904; also first aged class sweepstakes bull and headed first prize aged herd at Colorado State Fair, Pueblo, in 1904.

It is well to mention the Shadeland Park show herds of twelve head, which won one hundred and five prizes in 1904, showing over four states at the following places: State Fair, Lincoln, Nebraska; Interstate Fair, Sioux City, Iowa; Topeka Exposition, Topeka, Kansas; State Fair, Hutchinson, Kansas, and State Fair, Pueblo, Colorado. Our first prize aged herd stood first at every show. Our young herd also took first at every show. The young herd were all sired by our sweepstakes herd bulls. Our second aged herd was only beaten once over these four states. We also showed one yearling heifer that was not defeated in age or class; also one heifer calf that won first in every class and one that won four second and one third prize.

This is a record any breeder might well feel proud of—one hundred and six prizes at five shows. Young stock of both sexes for sale at all times. From now on no bull can do breeding in the Shadeland Park herd that has not won a sweepstakes prize at either a state or national show.

It is worthy of mention that the Beau Donalds won more prizes in 1904 at World's Fair, state and national shows than any other family of Herefords. In 1905, at three shows, Mr. Rogers won fifty-eight ribbons; then in 1906, at State Fair only, winning sixteen prizes, and in 1907 at three shows he won sixty-nine ribbons. He bred the females that won the championship at Lincoln for five successive years. At the sales in Omaha for the past eight years he has always been at the top, and in 1906 his females topped the list. During the last four years Mr. Rogers's stock has won more prizes at the Nebraska State Fair than any other herd in the state. He has now one hundred and twenty thoroughbred animals in his herd, which is well known all over the United States, and breeders from all over the country come to his ranch to purchase cattle. One-year stock from this farm was sold and delivered into seven different states.

Mr. Rogers believes that in order to make a success of any undertaking it is necessary to give it all his time and attention, and this he has done with his stock. He is aided in his work by his two sons, Amos and Henry, both of whom have their father's spirit and energy. Mr. Rogers's wife attends many of the stock shows with her husband and takes a deep interest in all his affairs, and if anything is more pleased than he with the success he has attained. He is often called upon to act as judge at the big stock exhibitions, and is recognized as one of the best informed men in this business to be found anywhere.

Mr. Rogers and his family reside on his ranch four miles east of McCook, Redwillow county, Nebraska. This is called Shadeland Park, and comprises eight hundred and thirty acres of fine land, mostly on the river bottom, with many beautiful shade trees well distributed over the farm, from which it derives its name.

WILLIAM S. COKER.

William S. Coker, residing in section 32, township 24, range 49, is one of the prominent citizens of Box Butte county. He has devoted his entire career to agricultural pursuits, has gained considerable property, and the esteem and respect of his fellowmen by his integrity and upright character.

Mr. Coker was born in Morgan county, Illinois, in 1857. His parents were of American stock, the father a farmer, and they moved to Missouri after the close of the Civil war, settling in Mercer county, where our subject grew to manhood. He assisted his parents in carrying on the home farm, and during all his young manhood was afflicted with the malady known as fever and ague, so prevalent in new countries. In 1878 he left home and went to Iowa, but only remained for a few months, then to Kansas, where he spent about eighteen months. There he lived in Ness county, which was an entirely undeveloped part of the state, and he went through pioneer experiences, later removing to Ellsworth county, but did not like the new country and decided to try a new location, so he moved to Missouri, near his old home, and lived there one year. He first struck Nebraska in 1882, locating in York county, and remained there for two years, following farm work. From there he came to Box Butte county, driving from York county with a team, making the trip overland, as he had on all his other journeys in this part of the west, from Missouri to Kansas and back again. When he landed here he had a yoke of cattle, which was almost his sole capital. He immediately filed on a homestead and "batched it" for about three years, during which time he did all the work of breaking his land, hauling and freighting with a team of oxen. He went through the usual pioneer experiences, saw the surrounding country settled, railroads put through, towns started, and was an eyewitness of all the incidents which took place in connection with the Indian uprising, etc., in this region.

Mr. Coker is now owner of a four hundred and eighty-acre ranch, all fenced and complete, with good buildings, etc., engaging principally in stock raising, and has made a great success of his work.

In 1890 Mr. Coker was married to Jane Alexander. Mrs. Coker was a daughter of Stewart Alexander, a Scotchman, who lived and died in his native land. She and her mother, who was Miss Margaret Kerr, also reared in Scotland, came to America when the former was an infant of nine months, settling in Nebraska, and Mrs. Coker was a homesteader in Box Butte county prior to her marriage. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Coker, namely: Clyde, Lyle, Roy, Dora, Eldin and Helen. The family occupy a handsome home and are well liked by all who know them.

JOHN I. DAWSON.

John I. Dawson, for many years past a resident of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, owns a fine farm in section 32, township 32, range 22, Garfield precinct. He is at present retired, making his home with a daughter in Springview.

Mr. Dawson was born in Richmondale, Ross county, Ohio, January 31, 1839. He never saw his father, as he was killed by an accident three months before John was born, and when he was but eighteen months old his mother also died, leaving him an orphan without brother or sister. He was forced to make his own way in the world at an early age, when nine years old hiring out to a man with whom he lived for ten years, receiving nothing, not even schooling, for his services, and then ran away and went to Illinois. He started out with only a quarter of a dollar and after walking most of the way from Ohio to Illinois, arrived in Peoria with only a dime as the total of his cash resources. He worked out by the month in Stark county for some time and later rented land on which he farmed for some years. In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, Sixty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and served until the close of the war, being mustered out of service and discharged at Chicago in 1865. At the close of the war he went to Marion county, Illinois, where he married and farmed for three years. Removing to Missouri, he followed farming in Nodaway and Atchison counties until removing to Nebraska.

Mr. Dawson came to Keya Paha county in 1883, taking up a homestead in section 5, township 32, range 22, from which he derives a comfortable income. He now owns six hundred and forty acres of good land, two hundred and forty of which is cultivated, divided between a son and two other tenants who farm the land. Since coming here he has endured very hard times, and, in fact, has had nothing but hardship from his childhood. He is now content to take life easy for the balance of his days, leaving to others the strain of active labor.

In 1864 Mr. Dawson married Sarah J. McKinns, born in Whitestown, Pennsylvania. They had one child, which only lived eight months, the mother soon following, on February 8, 1868, aged twenty-four years. He was again married in Missouri in 1870 to Miss Elizabeth J. McCray, a native of Ohio. She died December 5, 1905. Two children were born of this marriage—Laura, now Mrs. Hartman, residing in Springview, and Henry M., married and living on his homestead near the father's old place.

Mr. Dawson is a Republican, having cast his maiden vote for Abraham Lincoln, and has remained true to the party ever since. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and the U. V. U.

ANTON BENISH.

Anton Benish, whose fine farm in Trognitz precinct bespeaks thrift and painstaking care in its operation, is a gentleman of wide experience, and is classed among the substantial and worthy citizens of Cheyenne county, Nebraska.

Mr. Benish was born in the village of Kopidlo, Bohemia, June 15, 1848, a son of John and Katie (Habrich) Benish. He grew up in his native land, during his boyhood receiving the usual stern training in which the children of Bohemia are reared, following farming as an occupation mostly. When he reached the age of twenty-six years he began life for himself, took passage on an emigrant steamer for America at Bremen Haven in the Deutschland, landing in New York city in October, 1874, after a voyage of two weeks. He came direct to Chicago, Illinois, where he had a brother, Albert Benish, who had come to this country several years before, and has made that city his home for thirty-seven years. Anton spent seven months there, then went to Iowa, locating in Chelsea, Tama county, and lived there for thirteen years, most of the time holding the position of section foreman on the Northwestern. In the spring of 1887 he came to Cheyenne county, taking up a homestead in section 4, township 16, range 52, and began to develop a farm. He passed through many privations and pioneer experiences, but remained determined, fighting every hardship and gradually getting ahead, until he now owns jointly with other members of his family, a valuable tract of nine hundred and sixty acres.

Of this he has placed one hundred and fifty acres under the plow. He has a complete set of good farm buildings, including a comfortable and convenient residence, and also has wells, windmills and all necessary farm machinery. He engages in diversified farming and stock raising, keeping about one hundred head of cattle and fifty horses, owning some very fine animals.

Mr. Benish was married September 10, 1874, in Bohemia, to Yatta Daimel, who was born and reared in that country, of German stock; her parents, Popper and Elizabeth Daimel, are dead. To Mr. Benish and his estimable wife the following children have been born: Albert, Joseph and Anton, Jr., all owners of fine homesteads adjoining their father's place; Mary, wife of John Nelson, now living in Seattle, Washington; James, also a homesteader here; Annie, married to Albert Nelson, living at Cheyenne county, and William, the youngest, at home. They are all intelligent, industrious and worthy citizens, and the entire family share in the esteem and respect of all. Mr. Benish is prominent in neighborhood and county affairs, and has helped materially in the building up of his locality. At present he is serving in the capacity of treasurer of school district No. 62. Politically he is a Republican. The family is Catholic in religious faith.

JAMES G. MERRIAM.

The gentleman above named is one of the enterprising and prosperous farmers and ranchmen of Sioux county, Nebraska. He resides on section 3, township 32, range 57, and is widely known as one of the prominent pioneers of this region. He owns a fine property and no one is better known or more highly respected than our subject.

Mr. Merriam was born in Bureau county, Illinois, January 4, 1857. He came of good old American blood, and his ancestors have been prominent in the history of this country for many generations past, of which fact he is justly proud, and he is a fit representative of his family. His father, Homer T., was born in Ohio in 1823, grew up there and as a young man spent a number of years in Illinois, then in Iowa and coming to Sioux county, Nebraska, with his family in 1890, where he died in 1898. He married Miss Nancy Carpenter, also of Ohio. Our subject has one brother who still lives in Illinois.

The family left Illinois when James was a lad of twelve years, and from there they went to Iowa, where he was reared and educated, starting out for himself when he was twenty years of age. He first went to farming on rented land, and followed that occupation for about twenty years in Iowa. In 1895 he removed to Deadwood, South Dakota, and spent three years in that vicinity, then came to Nebraska, locating in Sioux county, where his father had been for several years, the latter's death occurring in 1898 at his home in township 32, range 57.

Our subject located on his present farm in 1899, taking up the land as a homestead, and improved it in good shape, proving up on it in due time. He has since added to his original quarter, and at the present time is proprietor of about four hundred acres, all fenced and well improved, using about sixty acres as a grain farm, and the balance for hay and pasture for his stock. He has been in the main successful since coming here, although he has met with loss and disappointments on account of the failure of crops, etc., and in 1906 had the misfortune to lose a large portion of his crops from hailstorms which swept the locality.

Mr. Merriam was married November 5, 1899, to Ethel R. Garretson, daughter of William H. Garretson, of Sioux county, and an adjoining neighbor. Mr. and Mrs. Merriam have two children living—Homer T., aged eight years, and Orlene G., now two years of age. Rilla and Nellie are dead. The family have a pleasant home, and have a host of good friends in the community.

Mr. Merriam is an Independent voter.

S. J. TILLMAN.

The above mentioned gentleman is among the best known breeders of pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs in western Nebraska. He resides in Ragan, Harlan county, Nebraska, where he has built up a fine business to which he devotes his entire time and attention. His place is known all over this section as "Sunnyslope", the celebrated home of the herd of Duroc Jerseys familiar to all breeders and buyers of pure bred hogs wherever this business is carried on.

Mr. Tillman began in the hog business in 1897 at Dana, Kansas, and in 1900 came to Ragan where he has since lived. Here he owns fourteen acres of land, but does no farming, buying all the feed he needs for his stock. He handles all of the leading strains, and has at head of his herd Jumbo Ideal and Crimson Dandy, the highest priced yearling boar ever sold up to that time. Mr. Tillman sold a one-half interest to Messrs. Seller & Sons at Huntley for five hundred and five dollars and has since sold his entire interest to them in a pig out of Nebraska Wonder by Crimson Wonder and Jumbo Ideal 43037 by Jumbo's Perfection 19901, a celebrated animal which won the third prize at the World's Fair, and later at the Nebraska State Fair captured the first prize twice, besides third place at five years old. Both Jumbo's Ideal and Crimson Dandy were shown in 1907. He holds a sale of their stock every year, and in 1907 held a sale of sows, which was attended by many of the largest dealers in hogs in the state of Nebraska. His success has been phenomenal since coming here, and he has sold his product all over the state, and each year the fame of the red hog is spreading as farmers and stockmen recognize their value as an all-round favorite.

Our subject has had one hundred and seventy head, but now has ninety, which includes some of the finest stock to be found in the country.

For eight years Mr. Tillman was connected with the Rock Island railroad, and was also station agent at Gretna, Kansas, for that railway for several years. He has been connected with railroading for thirteen years. It was while working at Gretna that he started in the hog business, at first with a few pure bred Duroc Jerseys. He gradually increased his herd and worked successfully into the business and richly deserves the success he has attained through perseverance and honesty of dealing.

Mr. Tillman was married in 1887 to Anna Brown, of Otterville, Missouri. He has a family of twelve children, nine of whom are living. One son, George, died July 9, 1907, at the age of fourteen years. Two other sons died in 1905 at the age of five and six years.

AUBURN W. ATKINS.

Auburn W. Atkins, for the past many years a leading citizen of Morrill, formerly Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is proprietor of an extensive and valuable ranch in Court House Rock precinct. He has been identified with the growth and upbuilding of that region in the line of agriculture until a history of its development would be incomplete without mention of his labors there and the pioneer experiences which he has passed through.

Mr. Atkins was born in Ashtabula county, Ohio, on April 16, 1859, a son of Levi and Persis A. (Clarke) Atkins. His father was a soldier in the Union army during the Civil war, and was one of those brave men who never returned from the field of battle, giving up his life in 1863; the mother survived her husband by ten years, at which time our subject left his boyhood home and went south to attend school at Greenville, Mississippi, making his home with an uncle at that place. After three years there he returned to Ohio, and after a visit of a few months migrated to Hamburg, Iowa, arriving there in August, 1876, where for a year he attended school. He next went to Atchison county, Missouri, spending about two years there, at the same time attending at Hamburg. From there he came to Ogallala, Nebraska, where he entered the employ of Sheidley Brothers, large ranchmen, for whom he followed the range for three years, then went with the Ogallala Land & Cattle Company, remaining with them until 1887. Prior to this, about 1884 he had filed on a pre-emption claim, located on Cedar creek, Cheyenne county, and also took a homestead and timber claim, which he sold to the Belmont Irrigation and Water Power Company in 1893. He finally located on his present ranch on sections 22 and 23, township 19, range 49, and now owns two thousand acres with immense tracts of hay and range land, on which he runs about one thousand cattle and two hundred horses. He has one of the finest equipped ranches in the region, which is beautifully situated on the North Platte river, and known far and near as the "Flying V Ranch." Mr. Atkins is a genuine old-timer and widely known stockman, and a man who has done his full share in the success which has come to his region. He combines the hospitality of the south and the cordiality of the west; a man of refinement and education he is at ease in any gathering of men, east or west.

Mr. Atkins was married on July 16, 1893, at Sidney, Nebraska, to Miss Lulia Barnhart, a native of Bedford county, Pennsylvania, who came to Nebraska when a small girl with her parents, David A. and Malinda (Moore) Barnhart. They have four children, named as follows: Clarke W., Allen B., Auburn H. and Lulia Virginia, all at home and who form a most interesting family of youngsters, of whom our subject is justly proud. Mr. Atkins is a Democrat, and in 1898 was nominated for the state legislature and defeated by only seventy votes in one of the strongest Republican districts in the state, carrying his own county by a large majority. He takes an active and leading part in local and county politics and is a worthy representative of the people of his section. The family are all communicants of the Episcopal church. Mr. At-kings affiliates with the Masons, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Elks and the Modern Woodmen. A view of the ranch buildings and the beautiful Platte Valley landscape is to be found elsewhere in this work.

JOHN ORMESHER.

John Ormesher, residing on a homestead of four hundred and eighty acres at Swan Lake, Nebraska, was born in England, September 6, 1872, on his father's farm. He came to America with his parents, Edward and Margaret (Bell) Ormesher, at the age of ten years, the family residing in Lincoln for a short time before settling in Cherry county, where they still live. Our subject's education was attained in England, never attending school since coming to this country. There were five children in the family, of whom he is the oldest member, and when he reached the age of twenty-one years he started farming for himself on rented land. This was in 1891, the beginning of the drouth period, and for three successive years his crops failed and he lost all he had, and at the end of the fourth year he was four hundred dollars in debt.

Mr. Ormesher has been a great traveler, taking many trips to different parts of the country, looking at land in order to see if he could better himself, but never found any place that suited him better than here. He had gone through many discouragements and had his ups and downs, but after a time things changed for the better and of late years he has been very successful and is now proprietor of six hundred and forty acres, nearly all of which is good hay land. His farm is located on Swan Lake, in section 35, township 32, range 27, and is a well improved piece of property. He engages in stock raising to some extent, keeping about eighty head of cattle and thirty horses. Mr. Ormesher is a great potato raiser, and follows that line of farming principally. Some years he planted forty acres which yielded one hundred bushels per acre, selling for one dollar per bushel, which is a very profitable enterprise. He has had the contract for furnishing Rosebud and Fort Niobrara with potatoes, and for a number of years prior to its abandonment furnished the fort with hay. He is without a doubt, one of the most progressive and successful farmers in this locality. He is adding to a fine orchard of fruit trees, having already about six hundred in fine growing order.

Mr. Ormesher has never married, preferring to "batch it" for the present at least. His entire time and attention is devoted to improving his place and building up a model farm, and he is well satisfied with the results of his labors in Cherry county. He is active in all local and school affairs, and lends his influence in the upbuilding of the community in which he chose his home.

Politically Mr. Ormesher is a Populist, but always votes for the candidate he believes to be the best man.

MILTON SMITH.

In naming those who have spent many years in western Nebraska and have done their full share in the development of their section of the country in the way of building up farms, assisting in establishing schools, etc., a prominent place must be accorded the gentleman whose name heads this personal review. Mr. Smith is a resident of Woodson precinct, where he owns a valuable estate and is considered one of the leading old settlers.

Milton Smith was born in Monroe county, Indiana, in 1869. Both his father and mother were natives of that state, and made it their home up to 1882, when they came to Nebraska, locating near Beatrice on a farm, where they spent a few years and later lived on different farms in Gage and Jefferson counties. In 1887 our subject came to what is now Perkins county, accompanied by his father, and the latter took a homestead and tree claim on section 26, township 12, range 35, and began to build up a home and farm. There they went through all the early pioneer experiences, hauling supplies from Paxton, which was their nearest trading post and mail station. There were eight children in the family, Milton being the eldest, Elizabeth, Olivia Bell, Valinda K., Laura, Mattie, Walter and Seth.

Our subject remained with his parents up to 1891, helped his father build up a good farm of three hundred and twenty acres and put everything in first class shape, then struck out for himself, filing on a homestead on section 4, township 11, range 35, proved up on the place, "batching it" there for several years. He did all of his first work on the homestead with a team of oxen, breaking up ground for sod crops the first year, and lived in a sod shanty. He started in very humble fashion, having but fifteen dollars in cash to buy tools, etc., with, and was obliged to work out at whatever he could get to do in the vicinity of his farm in order to make a living. He saw hard times for a number of years but managed to improve the place a little and remained there up to 1907, when he located on his present ranch. This is a finely improved place, having a complete set of good buildings, including a commodious residence twenty-eight by thirty-six feet, barn forty-eight by fifty-two feet, well, windmills, fences, etc. There are in all one thousand six hundred acres in the place, and of this one hundred and twenty-five acres are cultivated and the balance in hay and pasture.

Mr. Smith is an active member of his community in advancing its best interests, and a staunch Republican. He is at present secretary and treasurer of the Paxton and Elsie Telephone Company.

ALVIE S. SAXTON.

Alvie S. Saxton, recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of Sioux county, resides on his valuable estate in section 5, township 32, range 53. He has followed farming throughout his career, and has lived in western Nebraska during the past twenty-three years, and during his early residence in this state has experienced many interesting and exciting phases of pioneer life, which he recounts with accuracy.

Mr. Saxton was born in Hillsdale county, Michigan, in 1863. His father, George W. Saxton, was a carpenter by trade and followed that occupation nearly all his life. Both parents were of American stock.

Our subject grew up in his native county until he was ten years of age, when the family removed to Tama county, Iowa, where they lived for ten years located in Toledo, and where his father worked at the carpenter trade until he died in the spring of 1885. After the father's death the mother and the rest of the family moved to Dawes county, Nebraska, where they stayed one year, and then came to Sioux county, taking up claims and remaining here ever since.

In 1885 Mr. Saxton left Iowa and came to Nebraska, settling on a tract of land near what is now the town of Whitney, in Dawes county, and remained there for about a year, then came to Sioux county and located on a homestead, situated on the north side of Pine Ridge, fourteen miles northwest of Crawford. He "batched" it there for three years, starting his farm along, using ox teams to break up land and for hauling purposes, and did all his work with oxen for five years. He put up a log shanty and lived in it for a number of years, but steadily improved the place in elegant shape. In 1906 Mr. Saxton took an additional Kincaid homestead in sections 4 and 5, township 32, range 53, and he is now owner of seven hundred and eighty acres, using the greater part as a ranch for a number of cattle which he runs annually.

Mr. Saxton was married in 1888, to Sibbie Grau, daughter of John M. and Ella (Burnside) Grau, her father being a well-known veteran of the late war. Her father enlisted at the breaking out of the war, and served during the entire war period. He was in many battles and once was shot through the lungs, and is still living in Toledo, Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Saxton have a family of nine children, named as follows: Elva, John, Arthur, Lewis, Mary, Milford and Clifford (twins), Frank and Willard. The family occupy a foremost place among the prominent old settlers of their locality, and have a pleasant home and enjoy the friendship and acquaintance of a host of people.

Mr. Saxton was elected county commissioner in 1907, and is now serving in that capacity.

JOHN E. ENDERS.

John E. Enders, one of the early settlers of Brown county, Nebraska, is now the owner of an extensive estate in that locality and has gained a comfortable competence and enviable name through his perseverance and strict honesty and integrity in word and deed. Mr. Enders was born on a farm near Cedar Rapids, Iowa, January 12, 1858. His father, Frederick Enders, a native of New York state, born in 1826, was a pioneer in Rock county, Wisconsin, and later in Lynn county, Iowa. He married Rachel M. Carnes, born in Mercersville, Pennsylvania, in 1828, of Irish extraction; they had a family of two children, of whom our subject is the younger. He was reared and educated in Iowa, when a boy assisting his father in carrying on the farm work; at the age of twenty-six years he came to Nebraska and settled in Brown county where he located May 30, 1884, on section 33, township 27, range 24, he and B. S. Sawyer being the first white men to settle in Lakeland. He "batched it" here for seven years, living in a sod shanty, engaging almost from the first in the stock business. He took a homestead and kept improving the place, putting up better buildings, fencing it and equipping his farm with all necessary machinery, and made a success of the work. In 1906 he built a fine two-story residence, fitted with many modern improvements and conveniences, and has one of the best houses in the locality. He also put up a commodious barn and cattle shed, together with wells, windmills, etc. His farm on the banks of Enders Lake is well supplied with good water, the lake, covering three hundred acres of land, is stocked with bass; altogether, this is one of the most valuable properties in the county. The ranch consists of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres of deeded land, with leases on eight hundred acres additional. Mr. Enders' place is a great hunting and fishing resort, which he has fitted up for the convenience of his patrons, who come from all parts of the state.

Mr. Enders was married June 25, 1891, to Miss Emma Day, daughter of L. F. Day, an old settler in Brown county. Mr. and Mrs. Enders have a family of four children, who are named as follows: Harry L., Fred L., Frank Graham and Helen R. Mr. Enders is active in local public affairs, and has held minor offices at different times. He is now serving as assessor in his district, and always takes an interest in whatever is for the advancement of conditions in his community. Politically he is a Democrat. Fraternally he holds membership in the Masonic and Pythian lodges in Ainsworth.

AUGUST SUDMAN.

August Sudman, who is one of the leading business men and financiers of Deuel county, Nebraska, conducts the leading general merchandise establishment at Oshkosh. He has always been prominent in local affairs, and has held the office of postmaster for the past fourteen years, resigning in 1908 on account of pressure of his business interests which makes it impossible for him to devote the necessary time to the work. He is widely known throughout the region, and is one of the most highly esteemed and respected men in this section of the country.

Mr. Sudman was born in Germany October 6, 1865. There were five children in his father's family, he being the youngest of three sons, all of whom are now residing in western Nebraska, one a ranchman of Keith county, and the other living near our subject in Deuel county. The father and mother lived and died in their native county, and one sister still makes her home there.

When our subject was a young man of seventeen years he came alone to America, and located in western Nebraska, securing employment on what is now known as the Persinger Cattle Ranch, near Lodgepole, and situated on Lodgepole creek, remaining with the outfit about two years. He filed on a homestead on section 10, township 13, range 44, proved up on the place, then sold out, leaving the farm in 1893. In that year he returned to Germany for a visit, remaining six months. During the early years of his residence here Mr. Sudman trailed sheep from Utah to western Nebraska, roughing it all over the country, and has seen every kind of frontier life. He also worked in his brother's store at Chappell for a time, but most of his time was spent in ranching.

Upon his return from Germany in 1894, Mr. Sudman settled in the village of Oshkosh, establishing a general store, this being the first store there, and was under the firm name of A. Sudman & Co. Our subject was active manager of the business, and still retains that position, the company having built up an extensive trade throughout the section, and are constantly increasing their patronage. A brother, Fred Sudman, is engaged in the same business at Chappell, Nebraska, and is also prosperous and successful, both being men of exceptional ability, thrifty and shrewd.

Mr. Sudman was married in Oshkosh, on June 6, 1897, to Miss Pearl Plummer, who is a native of Missouri, and whose father was a prominent old settler of Deuel county, locating here in 1888. Our subject's was the first wedding in the village of Oshkosh, and was attended by a host of friends of both bride and groom.

Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sudman, namely: Clyde, Donald and Glenn, all attending the public schools. The family have a pleasant and comfortable home and are numbered among the popular members of the community, having a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Besides his town interests Mr. Sudman is interested in the ranching and stock business.

NOIS AWRANTS.

The gentleman whose name heads this sketch occupies a foremost place among the early settlers of western Nebraska, and has been engaged in farming and other enterprises in this region for more than a quarter of a century past. He is widely known throughout the country, is recognized as a gentleman of active public spirit and worthy citizenship, and is highly esteemed by all with whom he has had to do in a business or social way. Mr. Awrants is at present engaged in the livery business in Ericson, and was proprietor of the Ericson Hotel which had a large patronage, but was burnt down in October, 1907.

Mr. Awrants is a native of Defiance county, Ohio, born in 1848. His parents were of Dutch and Irish descent and originally came from Pennsylvania, settling in Ohio in the days of its pioneerage. Our subject grew up in that state until a young man, then started for the western states, locating in Iowa where he was engaged in general farm work. In 1881 he emigrated to Nebraska, taking up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in Merrick county, on which he lived for six years, then sold out at a profit. After that he operated a ranch near Central City for two years, then removed to Palmer, Nebraska, and entered the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway as section foreman, and was connected with that road for fifteen years.

Mr. Awrants embarked in the hotel business in 1907 and burnt out the same year. Regardless of this misfortune he has been very successful in his ventures. He is a thorough business man and well liked by all, one of the enterprising citizens of whatever community he is a member of, and enjoys the respect and esteem of all.

Mr. Awrants was married in 1870 to Miss Mary Hadix, a native of Indiana, and after many years of happy married life Mrs. Awrants passed away February 7, 1901. They had eight children, namely: Stephen H., Clidy, Sarah, Mina, Hattie, Frona, Zora and Harvey H. Three of the children are deceased—Sarah, Mina and Clidy. The remaining children are all worthy citizens, and are making their own way in the world. Mr. Awrants remained a widower for three years, then was married to Mrs. Sarah Lockwood, widow of C. W. Lockwood. Our subject and his good wife are devoted members of the Christian church of Ericson. Politically he is a Prohibitionist.

PERMAN CRAMBLET.

A drive through the highly cultivated fields of section 23, township 31, range 53, in Sioux county, Nebraska, convinces one of the thrift enjoyed in that locality, and a visitor at the home of Mr. Perman Cramblet is impressed with the fact that careful management and honest industry are prominent characteristics of the owner of this farm, which highly cultivated tract compares favorably with that of any place in the county. Mr. Cramblet resides in section 23, township 31, range 53, where he has gathered about him the comforts and many of the luxuries of rural life.

The gentleman above named was born in Fulton county, Illinois, in 1854. His father, James F., was a blacksmith, of American blood, and he married Elizabeth Sommers, also a native of this country, she born in Indiana. The family lived on a farm in Illinois, and there our subject was reared. In 1886 he came west to Nebraska, locating four miles south of the town of Crawford, taking up a pre-emption and later a homestead, and lived in that locality for fifteen years. He built up a good home and developed a fine farm, and in 1890 sold the place and for a time worked as a contractor.

When he first struck this section of the country he freighted all through this part, and witnessed all the pioneer experiences, leading a typical frontiersman's existence for many years.

Mr. Cramblet bought his present place in 1903. This ranch consists of four hundred and eighty acres, all lying along the White river. It is well supplied with timber, rock, etc., for building, and there is a beautiful little lake in its grounds, supplied from natural springs, making it one of the most sightly locations in the county. He has put up corrals and all necessary ranch buildings, as he runs a large number of cattle annually.

In 1904 Mr. Cramblet filed on a Kincaid homestead of four hundred and eighty acres, on which he moved in section 31, township 6, range 3. He has put on many improvements and good buildings, and has a fine home here. His ranch home is called "Lake Ranch," and he uses that exclusively as a stock ranch, farming a part of his Kincaid farm.

Our subject is called one of the substantial citizens of his community, who has always done all in his power to help build up the region, assisting in establishing schools and taking an active part in all local affairs of importance. Politically he is an Independent voter.

Mr. Cramblet was united in marriage December 16, 1880, to Rachel Hoxworth, of Knox county, Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Cramblet have been born the following children: Adella, now Mrs. James Nester, and Clara, married to W. C. Thurman.

JEREMIAH C. PERCY.

Jeremiah C. Percy, the genial postmaster of Paxton, Nebraska, although a recent comer to this section, is a typical westerner, and has passed many years on the frontier

Mr. Percy was born in Franklin county, Ohio, December 15, 1839, where he was reared. His father, Joseph Percy, a farmer, was a native of New Jersey, and died in Mercer county, Illinois. His mother, whose maiden name was Abigail Crane, was of old Puritan stock, and died in Ohio. The family moved to Franklin county, Ohio, in 1834, and in 1855 to Illinois. At the breaking out of the Civil war, Mr. Percy crossed the Mississippi and enlisted in Company E, Seventh Iowa Infantry. With his regiment he saw service for many months, taking part in a number of engagements; he was at Ft. Donelson, in the battle of Shiloh, battle of Corinth, on the Atlantic campaign, and many minor encounters. On May 15, 1864, he received a severe wound from which he recovered and rejoined his regiment in the Carolinas and participated in the grand review. In July, 1865, he received his discharge, returning to Illinois. From 1866 to 1882 Mr. Percy was engaged in farming in Peoria county, Illinois, then went into Missouri, locating in Nodaway county, and there established a farm, which he operated for a number of years. He was very successful in that part of the country, and accumulated considerable property. In 1907 Mr. Percy came to Keith county, settling in Paxton, where he was appointed postmaster in December. He is also engaged in farming, having a tract of one thousand six hundred acres a short distance from the town, part of which is wild land and the balance improved; part of this he has distributed in his family.

Mr. Percy married Miss Jennie C. Lowe, a native of New Hampshire, in Mercer county, Illinois, in 1867. They have three children, Elmer, who operates the farm near Paxton, Gertie, wife of Fred L. Bent, an employe of the Union Pacific Railroad at Paxton, and Silvia, who married Howard H. Holden, a cattle ranchman of Fontenelle, Wyoming. The daughters were brides of a double wedding solemnized November 19, 1908.

In political views Mr. Percy is a Republican. He is an adherent to Christian Science, and is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. We are pleased to call attention to a portrait of Mr. Percy and his good wife appearing on another page of this work.

WILLIAM J. TAYLOR.

William J. Taylor conducts a general merchandise store and deals in coal and grain in Brule, Keith county, Nebraska, where he has succeeded in building up a profitable and prosperous business.

He is a native of Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, where he was born on a farm January 1, 1861, his ancestors being of mixed nationality, Irish, German and Scotch. His parents, William and Eliza (Lynn) Taylor, were reputable farmers in the Keystone state, where the mother still resides; the father died there in 1892.

The subject of our sketch came west in 1886, taking a homestead on section 6, township 12, range 40, southwest of Brule, Keith county, Nebraska, where he lived first in a sod shanty. He proved up on his claim and returned to Pennsylvania where, from 1892 to 1898, he was on the road as a traveling salesman. In 1898 he returned to Keith county and resumed farming, which he continued until 1899, when he established a general store at Brule, opening for business in September. There had been a store in the village from 1884, a small struggling affair, but it did not meet the demands of the country. Our subject had very little on which to start, but he believed the opening for a store was very promising and that it would only require close attention and careful buying to become established permanently. His capital consisted of only forty-five dollars and five dollars of that he paid for an old stove, which is still in use. For a long time Mrs. Taylor ran the store and our subject worked on the section for the Union Pacific Railway Company, teaching through the winters, having been in the latter employment twenty-three years. In this thrifty way they kept branching out and adding to their lines until they had a fine large stock in a building 25 x 80 feet in size. In 1899 Mr. Taylor was appointed postmaster, a position he has continued to hold ever since.

William J. Taylor was married, near Latta Grove, Pennsylvania, September 29, 1885, to Miss Emma Walker, daughter of David and Leah (Dell) Walker, farmers of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have four children: Zelda, Fred, Ethel and Theodore; all except Fred, who was born in Pennsylvania, are natives of Nebraska.

Mr. Taylor was county surveyor of Keith county for nine years, and he has always been active in matters of local importance. He has built up a good business from but a very small start and can truly be classed among the self-made men of the county.

He is a Democrat in politics and a member of Ogallala Lodge, No. 274, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

We publish portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Tay-

ERNEST E. BOWDEN.

The gentleman named above resides in section 10, township 34, range 26, of Cherry county, where he has a pleasant home, and is recognized as one of the successful and prosperous agriculturists of this locality.

Mr. Bowden was born in Winnebago City, Minnesota, April 17, 1865; he being the fourth in a family of eleven children. The father was of English descent and the mother, Elizabeth (McGowan) Bowden, was an American by birth. The father, Richard Bowden, served in a Minnesota regiment during the late Civil war. He was a farmer by occupation, and reared his family of eleven children in the country. In 1880 he came to Nebraska, and for two years he was manager of the Deer Park Hotel. Then for a time he had charge of a government saw mill and later he bought a farm near O'Neil. He died at Norfolk in 1907. At the age of ten years our subject began working out at whatever he could get to do in order to earn his own living and take the burden of his support from his parents, and while a mere lad often took a man's work on farms in the vicinity of his home. In 1881 he came to Cherry county, landing at Fort Niobrara on November 10. Here he carried mail to Boiling Springs for twelve weeks, making one trip each week, over a rough road beset by many dangers. He then joined a surveying party, traveling three hundred and twenty miles west of Fort Niobrara, and in the early winter of 1882 returned to Cherry county, where he remained through the summer of the following year. He then entered the employ of James M. Thatcher, who was running the post trader's store at Fort Niobrara, and remained at the post until 1889. About 1892 he bought his present homestead of three hundred and twenty acres, of which there were ninety acres broken, the balance being in hay and pasture land. On this he has built a fine residence and a complete set of substantial farm buildings, with fences enclosing his entire farm. He has planted a large number of trees, has a fine orchard growing and keeps some stock. He has been very successful in his farming and stockraising enterprises, notwithstanding the hard times he has experienced since coming to Cherry county. However, by perseverance, he has succeeded to a marked degree and is now owner of a fine estate, a good home and farm. He was one of the first men to settle in this county, and knows only two men who were here ahead of him. He has always done all he could to build up his home and aid in developing the locality, and thus has helped in the growth of his county.

Mr. Bowden was married December 22, 1889, to Miss Ida Archer, daughter of Lewis and Agnes (McCall) Archer, of American stock, and old settlers in Cherry county, coming to this region in 1884, where he built up a good home and farm, and raised his family. Mr. and Mrs. Bowden have a family of four children, namely: Virginia Belle, Freeman Jasper, Lillie and Charles Clarence.

Mr. Bowden is active in all school affairs in his district, and lends his influence toward the forwarding of everything that tends to the advancement of educational and commercial conditions in his community. He has never held any office, takes a keen interest in local and national affairs, and is an intelligent and well-read man who keeps abreast of the times. Politically he is a Republican.

J. A. NORRIS.

J. A. Norris, one of the successful farmers and stockmen of Williamsburg township, is a prominent and highly respected citizen of that locality.

Mr. Norris was born in 1860. He came to Saunders county, Nebraska, with his parents when a lad of ten years, locating in Williamsburg township in 1885. He is now the proprietor of four hundred acres of river bottom land in sections 13 and 7 on the Platte river, which he devotes to grain raising. His crops show a yield of twenty-two bushels of wheat to the acre, corn fifty, oats fifty to sixty bushels, which is considered a very good average. He runs from one hundred and fifty to three hundred hogs on his place. Several years ago he was engaged in raising full-blooded Poland China hogs, but now has mixed breeds, but is breeding back to Poland Chinas, as he considers they develop quicker, and it takes less feed to keep them fat. His drove of hogs now are a fine lot, and in splendid condition. He also has a large bunch of polled Durham cattle, marketing a carload last spring. He keeps fifty cows, and makes a specialty of fresh milk cows, which he sells on the spring market, also feeding about eighty head of steers each year. All the feed which he raises on his farm is fed out at home, and he finds mixed farming and stock raising a great success here in Nebraska, which he thinks is the best state he ever struck for this business, and he has had plenty of experience. He has fine buildings on his farm, and every improvement necessary for conducting a model farm. He has a fine orchard, and successfully grows the most delicious fruits such as apples, peaches, plums and grapes, the latter being of the finest quality to be found on the market.

Mr. Norris' fine property and entire possessions have been acquired by hard labor and good management, supplemented by strict honesty of word and deed.

He was married in 1880 to Miss Rene Tower, and to them have been born three daughters, as follows: Clara, Adaline and Zelta.

WILLIAM MCGANNON.

William McGannon, who has made an enviable record as a farmer and stock raiser, the result of his own toil and economy, and a man who enjoys the respect and confidence of a host of warm friends in the community in which his useful life is passing, was born in the city of Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1858. His father, David McGannon, was a butcher. Both of his parents were natives of Ireland. When our subject was but a boy the family came to Minnesota, settling in Olmstead county, near Winona. His father opened the first butcher shop in Rochester, Minnesota, and also conducted a dray line. Here our subject spent his boyhood days on the frontier.

When Mr. McGannon was seventeen years of age he left his home in Minnesota, and returning to West Virginia, attending school at St. Vincent's College. Some time later he conducted a butcher shop at Lanesborough, and after a time opened a shop of his own at Fountain, Minnesota, where he bought and shipped stock. He also conducted a butcher shop at Canton, Minnesota, for about seven years.

In 1891 Mr. McGannon came to Dawes county, Nebraska, took a homestead and bought some land, and engaged in the raising of cattle and sheep. In 1898 he came to his present ranch in the Pine Ridge, where he has erected a substantial and comfortable house in section 19, township 31, range 49. He secured adjoining land, and now has six thousand five hundred acres of deeded land, all of which is fenced and cross fenced. He has six miles along the Trunk Butte creek and two miles on the Indian creek. There is a small stream three quarters of a mile in length which rises on his ranch. Mr. McGannon has one thousand acres of land under cultivation, and has five hundred acres of the finest timber to be found in Dawes county. He has erected substantial and commodious buildings, and engages extensively in the raising of horses and hogs. Since acquiring this land, he has greatly improved it, and has purchased modern agricultural implements to assist him in making his place one of the most modern and productive in western Nebraska. He has a gasoline engine on his farm and also a steam engine and plow.

Mr. McGannon and Miss Jane Davis were married at Fountain, Minnesota, January 19, 1880. She is a daughter of Patrick and Bridget Davis, native of Ireland. Two children came to bless this union, George Arthur and David Edward.

In politics Mr. McGannon is a Democrat. A more enthusiastic or public spirited citizen of Dawes county could not be found, for from his start in this locality Mr. McGannon has taken an active part in all matters of local interest, and is a firm believer in the future of Dawes county. His efforts to get a railroad to the table-land of the county have been untiring. From the crops raised on his cultivated land he has demonstrated that there are places in Dawes county where the land is as fertile and valuable, and can be made to produce as much as irrigated land.

As an entertainer and enthusiastic storyteller, Mr. McGannon has few equals. Upright and honorable in all his dealings, he has manifested on all occasions a high integrity and a strict adherence to principle. Mr. McGannon has recently become proprietor of the Pleasant View Sanitarium, an important hot springs health resort, at Thermopolis, Wyoming, whence he has removed, leaving his sons to operate his ranching interests in Dawes county, Nebraska.

EILERT HEERTEN.

Eilert Heerten, residing on section 6, township 34, range 22, is one of the prosperous and influential agriculturists of Keya Paha county, Nebraska. Mr. Heerten was born in the province of Hanover, Germany, January 21, 1847, the fifth of a family of eight children, and has spent all his life on a farm. His father, S. Heerten, never left his native land, where both he and his wife died. Mr. Heerten sailed from the port of Bremen in the vessel New York in 1869 and on arrival in the new world proceeded to Illinois, where he worked for a number of years on farms in Woodford, Mason and Menard counties before coming to Nebraska. He landed here in February, 1885, and took a homestead in section 6, township 34, range 22, and still occupies that place. He at once built a sod house, the total cost of which was one dollar and sixty cents, and he and his family lived in it for thirteen years, then he erected a fine frame dwelling. He has added to his farm until he now owns two thousand four hundred and eighty acres of deeded land, and cultivates three hundred acres, running about one hundred and fifty head of cattle and twenty horses. When he came here he had but one team and a wagon and five dollars in money, so he feels well repaid for his labors in this part of the country. During the dry years he often became discouraged and wanted to leave, but could get no bid on his place and was obliged to stay. He lost four crops by drouth, and has been hailed out eight times in the time he has lived here, seven of the icy downpours occurring within fourteen years. The second year he lived here was the hardest he ever saw. He tried working on the railroad on the Loup river to get enough money to support his family. In 1905 he sold seven loads of hogs and eight hundred dollars' worth of cattle, which shows that he finds stock raising a very profitable enterprise.

In 1871 our subject married Miss Amke Rademaker, born in Germany, who came to America in 1868. They have five children, namely: John, Richard, Frank, Edward and Bessie, all living at home at present.

Mr. Heerten has been school director of his district for the past eighteen years. In political faith he is usually Democratic. While reared in the Lutheran church, there being no congregation near, the family now worship with the Methodists.

LEWIS BROTT.

Lewis Brott, who occupies a foremost place among the pioneer settlers of Cheyenne county, is one of the extensive land owners of Trognitz precinct. He has passed nearly a quarter of a century here and during that time has not only witnessed a wonderful transformation, but has been a potent factor in producing the same. He is known throughout the county as a citizen of sterling worth and a farmer and ranchman of intelligence and enterprise.

Mr. Brott was born six miles from Victoria, Knox county, Illinois, on October 14, 1861, and remained in that vicinity up to 1885. His father was a farmer there and our subject was raised and educated in the country, the whole family later coming to Nebraska, where both father and mother died in 1906. Here they had acquired three hundred and twenty acres in section 14, township 16, range 52. They were well known throughout the region, and held in the highest esteem by all who knew them. There were seven children in the family of whom four survive, Lewis being the fourth child in order of birth; two brothers reside in Denver and the fourth is in California. When Lewis was twenty-four years of age he migrated to Dawson county, Nebraska, and spent a year there, then came on to Cheyenne county, locating in Potter in the spring of the following year, where he engaged in the mercantile business in partnership with his brother Andrew; they enjoyed a good trade throughout the surrounding country, and carried on the establishment for five years. In 1890 our subject went to Denver, where for a time he followed contracting and building in partnership with his brothers and then went into the mountains hunting and prospecting. Although they located mineral it was not in sufficient quantities and their mining operations were discontinued.

In the spring of 1895 Mr. Brott returned to Cheyenne county, purchased a quarter section of land in section 14, adjoining his father's homestead with the proceeds of a timber claim which he owned. He has an interest in the parents' homestead, where he has built a two-story, seven-room dwelling, together with stables and sheds sufficient for sheltering the necessary stock. He has one hundred and fifty acres under cultivation, with over a hundred acres of fine alfalfa, raising this principally for the seed from which he realized a handsome profit, having obtained as high as thirty-five dollars per acre for the seed alone, besides having the hay for use on his ranch. He is progressive and up-to-date in his methods of operating his ranch, and has experimented with different grains, striving to get the most out of the soil, being very successful in his experiments.

Mr. Brott has always taken an active part in local affairs, and is a gentleman of true citizenship and progressiveness. In 1908 he was appointed deputy assessor, and is still serving in that capacity. He is a staunch Democrat and lends his influence for good government, local and national.

DAVID W. HAMAKER.

David W. Hamaker, who resides in section 5, township 29, range 54, Sioux county, Nebraska, is an old settler in that region, and a gentleman of intelligence and enterprise, who has acquired a good property and the esteem and respect of his fellowmen. He has made section 5, township 29, range 54, his home for many years, and owns and occupies a pleasant home and farm.

Mr. Hamaker was born in 1863, in Andrew county, Missouri. His father, Daniel, was a farmer and mechanic, and one of the earliest settlers in Kansas, where he lived with his family for many years; the father died there in 1871, and the following year our subject with his mother went to Iowa to reside. They located in Marshall county, and there he grew to manhood, working at whatever he could find to do during those years to help support his mother and the younger children. In 1884 he returned to Kansas and spent four years in Dickinson county, where he worked on a farm, then came to Nebraska and started to work at Fort Robinson. He soon afterwards secured employment as a cow boy and followed that occupation during the years 1890-'91, traveling on the range near Whistle creek. He next took up a tree claim situated three miles south of his present location, and remained on it for several years, coming to the ranch he now occupies in 1900, which he filed on as a homestead. Here he started to improve, putting up good buildings, fencing it, and gradually was able to buy land adjoining until he acquired a nice tract consisting of six hundred and forty acres, all good land, and this he has well stocked with cattle and other stock, horses and the best breed of Hereford cattle and he has quite a large bunch of both.

Mr. Hamaker has done splendidly since locating here, and is a thoroughly industrious and energetic ranchman, employing modern methods in operating his place, from which he derives a nice income each year. He has always been active in local affairs of importance, serving as precinct assessor for two or three terms, always standing for the best interests of his community.

PETER S. PETERSON.

Peter S. Peterson, residing in section 23, township 18, range 43, of Deuel county, Nebraska, is one of the leading farmers and stock-raisers in that portion of the state. He was born in Denmark on the 6th day of May, 1850, and is the fifth child of the nine children with which his parents were blessed.

As a lad of twenty-two years he emigrated to America in 1872 and arrived at Chicago on May 24 1872, where he remained one year. Not liking the life in a big city, he remained in Chicago one year only, and went to Racine, Wisconsin, in 1873. There he remained about six years, but even there the country was not to his tastes and he concluded to try his luck in Iowa, and in 1879 he removed to Pottawattomie county, where he remained until 1887.

This proved to be the year which should decide his future life. He came to old Cheyenne county (now Deuel county), Nebraska, and took up a pre-emption of one hundred and sixty acres and also one hundred and sixty acres of timber claim, he also homesteaded on the southwest quarter of section 23, in township 18, range 43, which up to the present date is considered the home ranch, Mr. Peterson having in the meanwhile acquired one thousand five hundred acres of land, of which about five hundred acres are under cultivation.

Mr. Peterson has had a varied experience since he settled in western Nebraska, and success did not come immediately; he had to undergo all the hardships of an early settler while on the Blue creek and Antelope Valley, being compelled to haul his supplies fifty-five miles, get his mail from Ogallala, and when he built his cabin he had to haul the wood for that purpose a hundred miles or more.

Hard labor and persistence led to Mr. Peterson's success; he has run large herds in the past and to-day his sons, Henry and Clarence, have the handling of about seven hundred head of cattle and fifty horses in their own right and title.

Mr. Peterson was married to Lena Hanson, she being the oldest of eleven children, and was born in Denmark coming to America with her parents when seven years old. Her parents are living at present in Racine, Wisconsin.

The wedding ceremony took place in Chicago, July 3, 1876; they have five children, of whom George, Henry and Clarence are married, while Dora and Charlie are single. All of them live in Deuel county.

Mr. Peterson's farm is well improved, while he himself is well and favorably known, and is one of the respected citizens of western Nebraska, while Mrs. Peterson is holding the office of postmaster of Hutchinson, which is located on the Peterson ranch.

Mr. Peterson has retired from the active operation of his ranch, a large part of it is leased and Mr. Peterson is enjoying a well earned rest. George, his oldest son, owns one thousand acres of land and it is improved with good and modern buildings, fenced and well equipped. He has fifty head of cattle and five horses. He has done his full share in the community, taking an active part in all questions of public interest, and through industry and perseverance now owns one of the most desirable ranches in western Nebraska.

CORNELIUS FENWICK.

Cornelius Fenwick is postmaster of Keystone, Nebraska, a station on the Union Pacific railroad on the north side of the North Platte river in Keith county. Mr. Fenwick has been one of the largest ranchers and stockmen in this region, but has moved to Keystone for the purpose of living somewhat retired after a long, successful and busy life. He has well earned the rest he now seeks.

Cornelius Fenwick is of English birth, his nativity being in the village of Appleby, Lincolnshire, where he was born December 24, 1843. His parents, Edward and Ellen Fenwick, lived and died in England, where the father followed farm labor during his entire life.

Our subject was reared in the land of his birth, remaining there engaged in farm labor until 1869, when he came to America, sailing from Liverpool in the City of Wisconsin; the voyage was a long one, three weeks, owing to terrific storms and delay owing to rescuing the crew of a sinking vessel they encountered on the way. He landed in New York and for a time worked in the mines near Dover, New Jersey; in the spring of 1870 he went to Will county, Illinois, where he resided three years, performing farm labor for two years and then, after marriage, farming on rented land. Thence he went to Indiana, where he made his home in Newton and Jasper counties, renting a farm until the spring of 1880, when he went to Polk county, Nebraska, where he lived on rented land near Stromsburg until the fall of 1883, at which time he came to Keith county, taking a homestead three and a half miles south of Ogallala. There our subject lived about four years and then "commuted" on his farm. In 1887 he came to the North Platte river valley and located on a pre-emption, which he later changed into a homestead on which he proved up and received a patent to his land. The homestead was the southeast quarter of section 30, township 15, range 37, and here our subject lived until 1906, when he moved to Keystone, building the first house in the village. Mr. Fenwick's earliest residence in the county was built of sod, and as with all the early pioneers he witnessed many hard times owing to drouth and other adverse causes. On his farm south of Ogallala, he had the first deep well in that whole region. He cut the first grain ever cut in that country in 1885, this being a crop of rye that threshed eighteen bushels to the acre. He also shelled the first corn in the vicinity of Ogallala, running the small sheller all over the country, and was the pioneer in many things in that region. Mr. Fenwick was first appointed postmaster of Keystone when that office was established in 1891 and he has held the position ever since. He has sold his leases of range land, retaining only six hundred and forty acres and his purpose is to spend his declining years in Keystone, living a somewhat retired life. When in active ranching Mr. Fenwick ran as high as high as three hundred cattle at times.

April 6, 1873, was celebrated the marriage of Cornelius Fenwick with Miss Mary Ann Fell, a native of Canada and the daughter of James Fell, a native of England. Mr. and Mrs. Fenwick have six children,—Ellen, married Joseph Jones, now residing at St. Johns, near Portland, Oregon; James E., ranching five miles from Ogallala in Conduit Valley; the well on his place is four hundred and thirty-five feet deep; Amy, married Alonzo Jones, residing between the North and South Platte rivers; Charles R., conducting the old home place; William purchased land in Saskatchewan, Canada, and removed there in 1909; and Pearl May, wife of Fred Dean, also an immigrant to Canada.

Cornelius Fenwick was one of the very earliest pioneers of Keith county and throughout the years has taken an influential place among the thrifty and progressive citizens, performing well his part in the onward march of material development. He has held various offices of trust within the gift of the people, always serving with fidelity and righteous purpose. He has been road overseer and county assessor three or four terms, and has been a great factor in the establishment and maintenance of the schools where he has lived. Mr. Fenwick is a Republican in politics, and a member of the Episcopal church. On another page we are pleased to present a view of Mr. Fenwick's ranch buildings and also his dwelling in Keystone, together with the library and chapel, both of which he was instrumental in establishing and which he liberally helps to maintain.

ANDREW P. OLESEN.

One of the old settlers of Cherry county, Andrew P. Olesen, resides on his pleasant estate in section 9, township 32, range 40.

Mr. Olesen was born in Denmark, May 1,

1859, and was reared and educated there. His father and mother were old country farmers, and have never left Denmark, the father dying in 1907. In 1903 they celebrated their golden wedding, and our subject was one of the guests at that reunion. His boyhood days were spent on his father's farm until he started out for himself. Sailing from Glasgow, having crossed to Scotland, in an Anchor line steamer, he landed in New York March 1, 1884, locating in Iowa. He went to work on a farm at a salary of sixteen dollars per month, and remained there for two years. In 1886 he came to Sheridan county and settled southeast of Gordon. After a short time he sold this, buying and selling other property for a number of years, until in 1892 he bought his present home of eighteen hundred acres. This is partly range and partly farming land, and he now has under cultivation about two hundred and fifty acres, runs one hundred head of stock, and has his place well improved with good buildings and fences. During the dry years he was unable to do much farming, and this time was spent in the hills, getting started in the cattle business, of which he has made a marked success.

Mr. Olesen was never married, and his experiences during the years he has "batched it" have been many and varied, but he now employs a man with his wife on his farm, which relieves him of many of the smaller details incidental to the proper working of a farm home.

Mr. Olesen is an Independent voter, with a leaning toward the Republican party, and a Lutheran in religious faith.

GEORGE H. HALLIGAN.

George H. Halligan, a well known and successful farmer and ranchman of section 26, township 13, range 40, is one of the early settlers of the region, and one of the worthy citizens of Keith county. He was born near the city of Kalamazoo, Michigan, February 10, 1859.

The father of our subject, James Halligan, a farmer all his life, was a native of Ireland. His wife, Elizabeth Cassel, was also born and raised in that country. They came with their family to Otoe county, Nebraska, in 1868. George was raised in Nebraska on the frontier, assisting his parents in carrying on the home farm from the time he was a small boy, receiving a limited education by attendance at the district schools in the vicinity of his home. He started for himself at the age of twenty-five years, when he, with a brother, John J. Halligan, came to Keith county, arriving in 1884. Their trading point during their early residence here was Ogallala, and there our subject carried on a land agency to some extent, traveling through the surrounding country, making that town his headquarters. He took a homestead in 1886 two miles southeast of Ogallala, and succeeded in developing a good farm, going through all the pioneer experiences while living there, but remained in the vicinity up to 1904, when he moved to his present location on section 26, township 13, range 40. Here he has a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, on which he has put good improvements in the way of buildings, fences, wells and windmills. He engages in farming principally, although he has a small herd of stock.

Mr. Halligan first married Miss Nora Hendershot, who was the mother of a daughter, Lottie, now teaching near Wallace, in Lincoln county. The second wife, Mary Glynn, was born in the village of Balltore, Ireland. She is the mother of four children—Francis, Lila, Henry and Deloris.

They have a comfortable home and are highly respected as good neighbors and worthy citizens, Mr. Halligan taking a commendable interest in local affairs. He is a Democrat politically and a member of the Ogallala lodge, Modern Woodmen of America. Mr. Halligan was reared a Catholic while the good wife is a member of the Episcopal church.

WILLIAM J. JOHNSON.

As a citizen of worth and a man of industrious and energetic character this gentleman is well known to the residents of Box Butte county. He has studied the needs of his community for many years and has always been found standing on the side of right and doing his part toward promoting the public welfare. He is a resident of section 17, township 25, range 50, and is owner of one of the valuable estates of that locality.

Mr. Johnson was born in Caldwell county, Missouri, in 1859. His father, John, was of English birth, a farmer by occupation, and followed that calling all his life. He married F. A. Wilkinson, also born and raised in England. They came to America in 1856, settled on a farm in Missouri, moving to Illinois in 1860, and there our subject was reared and educated. He lived at home with his parents until he was eighteen years old, then started for himself, locating in Harrison county, Iowa.

There he learned the mason's trade and followed that work in Iowa, and later in Nebraska for many years. In 1888 he came to Nebraska and settled in Alliance, where he worked at his trade up to 1884, then came to his present location. This ranch is situated eighteen miles northwest of Alliance. During the first two years the family occupied a sod house, and he worked faithfully improving the place, putting up good farm buildings, fencing the land, etc. He met with pretty good success from the start, both in farming and stock raising, and is now owner of a fine estate consisting of five thousand acres, running a large herd of cattle and sheep. He cultivates about one hundred acres, and raises splendid crops of grain, and altogether has one of the finest improved farms in this region.

In 1882 Mr. Johnson was married to Julia Arion, daughter of John Arion, a farmer who spent many years farming in both Illinois and Iowa. Seven children have been born to Mr. Johnson and his estimable wife, who are named as follows: Ira E., Clyde T., Bryce L., Hazel J., Fern, Teddy Rexford and Pearl. They form a most interesting and congenial family group and their home is one of the pleasant and bright spots to the traveler in the county. Mr. Johnson had the sad misfortune to lose his wife the 25th of January, 1908.

Politically our subject is a Republican.

MICHAEL KERNAN.

Michael Kernan, for the past thirty years a prominent resident of Rock county, Nebraska, is proprietor of a fine farm and home along the west border of the county. He has been identified with the agricultural interests of that locality until a history of its development would be incomplete without mention of his labors there and the pioneer experiences through which he has passed.

Mr. Kernan was born in County Cavan, Ireland, in 1840. His father, Michael, Sr., was a hatter by trade and never left his native land, while his mother died when he was a young lad and of whom he has but a faint memory. Our subject was married in 1865 and came to America with his bride, who was Miss Mary Savage, reared in the vicinity of his home, where they were schoolmates during childhood. The young couple sailed from Dundock for Liverpool and thence on the Royal Hybernia for New York, and after a voyage of fourteen days they made a temporary landing at Portland, Maine, which at that time contained only a half dozen houses. From

New York they went to Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania, where he worked in the coal mines, receiving fifteen dollars per week, and continued at this for three years. They then went to Hazelton, Pennsylvania, where he again entered the coal mines, and spent nine years there, coming to O'Neill, Nebraska, in 1876, when there were but two houses in the town. They lived there for two years, enduring grasshopper raids and drouths, then came to Rock county, Nebraska, settling on Long Pine creek, where he put up a log house in which they lived seven years. There he went through many pioneer experiences, freighting his provisions from O'Neill to Long Pine. They lost several crops by grasshoppers and drouths, withal having a hard time to make a living. In 1885 he left his first homestead and located on his present farm in section 9, township 30, range 20, where he has built up a good home and farm of three hundred acres, all good land, and engages principally in raising small grain and stock. He has good buildings and fences, together with a fine grove of forest trees on the place, having taken it up as a timber claim. Besides the forest trees he has about two hundred fruit trees, including apples and small fruits.

Mr. Kernan's family consists of himself and seven children, namely: Maggie, Lizzie, Bridget, Nora, Josie, James and Julia. Mr. Kernan's wife died May 1, 1905, and he has also lost three children, Michael and Mary, who were killed in a hailstorm which swept their locality while still living at O'Neill, about the year 1873, and Katie, whose demise occurred in Rock county.

Mr. Kernan is one of the leading old-timers of this part of the state, and has been most active in assisting in the development of his community. He is a strong Bryan man, and hopes to see that gentleman president at some near future date. The family are all adherents of the Catholic church.

SILAS SILLASEN.

Silas Sillasen is a native of the village of Andrup, province of Jutland, Denmark, where he was born November 2, 1865. His father, Morton Sillasen, was a farmer and stock raiser in Denmark, where his entire life was spent. The mother, who was Maren Andersen, still resides on the old home farm in Jutland.

Our subject was reared on a farm in his native country and came to America in March, 1882, sailing from Esbjerg to Newcastle, England, and thence to Liverpool, where he embarked, landing at Boston after a stormy passage of seventeen days, having put into Halifax en route. Without delay he came west to Nebraska, having read something of the state when a boy at school. A man who had worked for the father was somewhere in the western part of the state, so Silas came to North Platte and found the man for whom he sought. He later came on to Lincoln county and worked on the John Bratt & Company's ranch as a cowboy. He worked for this company in what was then a very new country for twelve years up to 1896. During this time, in 1888, he took a homestead in Lincoln county, on which he proved up, but continued working as a cowboy, roughing it and camping out both winter and summer, his duties requiring him to ride all over southwestern Nebraska and into Wyoming. In 1896 he settled on his present fine farm in section 4, township 14, range 37, on the North Platte river, where he now has six hundred and forty acres. He owns first-class improvements and has an establishment of which he may well feel proud. He was the first in this part of the country to purchase railroad land at ten dollars an acre, the price seeming too high at that time, but his judgment has proved to be good. He was the first, too, to purchase twenty-dollar land.

Mr. Sillasen was married in 1891 to Miss Ella Graham, but his good helpmeet died in 1894, leaving a son, Andrew, a fine, manly lad, who resides with his grandmother at Pleasantville, Iowa, where he is caring for her in her extreme old age, as she did for him in his infancy. He has developed a talent for business and has, although but sixteen, earned a horse and buggy by his own efforts.

Our subject has had many hard experiences during his pioneer life, has fought prairie fires many times day and night in order to save his property from utter loss, but he has worked his way to success and a comfortable competency, a creditable showing for a foreign-born lad who had nothing but his hands and brain for his beginning. He has done his share toward the material development of the community and is respected by every one as a generous and public-spirited citizen. He is a Democrat in politics and was reared in the Lutheran church. He is a member of the Ogallala lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. Five of the family have come to the country and have filled honorable stations in life. Silas, the eldest, was first to come. Andrew died by accident while on the range. Jens, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this work; Louis, who is assistant cashier in the Citizens' Bank of Ogallala, has served as deputy county treasurer. He has attended the University of Lincoln. John is engaged in railroad work in Laramie. Peter, a cousin, is engaged in the meat business at Keystone.

CHRISTOPHER ABBOTT.

Should the reader of this volume ask for the name of a representative Irish-American citizen and a foremost pioneer of Nebraska, the name of the man who embodies in himself the best traits of the old country character and who has entered thoroughly into the hopes and ambitions of modern America, the gentleman whose name heads this sketch might well be given him. Mr. Abbott has been here through the pioneer days of this region, when a visit to his cabin by redskins and the prowls of wild beasts were no infrequent occurrence, and he can recite with accuracy and interest many thrilling tales of life in this section of the country in the early days of his residence here.

Christopher Abbott was born in Tipperary county, Ireland, in 1824, and his parents were born in Ireland, passing their entire days there, and died in New Zealand, their native land. Our subject lived in the vicinity of his birthplace until he was twenty-one years of age, then came to America, taking passage on an emigrant ship and landing in Quebec in 1838. He came directly to Chicago, Illinois, and spent about ten years in that city, working at fishing on the lakes mostly.

Mr. Abbott was married there to Mary Woods, who was of English descent, and in 1867 the family moved to Iowa, settling in Woodbury and Fremont counties, where they passed through pioneer experiences. They moved to Wabasha county, Minnesota, spent a short time there, then went to Montana, where he was engaged in the mining business for a time. He finally returned to Iowa, spent a few months there, then with his family moved to western Kansas in the spring of 1875.

In 1885 our subject came to Nebraska and took up a location in the sand hills. He drove from Kansas through the wild country to his new home, the family riding in the covered wagon, also containing their household goods and driving a few head of cattle. The trip took many days, and they camped out at night along the way, cooking their meals over campfires and suffering many inconveniences and exposures due to changes in the weather, etc. Their first settlement was made southwest of where Whitman now stands, and he started to open a farm, putting up a rude shanty, in which they lived for several years. He succeeded in raising several crops and did fairly well, occupying the place up to 1890, and accumulating a comfortable property.

RESIDENCE OF GEORGE H. GLIDEWELL,

In 1899 Mr. Abbott moved to Hyannis and has made that his residence since, having a pleasant home and sufficient means to enable him to enjoy the declining years of his life in comfort, satisfied in the knowledge that he has done his full share in the building up and developing of the country, and has also helped in a large measure to bring many new settlers into this region.

Mr. Abbott has had four children—Harrison, killed by the Indians in Kansas in 1878; Arthur, Fanny and Francis, all of whom are married and settled in homes of their own. His daughter's husband, J. M. Gentry, is at present in charge of the old ranch, and one son, Arthur, owns and operates a nice ranch in the same locality, with many lakes and flowing wells on it, where he puts up many thousands of tons of hay each year.

WILLIAM W. GORMLY.

The gentleman whose name heads this review resides in Lowell township, Kearney county, and is one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of his locality. He was elected sheriff of Kearney county in 1895 and re-elected in 1897, receiving his election on the Populist ticket. Prior to this he held local offices and served on the school board for several years. He is a man of marked business and executive ability, and success attends his every venture.

Mr. Gormly is a native of New Castle, Pennsylvania, born in 1865. His ancestors came from Ireland and located in that state in the early days, his father being born in America. His mother, who was Miss Meluzenia Clemons, was born in Steubenville, Ohio in 1826. Mr. Gormly was reared in Pennsylvania, lived there until twenty-one, and in about the year 1883 came to Kearney county, where he took up a homestead south of Lowell, on which he lived for a number of years. In 1894 he bought two hundred and ten acres, on which he now resides, and has been engaged in mixed farming, raising large crops of grain and alfalfa, also having plenty of pasture for his stock.

In 1883 Mr. Gormly married Miss Alice Bloodgood, daughter of Jason Bloodgood, who in 1877 homesteaded the farm located on Fort Kearney reservation. He came from northern Pennsylvania, in Bradford county, and was a veteran of the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Gormly are the parents of the following children: Jason, Meluzenia, wife of Boyd Radford, whose father, W. H. Radford, is the subject of a sketch in this work. Amy, the second daughter; William, Glenn and Ruth are all at home. Jason, aged twenty-four, is his father's helper in the work of carrying on the farm, and all are bright, intelligent and good workers.

Mr. Gormly is a Woodman and a member of the Ancient Order United Workmen lodge. He is influential in county public affairs, and of sterling character, and offhand, genial manner, well liked by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

GEORGE H. GLIDEWELL.

George H. Glidewell, who resides on section 2, township 13, range 50, Cheyenne county, is one of the early settlers of that region, who has passed through all the pioneer experiences that fell to the lot of the brave emigrants who came to this region when it was practically a barren wilderness, and has seen it grow from its earliest stages of settlement into a thickly populated, fertile farming community. Mr. Glidewell is a genuine old-timer and has at different times worked as a cowboy and a freighter, enduring hardships and privations which would have utterly discouraged a man of a less persistent nature, but only tended to make him more determined and spurred him to greater effort. He has experienced some particularly trying circumstances, but with undaunted courage has faced misfortune and suffering, and through it all has come out victorious, and now enjoys a fitting reward for his labors in the fine property he has accumulated, and the reputation of one of the foremost citizens of his community, admired and respected by every one.

Our subject was born in Sullivan county, Missouri, April 14, 1863, and there grew to manhood. At the age of sixteen years he left home and went to Denver, Colorado, spending one year painting and working in that vicinity, then came to Cheyenne county and worked as a freighter all over this section until he engaged in cattle and horse raising. He has three high bred registered horses at the head of his herds, and has of late years engaged extensively in mule raising. Mr. Glidewell is well known as a skilled veterinary, and is an excellent blacksmith and wagon maker. For years he was called upon to do the fine iron work for all this region.

January 7, 1897, our subject filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in section 2, township 13, range 50, in Sidney precinct, and still occupies this ranch. He has erected good stone buildings of all descriptions, his milk house with concrete cooling being especially worthy of mention. A reservoir adjoining furnishes water for irrigating a very productive garden. He farms about thirty acres and keeps over three hundred head of stock. A quarter section farther west also has a good building and furnishes good range for his numerous herd. Since coming here he has prospered well, and is numbered among the wealthy men of his locality. His ranch is situated on Lodgepole creek, a short distance from the town of Sidney. A view of the residence, with the new barn and enclosed farm yard, all of stone and concrete, are to be seen on another page.

Mr. Glidewell's father, now deceased, was a native of Kentucky. His mother, Delilah Morgan, was born and reared in Alabama, and now resides in Sullivan county, Missouri. Our subject is a Republican in political views.

WALLACE L. TRYON.

Wallace L. Tryon, who resides on his well improved farm located in section 23, township 31, range 27, was one of the first men to settle in this region, and has, through his industry and perseverance, succeeded in building up a valuable property here. He is recognized as one of the prosperous and worthy citizens of Cherry county, and is highly esteemed by his fellow-men.

Mr. Tryon was born near Richmond, McHenry county, Illinois, February 18, 1859. He is a son of L. J. Tryon, of English descent, a miller by trade, who lived on a farm, where his family of three boys were reared and educated. In 1860 the father moved with his family to Buchanan county, Iowa, where he bought an eighty-acre farm, which in 1865 he traded for a mill in Black Hawk county and continued to reside there some eight or ten years. Wallace L. followed in his father's footsteps, learning the miller's trade at the age of nineteen years, and continued at this work for about twelve years, but did not find it sufficiently remunerative in Iowa, so decided to move farther west, coming to Nebraska in 1882 and engaged for six months at milling in Creighton, then rented a farm near that place, which he operated two years. On April 9, 1885, he came to Cherry county and took up cattle raising on a tract of land owned by his mother, operating this for seven years. In the meanwhile he had pre-empted a claim in Edmunds county, Dakota, which he disposed of at a profit in 1905. He then moved to Butler county, but remained only a year, returning to Cherry county, where he then took a homestead and other claims of three hundred and twenty acres located in section 10, township 31, range 27, to which he has added one hundred and sixty acres situated in sections 14 and 23, his present residence being on the latter section. Here he has built up a nice home and farm, and now owns four hundred and eighty acres, all of which is fine hay land. His son, Horace L., owns four hundred and eighty acres of hill land lying between his own tracts, making a solid body of nine hundred and sixty acres under one management. Mr. Tryon is extensively engaged in the stock business, keeping about two hundred head of cattle and a number of horses. His land is nearly all fenced and he has a good house, barns and a fine flowing well, which furnishes a bountiful supply of water for his stock and family. During the drouths in this section he lost several crops, but was well supplied with stock, but the times were so hard he sold his corn-fed beef as low as three dollars and fifty-five cents per hundred, which was the highest market price in Omaha at that time. He often met with discouragements, but by pluck and perseverance succeeded in the end and has accumulated a fine farm, which has well repaid for his efforts. He has lost over three thousand dollars' worth of cattle from different causes since coming here, which was a severe drain on his finances, but conditions have changed and he has been more fortunate of late years, with little to note on the wrong side of the ledger.

Mr. Tryon was married to Miss Carrie M. Rice, born in Black Hawk county, Iowa, a daughter of Horace and Eliza (Jackson) Rice. They have five children, namely: Earle, Horace L., Estella, Pearl and Charles, the two oldest born in Iowa, and the younger three in Nebraska.

Mr. Tryon devotes his entire attention to the work of carrying on his farm and home, and has never had time to take active part in politics, although he is keenly alive to the best interests of his community and gives his aid and influence to its advancement. He votes the Republican ticket and stands firmly for the principles of his party. During the threatened Indian uprising in 1891 Mr. Tryon sent his wife with the little ones to Butler county for safety, but remained with the two elder boys on the ranch, to which the exiles returned within six weeks. Life in Nebraska has had no terrors for them since.

HERMAN K. PECKHAM.

Herman K. Peckham, a well-known and successful ranchman and farmer, residing in Lincoln county, Nebraska, is one of the worthy citizens of his locality.

Mr. Peckham is a native of Wisconsin. His father, Joshua Peckham, came to Nebraska from Crawford county, Wisconsin, and is a large and successful ranchman residing near Gothenburg, Lincoln county. He engages principally in stock raising on his farm, which is composed of about twenty-five hundred acres, and also does some mixed farming. He runs annually about three hundred head of cattle, and keeps a large number of hogs. A brother of our subject, Elmer Peckham, is proprietor of a six hundred and forty-acre farm near Gothenburg, and raises cattle and hogs on a large scale. Another brother, Fremont, resides in Dawson county, and also owns and operates from fifteen hundred to two thousand acres, using this land for mixed farming and stock raising. Mr. Peckham's father and mother celebrated their golden wedding in October, 1906, and a large reunion was held at their residence in this county, over eighty relatives being present, their guests numbering in all over eight hundred. The Peckhams are highly esteemed all over western Nebraska as among the most successful and influential citizens.

Mr. Peckham came west and located in Lincoln, Nebraska, in 1880. In 1896 he began business on his own account, purchasing about eighteen hundred acres situated south of Brady Station, on Brady Island. Here he has been engaged in raising, buying and shipping stock. He has a large number of thoroughbred Berkshire hogs, and deals largely in cattle, feeding for the market. He now has three hundred head of cattle on feed, and formerly fed two or three cars each winter. He has a number of pure-bred Duroc Jersey hogs on his place, but shows a decided preference for the Berkshire breed, as they are sensible, strong and active animals, and if properly bred and fed are usually found to be market top-pers.

He owns besides this ranch two grain farms on which he raises wheat and corn, and his yield in 1906 in these grains was thirty bushels of wheat to the acre and forty-five of corn. His hay crop this year reached a total of five hundred tons, and all of his grain and hay is fed out on his farm. He also has one hundred and seventy-five acres of alfalfa, which cuts a large crop each season. On his island farm he has over sixty acres sown to brome grass.

Mr. Peckham was married in 1897 to Miss Stella Rich, a native of Missouri. Her father, Lewis D. Rich, is a farmer in Lincoln county. Mr. and Mrs. Peckham have three children, named as follows: Golda, Harlan K., Jr., and

ELI MARCHANT.

Eli Marchant, who is conceded to be the oldest settler on Pepper creek, where he has a fine ranch located in section 18, township 30, range 48, Dawes county, Nebraska, is a native of England, having been born in Somersetshire in 1858, a son of James and Mercy (Cox) Marchant. His father was an engineer and farm laborer, and at one time worked for fourteen cents a day in the old country.

Mr. Marchant spent the early years of his life in his native country, and as he grew to manhood worked in the mines. When he had attained the age of twenty-one years, realizing that in the new world the opportunities for the ambitious young man were very inviting, he decided to seek his fortunes in America, and landing in New York in 1879 went to Boone county, Iowa, where for five years he worked in the mines. While in Iowa he purchased a farm in Pocahontas county, and after remaining there for two years, sold his place and came to Dawes county, Nebraska, where he pre-empted a claim and located on land near the Pepper creek. He proved up his claim and built a log cabin, hauling all his supplies from Chadron, Nebraska.

For fifteen years during the periods of drouth and the many hardships familiar to the early settlers in this western country, Mr. Marchant helped to make a living by working in the mines in Wyoming during the winter. In 1887 he took a homestead in section 18, township 30, range 48, which is his present home. In 1899 he took his family to Wyoming, living in Aladdin, where he remained for five years, returning in 1904 to his farm in Dawes county. He secured adjoining lands, and now has a ranch of eight hundred acres, all of which is fenced and cross fenced. He has greatly improved his place, and has a good orchard and alfalfa fields. He has erected a comfortable home, and has two good wells, windmills and tanks, and a very fine new barn, thirty by forty feet, just finished.

The marriage ceremonies of Mr. Marchant and Miss Rosena Davis took place in England in 1879. Mrs. Marchant was born in England and is a daughter of John and Fannie (Gardner) Davis. To this union were born eight children—Rosena (deceased), Ernest, Albert, Bertha, Minnie, Fred, Arthur and Gertrude. Two of Mr. Marchant's sons have land adjoining his own ranch in Dawes county.

Mr. Marchant has always been prominently identified with local affairs, and from the date of his settlement in this part of the country has taken a keen interest in the growth and development of Dawes county. His name is sure to appear on any list of the prominent old settlers of western Nebraska, where his genial countenance and friendly spirit have made him a host of warm friends, which his manly character and genuine worth have long retained. He has a good school on his place and has been treasurer for four years. Mr. Marchant holds certificates as one of the best mine foremen in this part of the state.

PETER NELSON.

The gentleman mentioned above is one of the sturdy sons of Sweden, who came to the new world with a brave heart to carve out a name for himself and establish a home in the wilderness, and well has he succeeded in his determination, now being proprietor of a good ranch, and has also become one of the prominent citizens of his locality. He resides on section 26, township 16, range 52, in Trognitz precinct, his estate being one of the most valuable in that section of the county.

Peter Nelson was born in Sweden, January 14, 1867, the youngest in his father's family of four children. Both parents are now deceased. When he was about fifteen years of age he left his native land and came to America, settling at first in Vail, Crawford county, Iowa, April 21, 1882, remained there for two years, during which time his parents joined him. He then went to Dakota, but only spent a few months in that country, coming to Cheyenne county, whither his parents had preceded him, about Christmas time of 1885, driving from Dakota to Sidney, Nebraska, in a one-horse rig, enduring the inclement weather of that time of year. He returned to Iowa, where he spent about two years, then came back and settled permanently in Cheyenne county in 1888, taking up a homestead on section 26, township 16, range 52, filing on the land in February, and at once built a rude dwelling, in which he lived for several years. He had a hard time in starting his farm, going through all the pioneer experiences, but gradually forged ahead, put improvements on his place in the way of good buildings, wells, fences, etc. He owns at the present time nine hundred and sixty acres, engaging in stock raising and mixed farming, running about one hundred head of cattle and quite a number of horses. About one hundred and seventy-five acres are devoted to the raising of small grain, and the entire ranch is kept up in the best possible condition, every corner bespeaking the most painstaking care and good management.

Mr. Nelson was married at Sidney, March 2, 1904, to Miss Florence Herbolsheimer, the event occurring at the Metropolitan Hotel, and was a very pretty affair, the young people having a host of friends and acquaintances, and their married life has been a happy one. Two children have come to bless their union—Hilma and Alice. Mrs. Nelson, a daughter of Daniel and Alice (Segraves) Herbolsheimer, was born in Adams county, Nebraska, coming to Cheyenne county with her parents in infancy. The old people are now living in this vicinity, and are well known as prominent old-timers of that region. Our subject has always taken an active interest in all affairs pertaining to county, state and national government, and is a staunch Republican, and represents his precinct on the county committee. He is a leading citizen in his community, serving as treasurer of school district No. 13 for several years. On July 1, 1898, he was appointed postmaster of Sextrop, which he held for several years, and then resigned. Mrs. Nelson was appointed to the position March 5, 1907, and has proven a most capable and popular official. Mr. Nelson was reared in the Swedish Lutheran church and is a member of the Potter camp of the Modern Woodmen of America.

ELMER E. WALES.

Elmer E. Wales, who is classed among the old residents of Keya Paha county, is a progressive and energetic farmer, proprietor of a fine estate in Keya Paha precinct.

Mr. Wales was born on a farm in Goodhue county, Minnesota, March 7, 1863. His father was of Yankee stock, born in Massachusetts, and followed farming all his life. He was in Mankato at the time of the Indian massacre and a witness of those terrible scenes.

seeing the punishment meted out to the marauders when thirty-seven were hung from one gallows. The mother, whose maiden name was Philanda Davis, was born, reared and educated in Vermont, going to Minnesota with her husband in 1854. Her father had an artificial arm and had to cut grain with a sickle and do other farm work to support his family of thirteen children, twelve of whom were girls. When our subject was a young lad but seven years of age he began hard work and plowed with a team of oxen, doing other heavy labor as well. The family moved to Marshall county, Kansas, in 1874, but the swarms of grasshoppers devoured their crops and compelled them to migrate. They went to Montgomery county, Iowa, remaining there up to the time of coming to Nebraska. When Elmer reached the age of twenty he struck out for himself, following farm work in Nebraska and in 1883 came to O'Neill, where he obtained employment on a ranch at twenty dollars per month. He located in Gordon, and after a short time there moved to Montana with some cattle drovers, where he remained for two years on the ranges, sleeping out during the winter, sometimes in three feet of snow. He finally returned to Nebraska and filed on a pre-emption near Burton, in Keya Paha county. In 1890 he located near Naper, remained three years, then bought his present home in section 23, township 35, range 17, paying for the land thirty dollars in money and a colt which he owned. There was only a sod house on the place, but he went to work improving, since building a comfortable house, barn and other necessary buildings. He drilled a well, which he boarded up with old lumber, having hard work to get nails enough to do the work, so scant were the funds at his command. He worked out part of the time, among other things shucked corn in snow knee deep for two cents a bushel. The best wages he could make was fifty cents a day, and he was glad for even that slight remuneration for his toil. He also drilled wells for the farmers and managed to get along, but was often tempted to leave, but for lack of sufficient money could not get away. He helped build the first bridge at Brocksburg, and did a great deal towards general upbuilding of the region. He has made a success of farming and in other enterprises since locating here, now owning three hundred and twenty acres of good land, of which half is under cultivation. He is also engaged in the cream business, having opened the first cream stations at Mills, Jamison, Butte, Naper, Carlock and Brocksburg, collecting and shipping each week about one hundred and twenty-five cans of cream. He is agent for the DeLaval separator and sells about forty each year.

December 25, 1887, our subject was married near Mills to Miss Ella Sharp, whose parents, Solomon and Caroline (Godfrey) Sharp, were early settlers in Butler county, Nebraska. To Mr. and Mrs. Wales the following children have been born: Clarence S., Blanche P., Goldie M., Noah Edmund, Sylvia, Flossie, Gale and Dale (twins), of whom all but Gale are still living with their parents, having a pleasant home and hosts of warm friends in the community.

Mr. Wales is a Republican and active worker for his party, although he has never held office. With his family he is a member of the Free Methodist church.

FERDINAND WENDT.

Ferdinand Wendt, who enjoys the distinction of being the owner of one of the largest and most modernly equipped ranches in Nebraska, is a native of the state which he has chosen for his home. He was born on a farm in Cass county in 1876, a son of August and Laura (Swan) Wendt, both of whom were natives of Germany.

Mr. Wendt received his education attending the country schools, assisting his father in building up and improving the farm in Cass county, which is still the property of the family. In November, 1906, Mr. Wendt's father died. His mother had passed away in December of the year previous. In 1887 the elder Mr. Wendt made a trip to Dawes county, investigating the possibilities which this western field presented, and eventually brought his family here in 1893, locating on section 27, township 30, range 51. At this period there were practically no improvements on the place. At the present writing, our subject has one of the largest ranches in Nebraska, comprising an area of thirty-six hundred and ten acres, three to four hundred acres of which are under cultivation. Besides a farmer, he is a stock raiser of no mean ability. He has erected a pleasant and commodious home on his farm, together with good buildings in which to keep his provisions and house his stock. There is an abundance of fine timber on the ranch, where he has erected a first-class sawmill, giving part of his time to the manufacture of lumber.

Mr. Wendt was united in marriage in February, 1899, to Miss Jessie Hayden. She was a daughter of Polemus Hayden, of English descent, a highly respected and prominent old settler. Mr. and Mrs. Wendt are the happy parents of four children, viz.: Eddie, Albert, Louisa and Alice.

Mr. Wendt has always taken strong Democratic ground in matters of politics. He has done his work well, and while he is a thorough farmer and stock raiser, and much devoted to home and family, has also from his first coming to Dawes county taken a keen and vivid interest in everything that relates to local matters and public improvements. He has watched the growth and development of the county with keen interest from the start, where he has made a host of loyal friends, who recognize in him one of the leading settlers.

E. G. CARTER.

E. G. Carter, agent of the Burlington & Missouri Railway at Naponee, Franklin county, came to Nebraska in 1892 in the interest of that railroad, locating at Alma, where he held the position of operator. He remained there for a short time, then was transferred to Inavale, where he spent two years. From there he was sent to Naponee, from 1894 to 1898, working for the company for four years. He was next sent to Atwood, Kansas, and remained there up to 1894, then returned to Naponee, where he has since resided. Mr. Carter was born in Illinois in 1872. His father, Joe B. Carter, was a native of England, who came to America in the early forties, locating at Medora, Illinois. He married Lucy Kemper, who had two brothers in the Civil war, both of whom were killed at the battle of Appomattox Court House. Our subject grew up in Illinois and in 1894 he came to Franklin county from Macoupin county, Illinois, and invested in land in this part of the state. In 1897 he bought three hundred and twenty acres in Turkey Creek township, for which he paid sixteen dollars per acre, and in 1907 he sold the same land for eighty-nine hundred dollars, which shows conclusively the rapid rise of land values in Nebraska in the past few years. Our subject was married in 1897 to Miss Nora Wilt, daughter of J. W. Wilt, who is part owner of the Naponee flouring mills, with a capacity of sixty barrels per day. His partner in the business is Mrs. M. E. Polly, his sister-in-law, and widow of James Polly, who was associated with Mr. Wilt up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1890. He was a cousin of Mr. Wilt, and served in the Civil war for four years.

Mrs. Carter's father is a native of Darke county, Ohio, who came with his father, William Wilt, to Clark county, Iowa, in 1855. John Wilt, Mrs. Carter's great-grandfather, was a native of Pennsylvania, who settled in Darke county, Ohio, previous to the War of 1812, while his wife, Martha Polly, daughter of Rev. James Polly, also of Darke county, Ohio, who was a familiar figure in the history of that section of the country during the early days in which the Alexander Campbell movements resulted in the founding of the Christian or Disciples' church. James Polly afterwards came to Clark county, Iowa, and was among the pioneers in that state. His two brothers, Jacob and Barnhill, were also ministers in the Disciples' church, and the Pollys, together with the Rev. Barnhill Polly, came originally from Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter are the parents of two children, namely: Glen and Margaret. The family is well known and highly esteemed throughout the community in which they reside. Mrs. Carter is a woman of charming personality, and a fine musician and a graduate of the Lincoln Normal School. She is very active in musical circles, and an earnest worker in the Disciples church, of which the family are members. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Asenith Ann Wiley, of Wayne county, Indiana. Mr. Carter is a Mason and a member of the Chapter at Atwood, Kansas.

FRED C. TSCHABOLD.

Fred C. Tschabold, one of the energetic farmers and ranchmen of Sioux county, Nebraska, is also an old settler of that region. He is the owner of a valuable estate and his home is one of the most pleasant to be found in the locality. The road leading up to his residence follows the course of a deep ravine, or creek bed, which is dry all the year round except a few days each spring, and one cannot imagine anything more picturesque than this driveway, as it winds gracefully, with high banks, which are covered with beautiful foliage and trees. Assisting nature, Mrs. Tschabold has added greatly to the beauty of this road by planting many flowers by the wayside, making it a spot which leaves a most pleasant memory in the eye of the beholder.

Mr. Tschabold was born in the city of Berne, Switzerland, in 1853, and was the son of C. J. Tschabold, a government official of that country. His mother was, prior to her marriage, Miss Margareta Berger, and she died when our subject was a lad of nine years. Three years later he came to America, and after landing in New York city spent a short time in New York state, then went to New Jersey, and finally settled in Iowa, where he spent about five years. He next came to Nebraska, locating in Cuming county, following farming in that vicinity. In 1892 he landed in Sioux county and worked rented land at first, later took a homestead in section 21, township 32, range 55, and started to build up a home. He began to break up land for crops, and part of the time was obliged to work out by the day to make a living, receiving the munificent sum of sixty-five cents per day for his labors. While he was away working for others his wife held down the homestead, and to her efforts are due much credit in the accumulating of their property, as she worked bravely to help her husband keep their little home and improve it. They met with much hardship and went through the usual bitter experiences of the pioneers in the west, but managed to get along and gradually improve their homestead, adding land as they became better fixed, and are now the possessors of six hundred and forty acres, situated near the head of West Hat creek, known as "Pine Nook." They have a good water supply and considerable timber, and for two years operated a sawmill on the place. Thirty acres are under cultivation, used for small grains, and he is engaged to quite an extent in stock raising.

Mr. Tschabold was married in 1885 to Martha Davis, daughter of James Maynard and Jane (Gross) Davis, the father's death occurring when she was a child eighteen months of age, and her mother dying August 17, 1906. Portraits of our subject and his wife appear on another page.

Mr. Tschabold takes a commendable interest in local affairs, and is one of the leading citizens of his township.

ADOLPHUS V. CRONK.

The gentleman whose name appears at the head of this review is one of the strong characters of the community in which he lives, having always taken an advanced position relative to all matters pertaining to the general good, and his mature life finds him surrounded with the evidences of success and comfort. Our subject was born in the state of New York in 1854, and was the son of William H. and Katherine (Mink) Cronk. The father was a native of New York state and came to Nebraska in 1872. The mother was born in New York. Our subject was reared on a farm and was inured to hard work until 1874, when the whole family came west to Nebraska, settling in Valley county on government land. It was here that our subject started out for himself, living in a dugout and sod house, his first team being a yoke of cattle. All supplies and material had to be hauled from Grand Island, sixty-five miles distant. Indians were still in the country and the settlers had to carry their guns with them when they went to the fields, and our subject had many trying experiences with these marauders. Once an Indian attempted to steal a mule out of Mr. Cronk's barn, but the mule objected and practically kicked the robber out of the building. Our subject's wife has been often frightened and seriously annoyed by the roving bands of Indians that infested the prairies. On the old farm were seen traces of a battleground, skulls, bones, graves, relics, ornaments, etc.

The marriage of our subject with Miss Mary E. Lawler was celebrated in April, 1874. The bride was the daughter of Michael and Anna (Grant) Lawler, both natives of Ireland. Her father was a farmer and carpenter and was one of the pioneers of Lewis county, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Cronk are the parents of seven children: William A., Myrtle L. (dead), Lottie Louise, Adrian St. Elmo, Rodney Earl, Rosetta May, Lillian Z. and George W. The living children are all grown up and are honored citizens of the community in which they live, some of them being married and all engaged in business enterprises of their own.

Mr. Cronk made his home in Valley county for years and had a fine farm and home and made a splendid success of his agricultural pursuits and became one of the leading old-timers and citizens. December 15, 1893, our subject came to Loup county and settled on his present fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres, where he has made good improvements, built barns, fences and put things in shape for future successful operations. Mr. Cronk has been one of the most active and successful of the early pioneers and is accorded a prominent place among his friends and neighbors, by whom he is held in high esteem. In politics he is a strong Socialist and is pronounced in his views.

Mr. A. V. Cronk has been quite an inventor. He was patentee of the link car coupler, the adjustable hame and a pump for irrigation purposes, also several other valuable patents. For the want of means he has not pushed his patents as he should have done, but is on the lookout for a partner who has means to purchase a half interest. Mr. Cronk and Sam Hesselgesser were the prime promoters of the telephone system through this part of the country, in the counties of Loup, Garfield and Valley.

Mrs. Cronk has been quite a writer for several of the leading papers and other publications. She is a cultured and scholarly lady and has a large circle of literary and social friends. Mr. and Mrs. Cronk have a daughter, Lillian Z., who will soon graduate with high honors from the Wisconsin College of Music at Milwaukee. The whole family have especially good musical talent.

Portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Cronk will be found on another page of this volume.

C. R. SAWYER.

C. R. Sawyer is one of the substantial ranchers of Sheridan county, Nebraska. Mr. Sawyer was born in St. Joseph county, Indiana, in 1852. His father, an Ohioan, who served in the One Hundredth Indiana Volunteer Infantry during the Civil war, is still hale and hearty and resides in Iowa. Our subject is the eldest in a family of three, and up to the time of his twenty-fifth year lived at home with his parents. In 1877 he was married to Miss Tacy A. Paxton, daughter of Thomas Paxton and Sarah Knowles Paxton, both of American stock, born and raised in Ohio. The young couple started out for themselves, buying a forty-acre farm, on which they lived for ten years, and at the end of this time, in 1887, came to Sheridan county and located on the farm where he now resides. He at once went to work building up his farm and met with marked success until the beginning of the dry years, when he was compelled to give it up, and engaged in the cattle raising business.

Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer, named as follows: Clarence O., Opal E. and T. Lucile, all of whom were born in Iowa and raised in Nebraska, where they all received a good common school education in the public schools, after which they assisted their parents on the farm, and are now all nicely located near by.

Mr. Sawyer came to Sheridan county with practically no capital and has succeeded in building up a nice home, his ranch comprising one thousand acres of deeded land in sections 30 and 31, township 31, range 43, and has his place well stocked and improved, enjoying the fruits of his labor, and declaring that he has seen all the pioneer life he cares for. He has never visited his childhood home since coming west, and says he does not think he would care to return to the east to live.

Mr. Sawyer is a man of sterling character, universally esteemed by his fellow-men. In politics he is a Democrat, but never votes a straight ticket.

ANDREW ANDERSON.

The above mentioned gentleman has been identified with the farming interests of Phelps county for many years, past, and during this time has acquired a valuable estate by dint of his honesty and industry and is classed among the substantial and prominent residents of Williamsburg township.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden and came to this country when fifteen years of age. He came to Phelps county in 1890 from Galesburg, Illinois, to take the position of foreman of the Hawkinson ranch, comprising twenty-four hundred acres, located in Williamsburg and Cottonwood townships on the Platte river. On this ranch they run from four to five hundred steers annually, and besides these feed from two to four hundred each year. All the hay for these cattle is grown on the ranch, and they buy twenty-five hundred bushels of grain each season. They also raise from two to five hundred hogs each season. Our subject was very successful in the management of the large estate, and operated it to the financial benefit of his employers. In 1891 he sowed on this ranch the first alfalfa ever planted in Phelps county, and there is now five hundred acres of this grass on the ranch. This has added wonderfully to the value and importance of the stock industry in western Nebraska. After retiring from the management of this ranch, when it was sold to the present owners, he bought his farm of three hundred and twenty acres of bottom land on the Platte river four miles from Elm creek and fifteen miles north of Holdrege, and also purchased eighty acres in Cottonwood township, building the substantial and comfortable residence he now occupies, and since taking possession of this ranch he has raised from one to two hundred cattle and fifty to two hundred hogs, besides feeding a large number annually. He has all of his land except eighty acres planted to alfalfa, and about one hundred and seventy acres of this produces four tons per acre at each cutting. Lately he has sold all his stock and intends to devote all his attention and time to feeding cattle and hogs for market, constantly feeding from two to five cars of cattle and about two carloads of hogs at a time. Before coming to Nebraska he had had a great deal of experience in farming and stock raising in Knox county, Illinois, and he considers this state far ahead of Illinois for these pursuits and would not exchange his lands here for any in that vicinity or any other place he has ever struck, and he says that what he has accomplished here can be done by any young man who has the training, experience and industry for farming and stock raising and feeding.

Mr. Anderson enjoys a comfortable home and pleasant surroundings, his family consisting of himself, wife, one son and a daughter, the son (Glen) being a telegraph operator for the Union Pacific Railway and the daughter (Nellie) has been a teacher in the Phelps county schools for two years. In the spring of 1907 he moved to Elm Creek, Nebraska, and has retired from active farming and ranching, but owns a fine residence.

AMOS C. CULLERS.

Amos C. Cullers, who for the past score of years has made western Nebraska his home, and during that time has given his best efforts to the task of assisting in the development of his locality, and incidentally building up for himself a good home and productive farm, is one of the old settlers of this region. He remembers well the early days when pioneers were obliged to suffer all manner of hardships and privations in getting their homes started, and he richly deserves the prosperity that has come to him through honest industry and faithful labor. Mr. Cullers' residence is in section 17, township 32, range 53, and he is widely known throughout Sioux county as a man of active public spirit.

Mr. Cullers was born in Hardy county, West Virginia, in 1856, on a farm. He comes of good old American stock, and was raised and educated in the common schools of his native state, and grew up accustomed to all kinds of hard farm work. At the age of twenty-two he struck out for himself, following farm work in the east for a number of years. He came to Sioux county, and at that time the town of Crawford had just been laid out and the sale of lots in progress, many settlers locating there. He picked out a location on Cottonwood creek, in section 17, township 32, range 53, and although he had no capital to start with, at once put up a shanty and started to break land for crops, etc. He gradually improved his place and was able to raise fairly good crops of small grains, planted trees and added good buildings and improvements as he became better able. He had many setbacks in the way of failures caused by drouth, but never lost his courage, and by dint of constant attention to duty, was able to get along pretty well and as the years went by purchased additional land, until he has now become proprietor of a good ranch of seven hundred and twenty acres, which is beautifully situated at the head of Cottonwood creek. He farms about ninety acres of this and uses the balance for pasture and hay land, as he raises a large number of cattle and other stock each year. Mr. Cullers has one of the finest orchards in his locality, including all the small fruits, apples, plums, etc.

Mr. Cullers was married in West Virginia, on December 25, 1880, to Martha Shipe, also born and reared in that state. Of this union five children have been born, namely: George, Nora, Ira, Dorothy and Archie.

Our subject has always taken an active part in local politics. He was elected county commissioner in 1903, serving up to 1906, and for three years he held the office of precinct assessor in Cottonwood precinct. He has also been deputy assessor in three different precincts in Sioux county. He is a Democrat in politics.

HENRY A. WALES.

Among the early settlers in Brown county, Nebraska, who have been instrumental in the development and growth of the agricultural and commercial resources of this section of the country, the gentleman above named takes a leading place. Mr. Wales resides on his fine farm in Lakeland, where he enjoys the fruits of his hard labor in years gone by surrounded by comfort and plenty.

Mr. Wales is a native of Portage county, Ohio, born on his father's farm July 22, 1849. The latter, Asaph Wales, was of American stock, as was the mother, whose maiden name was Rowena Alford. In a family of three children our subject was the second member, growing to manhood in his native county, attending the country schools until eighteen, when he became an apprentice in a wagon shop at Windham, serving three years; and he afterwards followed his trade for four years, two winters of this time at River Falls, Wisconsin. In company with his brother Francis, Mr. Wales secured land in Mower county, Minnesota, under a land warrant issued to their grandfather, Oliver Alford, for services in the war of 1812 and they have farmed together for nine years.

In 1884 Mr. Wales and his brother came to Brown county and settled on a tract of wild prairie land situated thirty miles southwest of Ainsworth, in Lakeland. Here they put up a frame house, sodding it over, in which they lived for many years. When they arrived here they had three horses and a carload of cattle to start with, and at once went to work building up the ranch, which now comprises fourteen hundred and forty acres, all but three quarter sections being deeded land, and here they are engaged in stock raising on an extensive scale. Mr. Wales had Lakeland postoffice established on his place, of which his wife has served as postmaster from its opening. Mr. Wales was also active in organizing Lakeland precinct, and in getting good schools started in his district, helping to build five sod school houses in that locality. Mrs. Wales served as teacher the first two terms and taught one term in the Moon lake district. She has also been active in organizing and maintaining Sunday schools. Mr. Wales has done more than his share in building up the country and richly deserves the success he has attained in the possession of his fine estate. July 1, 1893, the family witnessed the complete destruction of their home by a cyclone that swept that region with its fury.

Mr. Wales is a strong Republican, active in local and county affairs, having served as justice of the peace for many years past.

On December 18, 1877, Mr. Wales was married to Miss Mary Cox, born in Watoma, Waushara county, Wisconsin, November 6, 1856; she is a daughter of Frederick Cox, a native of England, and her mother, Olive Grover, is a descendant of the Hamilton family which came to America in the Mayflower.

Mr. and Mrs. Wales have a family of three children, namely: Frank A., Claude L. and Malah. They are members of the Congregational church, and Mr. Wales affiliates with the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Johnstown.

AUGUST F. LADWIG.

August F. Ladwig, a well known and highly esteemed old settler of Perkins county, Nebraska, has devoted the past forty years of his life to the active pursuit of agriculture in different parts of the state, and is now proprietor of an excellent ranch situated on section 34, township 10, range 35, where he has met with pronounced success in his chosen occupation.

Mr. Ladwig was born in Prussia, Germany, in 1846, and is a son of Peter Ladwig, who married Maria Ladwig, who, though having the same name, was in no way related to him, they coming to America with their little family and settling in Wisconsin. While in Germany he was engaged in the stock business, buying and shipping cattle. He eventually died in Wisconsin. August grew up in his native land, served three years in the German army, this experience proving of great benefit to him in later years. He was discharged from the service in 1870, and then came to the United States, locating in Wisconsin with his people, following farm work most of the time, and also working in the lumber woods for three winters. He was employed in a grain elevator in Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, for two years, then left the state and came to Nebraska, his first location being in Seward county, and after one year in that vicinity returned to Wisconsin, taking a homestead in the lumber regions there.

He tried hard to get a farm started, working hard and faithfully, but the stumps, stone and mud were more than he could stand, so he finally sold out and came back to Seward county, locating at Seward, where he clerked in a hardware store, employed by J. F. Goehner, remaining there for a short time, then went into the hardware business in partnership with his brother Albert, establishing a store at Fullerton, Nebraska, and ran the business for one year. In the spring of 1886 he came to Perkins county and took a homestead tree claim in Marvin precinct, "batching it" in a sod house for six years, always being able to make a living and gradually improve his place. He went through the usual hard times experienced by the early settlers in the region, but stuck to his place and by industry and thrift managed to get considerable ahead in the way of improving his homestead, stocking up with cattle, etc., and building it up in good shape. He owns six hundred and forty acres, which is one of the most valuable tracts in the locality, and every cent of his property has been accumulated through his own efforts and good management. In 1891, without the aid of another person he succeeded in raising a crop of twenty-three hundred bushels of grain. During the hard times of 1893-96 Mr. Ladwig never had any idea of leaving the country as so many did, but "hung on" and is now a citizen who is a credit to the community.

Mr. Ladwig is engaged principally in stock raising, having quite a bunch of very fine horses, and in the early days he was known far and near as "the man with the fat horses," taking especial pride in his animals.

Mr. Ladwig was married in 1892 to Miss Maria Hopping, a native of New Jersey.

Our subject has always done everything in his power to further the best interests of the community in which he resided, and deserves great credit for the efforts he has put forth in behalf of his fellows. He was elected county commissioner in the fall of 1894, serving in that capacity for three years.

REUBEN W. MAHAFFY.

Reuben W. Mahaffy, who has spent many years of his career in western Nebraska, is one of the leading citizens of that section of the country. He came here during the earliest days of its settlement, has watched its growth and development, and incidentally assisted in a large measure to build up the region, as he has really improved three different places since locating here. He now resides fifteen miles southwest of the town of Mullen, where he owns a splendid ranch of two thousand acres, which is considered one of the finest ranches in Hooker county.

Mr. Mahaffy was born near Burlington, Henderson county, Illinois, in 1866, on a farm. His father, William, born in the north part of Ireland, was a prominent stockman and pioneer of Iowa, lived there for many years, and his death occurred in Montgomery county, Iowa, in 1886. His wife was Ellen Small, of American blood, while he was of Scotch-Irish descent. The mother was reared in Ohio.

When our subject was a small boy the family moved to Iowa, settling in Montgomery county, and there he was raised and educated, attending the country schools, and assisting his parents in the farm work. At the age of nineteen he was left an orphan and was compelled to start out and make his own way in the world, and live on the home farm for about two years, carrying that on as best he could. In 1890 he came to Nebraska, locating in Custer county, opened a ranch and operated it for three years. He then moved to Grant county and started another ranch, putting up sod buildings after a short time, but at first his family lived in a tent. Whittman, situated thirty miles northwest of his place, was the nearest town, and he was obliged to haul all supplies from that town. His ranch was located on North Dismal river, and he succeeded in building up a good home, remaining there up to 1904, then came to his present homestead. This he has improved in good shape, erecting substantial buildings, putting fences around the whole place, drilling wells, etc., and it is a valuable property, containing in all twenty hundred acres, all good range land with plenty of pasture, etc.

Mr. Mahaffy was married at Red Oak, Iowa, in 1889, to Marian E. Eddy, daughter of Levens Eddy, a prominent educator of that vicinity, and who settled in Iowa as a pioneer, coming from Kentucky.

ALBERT N. SHUMARD.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history has spent many years in building up a name and home, and probably no one is better known among the old settlers of western Nebraska than he. For the past thirty years he has been closely identified with the upbuilding of the best interests of his locality, and is now living a quiet and retired life in Scandinavian township, where he has a beautiful home surrounded by all the comforts of a peaceful rural community.

Mr. Shumard is a native of Clermont county, Ohio, born in 1845. He is a son of Thomas Shumard, whose father, also Thomas Shumard, was one of the first settlers in the city of Cincinnati. He came from New Jersey, coming in a flat boat down the Ohio river, settling in Hamilton county, where his family was raised. Our subject's mother was Miss Mary Knott, daughter of John Knott, also of that county. Mr. Shumard grew up there, and in 1861 enlisted in Company G, Forty-eighth Ohio Regiment, and served during the entire war, receiving his discharge in June, 1866. He was with the Army of the Tennessee for over three years, and afterward at Tyler, Texas, as a prisoner. He fought at the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Pittsburg Landing, and at the first battle, siege and capture of Corinth, Holly Springs, Memphis, Arkansas Post and Post Gipson, all through the campaign and siege of Vicksburg, and afterward in the Red river campaign with Banks. He also took part in the Cross Roads campaign and was captured by the rebels at that battle, but saved the flag, which was the only case on record of a prisoner's concealing the union colors and brought them back to his regiment. This flag is now at the state house, at Columbus, Ohio. Mr. Shumard was only sixteen years of age when he enlisted, and during his many battles received more than one wound, but he has a brilliant record as a brave soldier. He was at Fort Blakely on the day of Johnson's surrender to General Sherman.

In 1879 Mr. Shumard came to Nebraska, homesteading one hundred and sixty acres on section 24, Scandinavian township, Harlan county, and has resided on this place ever since. His first dwelling was a dugout, in which he lived for six years, and at the end of that time erected a comfortable farm house and has always been engaged in mixed farming here.

In 1883 our subject was united in marriage to Miss Mary Beam. She is a daughter of William Beam, whose father, John Beam, was one of the oldest settlers at Cincinnati, Ohio, coming there very early from Pennsylvania. Mrs. Shumard's mother was Ellen Robinson, from Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Shumard are the parents of one child, Raymond, aged eighteen years, living at home.

Mr. Shumard is a man of active traits and broad mind. He has been a splendid local and county official, faithful in all things. He is clean-cut, straightforward and vigilant, and a splendid type of farmer and public official. He is one of the organizers and secretary and manager of the Wilcox and Ragan Telephone Company. He has served on the school board as secretary ever since 1880, and was town clerk and justice of the peace. He was elected county supervisor in 1895 and has served for twelve years continuously. He was appointed postmaster in 1907 by President Roosevelt. He is an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic post at Huntley, Nebraska, and is a prominent Mason and Workman. He also acts as class leader of the local Methodist Episcopal church, and has carried on this work for the past twenty years. Politically, he has always been a Republican.

HENRY NIEHUS.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is a prosperous and successful ranchman of Morrill, formerly Cheyenne, county, being proprietor of a valuable tract of land in Redington precinct, situated on Lawrence Forks creek, well improved with buildings, orchards and groves. He is known as one of the leading men of his locality, who has done much to bring about the present success of the same.

Henry Niehus was born December 24, 1855, in the village of Besenbeck, near Elms-horn, province of Holstein, Germany, and came to the United States when he was a lad of sixteen, sailing from Hamburg March 1, 1871, in the Holsalia. After a voyage of eighteen days he landed in New York, and came to Grand Island, Nebraska, where friends had preceded him. He remained there until 1880, following fence construction and contract hay making most of the time. He then went to Cheyenne, Wyoming, riding the range in that country for ten years in the employ of the "Two Bar" and Warren Company's ranches. He returned to Nebraska and filed on a homestead which he later sold. After disposing of the property he purchased nine hundred and twenty acres on sections 11 and 12, township 18, range 52, now increased to over a thousand acres, and has developed this into a fine place. Four hundred acres are under cultivation with a good orchard of four hundred trees and eight hundred grape vines, besides much large natural timber, big groves, plenty of running water the year around, and everything to make it an ideal homestead. Seventy acres are irrigated. He has erected good buildings of all descriptions, including granary, cribs, barns and sheds for the accommodation of two hundred and fifty head of cattle and fifty horses, also keeping one hundred hogs each year. Ten teams are required for the work of this extensive farm. A view of the home with a partial view of the fine natural timber is presented on another page of our work.

Mr. Niehus was married at Grand Island, Nebraska, on November 25, 1879, to Miss Dora Foellmer, who was born in Kratzeber, province of Thuringia, Germany, and came to America in 1871. Four children have been born to them, as follows: Anna, now the wife of Ray Haskell, living in Bridgeport; Hilda and Joseph, at home; and Theresa, married to W. E. Bardan, residing near Redington.

In times past Mr. Niehus has been an active member of the local school board, and has always taken an active interest in all local and county affairs. He is a Republican politically, and a member of Redington Camp, No. 2607, Modern Woodmen of America. In December, 1907, he revisited the old country after an absence of thirty-seven years. Of course, not even his sister knew him, though neighbors could see a family resemblance, finally concluding he must be the lost Niehus who went to America so many years before. His venerable mother was delighted to see him and he intends soon revisiting the old home again. He brought back with him a fine variety of German potatoes, a winter barley, which promises to be a valuable addition to the grain products of western Nebraska.

GEORGE A. CAMM.

George A. Camm is one of the leading old settlers of Cherry county, Nebraska, where he has built up a comfortable home and farm on the south half of section 24, township 34, range 28. He came here when this section was very sparsely populated and by his industry and perseverance has gained a wide reputation as a successful agriculturist and worthy citizen.

Mr. Camm was born in Cleveland, Ohio, January 24, 1852. His father, James M. Camm, a native of Sacket's Harbor, New York, was a soldier in three wars: The Florida, the Mexican and later in the Civil war. In the latter war he served ninety days in the Fourteenth Wisconsin as first lieutenant which he resigned to raise Company G in the Forty-first Wisconsin, of which he was elected captain. The family moved from New York to Green Bay, Wisconsin, in 1861, and there reared their family of four children, of whom our subject is the second member. He remained with his parents until fifteen years of age, then secured employment on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, as newsboy, running between Oshkosh and Green Bay, but was only in this work a short time when his parents made him quit the road and return to school. After leaving school he returned to railroading and followed that occupation for twelve years, most of the time in service on the Green Bay & Minnesota railway as wiper, fireman and engineer. It was during this time railroads changed from wood to coal for fuel and Mr. Camm was employed four years teaching the firemen on the peninsula division the use of coal. In 1881 he left the railroad and moved to Cherry county, locating with his father on homesteads of three hundred and twenty acres in section 24, township 34, range 28, and still lives on this land, having purchased his father's quarter section after he had proved up on the title, living in Nebraska from 1881 to 1896. His first house on this farm was a stockade house with a stable in one end and hog house adjoining the building, the living rooms for the family being in the middle of the building. The sod roof of this was so defective that during rainy weather the family lived in a tent erected in front of the living rooms. He had one ox team when he came here, but did not use them long, purchasing a team of horses costing two hundred and fifty dollars, and within twenty-four hours after buying the team, one horse died. This is but one of the many incidents that made up the sum of hard times in Nebraska; and another, his being obliged, in the harvest of one crop of corn and vegetables, to use a wheelbarrow for hauling it to the barns. By determination and hard work he gradually improved his place, and now has a fine tract of land which is continually rising in value. There are three hundred and twenty acres, all of which is under fence, with a good set of farm buildings all in good condition, a new barn replacing one destroyed by fire in 1907. Although he often became discouraged in contending with the many misfortunes that have overtaken him since coming here, Mr. Camm's resolute character has carried him safely through to final success. He farms about one hundred and thirty acres, which supports a goodly number of stock, and when farm work is not pressing adds to his store by freighting between Valentine and Rosebud Agency. He was one of the first to carry mail between these points, in which service he was engaged four and a half years, in all but six months of which time he had the contract in his own name.

Mr. Camm was married in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, October 22, 1884, to Miss May Stephenson, a native of Wisconsin, who was at that time attending the State Normal School. Seven children have been born of this union, named: Hazel, Harry, Nellie, Ethel Bessie, James, Magdalena and Winnifred E., all of whom are natives of Cherry county, and all are living except Ethel B., who was killed April 24, 1901, by the wheels of a freight wagon, and Winnifred E., lost in the burning of the barn in February, 1907.

Mr. Camm takes an active part in all local affairs, being prominent in the school district of which he is director, and aims to do his full share as a citizen and neighbor. He has never sought any political office, but is interested in all county and state affairs of importance, voting the straight Republican ticket. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and Modern Woodmen of America lodges of Valentine.

GEORGE W. SNYDER.

George W. Snyder, one of the leading and influential ranchers of Keith county, Nebraska, was born in Bureau county, Illinois, March 18, 1856, of German descent, his father, Henry Snyder, and his mother, Celia Doll, both being born in Germany, and farmers by occupation.

Our subject was reared on the farm in Illinois, where he was born, assisting his father with the farm work and receiving a good common school education. He remained on the farm until about 1878, when he started out to find employment for himself.

Later in the year 1878 Mr. Snyder was married to Josephine Wasson, also a native of Bureau county, Illinois, being the daughter of Jacob and Elsa (Hoffman) Wasson, successful and influential farmers of that county. This marriage has been blessed with one daughter, Nellie, who is a teacher, having taught in Ogallala, near which place Mr. Snyder moved later in life.

Three years after his marriage, Mr. Snyder moved to Tama county, Iowa, where he bought a farm on which he lived for eight years. But poor health necessitated a change, so he moved to Peru, Illinois, where he engaged in the livery business for five years. His health requiring a greater change, he went south in 1894, spending three years in Texas, Arizona and New and Old Mexico; thence he removed to Arapahoe county, Colorado, where he lived for two years, and, in the spring of 1900, he moved to his present location in Keith county, Nebraska, buying his home farm in section 10, township 12, range 40. Our subject experienced all the hardships of pioneer days and yet has successfully coped with them all and built up his farm in fine shape. He has a fine large ranch of eleven hundred and twenty acres, thoroughly improved in an up-to-date manner, with a good home, barns, sheds, fences and other equipment necessary to the successful rancher. He cultivates about one hundred and fifty acres of his land, the balance being used for grazing purposes. He runs a fine bunch of cattle numbering about forty head, and about sixty horses of the Shire and Norman breeds, the latter to predominate in the future.

Mr. Snyder has been deeply interested in all matters pertaining to the advancement of the community in which he lives and, as an old settler, has done his share toward the material development of the county. Owing to his fine ranch and to his excellent business qualities he is highly respected by all his associates and his judgment on all matters of vital importance is highly esteemed. He was formerly a Democrat but being in Mexico, then on a silver basis, during the campaign when that was an issue he became converted to Republican doctrines and has remained in that party ever since. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, at Peru, Illinois.

HENRY WHITING.

In reviewing the career of Henry Whiting, we find a man who came to Dawes county in the early years of its history, and robust and energetic, threw himself into the work of building a home on the prairie—like the true pioneer he was. He is a man who won success by toil and struggle, and one who has taken a keen interest in the growth of the county in the early settlement of which he took such a prominent part.

Mr. Whiting was born in Herefordshire, England, in 1847, a son of Thomas and Ann (Wheeler) Whiting, both of whom were natives of England. He was reared and educated in his native land, and as he grew into manhood, worked in the coal mines. In 1868 he was united in marriage to Ann Rowe, in South Wales. She was a daughter of Nicholas Rowe, a plate layer, and Grace (Jones) Rowe.

Mr. Whiting came to America in 1881, landing in New York city September 26th. He went west into Green county, Iowa, his family following in 1882. Here he spent four or five years working in the coal mines. In the spring of 1886 he came to Dawes county, Nebraska, taking a claim on pre-emption in township 30, range 48. He proved up his claim and built a log cabin. In 1888 he took a homestead in section 17 of the same township. He experienced the many hardships so familiar to the early settlers in western Nebraska, and lost different crops by hail. During the periods of drouth he helped to make a living by working in the mines. The years of toil and struggle which he spent in an effort to work out for himself and family a comfortable home have not been wasted, for his ranch of six hundred and forty acres on the Pepper creek is a model one of its kind. He has erected a substantial and commodious home, and has two good wells and windmills. Mr. Whiting is the father of five children who would be a credit to any parentage. They are: Henry, Elizabeth (married), Charles, Alice and Samuel.

The subject of this sketch has always taken a leading part in the affairs of the locality in which he lives, and is looked upon as a man well worthy of the high esteem in which he is held. Through years of adversity and prosperity he has held the handles of the plow, working out for himself a comfortable home, and giving his energies to the upbuilding of the locality in which he resides. Upright and honorable in all his dealings, he has manifested a high integrity and a strict adherence to principle, and enjoys the respect and confidence of a host of warm friends. July 8, 1907, his wife died, and this sad event was the means of bringing together the entire family, including one of his sons who resided in the state of Washington.

RICKLES N. ADKINS.

Among those who have made a success of farming in the western states, and who have accumulated a snug fortune, though starting out with absolutely nothing, the gentleman above named stands foremost. Mr. Adkins is one of the old settlers in Keya Paha county, Nebraska, and has done his full share in making this county what it is today, and richly merits the reward he has earned through his industry and thrift.

Mr. Adkins was born in Wayne county, Virginia, August 1, 1869, and reared on a farm where he learned to do all hard labor as a young lad. His father, Spencer Adkins, was a carpenter by trade, following farm work also. The mother was Matilda Johnson. In 1874 the family located in Kentucky, remaining there for five years, then going to Iowa and settling in Shelby county. At the age of fifteen years our subject started out in life for himself, following all kinds of work until 1889, when he began farming for himself in Keya Paha county, having made a preliminary trip in 1895. He took up a pre-emption of eighty acres, then let it go back to the government, and in 1890 took a homestead on section 27, township 35, range 17, and still occupies this place. He has fully improved this, putting up good buildings, fences, etc., cultivating a part of the land and using the rest for hay and pasture. He keeps about eighty head of cattle, one hundred and twenty hogs and also raises a number of horses for market each year.

When Mr. Adkins first came to Nebraska he had a hard time to get along, and after settling on his homestead he lost stock through having them stolen, his crops were destroyed by drouths and storms, and often did not know where the next meal was coming from. At these times he worked out by the day to support his family, and although they often became discouraged, he determined to stick to it, and is now very glad that he did so. He now has a comfortable home and fine farm, and is counted among the successful and influential men of his section of the country.

Mr. Adkins was married June 20, 1885, to Miss Martine Larson, of Danish birth, who came to America in 1881 with her parents, locating in Iowa. To Mr. and Mrs. Adkins have been born children, named as follows: Abraham, Matilda, Henry, Pearl, Bert, Mary, Iona, Bertha, Rickles, Jr., and Earl, all living at home at the present time.

Mr. Adkins is Republican in political faith and a member of the Christian Adventist church.

H. G. WIEGAND.

H. G. Wiegand, one of the representative farmers and ranchmen of Deuel county, Nebraska, is classed among the wealthy residents of his locality, and a man who stands among the foremost citizens of the region as an important factor in the advancement and growth of his adopted home.

Our subject was born in Germany, November 11, 1863, and grew to the age of seventeen years there, receiving a scant education and the training usual to the children of the middle classes in that country, then started out for himself, taking passage on an emigrant steamer for America. He located at first in LaSalle, Illinois, and spent about six years in that vicinity, following farming the greater part of the time, then came to Nebraska and settled in Deuel county, landing here March 1, 1886. He was one of the original pioneers of western Nebraska, and passed through all the early experiences of the settlers in the region, homesteading a tract of land on which he proved up and later sold. After he had been in the United States about six months he sent for the rest of his family, father, mother, one brother and a sister coming over and joining him, and were pioneers with himself in Nebraska. He settled on section 17, township 13, range 45, and has lived on this ranch ever since, now having twenty hundred and eighty acres in the home ranch, which is fitted with a complete set of substantial farm buildings and first-class improvements of all kinds. He farms but little, using most of the land for stock raising and having extensive hay meadows, with sixty-five acres of alfalfa. He runs about two hundred and fifty head of cattle and a small bunch of horses, and has always been quite a heavy shipper of stock. Mr. Wiegand was married at Chappell, in February, 1892, to Mrs. Mary Gunn, whose maiden name was Mary Williams and who was born and raised in England, coming to America when a girl of seventeen. The parents of both our subject and his wife are dead. They have three children, all of whom live at home, namely: Jessie M., Lyle H. and Eunice.

Mr. Wiegand is director of school district No. 9, and is a leading citizen in all affairs which tend to the betterment of his locality. Politically he is a stanch Republican and takes an active interest in party affairs.

AMOS A. WRIGHT.

Amos A. Wright may be truly numbered among the leading old-timers of Box Butte county, Nebraska. He has made this region his home for the past twenty-one years, and during that time has acquired a valuable property consisting of a fine ranch of six hundred and forty acres, all well improved, and this place forms one of the most pleasant homes and best kept farms in the locality. He has lately erected a handsome concrete house with nice walks and a fine lawn surrounding it, and to the visitor driving through this section his home presents a very pleasing appearance to the eye.

Mr. Wright was born in Henry county, Illinois, in 1856. His father followed farming in that state for many years, and our subject was reared and educated there, attending the country schools and assisting his parents in carrying on the home farm, remaining at home until he was twenty-one years of age. He then came west, locating in Boone county, Iowa, and there started farming for himself, but only remained in that locality for a short time, emigrating to Hastings, Nebraska, and worked on farms in that vicinity for about five years. In the spring of 1887 he came to Box Butte county, driving overland from Hastings in a covered wagon containing his household goods and bringing his family with him. He picked out a location in section 28, township 24, range 50, and at once went to work to make a home for himself and family. On the first of May of that year he had the bad luck to lose three horses in a snowstorm which struck the region, and for three weeks they wandered through the Sand Hills. His first building was a sod house. The nearest railroad station was Hay Springs, which was six miles from his homestead. His entire possessions consisted of a cow and calf and three horses, but he went to work with a stout heart, begun to break land for crops, and while improving his place worked out as a freighter and doing construction work on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway, which was then being laid through this section of country. Mr. Wright lived on that place up to 1901, and during that time succeeded in accumulating a nice property and adding many improvements in the way of good buildings, fences, wells and windmills. He then sold for a good price and moved to a tract of land consisting of four hundred acres, located on Snake creek, and lived there for six years, doing well, engaged in mixed farming and stock raising, then coming to his present place which he purchased. This farm contains six hundred and forty acres, situated five miles southwest of Alliance.

Mr. Wright has done his utmost since coming here to make this part of the state a prosperous farming section, as he has really improved three different farms, also lending his aid in establishing schools in his locality. He has been prominent in every movement which has been started toward the bettering of conditions here, and has always been one of the foremost citizens of his community.

Mr. Wright was married in 1880, while living in Iowa, to Mrs. Phoebe Robbins. Her father, Rufus West, was a farmer in Iowa, and her mother's maiden name was Lydia Corbett. Mrs. Wright has one son by a former marriage, Fred C. Robbins, who is a well-known ranchman in this state. Of Mr. Wright's marriage two children have been born, Arthur G., aged twenty-five years, and Albert C., aged twenty-two years.

SWAN P. PETERSON.

Swan P. Peterson was born in Christianstad, Skone, Sweden, in July, 1850. Both parents were natives of Sweden, where the father, a farmer by occupation, died when our subject was but a small boy.

Our subject was reared and educated in his native land, attending an agricultural school, where he acquired thorough training as to farm methods and scientific and practical farming. This knowledge has been an important factor in his success in the western country. Mr. Peterson remained in Sweden until 1880, when he came to America, landing in New York city. From thence he went to Princeton, Illinois, where he worked at farming for three years during the hard times. He then found employment in the iron mills at Kewanee, Illinois, for ten years and then for about five years worked in the machine shops at the same city. May 15, 1884, he came west to see Keith county, Nebraska, and bought railroad land eleven miles southeast of Ogallala, paying six dollars per acre, but he returned to Illinois and did not come again to the county until 1894. He settled on his farm southeast of Ogallala and commenced building up a home. He had a good start—a team and wagon, household goods and about fifteen hundred dollars in money. This was sufficient to keep his family in good circumstances if the crops had been good. But for several years nothing was harvested and the family managed to get through the hard times by turning their attention to dairying and stock raising. But even with that, when the bad years were passed, our subject found his money all gone and nothing but his farm and a little stock left. In 1901 he moved to his present homestead in section 14, township 13, range 41, and later added a Kincaid claim, in 1907, in section 22. He has a fine farm of nine hundred and sixty acres, a quarter section of which lies south of the Platte river and is all under irrigation. Mr. Peterson gives most of his attention to stock raising and dairying and cultivates only about sixty acres.

Our subject was married in Kewanee, Illinois, in May, 1892, to Mrs. Nellie Lundin (nee Johnson), a native of Skone, Sweden, who came to America with a girl friend in 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have had five children, four of whom are living: Ebba, Lawrence, Emmert and Hazel; one son, Otto, is dead.

Mr. Peterson is one of the old settlers of that part of the state and is well and favorably known over a wide territory. He is a member of the Republican party, and he is influential in promulgating the principles of the party to which he belongs. He is a conscientious and public-spirited citizen, and has come to occupy a high place in the regard of his fellows. He is a member of the Ogallala Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, and a Lutheran in religious faith.

MICHAEL M. KLINE.

Michael M. Kline, a well-known and successful farmer and dairyman of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, has a pleasant and substantial home in Colton precinct, and is one of the prominent men of his locality.

Mr. Kline was born in the Shenandoah valley, Rockingham county, Virginia, December 17, 1855, and is a son of George and Elizabeth (Miller) Kline, both Virginians by birth, the former departed this life in August, 1906.

while the mother resides on the old homestead in Virginia. Our subject grew up in his native state, emigrating to Keokuk county, Iowa, in 1877, and spent about eleven years in that part of the country. He first came to Nebraska in 1887, filing on a homestead and tree claim in section 18, township 13, range 48, which he later sold. Since then he has taken up additional land under the Kincaid law in section 30, township 14, range 48, and is now owner of a fine estate, of which one hundred and forty-five acres are devoted to dairy farming. He has erected good buildings on his farm lands, and has about fifty acres under cultivation, using the balance as pasture and hay land. He is quite heavily interested in the dairy business, keeps about seventy-five head of Holstein cattle, and runs a milk wagon for the Sidney trade. He is doing exceedingly well along these lines, and has a comfortable and pleasant home, all of which has been accumulated through his own unaided efforts and industrious habits. When he first landed here he was obliged to start his farm on a very small scale, and for a number of years was unable to lay by anything, as he suffered from failure of crops on account of the drouth periods, but he stuck to his purpose and has been well rewarded for his labors, now being in comfortable circumstances. A view of his dwelling and barns are presented on another page.

Mr. Kline was united in marriage, in October, 1880, in Keokuk county, Iowa, to Miss Fannie Flory, whose father, Samuel Flory, is still living in that county. Her mother was in maidenhood a Miss Brewer. Mr. and Mrs. Kline have three children, namely: Lizzie Virginia, now Mrs. Paul Cappler, living in Cheyenne county; Ira, the owner of a fine ranch of four hundred and eighty acres, which he filed on under the Kincaid act, situated in section 24, township 14, range 49; and Eva, living at home.

Mr. Kline is a Prohibitionist in sentiment, and votes an independent ticket. He is an active, public-spirited citizen, always standing for the good of his community. In religious sentiment he is one of the Dunkard Brethren.

MAX E. VIERTEL.

Max E. Viertel, who now resides in Crookston, Cherry county, Nebraska, has been identified with the history of this broad and promising county for many years. The Viertels were originally French, the grandfather of Max E. leaving his native land to make his home in Germany as early as 1813. There the family remained, making their home at Bremen, in Saxony, until 1881. Christian E. Viertel, the father of Max E., sailed for America in October, 1880, the mother following with the family, sailing June 25, 1881, in the steamer Elbe, landing in New York on the 4th day of July. On his arrival in this country, Christian E. Viertel brought his family to Bowditch county, Wisconsin, where he engaged in farming for two years, when he removed to Stevens Point to enter the employ of the Wisconsin Central Railway, remaining until 1886. He then came to Crookston, Nebraska.

Max E. Viertel was born in Limbach, Germany, July 28, 1863. On reaching Wisconsin he secured a position on the Wisconsin Central in 1882, and three years later became store keeper of the company's supply shops. He was in the hotel business at Stevens Point until removing to Nebraska. In 1886 he came to Crookston and became clerk in the store of F. H. Baumgartel, established in July of that year, and long recognized as the leading store in this entire region. In 1899 Mr. Viertel had become so successful in his ventures, and so sure of himself that he bought out the establishment, and began a mercantile career that has proved remarkably successful. Mr. Viertel not only does a general mercantile business, but he also deals in farm lands, and as a reliable and trustworthy real estate dealer is widely known. He is also postmaster of Crookston, which office he efficiently fills. His years are still largely before him, and his friends are sure that his energy, ability and character will win for him a much larger measure of success than he has yet enjoyed. He possesses the confidence and trust of the community to a marked degree, and his word needs no bond to bind it.

Mr. Viertel was married April 3, 1887, to Miss Lydia Baumgartel, a native of Saxony, Germany, her father being the founder of the store as noted above. She is the mother of a family of six children: Helena, Viola, Rudolph, Gladys, Margaret and Levon. The family are Lutheran in faith and Mr. Viertel is a member of the Crookston lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

ARTHUR S. BEEDE.

The gentleman above named is known throughout the locality in which he resides as an energetic and prosperous agriculturist, and has for the past ten years been engaged in bringing his valuable estate to a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Beede was born on a farm in Allamakee county, Iowa, in 1858. His father, John C. Beede, is of American stock, born and raised near Moosehead Lake, and was by trade a shoemaker. At the time the family located in Iowa, they were the fifth family to settle in Allamakee county, which was then practically a wilderness. Our subject is the eldest of a family of eight children, and he lived at home assisting his father in breaking up the new land and getting it in shape to raise crops. At the age of twenty-two he came west but did not settle permanently, and in 1880 he went back to Iowa, locating in Osceola county, where he worked on a farm for a year and a half. He went north then, landing in Chamberlain, South Dakota, and drifted around in that part of the country for about two years. In 1884 he struck Valentine, Nebraska, going all over this part of the state, and then traveled on to Kansas where he picked corn for a living during the fall and winter months. In 1885 he came to Sheridan county, his first location being on a pre-emption two miles east of Rushville. This he soon afterward sold, and took a homestead in this locality. In 1897 he purchased his present home, comprising three hundred and twenty acres, of which he farms about one hundred acres, raising enough hay and grain on the balance to keep his stock. He has thirty head of cattle and twelve horses. During the poor years he farmed at a loss, and when he came to figure up after going through many discouraging times, found that he was two thousand dollars in debt. He was about ready to quit then, but his wife was determined to stay and try to make this up, so they went to work again with a will and as times became better he was able to grow good crops, and things began to look brighter. He is now free from all debt, is the owner of a fine farm, well improved with good buildings and all fenced, and is classed among the substantial citizens of his locality. He has gained all this by dint of perseverance and hard work, as he had very little money to start with, and was obliged to do all kinds of rough work, such as freighting, teaming, etc., in order to make a living for his family in the early days.

Mr. Beede was married in 1886 to Miss Mary E. Hughes, a native of Allamakee county, Iowa. Her father and her mother were both born and raised in Ireland and came to this country as a young married couple. They located in Iowa, where they remained until their children grew up. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Beede, who are named as follows: John, Roy, Nellie, Elizabeth, Angie, Thomas, William and Clarence, all born and raised in this locality. The family occupy a pleasant home, and is highly respected in the community. Mr. Beede was raised a Republican, voted the Greenback ticket in his younger days, and now his sympathies are with the Independent party. He keeps abreast of the times in all public matters, but has never had any time to devote to taking an active part in politics.

JAMES A. HUNTER.

James A. Hunter now lives at Alliance, but has a fine ranch located in section 29, township 29, range 49, in Dawes county, Nebraska. He is one of the most extensive raisers of horses and cattle in western Nebraska. He was born in Montgomery county, Illinois, in 1862, a son of Robert and Elizabeth (Anderson) Hunter, natives of Scotland. His parents came to America on their wedding tour, and settled in Montgomery county, Illinois, where his father was a prominent farmer.

Until the age of nineteen years, our subject remained on the farm with his parents, and received a common school education. He then went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he entered the Jones Commercial College. Upon the completion of his studies there, Mr. Hunter went to San Antonio, Texas, where he purchased three hundred head of cattle and entered the stock business. After remaining here a short time, he trailed a herd of six thousand head of cattle, including his own, north into the Indian Territory. Here he remained until the spring of 1881, when he drove his herd on through to Nebraska. The journey through the Indian Territory (where he was quarantined for two months) and across the state of Kansas was marked by many trying experiences. For six months he was forced to camp out constantly, obtaining his supplies from the different forts along the route, not having seen a single house during this period, only his camp wagon.

Mr. Hunter has been all over these western counties in the early days, the nearest post-office being Pine Ridge, South Dakota, while Sidney was the nearest railroad station. Here he engaged in the raising of horses, and when the county first began settling, had quite a herd of fine animals. It was in 1883 or 1884 that Mr. Hunter filed on the claim which is his present home farm, and at once set about the task of reclaiming from the wild prairie a suitable home in which to pass his life. He now has what is one of the largest ranches in western Nebraska, comprising an area of fifty-three hundred acres of deeded land and about twenty-seven hundred acres of leased land. He has erected good buildings, and has his ranch well fenced. He has about four hundred acres which are irrigated. Mr. Hunter engages extensively in stockraising, and has fifty head of horses and seven hundred head of cattle. The many years which he has devoted to this occupation has made him an expert, and has gained for him an enviable reputation throughout the country.

In 1888, Mr. Hunter and Miss Anna Harris were married. Her parents were Thomas and Grazell (Sheppard) Harris, prominent old settlers near Springfield, Illinois. Mrs. Hunter died in 1893 on the farm in Dawes county, Nebraska. One child was born of this union, Robert L. In June, 1897, Mr. Hunter contracted a second marriage with Nellie Harris, a sister of his deceased wife.

The subject of this narrative is a Republican. He has worked hard and managed well, and his career is to be regarded as a marked success. While he has devoted himself very closely to his ranch, and has permitted nothing to come between him and that great interest, he has always taken a prominent part in everything pertaining to matters of local interest, and as an old settler he has done his share of the work of improving and developing Dawes county, and making it a home for a thrifty and industrious people. He has held various school offices, and assisted in the building of the first schools in the county.

WILLIAM BEATTY.

If we were to be asked for the name of one of the oldest settlers in the western part of Nebraska, and a representative citizen of this locality, we would not hesitate to give that of William Beatty, the subject of this review. He resides in Brady, Lincoln county, and has lived in this section since 1875, building up a fine home and comfortable competence, and incidentally being one of those who have aided materially in the development and growth of his community.

Mr. Beatty is a native of Monahan county, Ireland, and his mother still resides there. In 1895 he re-visited the home of his childhood and spent some time with his mother, who is now dead. He spent his boyhood years with his parents, and at the age of twenty-two came to America, landing in New York in 1873. Two years later he came west, locating in eastern Nebraska, but only remained there for two years then came to Lincoln county, homesteading the place on which he now lives. He worked for the Union Pacific railway for twelve years after coming here, also superintending the working of his farm, and adding improvements gradually. He took up a tree claim near Gottenberg, which he has since sold. He added to his ranch, buying railway lands and other tracts, and now owns about three thousand acres in all. He does not go in for farming to any great extent; raises a little corn, and some small farm products, and nearly all his land is devoted to stock raising, with some portions of it in hay and grazing fields. He has on his place about three hundred to five hundred cattle, one hundred hogs, and from thirty-five to fifty horses. He shows a decided preference for the Hereford breed of cattle, and finds them the best for all purposes. His hogs are of mixed breeds, and his horses are all general purpose animals which he finds to be the best for his locality. He raises fine crops of hay each season, and this year his yield was about four hundred tons, and he feeds all of this on his farm, besides buying a great deal of grain, etc.

Mr. Beatty is one of the most successful ranchmen in his community, and in character is intelligent and genial, admired and respected by all who know him for his many sterling qualities. He is president of the State Bank of Brady, and a man who takes an active part in everything that tends to the betterment of conditions in his locality. He states that as a boy in Ireland, all England seemed to think of or care for was to take all she could from the Irish people. When he returned to Ireland in 1895 he was amazed at the improved condition of things there. It now appears that England is doing all she can to aid the Irish. Anyone wishing to build a home there, can, by presenting an architect's certificate, borrow for twenty years two-thirds of the cost of the building, paying interest of two per cent. per annum. Any tenant wishing to buy the land which he has formerly rented can compel the landlord to sell to him, and the government loans the tenant the full purchase price of the land fixed by agreement or arbitration, at two per cent. for forty years. This certainly is a great improvement over the conditions which existed in years gone by, when the people were so bitterly oppressed by the English. Many were forced to leave their home country and take refuge in a foreign land to escape the hardships which they were obliged to endure in Ireland not many years since, and it was through this that many of our sturdy Irish citizens came to this country to taste of the joys of freedom.

Mr. Beatty was married in 1883 to Miss Minnie Burke, a native of Iowa, and sister of the present agent for the Union Pacific railway, who resides at Maxwell, Nebraska. As a result of this union five children have come to bless their home, who are named as follows: William, Robert, Essie, Effie and Edyth, all of whom are living at home, the daughters attending school here. They have a pleasant and comfortable home, and enjoy a large circle of friends and are highly respected by all who know them.

Mr. Beatty is an Independent in politics, and takes a deep interest in all local and state affairs, always keeping abreast of the times and being thoroughly conversant with public matters of importance.

IGNATIUS WANKER.

Ignatius Wanker, one of the best known pioneers of western Nebraska, is a man of sterling character who has accumulated a fine property through thrift and perseverance, and after undergoing many hardships and privations in the earlier years of his life has gained a competence for himself and family. He resides in Ainsworth, where he is highly esteemed as a worthy citizen and a foremost member of the community. Mr. Wanker was born near Strasburg, in Alsace, then a province of France, January 7, 1845. His father was a farmer by occupation who lived and died in his native land. There was a family of five children, of whom but two are now living. They, with the mother, came to America in 1857, settling in Horton county, Iowa, where they were among the pioneers. There for several years our subject farmed and worked in his uncle's country store part of the time, until the outbreak of the Civil war; then in 1862, enlisted in Company B, Eighteenth Iowa Infantry, going with his regiment through Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee; was on the Red river expedition and in the Camden campaign, taking part in fourteen big battles and many skirmishes. He was mustered out at Littlerock, and discharged at Davenport, Iowa, in July, 1863, after three years' hard service.

After leaving the army he returned to Iowa where he purchased a farm near Hopewell, Clark county, remaining on it up to 1885, putting up good buildings and making many improvements. He disposed of that place in the latter year and came to Brown county, where he took a homestead on section 6, township 28, range 21, his first building here being a sod house in which he lived with his family for two years. He went successfully through the dry years, for it was during those times that he raised his best crops, and was very successful, paying off his mortgage on the place, when many others had a hard time to get along and make a living. He acquired a fine farm of eight hundred acres, one hundred and fifty of which is cultivated, and the balance in hay and pasture land, which he traded for the Osborn House in Ainsworth. This he later exchanged for a fine tract of forty acres near Norfolk, which is highly improved. He since purchased one hundred and sixty acres in section 35, southeast of Ainsworth, which he personally superintends, dividing his time between this land and his home in Ainsworth.

January 4, 1866, Mr. Wanker was married to Miss Sarah Carter, born in Ohio, of American blood. Eight children were born to them, namely: Louis (deceased), Lillian, Frank, Rose, Flora, Mary, Orris and Bessie. Mrs. Wanker died on December 30, 1900, and was interred the first day of the new year. In her loss the family had the sympathy of the entire community. On July 20, 1902, Mr. Wanker was again married, Miss Rebecca McKennon becoming his bride. He is a Republican in politics and a comrade in the Grand Army of the Republic of Ainsworth. He was reared in the Catholic church.

PHILIP T. HIGGINS.

Philip T. Higgins, one of the prominent old settlers and leading ranchmen and farmers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, has come to his present successful estate by dint of hard labor and constant attention to duty. He located in this state as early as 1880, and since that time has passed through all the changes that have come to the region, and incidentally, aided materially in the development of its resources and building up for himself a valuable property in Davidson precinct.

Mr. Higgins was born August 7, 1856, in Ritchie county, West Virginia, and made that vicinity his home until he was twenty-four years of age. He was the only boy in a family of six children, received a common school education, and followed farm work as a young man; he learned the blacksmith's trade at which he worked part of the time. His first location after coming west in 1880, was at Nebraska City, in which vicinity he remained for six years engaged in farming and ranching. He came to western Nebraska in March, 1886, and filed on a homestead in section 26, township 16, range 51, Cheyenne county. He built a sod house and began to break up land for crops, raising sod-corn and vegetables the first summer. For several years he found it difficult to make even a bare living, but finally he proved up on his claim. As circumstances permitted he added to his original homestead until he is now owner of nine hundred and sixty acres, devoting two hundred and sixty of it to farming purposes, and the balance to hay and pasture for his stock, running about one hundred head of cattle and sixty horses. In addition to his ranch here Mr. Higgins owns a valuable four hundred-acre farm in eastern Nebraska. He has a complete set of good buildings on his ranch, including a well equipped blacksmith shop, and does considerable work for himself and for his neighbors for miles around.

Mr. Higgins's parents are both deceased. The father, Thomas Higgins, was a native of Ireland, while the mother, Sidney Wymer, in maidenhood, was born in Pendleton county, West Virginia. Our subject was married in eastern Nebraska, May 16, 1883, to Miss Tabitha Weimer, and after nineteen years of happy domestic felicity Mrs. Higgins departed this life, April 11, 1902, leaving a sorrowing family and many friends to mourn her death. There were four children born of the marriage, as follows: Charles E., born June 11, 1887; Clara M., born June 11, 1892; Violet P., born March 5, 1896; and Philip R., born January 24, 1899. He was married again, November 26, 1902, in Cheyenne county, to Miss Ella Miller, who formerly lived in Saunders county, Nebraska, where her parents, Henry and Martha (Kidney) Miller, still reside. Of this union three children have been born: Jessie A., Ethel L. and Lulu F.

Mr. Higgins is serving as postmaster at Clara postoffice, which is located at his home. In political views he is a Democrat, with independent tendencies. He is a member of the Maccabees and the Modern Woodmen at Sidney.

JOHN B. BLOMBERG.

John B. Blomberg, a well-to-do farmer of Sioux county, has a well-improved farm and ranch in section 31, township 31, range 53, on which he makes his home, and is among the old settlers of this region. He has acquired his entire possessions through energetic labor and good business management, and is now prepared to enjoy his declining years surrounded by all the comforts of rural life.

Mr. Blomberg was born in Skona, Sweden, in 1865. His father lived and died in that country, and his mother still occupies the old homestead there. Our subject grew up in Sweden, received a limited schooling, and during his boyhood learned the butcher's trade, following that occupation for six years in his home vicinity. He left Sweden and came to the United States in 1888, and after spending a short time in New York city came west to Saunders county, Nebraska, at once going on a farm and followed that and railroading for about two years. He then settled in Sioux county, landing here in 1890, and after coming here worked at railroading, employed on section work in this state and Wyoming, acting as foreman for six years. He saved considerable money, and at the end of that time took his present farm as a homestead. This place is situated in section 31, township 31, range 53, and consists of six hundred and forty acres which lies for a mile along the White river, is well supplied with timber and fuel, and a large part is irrigated. He has about forty acres cultivated, and is engaged in grain and stock raising on quite a large scale, meeting with splendid success along these lines. He is a progressive agriculturist, and has improved the farm in first-class shape, putting up good buildings, including a handsome residence twenty-six by twenty-six feet, with beautiful lawn surrounding it, and every appointment shows good management and taste, and the casual visitor through this section pronounces it one of the most attractive rural homes to be found in the county.

Mr. Blomberg was united in marriage December 16, 1897, to Julia Gaston, who came to Nebraska from Ohio, where her father and mother were both born and raised as well as herself. She was a daughter of Joe and Martha (German) Gaston, both of German descent. Mr. and Mrs. Blomberg have a charming family of six children, named as follows: Carrie, Axel, Ethel, Clarence, Lawrence and Earl.

Our subject is a leader in local public affairs. He is an independent voter, and for some years served as assessor in his district, also as road overseer. He has been active in establishing the schools of his locality, acting as a board member for many years. Since settling here he has been employed by the Chicago & Northwestern railway a great deal as foreman on the section, and is employed by that company at the present time.

PETER O. LINGBLOM.

Another well known and highly esteemed old settler of Perkins county, Nebraska, is found in the person of the gentleman above named. He has made this region his home for the past twenty years and more, coming here as a boy, and during that time has built up a comfortable fortune and while accumulating a competence for himself has also aided materially in the development and advancement of his community.

Mr. Lingblom was born in Boone county, Iowa, in 1869. He first saw the light on his father's farm, the latter a native of Sweden, who grew up in that country, was married there and came to America with his bride, where they settled in Iowa about 1868, and going to Nebraska later, locating in Hamilton county, about 1881, taking a rented farm on which they lived for a number of years. In 1887 the whole family came to Perkins county, the father taking a homestead on section 34, township 12, range 36, beginning with a very small capital. During the first few months they lived in a tent and our subject worked on the railroad which was being put through the region, in order to help support the family and get a start on his farm. After a short time our subject went back to the eastern part of the state and worked as a farm hand, being back and forth every year, and about 1890 returned to Perkins county to settle, and started for himself on a farm, taking land in the vicining of his father's homestead. For some time afterward, however, he still worked out to some extent in eastern Nebraska. He improved the place as rapidly as he was able, making a very productive farm out of it, and in 1902 bought his father's old homestead, at which time the latter moved to Whatcom county, Washington, his death occurring there in 1905.

Peter O. Lingblom is now owner of three hundred and twenty acres, all good farm and range land, with one hundred acres under cultivation, used for the raising of grain, vegetables, etc., and he engages also extensively in the stock business, running cattle, horses, and other stock. He raises a large drove of chickens each year, and has some very fine specimens of the White Leghorn breed. He is an authority on the breeding and raising of poultry, having made that a special study for some years past. Considerable of his income each year is from his poultry. He also has a fine orchard, raising many different kinds of fruit.

RESIDENCE OF JENS SILLASSEN,

In 1899 Mr. Lingblom was married to Miss Anna Oman, whose parents were old settlers in western Nebraska. They have three children, Victor, Theodore and Carl, all bright and intelligent youngsters, and the family has a pleasant home and are well liked by their associates in the community.

JENS SILLASEN.

Jens Sillasen was born on a farm near the village of Andrup, province of Jutland, Denmark, October 12, 1869. His father, Morton Sillasen, was also a native of that country, where he lived and died, as was the mother, Maren Andersen, still residing on the old home farm. Our subject remained in the land of his nativity until 1888, when he sailed from Esbjerg to Hull, going thence to Glasgow, where he embarked on a steamer of the American line, and landed at Philadelphia, after a voyage of thirteen days. He came west to the North Platte country in Nebraska, joining his brother Silas, and for five years was employed on the John Bratt & Company's ranch, principally in Lincoln county.

In 1893 he started for himself, buying one hundred and sixty acres of land near Keystone, living in the sod house he found on the place when he purchased it, for four years, building a comfortable frame house in 1897. He has one of the finest ranches in the county, with buildings best adapted to ranch purposes of any in the region. He owns over four thousand five hundred acres of fine hill and bottom land, on which he runs about six hundred head of cattle, two hundred and fifty head of hogs and twenty-five fine horses. He has excellent buildings and improvements, his corrals and pens being constructed largely of cement blocks. He has many fine trees started and his premises have a homelike and prosperous appearance. There are several spring branches on the place and from one of these he has piped a never failing supply to the house and tanks conveniently placed about the corrals and pastures.

Mr. Sillasen was married October 18, 1899, to Miss Mayme Mathews, a native of Chariton county, Missouri, a daughter of Benjamin G. and Lucy (Henderson) Mathews, of Kentucky and Missouri, respectively. They have two children, Doris and Ardis.

Jens Sillasen has been a successful man and acquired a good competency and a delightful home. He has been prominently connected with the public affairs of his community and has held several offices. He is a strong supporter of the Democratic party, was reared in the Lutheran church and affiliates with the Masonic fraternity at Ogallala.

A view of his fine ranch buildings with recent improvements is to be found on another page of our work.

OTTO P. MICHEEL.

Otto P. Micheel, residing on section 8, township 32, range 25, of Cherry county, Nebraska, was born in the village of Rollin, province of Holstein, Germany, September 3, 1863. His father, Carl Micheel, who married Sophie Gaus, was a farmer, and never left his native land. Otto was the youngest member of a family of seven children, and was reared on his father's farm, attending the schools in his native village until he was sixteen years of age. He then started out for himself, obtaining employment on farms in the vicinity of his home, learning the dairy business and continued at this for three years. In 1882 he left his fatherland and came to America, sailing from Hamburg on the steamer Selesia, August 13, and, after twelve days, landed at New York. He at once joined a brother at Martinsburg, Dixon county, Nebraska, which he reached about September 1st, but remained there only until the following spring, then came on to Cherry county and took up a pre-emption claim, located south of Wood Lake. This he changed to a homestead, and soon after sold his relinquishment and bought other land north of Wood Lake, which he still occupies. Here he has added to the acreage until he has a ranch of about one thousand six hundred acres, most of which lies in the valley, all of it good hay land, engaging principally in stock raising. He keeps from four to five hundred head of cattle, fifty horses, and a flock of sheep. He has erected a comfortable two-story dwelling, a large barn, with numerous outbuildings, and devotes his entire time to the improvement of his property.

For some three years Mr. Micheel had charge of Willis Barnard's ranch, after which he rented for two years. Starting out with three horses and a bunch of forty cattle, he at once began to establish a farm, putting up a good log house on his first farm and breaking up land for crops. He has been exceptionally fortunate and although he has gone through some hard times, has never experienced the privations and suffering that so many of the pioneers of this section endured. There is a fine grove of forest trees surrounding the home place to which several hundred poplar and willow trees were added in the spring of 1908, with a thrifty orchard growing.

Mr. Micheel was married March 22, 1888, to Miss Gerda Thiel, a native of Flensburg, province of Schleswig, Germany, who came to this country on the same boat which brought her husband. Her father, Henry Thiel, died in Germany, and the mother, Margareta Jansen, at sea, on the voyage to America. Miss Thiel lived for five years in Chicago, coming to Cherry county to visit the family of Henry Micheel. They have a family of nine children, who are named as follows: Eric, Wilhelm, Marie, Emma, Carl, Myrtle, Florence, Herbert and Otto, all of whom were born and reared in this county.

Mr. Micheel is a Republican, but has never held any office, although he is always active in the advancement of educational affairs in his community and has done his share in the development of this territory. He has a fine estate, and has been richly rewarded for his industrious habits and perseverance in overcoming many obstacles and difficulties that beset the pioneer settlers of this locality. He was reared in the Lutheran church, and is, fraternally, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Wood Lake.

RICHARD McCracken.

A large share of the wealth of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, comes from the thriving agricultural districts of Pine precinct, and among those who own large estates there, a prominent place is accorded the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this article.

Mr. McCracken was born in Fremont county, Iowa, February 23, 1869, and raised and educated on his parents' farm. His father, Andrew McCracken, was born in Ireland and came to America at the age of ten years, where he grew up in Illinois, enlisting at Monmouth, with an Illinois regiment just before the close of the war, serving until the struggle was over. He soon afterwards came to Keya Paha county, Nebraska, and took up a tree claim in section 11, township 33, range 19, and developed and improved the place, farming up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1892. He left a wife and seven children, our subject being the oldest, and the mother now resides with him. When he was twenty-one years of age he began farming for himself, working the home place, and later took a tree claim adjoining his home place, which he still owns. In 1902 he took a homestead in the same section in which his father's farm is located. Mr. McCracken now operates one thousand two hundred acres of good land, cultivating two hundred acres, with about three hundred and fifty acres in hay land, and large pastures for his stock. He keeps a hundred cattle, twenty horses, and raises about forty hogs each season for the market.

Our subject has many improvements on his ranch, good buildings, with a nice house, large commodious barn, which he has recently built, and all other farm buildings, fences, etc. He also has a good grove of forest trees on his tree claim, and plenty of good water, Spring creek running through the place.

On February 24, 1901, Mr. McCracken was married to Miss Priscilla Koenig, of Bohemian stock, born in Knox county, Nebraska, in 1877, a daughter of Thomas and Antonia Koenig. Her people were early settlers in Keya Paha county, also in Knox county, where she was reared. Mr. and Mrs. McCracken have three children, namely: Henry, Idalia and Frank.

Mr. McCracken is a Democrat, and a man of broad mind, progressive and well-read in all matters of public importance, although he does not take an active part in political affairs, preferring to devote his whole time to his farm and home.

FRANK E. FORSLING.

For nearly a quarter of a century the gentleman above named has been identified with the agricultural interests of Kimball county, Nebraska, and he has aided materially in transforming this locality from its wild natural state into a thriving farming district. He is a gentleman of unusual perseverance and energy, and has met with deserved success in his labors, now being classed among the leading citizens of his community.

Frank E. Forsling was born in Sweden on January 15, 1871. His parents were also natives of that country, and he grew to the age of twelve years in the land of his birth, then came to America with father, mother and two brothers and one sister, locating at first in Chicago, and after a short time in that city, came to Phelps county, Nebraska, landing there in the spring of 1884. After two years in that county they came to Kimball county, the father homesteading and proving up on a tract of land. Our subject filed on a claim for himself in 1890, and is now located on section 2, township 14, range 57, where he has a good farm. He has about forty acres cultivated, and engages in mixed farming and stock raising, running about fifty head of cattle and a small bunch of horses.

Oscar E. Forsling, a brother of our subject, has followed about the same career as himself, locating in Kimball county in 1885. He was elected deputy sheriff of the county in 1904, served his term, and in 1907 was elected sheriff, now holding that position. He is a Republican, and one of the leading public men of the section. A sketch of his life will be found on another page of this work.

On November 25, 1900, our subject was married to Miss Alice Ellis, and at the same time Oscar E. Forsling was united in marriage to Miss Ethel Whitman, and the two families have been closely united since that event, and are among the popular members of society in their community.

Our subject has had a varied and interesting experience in western life, and is well and favorably known throughout the locality in which he lives. During the early years much of his time was spent in hunting and trapping through the fall and winter, and in riding the range and breaking horses during the summer months.

FRED C. ROBBINS.

Fred C. Robbins, whose fine farm in section 34, township 24, range 29, marks the thrift enjoyed by its owner, is a native of Iowa, and a typical representative of the western states, sturdy and independent, who has grown up among the vicissitudes of a new country. He has devoted his entire efforts to the development of a model farm and now has one of the finest places in Box Butte county, Nebraska.

Mr. Robbins was born in Jefferson, Green county, Iowa, in 1873. His father, John Robbins, was of English stock, whose father and mother were both born in England and came to this country as emigrants in an early day. When our subject was seven years of age the family came to Nebraska and settled near Hastings, living in that vicinity until he was about fourteen years old. Fred left home in 1894 and started for himself, coming to the western part of the state, locating on a homestead sixteen miles from Alliance and proving up on the place in due time. This was an entirely new country and he went through the usual pioneer experiences, handling ox teams, freighting through the country, at the same time developing his farm in good shape, and while he did not get ahead very fast the first few years, had the good luck not to meet with any severe losses in the way of failures of crops, as did so many of his neighbors. Mr. Robbins remained on that place up to 1905, then sold out and moved on a Kincaid homestead in section 33, township 24, range 49, and there he has done well, opening up a fine ranch and built a good home, owning in all about eight hundred acres of good land, and is numbered among the successful and up-to-date agriculturists and ranchmen of his community. Our subject is engaged extensively in raising both cattle and horses.

In 1897 Mr. Robbins was married to Hattie Fisher. She was born in Missouri and reared in Chicago, Illinois. Mrs. Robbins' father now resides in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins have had four children, namely: Walter, Freddie and Hazel, deceased; and Thelma. They form a most interesting and charming family, all well liked by their associates, and they enjoy a happy and pleasant home, surrounded by a host of warm friends.

PETER RASMUSSEN.

Peter Rasmussen, vice-president of the Republican Valley Bank, at Naponee, Nebraska, is one of the leading citizens of his county. Mr. Rasmussen resides in Turkey creek township, Franklin county, occupying a fine three-hundred-and-twenty-acre farm, located on the eastern boundary of the town of Naponee. There he has a beautiful home, with every appointment of the place in the finest shape possible, and the well-kept grounds, ornamental shrubbery and shade trees, make one of the most attractive rural homes to be seen in Franklin county. The people in his immediate vicinity all join in keeping their homes and farms in the same state of neatness and order, which makes the outskirts of Naponee a most delightful spot. There are nice residences, evergreen hedges, shade trees and beautiful lawns, which present an aspect of thrift and prosperity, and every stranger visiting the place is struck by the contrast between this and most of the neglected and barren farming communities to be found in a newly settled region, and one often wonders why the excellent example of Mr. Rasmussen and his neighbors is not oftener imitated. Mr. Rasmussen was born in Denmark, as was his wife, who was Miss Hannah Nelson. After coming to America, in 1868, they were located for a time at Clifton, Iroquois county, Illinois, and in 1882 came to their present home. Mr. Rasmussen bought one hundred and sixty acres in 1889, paying for the land three thousand dollars, and it is now worth sixteen thousand dollars, showing a steady advance during the past eighteen years. Since locating here he has added to his farm and now owns three hundred and twenty acres, on which he raises considerable fine stock, and engages in mixed farming. Besides his farming interests, he is engaged in numerous business enterprises. He is one of the organizers of the Home Telephone Company, started in 1904 with a capital of ten thousand dollars, and is treasurer of and a director in this company. Mr. Rasmussen has always stood for the best interests of his community, and take an active interest in all local affairs for the improvement and upbuilding of Naponee. He has been treasurer of the high school board for nine years, and was aggressively active and insistent in securing the erection of the new and creditable high school building here. Mr. and Mrs. Rasmussen are the parents of the following children: John E., living on the home farm; Henry, also at home; Edward T., cashier of the Riverton Valley Bank, Riverton, Nebraska; and Camelia, married to Professor G. M. Wiley, of Shenandoah College, in Iowa.

Our subject is a man of sterling character, and in every respect a highly valued member of his community.

Mr. Rasmussen was one of the incorporators and is a director of the Republican Valley Bank, of Naponee, Nebraska. This bank was established in 1908. George M. Wilmot, is president; Emil Sindt, vice-president; A. W. Polly, cashier; S. Y. Hart and Peter Rasmussen, directors. A general banking business is transacted. The bank is in a flourishing condition and is one of the growing institutions of Franklin county.

T. G. HEMMETT.

Mr. Hemmett is one of the most widely known men residing within the territory included in this volume. He is also one of the first settlers of northwest Nebraska, having settled in the valley of the North Loup river, January 8, 1875. At the time of his settlement, the United States troops stationed in this portion of the state for the protection of the straggling settlements and to guard the Union Pacific railroad, were about half the population of this great region. It was after Mr. Hemmett settled in Garfield county, that Sergeant Daugherty was killed in an engagement between the Indians and the United States troops, the engagement occurring almost in sight of his residence. Mr. Hemmett has served as county clerk of Garfield county eleven years, and is now holding the office. In the early pioneer days, "Tom," as he was familiarly known, was one of the best marksmen in the Loup region; and many are the witnesses to his generosity in the division of the spoils of the chase; many a choice piece of venison has "Tom" left at the cabin door of a neighbor; and the same spirit of generosity that prompted the division of venison, in pioneer days, has prompted him to render aid to those in need in later years, when dollars are as freely given as a "saddle" of antelope or venison in the seventies. Mr. Hemmett was born in the town of Lockport, Niagara county, New York, March 9, 1850. He came to Garfield county in January, 1870, where he still resides. Mr. Hemmett owns a fine farm of five hundred and sixty acres in the valley of the North Loup, three miles east of Burwell. His residence is one of the best in western Nebraska, and stands in a beautiful grove of elms and evergreens.

WILLIAM SCHULER.

Prominent among the successful ranchmen of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is William Schuler, who resides on section 26, township 17, range 48, where he has a splendidly improved ranch and pleasant home. He has spent the past twenty-one years in this region, and during that time has become a leader in the upbuilding of the locality where he chose his home and where he has passed through many hard pioneer experiences.

Mr. Schuler was born in the village of Bruederhausen, Schorndorf, Wertemburg, Germany, November 12, 1860, a son of Gottlieb F. and Rosa (Ruhe) Schuler, who died in the fatherland. In 1881, William came to America with an uncle, the two going to Lee county, Iowa, where they spent about two and a half years, working in a saw-mill and lumber camp. From there our subject migrated to eastern Nebraska, settling in Cass county, following farming for three years, and then came to Cheyenne county, arriving in this locality in the spring of 1887. He at once filed on a homestead, and started to build up a home, beginning with very little, and often meeting with discouragement and failure from drouths, hail and prairie fires, but stuck to his farm through many hardships and disappointments, gradually improving the land with good buildings and working into ranching. He has lived on the homestead continuously ever since coming here, and has accumulated a fine property, now owning one thousand six hundred acres. He has about two hundred acres of farm land, raising small grain, and runs one hundred and twenty-five head of cattle and twenty-five horses. He is known as one of the most successful swine breeders in the country, raising about one hundred and fifty head each year. A fine two-story dwelling was erected in 1907, and soon after, a large substantial barn, which we are pleased to illustrate in this work.

While living in Cass county, Mr. Schuler was married to Miss Kate Neumaster, on December 26, 1884, and to them have been born the following children: Carrie J., wife of Lee Ravert, living five miles northeast of Dalton; Lou S., who married Clarence Tompkins, now residing in Deuel county; Kate, wife of Ralph Reinmuth, residing southwest of Dalton, while the following are at home: John F., Mary A., William, Frederick, Charles and Henry. The family have a fine new residence and their home is one of the pleasantest to be found in the vicinity. Mrs. Schuler's parents were John and Kate (Ott) Neumaster. The mother is still living in Cass county on the old homestead, but the father is dead.

Mr. Schuler is active in local affairs, and is a firm supporter of the Republican party in national politics. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of Dalton, while Mrs. Schuler holds membership in the Royal Neighbors.

EDMUND STAMPER.

Edmund Stamper, one of the representative farmers of Sheridan county, resides in township 32, range 43, and is a truly self-made man.

Mr. Stamper was born in England, in 1863, and raised there until he was eighteen years of age. His father, John Stamper, was a lumberman, which business he has always followed in England. Our subject was next to the youngest in a family of ten children. He left home when fourteen years old, and from that time on has always made his own way in the world. When he was eighteen years old he left England and came to America, and since that time has never seen any member of his family. He located in Wisconsin, working out by the month for seven years, engaged in farming and railroading. In 1889 he came to Nebraska, where he followed farming for five years, working for different ranchmen, one year being spent in freighting from Rushville to Pine Ridge, receiving twenty dollars per month, on which he managed to support his family. In 1895, he went to the Sand Hills, locating on Pine creek, and remained there for six years. When he struck the Hills he was in debt to the amount of two hundred and fifty dollars, and the first two years he gained a livelihood by keeping cows and chickens and selling the produce. He soon got a start, managing to raise a little stuff to sell and got along very well until 1901, when he sold his farm there and bought his present farm of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres, which is all good land. This cost him an average of four hundred and twenty-five dollars per quarter section at that time, the land now being worth fifteen to twenty dollars per acre. He has his place all fenced and farms about one hundred and thirty acres. He keeps about one hundred and fifty head of stock and has his place well improved with a fine stone house. During his early days in Nebraska, he saw some pretty hard times. At the times he was obliged to make a trip to town for provisions, he used to leave home in the night, so that he would not be gone long enough to miss one milking time.

Mr. Stamper was married, in 1894, to Miss Maud O. Ryno, a native of Michigan, born in 1872, of American stock. Her father, Louis Ryno, was born and raised in New York state, now living in Sheridan county, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Stamper have four children, namely: Louis E., Martha I., John H. and Grace Winifred, all born and raised in this county. For three years Mr. Stamper was in poor health and unable to do the work on his farm without assistance, and was obliged to hire most of the farm work done. For this reason, he thought he would like to dispose of his property and move to town, but he has now recovered his former good health and does not wish to sell his fine estate.

Mr. Stamper takes an active interest in educational matters in his locality, and has been director of his district for the past six years. He is a Republican, but never votes a straight ticket. He has, at different times, held local offices.

EMIL CARLSON.

Emil Carlson, one of the representative farmers and ranchmen of Trognitz precinct, Cheyenne county, owns and operates four hundred and eighty acres of land, all of which is splendidly improved with good buildings and all necessary equipment in the way of farm machinery, etc. The family occupy a substantial stone residence, and every appointment of the ranch bespeaks the most painstaking care and good management.

Mr. Carlson was born in Sweden, July 8, 1864. He was the eldest of a family of five children, all growing up in their native land, and each trained as children to do all kinds of hard work, as is the custom among the sturdy people of that country. The parents, C. J. and Ida (Holtgruen) Carlson, came to America with their family in 1882, and secured a quarter section of land in section 22, township 16, range 52, which since their death has been secured by our subject.

Emil Carlson came to America about 1882, sailing from Stockholm directly for New York. Locating at first in Colfax county, Nebraska, where he lived for about five years, he moved on to Cheyenne county in the spring of 1887, and filed on a homestead in section 10, township 16, range 52. There he built up a good home, going through all the pioneer experiences in getting started, and often had a hard time to make a living, but gradually was able to raise some crops and improve the place. About 1900 he purchased the quarter section owned by his father, and here cultivates one hundred and fifty acres, running about one hundred head of cattle and a bunch of horses. He is progressive in his methods of operating his estate, and has an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and energetic, industrious worker.

On October 10, 1903, Mr. Carlson was married to Christina Erickson, she having, in 1901, come to the United States from Sweden, where she was born. Sailing from Gottenburg to Hull, England, she proceeded to Glasgow, and landed in New York, October 9th, her birthday. Proceeding to Nebraska, she reached her destination just a month from the time she left home. Her mother joined her in 1904, the father having died in her infancy. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Carlson: Eda, Esther and Vera.

Mr. Carlson takes a commendable interest in local affairs, and he and his family are highly respected in the community in which they live; their home is one of good cheer and hospitality. Politically, he is an Independent voter. The family was reared in the Swedish Lutheran church

JOHN CARLSON, a brother of Emil's, is also one of the prominent residents of the county. He was born June 30, 1882. He is now a well-to-do ranchman, owning a fine one-hundred-and-sixty-acre tract of land southwest of his brother's. Here he devotes his time mostly to stock raising. He has about one hundred head of cattle and quite a number of horses, farming eighty acres, and has been most successful since locating in this vicinity. He was married at Sidney, Nebraska, in August, 1900, to Sarah Willis. Mrs. Carlson was born in Vermont, and came to Nebraska in 1888. Here they have a pleasant home, and are esteemed by all as substantial and worthy members of society. Mr. Carlson is a Republican.

ANDREW W. DANIELSON.

Andrew W. Danielson, prominently known as a business man and worthy citizen of Phelps county, Nebraska, is a resident of the town of Holdrege. He is a man of splendid business capacity, and has met with well merited success in every enterprise he has undertaken.

Mr. Danielson was born in Knox county, Illinois, in 1859, his parents having settled there in 1849. He came to Holdrege, Nebraska, in 1886, invested in farming lands, and is now proprietor of two sections in Phelps county, four hundred acres of which, located in Prairie township, is fine farming land, well improved, six hundred and forty acres in Cottonwood township, one-half interest in three hundred and twenty acres in Anderson township, eighty acres located in Sheridan township, besides three hundred and twenty acres in Prairie township owned by his father, Andrew Danielson, a wealthy farmer and stockman of Knox county, Illinois. Mr. Danielson runs all of these lands except the three hundred and twenty acres in Prairie township, on which he, together with a partner, are breeding horses, mules and hogs. On this farm they raise Percheron high-grade, general purpose horses for the market, and over three hundred hogs. They also have several cars of cattle which they market each winter. Mr. Danielson's experience with stock began on his father's farm when he was sixteen years of age, and before coming to Nebraska, he operated as fine a ranch as there was in all Iowa, also spent two years in Kansas on ranches there, and is of the opinion that western Nebraska is much better suited for farming, stock raising and feeding than either Illinois or Iowa, as the air is drier, the winters are not so damp, and the weather changes are less sudden and extreme, and the stock not being exposed to so much inclement weather hold to their feed more regularly than in those states. Also, the feed yards here are much drier and cleaner, and stock, like people, need this for perfect development. He is entirely satisfied with this part of the country, and would not return to Illinois or Iowa on any account, although he often visits both places. From the time of coming to this county until his removal to Holdrege two years ago, he raised from ten to twelve thousand bushels of corn on his farms, all of which he fed out, besides buying a great deal. He raises from two to three hundred hogs each year, and one year his crop reached four hundred. He also feeds over one hundred head of cattle every year, and altogether handles more stock than any other man in this locality. In 1903 he bought the Elk barn in Holdrege, and imported and sold horses, but sold this property two years ago. In 1894, when there had been a crop failure here, he went to Texas, and there looked the farming and stock conditions over thoroughly, and came back with his faith in western Nebraska stronger than ever, and since then has been constantly investing in land here. In 1902 he raised a crop of oats which ran one hundred and six bushels to the acre. His wheat crop yield the same year was forty-two and a half bushels, and corn eighty. He is convinced that this is one of the best hog countries in the world, and that any breed except the white hog does exceedingly well, considering that there is not enough shade here for those to do well. He recommends raising the best breeds of hogs, as, if crossed, on second cross they lose the good qualities of the strain. He also has the best results from white-faced cattle and Short-horns crossed, and of these he raises from seventy to eighty calves each year. Regarding feed, he says that the fourth cutting of alfalfa makes the best feed for hogs all winter, with best results, and this is a great alfalfa country. For seven years he has dealt in full-blooded Percheron and Clyde horses, and now owns some very fine animals.

Mr. Danielson was married in 1887, but has no children. Some time since he bought and improved a very fine residence property in Holdrege, where he at present resides. He is director of the Farmers' Elevator Company, and was elected secretary of the concern when it was organized. For some time he served as treasurer of Prairie township, and is prominent in all public affairs. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in Holdrege, in which he is an earnest worker, and takes a commendable interest in all commercial and social matters in his community. In political sentiment he is a Populist.

ELLSWORTH VAUGHN.

Ellsworth Vaughn, who is engaged in diversified farming on his valuable estate in section 27, township 25, range 48, is one of the old settlers of Box Butte county. He has witnessed the growth and development of that region, has been closely identified with the same, and is a well-known and highly esteemed resident of his locality. He enjoys a pleasant home, has a snug income from his farm as a result of many years of faithful labor in this state, and is one of the prosperous and successful men of the county.

Mr. Vaughn was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, in 1845. He is a son of John Vaughn, of French descent, his father having been born and raised in France. John Vaughn married Susanne Smice, a native of Pennsylvania, of German stock. When our subject was about a year old his parents emigrated to Iowa and were among the pioneers in Louisa county, where they lived up to the time of the Civil war, Ellsworth growing up on a farm, and received his education in the country schools. He enlisted in the Eighth Iowa Cavalry, entering the service in 1863, and went with his regiment through Tennessee and Georgia; was with the Army of the Cumberland. He was also with General Sherman in Macon, Georgia. At the close of the war he returned to Iowa, locating at Allamakee county, and made that locality his home up to 1886, farming a tract of one hundred and sixty acres, building up a good farm and doing exceedingly well while on the place. From there he came to Nebraska, settling in Box Butte county. His nearest railroad town from his location was Hay Springs, from which place he was compelled to haul all supplies. He came into this region by team, his first settlement being at old Nonpariel, now extinct, and he brought with him his personal effects, household goods, driving three horses and a colt, also two cows. He had one wagon carrying his family, consisting of his wife and seven children, and during the journey they were subjected to many exposures on account of the bad weather and the long, tedious trip. His first dwelling was a sod house, and during the first years he was obliged to do freighting through the country to help make a living for his family. He proved up on his homestead, improving the farm in good shape, and lived there up to 1903, then came to his present location, which is situated in section 27, township 25, range 48. He has developed a fine ranch, consisting of nine hundred and sixty acres, three hundred and twenty of which lie close to the town of Alliance. This is all fenced, and he farms about one hundred acres, all of the ranch being supplied with good substantial buildings and every improvement in the way of machinery, corrals, etc. He now lives on the ranch near Alliance, on which he raises cattle and horses, also does a little farming.

Mr. Vaughn has succeeded in accumulating a fine property since coming here, and is one of the leading citizens and influential men of his community, always taking a commendable interest in local affairs. In political views our subject is a Republican.

In 1870 Mr. Vaughn was married to Mary Jane Langford, daughter of James Langford, a farmer and old settler in Allamakee county, Iowa. They have an interesting family of seven children, named as follows: Elmer, Ellsworth, Jr., Frank, Alice and Alfred (twins), Minnie J. and Almeda.

ANDREW C. IVERSEN.

Andrew C. Iversen, who owns and operates an extensive farm in Dawes county, is one of the substantial men of his community. He is a pioneer of this region, and has been a resident of the state of Nebraska for over twenty years, devoting his entire time and attention to farming and stock raising, of which he has made a great success.

Mr. Iversen was born in Denmark in 1848 on a farm. His parents were day laborers there and very poor, and he grew up as best he could, working out from the time he was a small child, and when he reached the age of twenty-two left his native land and came to America. During the first ten years here he traveled through different states, working at anything he might find to do, spending some time in Texas; also was all through Washington, Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, and up and down the Mississippi river. About the year 1874 his health began to fail and he then went to Colorado, where he worked in the mountains as a miner, and prospected there for several years. He bought a farm in that state a few years later and remained there until 1887, when he came to Dawes county, Nebraska, and settled on his present farm in section 30, township 29, range 48. This is close to the Niobrara river, the stream running through a portion of his farm. Here he put up one of the largest sod houses in the neighborhood, had fine horses, wagons and farming machinery, and quickly added many improvements to his place. As the poor years came on he lost a great deal of money, and as his health was not very good he was unable to work very hard. Hail destroyed two crops and the drouths damaged many, so that he was compelled to borrow money, for which he paid two per cent. interest per month, and he mortgaged his farm and personal property to buy calves; also bought a number of cows from which he sold butter for six cents a pound. He had quite a lot of chickens, and sold the eggs for six and seven cents a dozen, hauling this produce thirty-five miles to market, camping out nights under his wagon along the road, and managed in every way to get along, so that he would not be compelled to leave his homestead. After a time the years grew better and he was able to raise good crops, paid off his debts and bought more land, gradually working into the cattle business, and has made a great success of this line of work. His ranch now consists of eleven quarter sections of deeded land, and he also operates a section of school land. The family own homestead land amounting to twelve hundred and eighty acres altogether, and their ranch is one of the best improved in that part of Nebraska.

Mr. Iversen has a fine barn fifty by thirty feet, erected in 1906, and a beautiful thirteen-room house, all kinds of good sheds for his stock, one cattle shed being one hundred and fifty feet long, dipping tanks with every necessary improvement, his buildings altogether being worth over ten thousand dollars. He has one windmill which is used exclusively for irrigating purposes, covering a space of five hundred acres, and he has one of the finest gardens in his locality, all the land irrigated. He figures that his ranch is worth over thirty thousand dollars, and he is now clear of all debts, all of which he has accumulated in the last ten years.

Mr. Iversen was married in 1881 to Christine Simonsen, who is a native of Denmark, where her parents were potato dealers. She came to America in 1880, locating in Iowa, where Mr. Iversen met and married her. Eight children were born to them, named as follows: Simon, Mamie, Mina, Andrew, Jr., Minnie, Christine, Sarah and Regina. At the age of eighteen each child is given a cow and calf, and when twenty-one they are presented with ten head of heifers, which makes a good start toward a fortune, and by owning an interest in the stock they are induced to take a greater interest in the ranch and are contented to remain at home and assist their parents in the work of operating it. Each child has his or her own special work to do, their share of the stock to look after on the ranch, and all are happy and contented in having something to take up their time and attention, and are one of the happiest families one meets in many a day.

Mr. Iversen is an earnest believer in the Christian Science religion.

GEORGE A. CLIFT.

George A. Clift, residing on section 32, township 30, range 20, is known all through that locality as an industrious and enterprising farmer. He is an old settler in the western part of Nebraska, and as such has done his full share in the upbuilding of the region in which he chose his home. Mr. Clift is a native of Wayne county, Pennsylvania, born on his father's farm March 13, 1848. The father, Richard Clift, came to this country from England when a young man, and his mother, whose maiden name was Emma Alvord, was also of English descent. Their family of eight children, of whom our subject was the fourth member, was reared in Pennsylvania, attending the country schools and assisting their parents in carrying on the farm work. At the age of twenty George began life for himself, farming in his native state until he came west. In 1879 he came to Table Rock, Nebraska, and settled in Pawnee county; from 1888 to 1893 he was engaged in the bridge and building departments of the Burlington & Missouri River Railroad, with Table Rock as headquarters. In 1895 he moved to Brown county and bought his present farm, which at that time had no improvements but a shanty. Since taking the place he has erected good buildings and made many improvements on it. There are three hundred and twenty acres in the farm, one hundred and twenty of which are cultivated, and all of Mr. Clift's time is given to the cultivation of his farm, which well repays him for his care by yielding bountiful crops. Mr. Clift was married in Pennsylvania in 1872 to Miss Dora Bigeloff, who died in 1881, leaving a family of three children, namely: Charles, Grace and Fred. In 1884 Mr. Clift was married again, Miss Lillie A.

Jones becoming his helpmeet. He is a Republican in his political views.

JOHN HENRY APOLIUS.

A prominent place among the influential stockmen of Keith county, Nebraska, is readily accorded to the gentleman whose name heads this review. He has been eminently successful and is widely and favorably known in this section of the state.

John Henry Apolius is a native of Prussia, Germany, his birth occurring in the village of Pottolier, near Galantz, Province of Bromberg, October 31, 1863. His father, Fred Apolius, who died in 1872, was a farmer and laborer. The mother, whose maiden name was Minnie Berger, married Peter Wies and came to America, settling in Keith county, where the mother died in July, 1888.

In 1882 our subject came to America, sailing from Bremen Haven on the Ohio, landing in New York the first of May, after a voyage of eleven days. Mr. Apolius came west to Muscatine, Iowa, where a sister resided and made his home here for three years, working on the railroad near Nicholas Station during the winter and performing farm labor during the summer months. Thence he went to Seward county, Nebraska, and lived there till the spring of 1892, engaged in farming.

John Henry Apolius was married October 11, 1887, to Amelia Milka, whose parents were pioneers of Minnesota. This union has been blessed with eight children—Lena, Augusta and Emma, born in Seward county, and Marty, Emily, John, Theodore and Christine, born in Keith county.

Mr. Apolius came to Keith county in 1893, living for the first two years on his mother's farm, after which time he took a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, his present place, and moved onto it. He has since secured a Kincaid claim of three hundred and twenty acres. His first crop was a failure, and as he had but little to start on, he was obliged to work out at anything that he could find to do, laboring from time to time on the railroad some five or six years. He located his farm in the valley because it was a region where well water could be easily obtained, and also for the reason that more rain fell there than back on the higher lands. He commenced horse and cattle raising, and although other cattle men tried to drive him out so they could have the use of his land, he clung to his farm and worked to make it a success.

He has now a splendid ranch of twelve hundred acres, with about three hundred and sixty acres under cultivation, the balance being pasture, alfalfa and hay land. On the ranch are ten miles of fence, three wells, two windmills, a fine house and barn and a large dipping tank for cattle; there are thirty acres of hog pasture especially set apart for the raising of hogs. There is a fine grove of forest trees on the place besides fifty fruit trees and an abundance of small fruits and berries that do well in this climate.

When one sees this splendid farm it is hard to realize that Mr. Apolius had to borrow money with which to pay his car fare to this western country. He lived at first in a sod house and kept his stock in a sod stable. He experienced many losses, among which was the destruction of his barn and windmill by a cyclone August 19, 1907, entailing a heavy loss. But in spite of all discouragements Mr. Apolius has developed his ranch and established a fine home and a prosperous business.

Our subject is a staunch Republican in politics, showing an active interest in all matters of a public nature. He is widely known and respected as one of the strong financial factors in the growth and material development of the county. With his family he is a member of the English Lutheran church at Baxter and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

MARTIN D. ZINKON.

Martin D. Zinkon, one of the oldest settlers of western Nebraska, has passed through many interesting experiences since locating in this region, and the story of his life history is interwoven with the progress of this state as it has been developing into the resourceful and fertile country it has now become. He has for many years been a resident of this state, where he is known far and wide as one of the leading citizens, and has met with pronounced success in his farming operations and other business enterprises.

Mr. Zinkon was born in Coshocton, Ohio, in 1857. His father was John Zinkon, a native of Germany, who came to America in his young manhood and settled in Holmes county, Ohio, where he met and married Mary Hoover, a native of Pennsylvania, who came to Ohio when quite young. John Zinkon died in 1862, survived by his wife and a family of six children, of whom our subject was the fifth member. They were named as follows: Louisa, George, William, Anna, Martin and John. Mr. Zinkon lived in Coshocton county, Ohio, for twenty-three years, and in 1880 came west, locating in Otoe county, Nebraska, where he worked on a large farm for some time, and next moved to Custer county and pre-empted a tract of government land, remaining there up to 1889. At that time he sold out his holdings and went to Missouri. He only remained there for about two years, then returned to Nebraska, settling in Cass county and started a farm, operating it for one year, when he moved to Lancaster county, Nebraska, and farmed there for two years. His next move was to Kansas, where he spent four years, then drifted back to the state of Nebraska, and since that time has lived here constantly. He has succeeded in building up a good home and productive ranch, consisting of six hundred and forty acres, which is located in Garfield county, his land being situated in section 35, township 23, range 13. He devotes a large portion of his ranch to the culture of hay and for grazing purposes, raising quite a number of cattle and hogs, but also does farming on a very large scale, raising corn, potatoes, vegetables, etc.

Mr. Zinkon was married in 1884 to Miss Rebecca Burdick, born in Illinois and raised in Nemaha county, Nebraska. She is a daughter of J. P. and Deborah (Gray) Burdick. Mr. and Mrs. Zinkon are the parents of six children, namely: John P., Iva E., Voris I., Sylva M. D., Emma May and Edna Cora. Mr. Zinkon is a Republican in political views.

ISAIAH STETSON.

Isaiah Stetson, whose pleasant and attractive residence is located in section 2, township 30, range 51, Dawes county, was born in Manitowoc county, Wisconsin, in 1860. His father, Isaiah S. Stetson, a prominent miller and farmer, was born in Massachusetts, and in 1899 died in Dawes county, Nebraska. His mother, Aurelia Stetson, was a native of Norway.

Our subject's earlier days were spent in Wisconsin, where he received his education, attending the county schools. Until the age of twenty he lived with his parents, assisting his father in farming, gaining the experience which has made him one of the successful farmers of Dawes county. He spent several years of his early life running a sawmill. In 1886 his father came to Dawes county, and the same year our subject followed, the balance of the family, excepting one brother, following later. Mr. Stetson and his father proved up on government land and erected a log cabin.

The same year our subject settled on the homestead which is his present home, and has continued to build up and improve his farm until at the present time he has eleven hundred acres of good land, one hundred and fifty acres of which are cultivated. He has equipped his place with many modern improvements. There are several good springs, running water, a windmill and plenty of fine timber and fuel. Mr. Stetson has been engaged in the threshing business for the past twenty-one years, and has threshed in all parts of the county. This business has enabled him to become extensively acquainted throughout the county, where by his honesty and fair dealings he has built up a reputation worthy of note. The period of drouths were witnessed by our subject, and during the hardships of these times it was barely possible for him to make a living.

In 1889 Mr. Stetson was married to Miss Carrie Gould, daughter of John and Jennie Gould, prominent old settlers of Dawes county. Seven children blessed this union, viz.: Jennie, Vernie, Ethel, Ershall, Alma, Vernon, and an infant girl, Geneva.

Mr. Stetson is an independent voter. He is a prominent factor in local affairs, having held the office of school director for nine years. From the time of his entry into Dawes county he has always been a faithful worker in the interest of the development of the schools. He is now the secretary and treasurer of the Independent Telephone Company, a rural line.

A good ranch, a family of growing children that would honor any parentage, and a standing in the community as a thoroughly honorable and upright citizen, Mr. Stetson may well be satisfied with the result of his busy years.

OSCAR E. ANDERSON.

Oscar E. Anderson, whose name will be readily recalled by all familiar with the farming population of Potter precinct as one of the prominent and successful agriculturists and ranchmen of that section of Cheyenne county, is a resident of Potter, and owner of a fine estate adjoining the town, as well as a large and extensively improved ranch, four miles north of the village, which is the subject of one of our finest illustrations.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden on the 30th day of January, 1859, and grew to manhood there, coming at the age of twenty to the United States. His father, John Anderson, died in the land of his birth June 22, 1908.

The mother, Anna L. Abrahamson in maidenhood, is still living in her native land.

Oscar Anderson crossed England and sailed July 29, 1879, from Gottenberg to Hull, and embarked in the Britanica at Liverpool for New York, reaching his destination after a voyage of eight days. After a short visit with several brothers at Logansport, Indiana, he went to Henry county, Illinois, and spent about five years in that locality at farm labor, working one winter in the city of Rock Island. He then came to Nebraska, settling in Cheyenne county, and about the 16th of March, 1885, filed on a homestead in section 18, township 15, range 52. He spent many years on that ranch and built up a fine property, now being proprietor of fourteen hundred and forty acres, consisting of twelve hundred and eighty acres in ranch land on the tableland, on which he has erected the most substantial buildings of any ranch in the region, most of them being constructed of stone. His groves are the largest and most thrifty to be seen for miles around. He runs one hundred and thirty head of cattle and about one hundred horses, cultivating a quarter section of the fertile land. He also owns one hundred and sixty acres adjoining the village of Potter. The dwelling, built in 1884, is the oldest in the village, having been erected immediately after the section house. This dwelling, however, was remodeled and additions built in 1908, making it a most desirable and comfortable residence. The barns and other buildings are also of substantial construction.

Mr. Anderson is an old-timer in this region, one of the earliest settlers in this section of the country. When he arrived here he had practically no capital, and from this humble beginning has become one of the well-to-do men of his locality. He is active in all affairs pertaining to his state and county, and has been a leading and influential citizen since first locating here. In political sentiment he is a loyal Republican, and has held numerous public offices. With his family he is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church. He is also a member of the Potter camp, Modern Woodmen of America.

In July, 1885, our subject was united in marriage at Holdrege, Nebraska, to Miss Elizabeth Frantz, a daughter of Gustave and Marie L. (Norman) Frantz, who was born in Sweden December 31, 1862. The family came to America in 1880, settling at Geneseo, Henry county, Illinois, where the parents still reside. Eight children form Mr. Anderson's family: Frances E., wife of Joseph J. Johnson, who is the manager of the home ranch, "Prairie Grove Stock Farm," mentioned above; Edgar E., also a ranchman; Emma E., Anna M., Ella Freda, Ernest M., Henry W. and Edna Hilma, living at home.

Mr. Anderson is a broad and liberal-minded man, one of the excellent class of citizens contributed by Scandinavia to the American re-

CLARENCE G. LAWRENCE.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal review is one of the well liked, industrious and intelligent members of the farming and ranching community of Chambers precinct, Cheyenne county. He is a progressive, energetic agriculturist, and for so young a man has met with decided success in the career which he chose. His ranch is fitted with good buildings and many improvements, part of them constructed of stone, together with other substantial improvements.

Clarence G. Lawrence, a son of Frank P. and Mary (Miller) Lawrence, was born near Racine, Wisconsin, June 14, 1876. His parents moved to Utica, Nebraska, about 1884, then for a time resided at Lincoln. Clarence and a brother came to Cheyenne county in June, 1892, where they began ranching, eventually securing two sections of land. This they sold in 1906, and Clarence having filed on a Kincaid homestead of six hundred and forty acres, comprising section 28, township 13, range 52, in 1904, engaged extensively in cattle raising, also running a small drove of horses.

He now owns a whole section, which is well improved, about eighty acres in a good state of cultivation, with a fine garden under irrigation. The ranch has a splendid supply of good water, having one spring of living water which runs the year around.

Mr. Lawrence is a fine young man, an earnest worker and of most upright principles, enjoying the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has to do. He is a conscientious member of the Methodist church. He is an independent in politics, takes a commendable interest in all local county and state affairs and is regarded as one of the leading citizens of his locality.

WALTER F. PLUM.

Walter F. Plum, who operates a well improved farm situated in section 3, township 31, range 25, is numbered among the prominent younger ranchmen and farmers of Cherry county, Nebraska.

Mr. Plum is a native of Iowa City, Iowa, born May 10, 1868. He is a son of Martin Plum, now retired and living at Lincoln, Nebraska. The mother before marriage was Miss Elizabeth Morgan. There are eleven children in the family, of whom our subject is the sixth in order of birth. He was reared at Shelley, Iowa, and all of his life excepting ten years has been spent in farming. He assisted his father in carrying on the latter's farm up to the time he was nineteen years of age, when he began teaching, which he followed six years, having fitted himself for the profession in the local schools. He later learned the plumber's trade, which he followed at Shelley some six or seven years and then for four years in Ponca City, Oklahoma, also engaging in the real estate business two and a half years at Anadarko.

At the opening of the Rosebud reservation he visited that section of the country, but was not favorably impressed with the country and did not take up any land. He filed on his present homestead under the Kincaid law in September, 1904, and at once went to work at building up the place, and now has it improved with fences and good buildings erected by his own hands. This farm consists of six hundred and forty acres, on which he runs about fifty head of stock all the time, cultivating some sixty acres. He is well satisfied with the locality, being within three and a half miles of the town of Wood Lake.

Mr. Plum was married May 15, 1900, to Miss Gertrude Dower, a native of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, a daughter of Charles and Bessie (Smith) Dower, who have been residing in Ponca City, Oklahoma, since 1899.

In political faith Mr. Plum is a Republican.

P. MAGINNIS.

The gentleman above named is another sturdy son of "old Ireland" who has come to America to seek a fortune and build up a home, and how well he has succeeded is evidenced by the fine property of which he is the owner in Kimball, where he is engaged in the manufacturing business, and he also owns considerable farm land in Kimball county. Mr. Maginnis is a leading citizen in commercial and political circles of his community, having held the office of county treasurer from 1902 to 1905, inclusive, and prior to that time was sheriff of his county for four years.

Mr. Maginnis was born in Ireland, January 6, 1867, and his entire family except two brothers, who live in Massachusetts, never left their native land, his father dying there in 1904, while his mother still makes their native county her home. When our subject was a boy of thirteen years he left his home and came to America, locating in Brown county, Illinois, September 2, 1880, and after spending about two years in that vicinity went to Hamilton county, Nebraska. About two years were spent in Aurora, and from there he drifted into the Sweetwater country, in Wyoming, finally coming to Kimball county in 1885, arriving here July 22. During his residence in the United States he had learned the blacksmith's trade, and on locating here opened up a shop in Kimball, which he has run ever since, and now has one of the best equipped blacksmith and machine shops in the west. He carries on a large business in the manufacture of extensible irrigation flumes and water troughs, building up a large trade throughout the western states, and which has made him a nice income.

Mr. Maginnis was married at Kimball in December, 1888, to Maggie A. Marshall. Mrs. Maginnis was born in Indiana and came to Nebraska with her mother, who is now a widow and still resides in Kimball, about 1874. They have a family of nine children, eight of whom are living, named as follows: Arthur F., Alice Isabelle, Robert J., Edward Dewey, Hugh Marshall, Lizzie, Margaret and William P., all living at home. One son, Charles P., died in 1899.

Mr. Maginnis is a Democrat and is an important factor in local affairs. He has been a member of the village council, also has served on the school board at different times.

JOHN W. TIDD.

In the person of the gentleman above mentioned we present the reader with a representative Nebraskan, one who was born and raised in that state, and who has seen all the changes that have taken place in the country from the earliest days of its settlement. He has taken an active part in its development since growing to manhood, and passed through the pioneer days in eastern Nebraska, and later in the western part of the state, and has done his full share in bringing about the present prosperity enjoyed by the residents of Sioux county where he is owner of a valuable estate.

John W. Tidd was born in Dakota county, Nebraska, in 1863, and reared on a farm. His father, Charles Tidd, settled in eastern Nebraska when there were but two white settlers in the neighborhood.

Our subject lived at home until he was fifteen years of age, assisting his parents in the farm work, then went to the western part of the state. His mother died when he was a lad of eight years, and this broke up their home and he was obliged to strike out for himself at a tender age. In 1878 he landed in Cheyenne, Wyoming, and secured employment as a cowboy, and also spent some time in the Big Horn basin on different ranches, living in that part of the country up to 1887. While there he spent the entire summer on the plains, and did not know what it was to sleep in a house for months at a time. Mr. Tidd came to Sioux county in 1887, where his father had located some time before, and he at once filed on a homestead and started to develop a ranch. His place was situated near Pine Ridge. There he went through hard times for a number of years in getting started, but managed to build up a good home and lived on the homestead for about thirteen years, then came to his present ranch. He purchased a tract of land and later took a homestead adjoining, now being owner of twelve hundred and eighty acres situated on Indian creek, eighteen miles west of Ardmore. His ranch is splendidly improved, and he engages exclusively in stock raising. There is plenty of timber and pasture, also a fine supply of running spring water for all his needs.

In 1893 Mr. Tidd was united in marriage to Miss Martha Hixson, daughter of John Hixson, a well known pioneer of Sioux county, where Mrs. Tidd grew up. They have a family of three children, namely: Joseph W., James E. and Myrtle V., and they enjoy a pleasant home and all the comforts of ranch life.

Mr. Tidd is a leading citizen of his community and is influential in public affairs. He has served for a number of years as deputy sheriff, also was assessor for one term, and stands firmly for the principles which he advocates.

CHARLES S. HUDDLE.

This gentleman is prominently known as one of the leading old settlers of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, where he has done his share in the upbuilding of this region. He lives on section 4, township 32, range 22, Garfield precinct, where he has spent the past twenty-five years.

Mr. Huddle was born in Ross county, Ohio, September 24, 1856, and brought up on a farm. His father, Socrates Huddle, was of Holland descent, while his mother, Hope Jones, was of Welsh blood. They had a family of five children, Charles S. being the eldest. The family moved to Sangamon county, Illinois, in 1860, where the mother died seven years later. Charles returned to Ohio, residing with his grandparents until fifteen years of age, when he came to Burlington Junction, Missouri, where he worked during the winter, spending his summers at farm labor. When eighteen years of age he began farming on rented land near Burlington Junction and was so occupied for nine years. In 1883 Mr. Huddle came to Keya Paha county, arriving here April 6, and settled on his present homestead, where he put up buildings and rapidly improved his farm. At one time he was three thousand dollars in debt, but is now clear of all encumbrances and owns four hundred and sixty-five acres of land, part adapted to farming, the balance being in hay and pasture. He keeps from thirty to seventy-five head of cattle, and raises two hundred hogs some years. He has accumulated this fine property from a start of one team and two cows, his sole capital when he arrived here. His farm is all fenced, and he has a fine orchard and everything to make a model country place. Mr. Huddle is a man of industrious habits and energy, and has always been a very hard worker. He has built six miles of wire fence on his farm, two miles of which are hog-proof.

Mr. Huddle was married December 23, 1880, to Miss Flora McCrea, daughter of Duncan McCrea, an old settler, who lived in Nebraska for some years. Mr. and Mrs. Huddle are the parents of five children, namely: Floyd E., killed in a railroad accident in Alaska in December, 1905; Claude S.; Eva, who died February 1, 1908; Martha A. and Forest C.

Mr. Huddle takes an active part in politics, serving as a delegate to conventions and working for the best interests of the people. He is a Republican, and cast his first vote for J. A. Garfield. He is a member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Ainsworth and of the Modern Woodmen of America at Springfield.

PATRICK J. DALTON.

Patrick J. Dalton, well known all through Cheyenne county, Nebraska, as one of the very old timers in western Nebraska, who came to that region when the whole country was practically a barren plain, has traveled over every part of it as a cowboy in the early days, and has watched its development into the present fertile state and taken an active and leading part in this transformation. He now resides on section 10, township 15, range 51, Brownson precinct, and is the proprietor of a fine estate. Moreover, he is highly esteemed by all who know him.

Mr. Dalton was born near Carrick Suir, in the county of Kilkenny, Ireland, May 27, 1866. He grew to manhood there, following the usual life of persons in his class in that country, farming most of the time as a boy. He emigrated to America when he was but fifteen years of age. His parents, Patrick J. and Mary (Quinn) Dalton, spent their entire lives in their native land, the mother still living there. Sailing from Queenstown in the City of Chester, after a voyage of fifteen days our subject landed in New York May 1, 1881. He settled in Sac county, Iowa, where he spent six years, and in the spring of 1887 came to Nebraska, filing on a homestead and commencing at once to develop a farm. He went through the usual experiences of the pioneer in the west, working at everything that he could find to do in order to make a living and improve his place, and succeeded in proving up on his claim. He put up good buildings, planted trees and as he became better able, added to the original farm, until he now owns eight hundred acres, most of which is used for ranching purposes, with about one hundred acres cultivated. He runs one hundred and twenty-five cattle and a small bunch of horses. During the first seven years of his residence in this part of the state Mr. Dalton was employed on the old Pomeroy Ranch, where he became familiar with every phase of ranch life, roughing it for many months in the year.

On October 9, 1902, Mr. Dalton married Miss Susan Ward in Denver. She is a daughter of Hugh Ward, whose wife was a Miss Keenan; both were natives of Ireland. Mrs. Dalton was born and reared in Chicago. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dalton, Mary (deceased) and Margaret Susan.

Mr. Dalton is Republican in politics, and a member of the Catholic church.

JOHN H. BOWLBY.

John H. Bowlby is universally acknowledged as one of the successful and enterprising farmers of Loup county, and is greatly respected in the community where he resides.

Mr. Bowlby was born on a farm in Indiana in 1867, his parents being William and Mary (Burnhammer) Bowlby, farmers and influential pioneers of Polk county, Nebraska.

The father was born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and the mother was born in Ohio.

When our subject was five years of age the family came west to Polk county, settling on government land, where he was reared to manhood. He then started out for himself engaging in agricultural pursuits in Polk county up to 1901. He experienced the hardships of pioneer life and passed through the hard times occasioned by years of drouth and the grasshopper raids. He had but little to start on and he had to master his own difficulties and hew his own way to success. Possessed of a strong will and good staying qualities of character, he could not help but succeed, and he has laid the foundation for permanent and increasing prosperity. In the spring of 1904 Mr. Bowlby brought his family to Loup county and settled on a homestead on section 25, township 22, range 18. His first buildings were made of sods and his land was raw prairie. Now he has three hundred and twenty acres of good land with ninety acres under cultivation, has good buildings and other improvements and a fine fruit orchard containing one hundred apple trees. He has built up a good home and is considered one of the well-to-do farmers of the day. Since locating in the county he has established himself among the people as a successful business man and conscientious citizen.

The marriage of John H. Bowlby to Miss Levada Hedge occurred in 1888, and the wife was a daughter of Crawford and Mary (Putman) Hedge, of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Bowlby have one daughter, Ella, born in Polk county, Nebraska.

C. N. OGDEN, DECEASED.

C. N. Ogden, who accomplished much as a farmer of Harlan county, resided in this locality since 1902, and became well known as a gentleman of progressive spirit and energetic habits. He developed a fine farm and was one of the influential citizens of his community, held in the highest esteem by his fellowmen.

Mr. Ogden was a native of Menard county, Illinois, where he was raised until he was about ten years old. He farmed in Iowa for about ten years, and about 1868 came to Nebraska, settling in Johnson county, and carried on mixed farming and the raising of stock and grain since locating here. In 1902 he settled in Washington township, Harlan county, purchasing a farm of two sections during this time. Some of this land was bought for ten dollars per acre, and is now worth fifty dollars, showing a splendid increase in this short time. Mr. Ogden added many improvements to his place and had everything in first-class shape and it is one of the show places of the county. Besides this farm he owned other land here. From his experience in this state and Iowa he much preferred Nebraska to the latter, as here one man and four horses can attend to one hundred acres where they could only take care of forty acres properly, and at the same time can raise as much grain to the acre. He was very successful in his farming operations in Iowa, but did much better here, and there the land cost double what it does here, and during a drive among the farms in his neighborhood one sees everywhere the prosperity of the people. He was engaged in the general real estate business for many years and had brought in many settlers from Mills and Pottawatomie counties, Iowa, and since locating here all have succeeded far beyond what they would have in Iowa. There they sold land at one hundred dollars and one hundred and twenty-five dollars per acre, and came here and purchased farms for ten dollars up to forty dollars per acre, and as they were good farmers have made lots of money, and the farm residences, barns and roads, all show prosperity and good farming. All of Mr. Ogden's work in this line was done personally by him, as he never advertised in any way, and every man he brought here was more than pleased with the success which came to him. There are good schools all through this country and every advantage and opportunity to advance the settlers who come. Mr. Ogden was interested in the local telephone company, and was foremost in installing telephone service through Washington township, and he also secured the mail route on a first petition where others had tried and failed. He was a stockholder and director in the Home Telephone Company, and was active in the work of getting good roads put all through this part of the county.

Two sons of our subject, W. B. and David S. Ogden, are successful farmers, and own land with their father; also a son-in-law, Arby Mizell, owns a farm near Mr. Ogden. Mr. Mizell's parents came from Kansas, and bought four hundred acres of land in Reuben township, and are well known residents of that locality. Another son of our subject, Charles H., is now married and follows farming.

Mr. Ogden was an active Democrat. In 1901 in his home county in Iowa he was a candidate for sheriff, and succeeded in reducing the Republican majority from eight hundred to one hundred and sixty at the time he made the run. He was also an Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias and member of the Modern Brotherhood of America.

Mr. Ogden died here on his farm December 20, 1907, mourned by a large number of friends all over the county. He was a public-spirited citizen and is greatly missed in local affairs.

WILLIAM F. KRUGER.

William Kruger, whose fine farm consisting of eleven hundred and twenty acres in and adjoining section 32, township 14, range 48, Colton precinct, Cheyenne county, one of the valuable estates in this locality, has been a resident of the county since 1884. Here he has developed a good ranch and enjoys the comforts of rural life and the respect and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Kruger is a native of Racine county, Wisconsin, born February 25, 1861. His father, William, was born in Germany and came to America when a young man, settling in Wisconsin, and in 1879 removed to Nebraska, where he remained up to 1900, then returned to Wisconsin, where he shortly afterward died. The mother, Caroline (Brandt) Kruger, was also born in Germany, her death occurring at Sidney, Nebraska, about 1898. After locating in Cheyenne county, Mr. Kruger went through many bitter experiences in establishing his home and starting his farm, suffering financially from the failures of crops due to the drouth seasons and panicky times of the nineties, but persevered, and in spite of all difficulties succeeded in building up a good home and accumulating considerable property. Six years were spent in Sidney, where he worked at the carpenter's trade as well as being engaged at market gardening and running a nursery. His homestead, on which he filed in 1882, is situated on section 32, township 14, range 48, and here he has made his home for a number of years. Our subject's home farm is beautifully located on Lodgepole creek, all well improved with good substantial buildings. He devotes part of it to grain raising, and runs quite a large herd of stock. A view of the house is printed on another page of our work.

Mr. Kruger was married August 25, 1888, to Miss Anna Luck, born in Germany. Together they enjoyed a pleasant home, and were blessed with two children, Edna and Herman. The mother died in 1899. Mr. Kruger was married the second time in May, 1900, to Maggie Kurth, a daughter of Fred M. Kurth, mentioned on another page of our work. Three children were born to this union, named as follows: Charles, Pearl and Ida.

Politically Mr. Kruger is a Republican, and stands firmly for his principles. He is a member of the Sidney Camp, Modern Woodmen of America.

FRED E. PEASE.

Fred E. Pease, one of the wealthy ranchmen of Keith county, Nebraska, is an old settler in that region. He has developed a fine property, and in building up a fine estate for himself has incidentally aided materially in the development of the commercial and agricultural interests of that section and enjoys an enviable reputation as a citizen.

Mr. Pease was born in the town of Ripon, Wisconsin, May 16, 1863. His father, Edmund Pease, was a wagonmaker by trade and for years owned a wagon shop in Charles City, Iowa. He was of Yankee birth, a native of New York, and married Katherine Webster, also born in New York state. Mr. Pease came to Wisconsin about 1860, married at Ripon and moved on to Iowa about 1865, locating in Floyd county, at Charles City, ahead of the railroads. They were among the pioneers, and here our subject grew to manhood, receiving a good education at the schools in Charles City. He lived at home until he was about twenty-three years of age and in 1886 came west to Lincoln county, Nebraska, remaining for about a year. He then went into Keith county, engaging in the livery business, establishing his first barn in Paxton, which he run up to 1891. At that time he bought a farm seven miles southeast of Paxton, and operated that place for about a year and a half, then moved to his present location, about half a mile east of Paxton. He at once began ranching, for a time having practically free open range for his cattle as the hard times of the previous few years had driven nearly all of the settlers out of the locality. He began raising high-grade Short-horn cattle and draught horses. His ranch contains three thousand acres of deeded and leased land, with good improvements, fences, buildings and fine groves. He has five hundred acres of hay land all under fence, and raises an immense crop of hay each year. He has planted a fine orchard, raising apples, plums, cherries and other small fruits, his place being one of the best equipped farms and ranches in the county. A view of the home with its substantial surroundings is presented for your inspection on another page.

Mr. Pease was married April 10, 1890, to Miss Mary Greenough, born in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. She was a daughter of Captain James Greenough, a commander of river steamboats, and grew up in that city, coming west in 1880. Mr. and Mrs. Pease have three children, namely: Edmund, Grace and Arthur.

Mr. Pease has always been prominent in local affairs. He was county commissioner from 1897 to 1900, and in 1903 was elected county assessor, having held the office of precinct assessor previous to that time. Politically he is a Republican, and fraternally a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Paxton.

NICK GEHRT.

Nick Gehrt, who resides in section 19, township 31, range 44, of Sheridan county, Nebraska, is one of the prominent citizens of this locality, and a man who has done his full share in the upbuilding of the community in which he chose his home.

Mr. Gehrt was born in Germany in 1862, and came to America with his parents when but ten years of age. The family, consisting of five children of whom our subject is the youngest, located in Grand Island, Nebraska, where the mother is still living, his father having died several years since. At the age of seventeen he began working out by the month on different farms near his home, and in 1884 came to this locality and took the homestead on which he is now living. He at once engaged in farming and erected a set of sod buildings, constantly raising and buying stock in addition to working his farm land. At the beginning of the dry years he was quite extensively engaged in farming, and this was quite a setback to him, as he lost several crops which made hard times for him. However, he still stuck to farming, as he knew better times were coming, and after experiencing much hardship and privation, conditions changed for the better and he was able to raise good crops and added to his property until he now has fourteen hundred and forty acres of good land all fenced and well improved with a complete set of substantial farm buildings which cost him over two thousand dollars. He has three hundred acres of his land in a high state of cultivation, and keeps about one hundred and twenty-five head of stock. All the work of the farm is done by himself and son, and they have one of the best paying estates in the locality.

Mr. Gehrt was married in 1890 to Miss Carrie Zeigler, born in Illinois, where her parents still live. They have one son, Albert, born in 1891, who is of great assistance to his father in operating his farm. Mr. Gehrt and his family never left their home during the Indian scare in 1891, and although they were threatened many times and in danger of being killed or their home burned over their heads, they escaped without having suffered any injury to themselves or loss of property.

In political sentiment Mr. Gehrt is a Republican, but never votes a straight ticket. He has never held any office, as he says he has not the time to devote to politics which a man must have if he seeks political favor.

HENRY GEISE.

Among the successful and prosperous citizens of Maxwell, Nebraska, and a man who has through industry and perseverance gained a comfortable competence, the subject of this review deserves a prominent place.

Mr. Geise is a native of Westphalia, Germany, where he was raised and received a good education. His parents were typical old country people, and he was brought up to know what it was to work and take care of himself at an early age, and when he reached the age of eighteen he struck out for himself, coming to America in 1886, and here he found a large field for his labors, and many fine opportunities, which he was quick to take advantage of. He settled in Lincoln county, Nebraska, in 1888, taking up land in the hills, where he tried ordinary farming, but conditions were not favorable, and after spending much hard labor and meeting with many failures he became discouraged and quit farming for a time, going to work by the month and continuing at this for several years, saving his earnings, and imbued with the spirit of German thrift and perseverance determined to get a start and seven years ago he again took up farming in the hills, this time starting in the dairy business, using his farm of one hundred and sixty acres for this purpose. He first started in with twenty-nine cows and during the past five years has increased his herd to one hundred and seventy-five head, of which forty-two are milch cows. He has been very successful in this line of work, and has purchased and paid for two sections of railway land, also two and a quarter sections of other land. He takes all his cream to Maxwell Station, and now receives each month one hundred and fifty dollars during summers from the creamery at Beatrice, Nebraska. His herd is composed mostly of Shorthorn cattle, which he finds to be about the best grade for the production of cream and butter. He has a fine patch of alfalfa on his farm, and considers this one of the best grasses to be used for feeding cattle. Mr. Geise was married in 1888 to Miss Laura Miller, a daughter of C. A. Miller, of Lexington, Nebraska. They have six children, as follows: Joe, aged nineteen years; John, seventeen; Arthur, fifteen; Minnie, thirteen; Oshia, eleven; and Charlie, eight.

Mr. Geise is a man much above the ordinary in intelligence, possessing a fine education. He is a hustler, a man of fine appearance and great strength, and his present success is due alone to his energy and industrious habits.

THOMAS KATEN.

Thomas Katen, a prosperous and much respected farmer of section 18, township 29, range 48, Dawes county, Nebraska, much deserves the abundant success that has come to him as a reward of industry, economy and thrift. He is an old settler in this region, and has always taken an active and commendable interest in public affairs of his locality.

Mr. Katen was born in Richardson county, Nebraska, in 1864, in the town of Rulo. His father, John Katen, was a farmer by occupation, of Irish stock, and he married Johannah Godfrey, also of Irish descent, the young couple settling in Nebraska during their early married life, where our subject was reared and educated. In 1885 he left home and started to make his own way in the world, spending one year in Chadron, and then taking up a homestead twenty-five miles south of that city. Here his first dwelling was made of logs, and he began to break up land and start a farm, remaining on the place for several years and proved up. He went through a good many hard times in getting started and for a time did fairly well, sticking to it until 1891, then the dry seasons began and he was unable to raise scarcely any crops. He was obliged to work in the woods, getting out timber and hauling wood in order to make a living for himself and family. On first coming to this section all he had in the world was three dollars in money, and remained on this place for fourteen years, then left it and settled on his present homestead in 1900, locating on section 18, township 29, range 48, and there began putting on permanent improvements, building a good house, sheds, barns and corals. His ranch is situated on Cottonwood creek, and he has a fine supply of good water the year round for his stock and other purposes. He has seventy-five acres under cultivation, but most of his time is devoted to stock raising, operating about twenty-one quarter sections for that purpose, and also leases two quarters of school land for grazing land. About the year 1901 his house was utterly destroyed by fire and he lost part of his household goods, which was a severe loss, but he has erected in its place a commodious dwelling, and has a pleasant home.

On February 15, 1885, Mr. Katen was married to Miss Mary Kennedy, and of this union thirteen children were born, who are named as follows: Josephine and Genevieve (twins), John, Edna, Will, Thomas, Lester, Hazel, Ruth, Fannie, Donald, Lottie and a baby named Odonald.

Mr. Katen has held different school offices and takes an active interest in local affairs, voting the Democratic ticket.

JAMES E. KIRKWOOD.

James E. Kirkwood, one of the extensive land owners of Rock county, Nebraska, has one of the finest farms and homes to be found in this county. He is a man of untiring energy and perseverance, and through business capability and good management has become one of the foremost men in this section of the country. He is well known as a public-spirited citizen and is universally esteemed and respected.

Mr. Kirkwood was born on a farm in Iowa in 1861, and raised and educated in that state. His father, Robert Kirkwood, was a native of Scotland, and after coming to this country located at Council Bluffs, where he followed farming for many years. He was married in Scotland to Mary Muir, and they were the parents of nine children, all of whom except our subject remained in Iowa.

James attended school at Iowa City for four years, receiving a good education, and then followed teaching as a profession part of the time, later starting in the stock raising and farming business when about twenty-nine years old. He stuck to that for a time, then went into the land and stock business in Missouri valley, which he carried on for twelve years. In 1904 he came to Rock county, setting on section 12, township 29, range 20. Here he put up good buildings, planted an orchard of two hundred apple trees and other fruits in proportion, and has one of the finest orchards in this section of the state. He has added to his land until he now owns twenty-four hundred acres of fine farming and hay land, runs about five hundred head of stock, besides fifty horses. He raises annually two hundred acres of corn and small grains, and has good success with his crops. He is also seeding quite a lot of his land to tame grasses. Besides his large interests here he has farms in Iowa and Canada, and personally superintends the management of those farms.

Mr. Kirkwood while living in Iowa served a term as representative in the state legislature, and was active in politics there, but since coming to Nebraska has devoted his time to his farming interests. He is a Democrat.

In 1890 he was married to Miss Ollie Morgan, whose people were early settlers in Missouri Valley, Iowa, and still reside there. Her father served in the Fifty-first Iowa Infantry during the Civil war. To Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood the following children were born: Nellie M., Mary I., Ollie M. and James M.

GEORGE GREGG.

George Gregg, one of the oldest residents of Perkins county, Nebraska, has had a varied and eventful history, and the story of his life is interwoven with the narrative of facts as they have transpired in the western part of Nebraska. It is a most interesting past to which such lives as his link us, and never will be repeated in this western country.

Mr. Gregg was born in Kirklington, Yorkshire, England, in 1838. His father, Robert Gregg, was an innkeeper in that country, and followed that business nearly all his later years, his tavern being one of the well known stopping places for travelers through that vicinity. Our subject grew up in his native village, attending the public schools, and remained at home until he was fourteen years of age, then entered a grocery store and served an apprenticeship of five years and a half, locating in Liverpool, where he spent ten years in that work. He came to America in 1869, settling on a farm in Ontario, Canada, and there spent seventeen years. The locality in which he lived was a rough country, with miles of timber land, and he did plenty of grubbing and clearing to get the land in shape for crops. During the time he was in that vicinity he went through hard times, but managed to make a living and get a little ahead, building up a fairly good home, but was not very favorably impressed with the opportunity for advancement, so came to the United States, traveled west until he came to Nebraska, and there decided to stop and look over the country. He arrived in Perkins county in April, 1886, and as he liked the appearance of things, filed on a homestead on section 28, township 10, range 35, built a sod shanty and started to establish his farm, his family joining him in the fall of that year. They began on a small scale, suffering hardships and privations during the first few years while getting their home started, their only team a pair of oxen, with which Mr. Gregg broke up land for a few crops and worked hard to make a living. He bought his team on two years' time, and in one year he plowed up sixty acres with these faithful animals, doing all his own work of breaking, etc. He had no well on the place, and for five years hauled all the water for household use a distance of a mile and a half. He put in considerable corn each year, and during 1887, 1888 and 1889 raised a good crop, but the following year had a total loss on account of the drouth. Then for one year he had a fair crop, and again in 1893, 1894 and 1895 everything he planted failed, and in the spring of 1896 he found himself worse off than nothing, being in debt over eight hundred dollars. He had a few cattle and gradually grew into the stock business, and after three years had a pretty good herd, and as land was cheap he had added considerable to his homestead and improved it as rapidly as possible.

Mr. Gregg is now the owner of a ranch consisting of nine quarter sections, on which he has every improvement and convenience for its proper operation, and has about three hundred acres under plough. He has at the present time a herd of fifty cattle, twelve good horses and about fifty hogs. He had good wells drilled on the place, which furnish a good water supply the year round, and has windmills, etc., his ranch being one of the best equipped in the county.

Mr. Gregg was married in 1864 at Liverpool, England, to Miss Annie Hume, who was born and raised in England, and to them have been born eight children, who are named as follows: Isabelle, Robert, Willie, Emma, Mary, Annie, Charlie and George.

Our subject has always been a foremost, leading citizen of his locality, taking an active part in every movement for the development and advancement of the region, helping build up schools, etc. In political sentiment he is a Democrat.

LEONARD W. RIGGS.

Leonard W. Riggs, a well known resident and prominent business man of Dunning, Blaine county, Nebraska, has won for himself a good standing where he is highly respected for his many excellent qualities and manly worth.

Mr. Riggs was born in Kankakee county, Illinois, April 28, 1861. His father was Porter Riggs, born in West Virginia, a farmer by occupation, and followed that calling all his life. He married Mary Swan, a native of Indiana. They settled in Illinois in the early days, and there our subject was raised and educated, attending the common schools, receiving his education in the familiar old district school. He remained with his parents up to his twenty-second year, then came to Nebraska, teaming through from North Loup, and his first settlement was made in the north-western part of Blaine county. Most of his first summer was spent in Loup county following farming, haying, ranching, etc., in order to earn a little money. He filed on a homestead and put up a sod shanty, "batching it" there for about three years, doing mostly farm work, roughing it a great deal of the time, camping out on the plains, etc. He built up a comfortable home and remained in that vicinity up to 1894, then moved to Brewster and spent about eight years, engaged in farm work, blacksmithing, etc.

Mr. Riggs located in Dunning in 1902, where his brother had bought a store, and he took charge of it, managing it for the past six years. They handle a general line of merchandise and have an excellent trade throughout the surrounding country. He is well liked by all with whom he comes in contact in a business or social way, and is recognized as a gentleman of excellent business ability and progressive habits.

In 1886 Mr. Riggs was married to Miss Nannie Martin. Her father was Christian Martin, a pioneer in Nebraska. They were the parents of four children—Lillian May, deceased; Karl, deceased; Porter C. and Charles W. The mother died in 1894, and shortly afterward Mr. Riggs was burned out, losing about everything he had, including horses, grain, machinery, etc., being left with practically nothing and obliged to start over again. He and his faithful wife had managed to build up a good home and were just about able to enjoy life, when these misfortunes overtook him and he was compelled to work out by the day in order to make a living for himself and children. Mr. Riggs spent some time in Montana during the year 1891, where he was engaged in freighting and general work. He is one out of three men who settled in Blaine county in 1883, and has always done his share as an old-timer.

WILLIAM MOUNT.

William Mount, for the past quarter of a century one of the well known pioneers of Nebraska, settled in Buffalo county about 1884, where he remained for about two and a half years. For a time he lived in Weld, Logan and Sedgwick counties, in Colorado, then again came to the western part of Nebraska in 1894, going through pioneer experiences in both sections. He is proprietor of a good estate in Camp Clarke precinct and enjoys a comfortable home and pleasant surroundings.

Mr. Mount is a native of Shelby county, Illinois, born on May 2, 1849, where he lived until he was thirty-five years of age, following farming during all of that time. On his return to Nebraska he took up land under the Belmont Ditch and farmed for six years, then filed on a homestead on section 10, township 20, range 50, in Cheyenne (now Morrill) county, on which he proved up in due time, and improved. He, together with his sons, owns four hundred and eighty acres of land, which is used for mixed farming and stock raising, running about one hundred and fifty head of stock. They raise considerable hay, and have eighteen acres devoted to beet raising, which nets them a nice sum each season.

Mr. Mount was married in Christian county, Illinois, on February 9, 1871, to Miss Sarah M. Stumpff. Mrs. Mount is a native of Fairfield county, Ohio, and was reared there until about ten years of age, when the family moved to Shelby county. They have had nine children, as follows: Hattie, married to E. C. Porter, living on Pumpkinseed creek; Carrie died in infancy; Laura, widow of A. H. Kortz, now living in Bridgeport; Charles, deceased; Jessie, married and living in Bridgeport; Clarence, married, farming in Cheyenne county; James Dwight, single; Lulu, wife of Harry Desch, living in Alliance; Elma, single, living at home.

Mr. Mount is a Republican politically and takes a firm stand for the principles of his party. He takes a commendable interest in local affairs, and is at present holding the office of school director of district No. 6.

HENRY BRANZ.

Henry Branz was born in the small village of Nieder Aula, in the province of Kuhr Hessen, Germany, in 1858, his father being Nicholas Branz, a shoemaker by trade, who lived and died in the fatherland. The mother was Annie Barlet in her youth. She died at the home of a daughter in Iroquois county, Illinois, in 1874.

Our subject lived in the land of his nativity until he was eleven years of age, when, with his mother, two brothers and a sister, he came to America, sailing from Bremen Haven in an old sailing vessel Familia, landing in New York city after a voyage of six weeks with seven hundred other immigrants on board. They came west to Peoria, Illinois, where Henry worked two years for his board and clothes and did not get an over supply of either. He then went to Iroquois county, where his sister was living after her marriage, and worked there by the month for two years. He then began farming for himself on rented land, living at various times on farms in Tazewell, Woodford and Livingston counties.

Mr. Branz was married in Illinois Thanksgiving day, November 27, 1878, to Miss Anna Martha Nieding, a native of the village of Ansbach, province of Kuhr Hessen, Germany. Her father, Henry Nieding, died while she was an infant and her mother six years later. A married sister in Tazewell county, near Peoria, sent for the child and she crossed the ocean with strangers, who placed her in charge of the conductor at Baltimore. Mr. and Mrs. Branz have three children—George Herman, who has a homestead adjoining his father's on the west; Maggie, who married Ell Gilner, who has a homestead nearby, and Christine, who has proved up on a homestead which adjoins part of the home farm.

In the year 1890 our subject brought his family to Keith county, Nebraska, locating on a homestead in section 20, township 14, range 40. They had but little to start on and saw very hard times. The first crop of twenty acres of wheat never came up, and all the water had to be hauled six and a half miles. They lived in a sod house, which still stands, and it was a task to make a living. For three summers Mr. Branz worked on the section for the Union Pacific Railway Company and in this way was able to get a few head of cattle and thus made his start in the stock raising business. In this line he has made a splendid success and now has two hundred head of cattle. His ranch embraces six hundred and forty acres, well improved with a good house, well, windmill, gasoline engine and a barn with a capacity for fifteen head of horses and thirty-five tons of hay. He also leases other land, which he needs in his stock business. For a number of years they sold the cream of thirty cows, but the dairy has been reduced to one-third of that number. Mr. Branz successfully coped with the difficult problems of pioneer life and is thoroughly established on a fine financial basis. He is a man of strong capabilities and is one of the influential old settlers of the locality in which he lives. He is a Democrat in politics.

CHALMERS A. LOVEJOY.

Chalmers A. Lovejoy, one of the most widely known and successful stockmen of western Nebraska, resides on his large estate in sections 17, 18 and 20, township 32, range 28, Cherry township.

Mr. Lovejoy was born in White county, Indiana, March 6, 1854, and came to Iowa with his parents when he was one year old. His father, H. R. Lovejoy, a native of Indiana, was a prominent merchant in Monticello, that state, for ten years, and later in Des Moines, Iowa, where he was in business twenty-five years. He married Isabella Shonts, a native of Virginia, of Irish and German parentage, and died in Des Moines in 1876. In a family of ten children, six boys and four girls, our subject is the second member. He was reared and educated in Iowa, and began life for himself at the age of twenty-one, following farm work for some years. Mr. Lovejoy first came to Nebraska in April, 1886, and here took up a pre-emption and later a homestead in section 17, township 31, range 27, Cherry county, and to both these tracts he still holds title. By industry and economy he gradually added to his acreage until he is now proprietor of six thousand five hundred acres of land, most of which is in meadow and range. One tract extends for five miles along the south side of the Niobrara river near Valentine, and another tract in township 31, range 27, comprises twenty-two hundred and forty acres, while in the home place there are ten hundred and forty acres of good land. He is engaged principally in stock raising and mixed farming, having nearly three hundred and fifty acres under cultivation, raising fine crops, all of which he feeds to his extensive herds of cattle. He keeps at all times about a thousand head of cattle and a few hogs, together with a goodly number of horses, and is well satisfied with the reward of his labors since coming to this section. He never suffered much loss through the dry years, and, indeed, states that he made his best money during those times, as he was not engaged in farming to any great extent, and his stock having sufficient grazing were productive of profitable returns on the market.

Mr. Lovejoy was married December 6, 1876, to Miss Jennie H. Harr, born in Pennsylvania, a daughter of Jacob and Rosina (Baker) Harr, who for many years were respected residents of Des Moines. Mr. and Mrs. Lovejoy have a family of ten children, all of whom were reared in Cherry county. They are named as follows: Fred S., Benjamin C., Annie, Robert, Daniel, John, Charles, Halsey, Jennie and Walter.

All of Mr. Lovejoy's time and attention are given to building up and improving his home and ranch, and he is well informed on all topics pertaining to his business. He has never had any time to devote to active politics, and has never held office, but in political sentiment he is a Republican.

WILLIAM DOLAN.

The subject of this review is one of the largest stock dealers and shippers in Lincoln county, Nebraska, and resides in Maxwell, where he has a pleasant home and enjoys the confidence and esteem of all of his associates.

Mr. Dolan is a native of Maxwell, and was raised and educated there. His father, Peter Farrell Dolan, was a native of Leitrim county, Ireland, and came to America when sixteen years of age, and his wife was Miss Anna G. Kelliher. She resides at the present time in Chicago with her daughter, who is a teacher in the public schools in that city. Our subject received his later education at Saint Mary's College, Kansas, and after graduating was a teacher in the schools in Lincoln county for four years, and also taught in Idaho for two years. His brother, F. Farrell Dolan, is yardmaster for the American Beet Company at Grand Island, Nebraska. The father came west and located at Maxwell in 1871. He was connected with the Northern Pacific railway for twenty-five years, and his death occurred in 1901, at the age of sixty-five years. Our subject ships about one hundred and sixty cars of stock each season, marketing most of this in Denver. A great deal of hay is raised around Maxwell each year, and between three and four thousand tons are shipped from Maxwell during each year, which brings in a snug sum to the farmers in this locality. Mr. Dolan and his mother are joint owners of a ranch of about nineteen hundred acres in this county, which was formerly owned by his father, nearly all of this being valley land located near Maxwell.

Mr. Dolan was married in 1903 to Miss Mary E. Nugent. Her father, John W. Nugent, came from Illinois to Nebraska in 1888. Mr. Dolan and wife have one child, Viola.

FRANK E. PHILLIPS.

Frank E. Phillips, one of the leading pioneers of Box Butte county, resides on his well improved and valuable estate in township 24, range 48, where he is well and favorably known throughout the locality.

Mr. Phillips was born in Lackawanna county, Pennsylvania, in 1854, on a farm. His great-grandfather settled in that state before the beginning of the Revolutionary war, having been born and raised in Vermont. Our subject's father was a farmer and lumberman, and he married Miss Elizabeth Norton, of English blood, who died when Frank was but seven years of age, and two years later he was left an orphan, being compelled to start out for himself at the age of nine years, and from that time on made his own way in the world. He went on a ship as a cabin boy when but eleven years old, and spent over three years as a sailor, traveling through many foreign countries, and on these trips visited South America, sailed around Cape Horn, coasted along Maine and Massachusetts, and while still a boy had seen more of the world than many who have lived four-score years and more.

Mr. Phillips returned to Pennsylvania and worked as a lumberman rafting, running stationary engines, and, in fact, doing all the work to be found in the lumber camp for about five years. He left Pennsylvania and struck out for the west in 1878, finally settling in Fillmore county, Nebraska, and there was among the pioneer settlers of that region, and when he landed in that vicinity his entire cash capital was seventy-two cents, and he was obliged to go to work immediately to make a living, and secured employment as a farmer. He lived there up to 1883, then moved to Custer county and settled on government land. His first building was a sod shanty without a floor. He took with him a team and two cows, which was his start on that place, and these were his sole possessions with the exception of some farm implements. The nearest railroad point from his claim was Grand Island, a distance of seventy-five miles. He went through hard times in getting started, meeting with many discouragements, and finally sold the place and moved to Cheyenne county, driving to his new location with his team and a covered wagon, taking his cows and household goods with him. There he first tried mixed farming and stock raising, and again went through pioneer experiences. His nearest trading point and railroad station was Hay Springs, and he has the distinction of having shipped the first carload of goods into the town of Alliance, which town had just been started at that time. He remained upon that place up to 1901, and made a success of the undertaking, improving it in fine shape, and building up a good home. He sold out his rights there and then moved to his present location, which was a fully improved ranch. This is located in section 31, township 24, range 48, and is situated nine miles from the town of Alliance. The place contains eight quarter sections, all deeded land, and, besides this, he leases twelve quarters, all of which is fenced and cross fenced, and supplied with every improvement, good buildings, etc. This ranch is well stocked with cattle, and he is also engaged in farming, having about one hundred and sixty acres under cultivation.

Mr. Phillips was married September 14, 1871, while living in Pennsylvania, to Miss Maggie Fox, daughter of Michael Fox, a native of Germany, who emigrated to America when a young man and settled in Pennsylvania, and there followed farming all his life. He married Elizabeth Sommers, born in England, and Mrs. Phillips spent her girlhood in her native state, Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips are the parents of fourteen children, who are named as follows: Minnie, Theodore, Lillie, George, Amy, Maggie, Annie, Charles, Pearl, Ethel, Frank, Walter, Elsie and Clarence. They form a very interesting family group and those still living at home assist their parents in running the ranch. The family have a pleasant home and enjoy a large circle of warm friends and congenial neighbors.

Our subject is a well read, intelligent man, of superior attainments, who keeps well abreast of the times, taking an active interest in local affairs of importance.

ALBERT LOWE.

Albert Lowe, one of the best known and most influential citizens of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, resides on his vast estate in Pine precinct. He has devoted many years of his life to farming and has met with the greatest success in the work, and he has done more than any other one man to develop this county and promote its interests in every way.

Mr. Lowe was born in Iowa county, Wisconsin, July 18, 1855, reared and educated on a farm, where he saw plenty of hard work from the time he was a small boy assisting his father in grubbing and clearing his place there. The latter was of English parentage, born on Prince Edward Island, who came to the states at the age of twelve years, following farming all his life. When our subject was eighteen months old his mother, who was Annie Adams, died, and he remained with his father until he was twelve, then started out for himself, working on farms in the vicinity of their home for four years. He then bought land from the Chicago & Northwestern railway, located in Crawford county, Iowa, and farmed there for six years. This land cost him eight dollars and eighty cents per acre, on ten years' time, and he made quite a little money on the place, clearing about six thousand dollars in the six years. He next came to Keya Paha county, locating on a homestead on section 14, township 33, range 19, and this is his present home. He first built a log house and lived in it for five years, then put up a sod house and "batched it" for twelve years. When he first came here there was only one house in what is now Mills, and one at Carns, and his nearest neighbor was miles away. He kept buying land before the dry years came on, and sowed it to rye, and cleared eighty-six cents a bushel on his home place of one hundred and sixty acres. He has never had a total failure of crops, and assisted others, taking county warrants for grain furnished to men needing aid in the hard times. Mr. Lowe now has a farm of six thousand acres, all fine farming land, and cultivates one thousand acres, using the balance for hay and pasture. He also has ninety acres of alfalfa, and gets an immense crop of this grass each season. Twelve hundred and forty acres of his farm is medium low land and the drouths never affect this. He is the largest grain farmer in the county, and farms more than any three men in this county, and in addition to this deals quite extensively in stock, running from five hundred to six hundred cattle, and forty head of horses. He has set out a large number of trees on his farm, and in all has about forty acres of forest and fruit trees. His pastures are immense, one containing six sections and another four sections, and in all has thirty miles of fence on his ranch, so that he does not have to herd his stock. His farm is the best improved and most valuable of any in Keya Paha county, and every appointment of the place shows the best of care and good management in its operation.

On Christmas day, 1890, our subject was married to Miss Matilda Schultz, whose parents were early settlers in Keya Paha county, coming here from Hamilton county in 1884. Mr. and Mrs. Lowe have three children, namely: Henry, Vernie and Ferne, all living at home.

Politically Mr. Lowe is a Republican, but has never had the time to devote to taking an active part in politics.

DAVID E. BABB.

While the gentleman whose name heads this review is one of the new comers to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, he is rapidly becoming known as a man of active public spirit and manifests a truly commendable interest in the welfare of his community. Mr. Babb is a nephew of Steve Babb, well known in this locality, also a nephew of Henry Weilman, who is an old-timer in the region, and from whom our subject purchased his present ranch.

David E. Babb is a native of Pottawatomie county, Iowa, where he was born January 12, 1869, and reared. During his boyhood he followed farming, receiving a good education, remaining with his parents until he reached manhood, and then farmed for himself, owning a hundred and twenty acres in his native county. He came to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, March 4, 1906. He purchased the four hundred and eighty acres in section 24, township 16, range 49, formerly known as the Old Henry Postoffice. Here he farms about one hundred and forty acres, and uses the balance as hay land and pasture for a large number of cattle and horses. The ranch is well equipped with a good set of buildings, all fenced and finely improved in every way.

On April 3, 1895, Mr. Babb was married at Atlantic, Iowa, to Miss Laura B. Selders, who was born and reared in the Hawkeye state. The young couple made their home in Iowa until they came to Nebraska. Five children were born to them, who are named as follows: Elsie E., Hazel M., Clarice O., Gladys B. and Roy B. The family have a very pleasant home and are well liked by their neighbors and associates. Mr. Babb is a supporter of Republican principles and in religious matters is liberal, while his wife is an earnest member of the Christian church.

ELMER E. BARR.

Dr. Elmer E. Barr, who is numbered among the leading old settlers of western Nebraska, came to that region when it was just being first inhabited by white men, and from its earliest days of civilization he has been an important factor in its growth and development. He owns a nice property in Hyannis, where he carries on a drug business, and also has a wide practice throughout the county and stands high in the medical profession.

Dr. Barr was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, in 1863, and reared on a farm there. His father, James, was of Scotch-Irish stock, and he married Eliza Long, of Pennsylvania Dutch blood. Our subject remained in his native county up to 1880, then came west, locating at Cedar Falls, Iowa, and remained there for about nine months, then emigrated to Grand Island, Nebraska, settling in Alda. Soon after coming to this state he began teaching in the public schools in Hall county and followed that occupation for seven years, at the same time taking a course of study at the Nebraska State University, having prepared for this by attending the Rush Medical College at Chicago and the State University of Iowa. He graduated from the medical department of the University of Iowa in 1887, and began the practice of his profession, establishing his first office at Benkelman, Dundy county, Nebraska, remaining there for a year, then removed to Stratton, Hitchcock county, Nebraska, where he followed his calling for two years. In the fall of 1890 he opened an office at Alliance and lived there for six years, and was appointed assistant surgeon for the Burlington Railway Company, building up a good practice, at the end of that time spending two years in travel.

He returned to Nebraska in 1899, locating at Whitman, Grant county, where he followed his profession for five years, then practiced in Alliance for a year, and then came to Hyannis, Grant county.

Dr. Barr settled in Hyannis in 1905, and opened an office, and rapidly built up a good patronage, now extending all over Grant county, also into Cherry and McPherson counties. He has carried on a drug business since locating here, purchasing this store in 1905, and carries a complete line of drugs and has one of the best equipped stores in the county.

On November 27, 1901, Dr. Barr was married to Flora E. Dahlberg, who was born and reared at Creston, Iowa. They have two daughters, Thelma and Genevieve.

Dr. Barr was an early homesteader in Hooker county, and proved up on a farm there. In political views our subject is a Republican, and has served as coroner of Grant county for several years.

MICHAEL WUEST.

Michael Wuest is readily accorded a prominent position among the influential and successful old settlers of Keith county, Nebraska. He was born in the town of Grafton, Jersey county, Illinois, November 5, 1860. Our subject's ancestors were of German nativity. His father, Bernhard Wuest, was born in Ober Amt, Rothenberg, Germany, and was a farmer and mason by trade, while his mother, Johanna (Hartman) Wuest, was born in the village of Hirschau, province of Wuerttemberg, Germany; they came to America about 1856.

Our subject was reared on a farm and received his education in the common schools. After he was twenty-one he worked out in Illinois for seven years in Jersey and Greene counties.

In the fall of 1886, Mr. Wuest was united in wedlock with Miss Louise Egelhoff, also a native of Jersey county, Illinois. She was the daughter of John and Mary (Ocherbauer) Egelhoff, natives of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Wuest have been the parents of nine children: Adolph Lewis, Carl Henry, Bertha Stella, Wils Frederick, Edward Harry (deceased), Michael Irving, Johanna Lela, August John and Herbert Andy.

In the spring of 1887 Mr. Wuest decided to seek a home in the far west, and came to Nebraska, locating a homestead in section 14, township 12, range 40, in Keith county. He built a good substantial sod house and lived in it for eight or nine years; his first well, one hundred and ninety-eight feet deep, he dug by hand, his wife drawing most of the debris up with a windlass; for the first eight years he had to haul water for stock purposes from one-half to six or seven miles. He used oxen for the first six years and with them broke up a large part of his land. He witnessed all the hard times brought by drouth and other calamities, lost many crops and was sometimes in a seriously low condition, financially. In order to make a living he had to work out a great deal and engaged often as a herder of sheep, receiving one time only fifty cents per day, while the children served as herdsmen to help keep the family in food. But he clung to his farm and at last he made a splendid success and is well established financially. He owns a fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres, cultivating about a half section, sixteen acres of which are in alfalfa, the place is well improved with fences, barns, well, windmill, cistern, and sheds, and has a fine grove of trees started. The new house erected in 1908 has eighteen foot posts, full two stories and is the tallest country house in the county; is the acme of comfort and convenience. He has been very successful in his farming operations and in 1907 threshed more grain than any other farmer in Keith county, the amount being over five thousand bushels.

Mr. Wuest wields a strong influence among his fellows in the local affairs of his community and is especially interested in school work. He is a Republican in politics and has held the office of assessor, overseer, and justice of the peace. In every way Mr. Wuest is a capable and efficient conservator of the interests and welfare of the people. He is a member of the Ogallala lodge, Modern Woodmen of America, while Mrs. Wuest holds membership in the American Yeoman. They are in religious faith Lutherans.

MARIAL E. MOORE.

A history of Keya Paha county would be incomplete without describing the part taken in its formation and development by the man whose name heads this article, and who was one of the farmers and stockmen of Keya Paha county, living in section 12, township 32, range 22, until the spring of 1908, when he removed to Ainsworth in Brown county. A portrait of Mr. Moore will be found on another page.

Mr. Moore was born in 1871 in Wayne county, Iowa. When he was one year old, his parents moved to Ohio. In 1875 they returned to Iowa, where they lived until coming to Nebraska in 1876. It was in Nebraska that Mr. Moore grew to manhood, attending the common schools when a boy and later the State University at Lincoln, where he attended school for three years but did not complete his course. He was married December 6, 1905, to Miss Nina Hartman, a native of Polk county, Nebraska, where she was born January 4, 1882.

Her parents, John and Ellen Hartman, were also of American descent.

Our subject and his father have had the experiences usual to pioneers in a new country. They have seen the labor of a whole season disappear in less than thirty minutes under a swarm of grasshoppers; they have also seen the Texas long horn together with the deer, antelope, elk and wild horse disappear from the prairies of Nebraska.

They were among the first to introduce alfalfa culture into Keya Paha county and time is beginning to prove its value to the county.

Both father and son have always been Republican in politics, though neither of them have held office, but both have always tried to upbuild and develop the community in which they have so long resided.

WILLIAM S. MOORE.

W. S. Moore, the father of M. E. Moore, was born in Holmes county, Ohio, March 27, 1843. He grew up in his native state and lived there until the breaking out of the Civil war. His parents were of old American stock and he inherited the patriotism for which the American people are noted. When the war came on, he promptly answered the call of his country and enlisted in the Sixteenth Ohio Infantry, and after his enlistment expired, he re-enlisted, this time in the Fourth United States Veteran Regiment under General Hancock. He was engaged in the siege of Vicksburg and several other very important battles, fourteen in all. In all the terrific campaigning in which he was engaged, he never received a wound and was never captured by the enemy although he was stunned by the explosion of a shell and left on the field for dead in one battle. In several of the engagements, his comrades were shot down around him almost like grass before the reaper, and many things can be related about his experiences when he wore the blue for over four years in the greatest war ever known in the civilized world.

After the war, he went to Missouri, then to Iowa and after returning to his native state two years he moved to Buffalo county, Nebraska, in 1876. He remained in Buffalo county until coming to Keya Paha county in 1883. He was married in 1867 in Holmes county, Ohio, to Miss Samantha Riggs, who was the daughter of Charles Riggs. She was born April 17, 1847. This union was blessed with four children, of whom two are living. He engaged in farming and stock raising in Keya Paha county for twenty-five years, but in the spring of 1898 he sold his fine farm and moved to Ainsworth in Brown county, a few miles from his former home.

JOHN F. WHITON, DECEASED.

In the death of the gentleman whose name heads this review, Rock county, Nebraska, lost one of its most worthy citizens. For many years he was identified with the financial and agricultural interests of this region, and was one of the potent factors in bringing about the present prosperity enjoyed here. He was a man of good business capacity and sterling character, and proved a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Mr. Whiton was born in Connecticut in 1849. His father was of old American stock whose ancestors fought in the Revolutionary war, and figured prominently in the early history of this country. He was a farmer by occupation, and our subject was raised on the home farm where he received a country school education, remaining at home until he reached the age of twenty-one. He then went into the butcher business and followed that employment at Southbridge, Massachusetts, for some time. In 1880 he came west, locating in Missouri, where he farmed for four or five years, then went to Kansas and engaged in the stock business, working at this for ten years. He came to Nebraska in 1890, settling in Grant county, where he opened a farm and went into the stock business. He lived there for several years, then came to Bassett in 1900. Here he built the Hotel Whiton, and in connection with this business opened a meat market. He built up a large trade, and became one of the leading business men of the town, aiding materially in its growth and the advancement of its commercial interests. He was engaged in buying and shipping stock, also fed sheep and hogs, and was one of the largest operators in this line of business in the locality. Mr. Whiton was married in Kansas in 1893 to Miss Helen Martin, who was born in Michigan on a farm. Mr. Whiton died April 12, 1906, at his residence in Bassett, mourned by his family and a large circle of friends, who realized that by the death of Mr. Whiton, the community had lost a man who had taken an active part in the upbuilding of the country; a man who always stood for what was just and right and one of whom it could be truly said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

CHARLIE K. MILLER.

Charlie K. Miller came to America from Germany, his native land, when he was sixteen years old. He was born in 1863 and he has

JOHN F. WHITON (Deceased).

R. R. GREER.

CHARLES K. MILLER.

MARIAL E. MOORE.

traveled all over the United States engaged in various occupations. His father, Charlie Miller, was a brewer by trade; his mother was Anna (Froster) Miller, and both parents were of German descent.

The subject of our biography received his first training in Germany and, on coming to America, he made Chicago his headquarters for nearly four years, and from thence he went to Des Moines, Iowa, where he remained for a short time. In 1884 he came to Loup county, Nebraska, and filed on his present homestead June 12. North Loup was the nearest railroad town. Mr. Miller built a sod house and dug-out, and his first team was a yoke of oxen. He broke some of his land, set out some trees and otherwise improved his farm, but he had to work out a great deal for years. He has been employed at railroading, mining, etc., and was along the Pacific coast for years.

In 1905 Mr. Miller settled on his farm for good, making hog-raising his principal business and he is making a splendid success in this line. He has a fine farm of three hundred and sixty acres, with two hundred acres under cultivation; has good buildings, well and windmill, and the trees that he planted years ago have become a fine grove. He intends very soon to construct a fine residence.

Mr. Miller is one of the old settlers and he has made it pay to hold on to his farm. He takes an active part in the affairs of his community and his word is respected as coming from a man of wide and varied business experience. A picture of him will be found on one of the illustration pages of this volume.

R. R. GREER.

R. R. Greer, whose portrait will be found on another page, is well known throughout western Nebraska as an "old-timer" and prominent business man. He located at Kearney, January 12, 1873, and opened a general store which he operated constantly up to 1889, then sold out and for a time retired from active business. In 1905 he started a dry goods store in the opera house block, which he is developing very successfully. Mr. Greer is a man of sterling character and thorough business principles, held in the highest esteem by his fellows and associates.

Mr. Greer is a native of Rushville, Schuyler county, Illinois, but came west at an early day. In the seventies and eighties "Bob" Greer was a familiar character from the Kansas line to South Dakota, and drew immense trade all this distance from among the pioneer settlers, especially during the settlement of the Republican Valley. He has always been most active in public affairs, both local and state, serving several terms in the city council and as county commissioner. He was appointed by the Governor on the commission to distribute two hundred thousand dollars among the settlers of western Nebraska during the drouth years, and served with this body for one year. Mr. Greer also was deeply interested in agricultural matters, and was a director on the state agricultural board for twelve years, and president of this board for two terms, from 1889 to 1890. He was appointed commissioner general of the Nebraska commission for the World's Fair, and worked at this for eighteen months, preparing most of the exhibits from this state, planning the state building, and other important work for the fair. In 1893 the Democratic state officials demanded his retirement and filled the position by another of their party.

As an instance of the development and progress of this county, Mr. Greer emphasizes the fact that in the seventies not ten farmers in this region had bank accounts, and now, in 1908, hardly that number in the whole county are without bank accounts.

Mr. Greer was a delegate to the great Trans-Mississippi convention held at Denver some years ago, that demanded and obtained from Congress a grant of over six million dollars for the improvement of the Galveston harbor, and he has always taken a great interest in the development and welfare of that part of Texas.

In May, 1873, Mr. Greer was married at Bloomington, Illinois, to Miss Sue Peters, a native of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Greer are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Our subject is an active Republican.

MOSES O. GRANTHAM.

Moses O. Grantham, of Anderson township, Phelps county, Nebraska, is one of the enterprising and prosperous farmers and stock raisers of his locality. He is one of the leaders among the pioneers and has done his full share in the development of the region in which he lives.

Mr. Grantham is a native of Bates county, Missouri, and came from there to Phelps county in 1895, purchasing the one hundred and sixty acres where he now resides, with a fine house, good barns and other improvements. He is an intelligent, wide-awake farmer, considers Phelps county as good as any place he has ever seen or heard of, and he knows all about farming lands by experience in Missouri, Texas and Oklahoma. On his present farm he has a forty-acre piece which yielded a crop of thirty-eight bushels of wheat to the acre in 1902, and in 1906 his yield was thirty bushels to the acre, and corn up to sixty-five bushels. He has a fine herd of red polled cattle, pure and graded.

Mr. Grantham's father was Elias Grantham, who settled in Bates county, Missouri, in 1840. In 1850 he went to California and on the return trip was taken ill and died before reaching home. His grandfather, Dr. Moses Grantham, served in the Mexican war as a surgeon to the Missouri troops under General Harney. His mother was Miss Emily Bryant, a native of Kentucky. He had five uncles on his father's side, and two on his mother's side, all the members of both families except himself, his brothers and sisters now residing in California. In 1882 he was married to Miss Martha E. Lloyd, of Livingston county, Illinois. They have five children. One son, Joseph Elias, owns and operates a threshing machine in Phelps county; William Oliver, the second son, resides at home; Ruth Adaline is married and lives in Iowa; Emily C. and Lucy A. are at home.

Our subject is a strong Prohibitionist. He was the only one of this party in his neighborhood for some years and was the only voter for that ticket, but now there are several voters for prohibition and the cause is gaining.

WILLIAM STROTHEIDE.

William Strotheide, known throughout the community in which he makes his home as an enterprising and prosperous farmer, resides in section 25, township 31, range 45, Sheridan county, Nebraska. He has been engaged for many years past in bringing his farm to a high state of cultivation, and now is proprietor of a valuable estate. He is also vice-president of the Union Bank of Rushville, Nebraska.

Mr. Strotheide was born in Germany in 1853. His father, Rudolph Strotheide, was a farmer, born in 1824, and raised in Germany, and at this writing is living in Illinois with his wife, who is eighty-four years old. They are a venerable couple, highly respected in the locality in which they reside. They are the parents of five children, of whom our subject is the second member, and in 1860 they left Germany and came to America, locating near where they now live in Illinois, where their family was raised. Our subject lived at home assisting his father until he was twenty-two years of age, then went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he obtained employment in a wholesale house, remaining there for seven years. From there he went to Seward county, Nebraska, and bought a farm. He built a house and began farming and lived there for seven years, and in 1890 sold out his holdings and came to Sheridan county, where he bought a relinquishment on the section he now lives on. He was very fortunate in having been able to raise one good crop before the dry years came and destroyed everything, and after this for about seven years he went through some hard times, and had it not been for the fact that he had brought fifteen hundred dollars and some cattle with him from Seward county in starting on this place, so he was not compelled to go in debt for the farm, he would have been pretty badly off after these losses. As it was he managed to pull through the bad years, and after a time succeeded in raising good crops and improving his farm, buying more land gradually until he now owns one thousand seven hundred and sixty acres. Of this he farms about three hundred acres and the rest is used for hay land and grazing for two hundred head of stock. When he first took this place there was nothing but a shed barn and a small house on it, and since then he has expended twenty-five hundred dollars for buildings and improvements, and fencing all his land which is in one piece. He has planted trees on the farm, and also has several acres of alfalfa started. He is well satisfied with what he has done here, and takes pride in the fact that he has overcome all difficulties, and is now surrounded by all the comforts and improvements of a model rural home.

Mr. Strotheide was married in 1882 to Miss Louisa Aha, born in Germany in 1856, who came to this country with her parents when a young girl, the family locating in Nebraska, where her father died within a few years after landing here. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Strotheide, named as follows: Ralph, Mary and Sadie. Mr. Strotheide has a brother living in Illinois, who has been very successful, but he says he would not exchange places with him, as he thinks Nebraska is as good a state as can be found anywhere. Politically Mr. Strotheide is a Republican.

MARTIN P. SOLBERG.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal review is a leading citizen of Dawes county, Nebraska. There he is respected alike for his industrious habits, ability and native force of character, and is a worthy representative of that great army of honest men and hard-working farmers that Norway has contributed to the making of the great state of Nebraska. Still in the prime of life, he enjoys an ample competence and commands the respect of all who know him.

Mr. Solberg was born in Godbrandsdalen, Norway, in 1862, on a farm. His father was a farmer before him, and he spent his entire life in his native land, as also did his mother. At the age of eighteen years our subject started for himself, working out on different farms in the vicinity of his home as a boy. In 1883 Mr. Solberg left his native country and came to America landing in Philadelphia, from which place he started for the western states, spending three and a half years in Minnesota and was also in Canada for some time, railroading in that part of the country. In 1885 he came to Nebraska, taking up a tract of land near Hemingford. Here he put up a sod shanty and started farming, during the first few months did freighting between Hay Springs and Hemingford, and eventually proved up on his pre-emption, which he afterwards sold out, coming to his present location in 1887, and filing on a homestead in section 33, township 29, range 48, where he "batched it" for a few months. He kept steadily adding improvements to his ranch, and in 1890 he started railroading, being employed as section foreman, running extra gangs of men for the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, and later worked for the Chicago and Northwestern Railway for some time. All this time his family were keeping up the work on the home farm, and they succeeded in developing a fine farm, now owning a ranch of seven hundred and seventy acres, situated on the banks of the Niobrara river. He has all good substantial buildings on the farm, every improvement, and it is considered one of the best and most productive farms in their vicinity. Mr. Solberg is well satisfied with the result of his labors since locating here, and thinks there is no place to compare with western Nebraska as an agricultural district. He has traveled extensively and seen many different phases of life in city and country, and is prepared to enjoy the declining days of his life amid the pleasures of his family and their many warm friends and good neighbors.

In 1894 Mr. Solberg was married to Anna Gustavson, born in Illinois, and who came to eastern Nebraska when a child. Her parents came to America and settled first in Illinois, and then came to eastern Nebraska in the early days of its settlement, where Mrs. Solberg was reared. Mr. and Mrs. Solberg are the parents of five children, namely: Paul, James, Elsie, born in Wyoming, where the family lived for a number of years, he as foreman for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company; and Clara and Hilda, born and raised in this county.

Mr. Solberg is a Republican, and has always taken a commendable interest in local affairs. He has served on the school board for several years, and is classed among the influential old-timers of Nebraska, and one of the early residents of Chadron, locating there when that town was merely staked out and the only dwellings were rough board shanties and dugouts.

LEVI D. BATES, DECEASED.

The gentleman above named, now deceased, was one of the leading old settlers in Brown county, Nebraska, where he had aided materially in the developing of the resources of this region. Mr. Bates was born in Tioga county, New York, in 1836. He was the son of Stephen Bates, of mixed nationality, American born, and Catherine Kelly Bates, of American stock. When he was seventeen years of age the family moved to Illinois, settling near the city of Rockford, and remained there up to 1866. In the latter year our subject came to Nebraska, settling in Seward county, where he lived for fourteen years, then came to Brown county, driving here by team. He was one of the witnesses of the great blizzard which struck this region in October, 1880, being caught in this storm on the trip here with his family. He took up a homestead in northwest section 29, township 31, range 20, building a log cabin, and at once started in to establish a home and farm. He proved up on this place and lived on it until 1887, and then made a trip to Washington, looking for a place to locate. He was not successful in finding anything that suited him, so came back, but returned there in 1888, this time taking his family with him. After spending some time traveling around they returned to this country, settling nine miles north of Bassett, in Rock county, and lived there for twelve years. While living on this place in 1898 he made a trip to Los Angeles, California, with his family for his health, stopping only seven weeks, as his health did not improve and thought it best to go back to Nebraska.

In 1900 Mr. Bates and his family settled on Pine creek on a farm, where he engaged in grain raising to a large extent, being very successful in his enterprise. At his death, which occurred December 27, 1903, he was proprietor of nine hundred and eighty acres of good farming land, and this is still owned by his family. The farm is well improved with good buildings and fences, all in first-class condition, and is one of the valuable estates in this vicinity. Mr. Bates was married January 1, 1857, at Rockford, Illinois, to Miss Ellen Whitwood, and four children resulted from this union, named as follows: Ella S., Jennie B., Levi L. and Hiram. Mrs. Bates died August 18, 1881, while the family lived in Brown county.

In 1883 Mr. Bates married Miss Columbia A. Mills, daughter of Francis Mills, one of the early settlers in this county, coming here in 1880, driving through the country with ox teams. Mrs. Bates was then thirteen years old, and the family lived in a house made on a truck wagon, drawn by three yoke of oxen, the trip taking five weeks on the road. They also had two teams of horses with them, besides other stock, and all their household goods. Their log cabin was the first house in their locality, and she was raised on that place, only attending school for three months after coming to this part of the state. Mr. Bates had four children by his second wife, who are named as follows: Mark G., Manley B., Maggie and Count C., all born in this region. Mr. Bates served during the Civil war as a member of the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and was also a member of the Masonic Lodge at Lodge Pole.

While Mr. Bates lived in Seward county he was one of the leading men in political circles, and held the office of county commissioner for some years, but after settling in this county he refused to accept office, preferring to devote his entire time to his home and farm. He was a man of sterling character and genial manners, esteemed and respected by his fellowmen, and the community suffered a severe loss in his demise.

In 1907 Mrs. Bates leased the home farm for a term of three years and now resides at University Place Station, Lincoln, Nebraska.

STEPHEN H. BABB.

Among those who occupy a foremost place in the community in which many years have been passed, the gentleman above named deserves special mention. Mr. Babb is a most successful ranchman and farmer of Union Valley precinct; the owner of a fine estate, all of which has been gained by dint of honest industry and strict attention to duty in the operation of his ranch. He also has been instrumental to a great extent in making the locality the prosperous and wealthy community it has become.

Stephen H. Babb was born February 16, 1861, in Monroe county, Iowa, where he has reared, attending the common schools and working as a farm hand until he was seventeen years of age, at which time he left his native state and drifted around in different western territories and states for about six years. He first worked on a cow ranch on the Loup river for a year, when he secured work for a year in the construction of what is now the Northwestern Railroad between Long Pine and Gordon. He next was similarly employed on the Oregon Short Line in Idaho, and for several years roughed it in the mountains with a few friends, camping and hunting. Coming to Cheyenne county on March 28, 1887, he filed on a homestead in the northwest quarter of section 14, township 16, range 49, and proved up on one hundred and sixty acres. He went through all the pioneer's experiences in building up his farm, enduring the drouths, losing crops by hail and prairie fires, but stuck to his home through all discouragements, and finally succeeded in accumulating quite a herd of stock; he gradually added to his original homestead until the ranch now comprises one thousand four hundred and forty acres, which is devoted principally to stock raising, although Mr. Babb cultivates about one hundred and sixty acres; he is also engaged in the dairy business on quite a large scale. He has about one hundred head of cattle and seventy-five horses, and keeps a large number of hogs, breeding registered Duroc and Poland China hogs and French Percheron horses on a large scale.

Mr. Babb was the eldest of a family of seven children. The father Benjamin B. Babb, died in Iowa in 1889, but the subject's mother is at present residing in central Nebraska. On December 15, 1887, our subject married Miss Winona E. Brobst, at Sidney, Nebraska. Mrs. Babb is a daughter of James W. and Melissa (Reeves) Brobst, was born in Ohio and grew up there, coming to Nebraska in 1884. Six children have been born to this union, named as follows: Clarence J., Clarice A., Lora A. and Nora J. (twins), Charles J. and Ruby C. Nora died in 1897. Both Mr. and Mrs. Babb's parents now live in Louisville, Cass county, Nebraska.

Since locating in this region Mr. Babb has taken a leading part in Democratic national, state and county affairs. He has held different offices in his township, and served as Sheriff of Cheyenne county during 1901-1902. He is a member of the Odd Fellows at Sidney and the Woodmen of Dalton.

IRVIN W. RUSSELL.

The venerable gentleman whose name appears at the head of this personal history is one of the very oldest settlers in Thomas county, and spent many years in ranching in the region. He has always led an active life, built up several homes and farms, and followed his chosen calling up to 1907, when he sold his ranching interests and removed to the town of Thedford, where he is prepared to spend his remaining years on earth, secure from hardship and care, surrounded by all the comforts of the times. He has always been prominent in the affairs of the county, being one of the committee that organized Thomas county, and been one of its most earnest supporters in every movement for its advancement. He organized the first school district in the county, was justice of the peace for several years, and also served as county judge for two terms, being probably the best known resident, and held in the highest esteem by all.

Irvin W. Russell was born at Louisville, Kentucky, in 1828. His father, Barney Russell, was a farmer and an early settler in that state, who later came west and fought the Indians, leading a frontiersman's existence, being widely known for his work along that line. When Irvin was a boy the family moved to Indiana, and there he was reared, receiving a limited schooling, and at the age of twenty-nine years he started for himself. He was married in 1849 to Miss Lydia J. Dodd, daughter of Reed Dodd and Irena Montgomery Dodd, pioneers in Indiana.

Our subject settled in Appanoose county, Iowa, and made that his home up to 1886, following farming and stock raising as an occupation during that time. In the fall of that year he brought his family to Nebraska, coming directly to Thomas county, driving from Custer county with a team and wagon, following the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad through the county. He picked out a claim and located two miles east of Thedford on the Loup river, built a sod house and started a farm. He later built a good house, although of the same material, and they occupied it for a number of years. When he landed here all the money he had in the world was five dollars, and his other property were a few household goods, twenty younds of bacon, some flour and his team of horses. He began ranching, farming and chicken raising, and continued at it for the following twenty-five years, succeeded in building up a good home and ranch, and has accumulated enough of this world's goods to enable himself and family to live in comfort. He has a good orchard on the ranch, and had the distinction of raising the first apples grown in Thomas county. He also was the man who changed the course of the Loup river, building a fine fish pond on his farm and constructing the dams so that they prevent the river from eating up the surrounding land. He has done much to promote the success of his county, and he deserves great credit for the part he has taken in the general welfare of the region.

Mr. Russell has a family of eight children, named as follows: Mary Jane, Daniel W., George M., Irena C., Charles R., Eva E., Annie D. and Minnie M., who form a very interesting group.

DELA H. ROCKEFELLER.

Dela H. Rockefeller, residing in Lowell township, Kearney county, Nebraska, located in this township in 1880, coming here with his father, John L., who homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres in section 14, remaining there up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1904. He was seventy-six years of age, and a man esteemed by all who knew him for his many good qualities. He was born near Albany, New York, in 1828, and came west when a young man, and took up a timber claim besides his homestead, owning in all three hundred and twenty acres. In 1893 our subject began farming for himself, and has lived on his present farm since that time.

Mr. Rockefeller was born in Jackson county, Michigan, and lived there until he was nine years old, coming direct to Nebraska from that state. His mother was Miss Laura Irish, a native of New York state and she died here in 1893 at the age of fifty-three years. Our subject has built up a good farm and home, engaging in mixed farming and grain raising. For fourteen years he ran a threshing machine throughout Kearney county and is well known to every farmer in this section of the country, and enjoys the reputation of being one of the best hustling, business-like young men of his county. He has gained his property through his own unaided efforts and labors, his farm of three hundred and twenty acres being of the finest valley land, highly cultivated and improved in the very best manner. In 1904 he erected on his estate a fine large farm residence, and everything evidences his good judgment and ability, shown in the well-kept and highly improved condition of his entire farm—horses, cattle, hogs, fences and buildings. He has gone into the breeding of pure Duroc Jersey hogs, and his remarkable energy and success is also shown in this industry. His leading strains are from "Shamrock," "Improver 2nd." "Billy K," "Model," etc. In 1907 he sold ten pure bred pigs, weighing at five months one hundred and eighty-three pounds each. He also raises thoroughbred Hereford cattle, keeps a good strain of bull calves for sale. He is constantly improving and developing his herd of hogs and is in the market to sell to other breeders and farmers who desire to get the best. Mr. Rockefeller also owns a fine thoroughbred Percheron horse, known as Keota Goliath.

In 1893 our subject was united in marriage to Miss May Pennington, daughter of Charles Pennington, of Liberty township, who in 1891 came to this county from Chicago, Illinois, locating in Liberty township, where he is engaged in farming. Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller are the parents of five children, named as follows: Amy, John, Grace, Edna and Wallace.

HENRY MEYER.

The subject of this sketch, Henry Meyer, is one of the prominent old settlers and has taken an active part in the formative period of that part of western Nebraska, in which he has made him home, namely, Keith county. On every hand he is named as a successful farmer and public spirited citizen, and his farm on section 10, township 13, range 40, is noted as a model of equipment.

Henry Meyer is a native of the village of Bockhop, District of Nienburg, Province of Hanover, Germany, where he was born February 25, 1849. His father was Ernst Meyer, a farmer who lived and died in the fatherland. His mother was Anna Marie Lohman.

Our subject was reared in his native country, following the business of farming and at times working as a laborer. In 1881 the lure of the land of the free called him and he came to America, sailing from Bremen Haven, June 23, landing in Baltimore on the 18th of July. Locating in Brule, Nebraska, after a visit with friends from the old country at Grand Island and North Platte he found work on the section in the employ of the Union Pacific Railway Company and at the time of resignation was foreman of the section. In 1883 he filed on a tree claim, set out trees and later proved up; he filed on his present homestead in July, 1891, having resided prior to 1886 in the section house and from that date until 1891 on the tree claim. After a time he gave up railroad work and devoted his attention to farming and had many hard experiences, losing several crops and making only a bare living. But the hard years passed into history and better times dawned and the work of the farm showed better results. He engages to some extent in dairying, shipping the cream of twelve or fifteen cows. Now he has a fine large farm thoroughly improved, and much that insures comfort and a good income. Until 1908 he lived in the typical sod house of the frontier, moving in December of that year into his fine new concrete block dwelling, of which, with its surroundings, we present an illustration on another page of our work.

Henry Meyer was married in his native village June 14, 1881, to Miss Sophia Trutner, by whom there are four children: Harry, Heinrich, Frank, and Anna.

Mr. Meyer enjoys the distinction of being the oldest settler in the region between Ogallala and Big Springs, and he has had a fine opportunity to personally witness the remarkable material growth of his locality. When he first came, Ogallala was a very small struggling village, containing a telegraph station, a saloon, and one store, a school house and a small jail. Mr. Meyer has been active in school and local affairs and has held various offices, such as road overseer and school officer, serving in the latter capacity for years. He has been progressive and public spirited and is widely respected as an old settler and successful farmer.

He is a Republican in politics and with his family is a member of the Lutheran church.

JACOB W. GROVES.

Among the early settlers in Cherry county, the above named gentleman holds a prominent place, having settled on a homestead in October, 1884, located in section 7, township 30, range 26, where he built up a comfortable home and farm. He has done his full share in the development of his locality, and is well and favorably known throughout this section.

Mr. Groves was born in Van Buren county, Iowa, March 30, 1859, and he was reared on a farm and received a common school education. Our subject, the eldest of nine children, born to Thomas and Rachel (Smith) Groves, started in the world for himself at the age of twenty-one, following farm work for three years in Johnston county, Nebraska. After a short visit with home folks he came to Cherry county in 1884, driving six hundred miles from southeastern Iowa with a team of mules, his only live stock in the beginning, and settled on a homestead in section 7. Here he put up sod buildings which served as shelter for himself and stock until better could be provided. During the early days he experienced hard times, which he hopes may never return. In 1904 he took up an additional claim, under the Kincaid law, on section 8, where his residence and other farm buildings are now located. By purchase he has added to his possessions until he now has an estate of one thousand four hundred and forty acres, mostly in low hay land. He early engaged in the stock business, which he still follows on a large scale, keeping about two hundred and fifty head of cattle and fifteen horses. At one time he owned a large number of sheep and for nine years made quite a success of it, but has reduced his flocks of late years finding other lines more profitable. Mr. Groves has done his share of building and planting trees since locating here, having a thrifty orchard of about a hundred trees, and a ten-acre grove of forest trees surrounding his dwelling which have grown at a more surprising rate than any other grove in this region. He has put up twelve miles of fence, eight miles of it being five-wire fencing, besides a half mile of tin wire netting around the grove, making his place one of the best equipped in this section for stock raising on a large scale.

RESIDENCE OF HENRY MEYER,

Mr. Groves was married January 18, 1885, to Miss Eliza Smith, a native of Iowa, daughter of Peter and Hannah (Keller) Smith. Her father, an early settler in Nebraska, lived here for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Groves have a family of eight children, named as follows: David, Clarence, Clara, Lillian, Richard, Wesley, Moses and Ross, all born and reared in Cherry county.

Mr. Groves has been school director for the past fifteen years, and has held other local offices. Politically he is a Populist, and although interested in local affairs of his party has never sought official recognition. He devotes his time to his home and family, and is well satisfied with what he has accomplished in what was the wilds of Nebraska when he first set foot in Cherry county.

JOHN HIBBELN.

The present solid prosperity enjoyed in Sioux county, Nebraska, may be attributed largely to her pioneers. In the early days of her settlement when the only welcome tendered the stranger who settled there was a wilderness filled with wild beasts and Indians, little to encourage and much to discourage came to his lot, but those sturdy men who went to their new home with a determination to succeed and worked persistently and honestly, are now the prosperous and honored residents of their locality. The subject of this sketch aided in bringing that wilderness to a high state of cultivation and civilization, and great credit is due him for his labor and influence.

John Hibbeln is a native of Wisconsin, born in Fond du Lac in 1867, and his father, Joseph Hibbeln, was a business man of that vicinity for many years, of German descent. He married Theresa Brinkman, also of German stock, and they lived in Wisconsin until our subject was a child of three years, then moved to Alabama, and later to Tennessee. When he was twelve years old the family came to Nebraska, settling in Furnas county, where they went through pioneer experiences, and remained there for about seven years. From there they drove overland to Sioux county in a covered wagon, and spent a month on the trip, bringing with them a bunch of cattle, and camping out along the road, cooking their meals over a camp fire. Their first location was on the place which is our subject's present ranch, then government land, owned and operated by the father up to 1894. During the first years they did all their farm work and teaming with ox teams, and at times had all they could do to make a living during the hard times due to drouths, etc. They stuck to the place, however, and gradually succeeded in improving it in good shape, adding more land to their original homestead, until the ranch now consists of five hundred and forty-five acres, situated on Indian creek twelve miles west of Ardmore. The ranch is well supplied with timber and splendid water the year around. Most of the place is used as a stock ranch, but they farm a small portion, and have plenty of hay and pasture land.

Mr. Hibbeln's family is among the very old settlers in this region, and they have all taken an important part in the upbuilding of the locality. The father died in November, 1907, his death deeply lamented by his family and a large circle of friends.

CHARLES O'ROURKE.

Among the leading business men of Brady, the gentleman whose name heads this review occupies a prominent place. He is engaged in the hardware business, handling agricultural implements, wagons, buggies, windmills, pumps, etc., and enjoys a large and flourishing trade among the residents of Lincoln and the surrounding counties.

Mr. O'Rourke was born in Pennsylvania at Lebanon, March 21, 1860. He is a son of Colonel P. J. O'Rourke, who was superintendent of the National cemetery at Fort McPherson from 1876 to 1883, where his death occurred in the fall of 1883 at the age of seventy-three years, and his remains were interred in that cemetery. He was colonel of Company E, First Pennsylvania Reserves, during the war, and his name is one of those on the soldiers' monument at Lancaster, Pennsylvania. He went out as a captain and came back as colonel. He enlisted in 1861 and served continuously until the close of the war. He was one of those who was with the Army of the Potomac, in the First Pennsylvania Infantry, and was in all the great battles during the struggle for liberty. He received a severe wound at the battle of Gettysburg and saw about as many hardships and endured as much suffering as any soldier in the war. He was on General Meade's staff. A gun which his father captured from the Confederates during a skirmish at Gettysburg is highly prized as a relic of that terrible struggle. Colonel O'Rourke came to this country from Ireland when a young man, settling in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where he engaged in the mercantile business. His wife was Miss Mary Hodges, a native of England, where she met and married Mr. O'Rourke. One brother, Washington, served in his father's regiment all through the war. J. J. served also for three months, although he was very young at that time.

Mr. O'Rourke came to Lincoln county, Nebraska, in 1879 to join his father at Fort McPherson, and remained with him for some time, then started in business for himself. He opened his present establishment eight years ago, and has been phenomenally successful in that short time, fast becoming one of the most prominent merchants in this section of the country, and gaining a wide reputation as a business man and worthy citizen. After locating in Nebraska he attended school, where he obtained a good education which gave him a good foundation for his later success, and then entered the mail service, traveling between North Platte and Cottonwood Springs for two years. Mr. O'Rourke's three brothers, J. J., T. L. and Frank O'Rourke, are all living at the old homestead which their father took up in the early days as a timber claim. J. J. served for one term as county judge. In 1894 Mr. O'Rourke married Miss Anna M. Neary, daughter of John T. Neary, originally from New Jersey, and an early settler of North Platte, Nebraska. Mr. Neary opened the first shoe store in that city, and was owner of the corner where the First National Bank now stands. Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke are the parents of two children, namely: Mary Agnes and Nora Irene. He is a Republican in political faith.

CAPTAIN STRONG B. MOODY.

Captain Strong B. Moody is one of the older settlers of Rock county, Nebraska, and his is a familiar figure on the streets of Newport, in the vicinity of which he has passed many years engaged in an agricultural career of honest worth. He is widely beloved and respected for his manly worth and upright character, as well as for his generous heart and open hand.

Mr. Moody was born on a farm in the town of Stowe, La Moile county, Vermont, August 24, 1835, and was reared and educated to a rural life. His father, John Moody, came of Scotch ancestry, but his mother, Rebecca Cady, belonged to an old American family. They were honest, worthy people, and Strong B. was trained and fitted to a good place in the world of industry. When he reached the age of nineteen years he assumed the determination of his own career, and coming west, was for some time employed as a farm laborer in Will county, Illinois, whither a brother had preceded him. During the years 1859 and 1860 he spent his time in the Pike's Peak country prospecting and mining. Returning to Will county in the fall of 1860, the outbreak of the Civil war found him ready, as the children of the Green Mountains always were, to take up arms to defend the old flag and the Union against rebels and traitors from any quarter. He enlisted in Company D, One Hundredth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and in the course of an exceptionally meritorious career rose from the position of eighth corporal, which he held at the time of his enlistment, to a captaincy, which he held at the time of his discharge. He took part in seventeen battles, and proved himself a brave and capable soldier through dangerous years. In 1869 he came to Guthrie county, Iowa, and for seventeen years was engaged in mercantile pursuits.

Mr. Moody was married in 1866 to Miss Helen Martin. She became the mother of one son, and died before our subject removed to this state. The son, Daniel, died about a year after his mother. Mr. Moody was married a second time in Stuart, Nebraska, in 1885, when Miss Emma Anglemire became his wife. She was of Pennsylvania Dutch family. The father, Emanuel Anglemire, migrated to Will county, the mother having passed away in her native state prior to the family's coming west. Mr. and Mrs. Moody are the fond parents of two children, Daniel and Myrtle, both of whom are now living under the parental roof.

In 1885 Mr. Moody came to Rock county, where he made a homestead entry in section 25, township 31, range 17, and here he is still to be found. Today he is the independent owner of one hundred and sixty acres of as choice land as the sun shines on in Nebraska, nearly all of which is under active cultivation, sustaining about fifty head of stock, and producing considerable hay for the open market. It is a well kept farm, and shows its owner an industrious worker. Six years of the time that has elapsed since his settlement in Rock county were spent by Captain Moody in Mead, Nebraska, but his thought and labor have been quite concentrated on his homestead enterprise in Newport. He is an old line Republican, but has never held public office, finding his home and farm sufficiently large for all his thought and care. During his residence in Iowa Mr. Moody was a member of the Mason, Odd Fellow and Workmen fraternities.

WILLIAM J. JONES.

William J. Jones, one of the foremost early settlers of Marvin precinct, Perkins county, has a valuable estate on section 20, township 10, range 35, and is a worthy citizen of his community.

Mr. Jones was born in Rockingham county, Virginia, on September 13, 1854, and is a son of Fautleroy and Diana (Haffner) Jones, the former of Welsh and the latter of Pennsylvania Dutch stock. The family came to Illinois when William was one year old, where the father settled on a farm in Fulton county, and there our subject grew up, remaining with his parents until he was twenty years of age. He afterwards followed farm work in the vicinity of his home, also drifted through Minnesota and Iowa for several years. In 1879 he was married in Illinois, to Miss Phrosine Lance, whose father was a prominent physician of New Philadelphia, McDonough county, Illinois. After his marriage Mr. Jones settled on a farm in Illinois and lived there up to 1885, then came to Nebraska, locating in Polk county and farmed there for one year, then came to his present homestead, filing on the land in September, 1886, built a sod shanty 14x24 feet, hauling the lumber for the roof from North Platte. During the first winter they saw some hard times, and while he raised fairly good crops for a few years, in 1893 and 1894 witnessed the drouth periods, losing several crops and having a bad time generally. During the worst times when there was so much suffering in the region he did considerable to help those who were in severe financial straits, and was largely instrumental in influencing outside aid to the vicinity. He also helped establish the schools during the early years and was an important factor in its every step toward development and progress. Mr. Jones has built up a good home and valuable property, having five hundred and sixty acres with good improvements and buildings, his farm all fenced, and one hundred acres under cultivation. He has plenty of pasture, a fine grove and everything in the best possible condition about the place.

In the spring of 1895 he was one of a committee to go to Illinois, his former home and neighborhood, and solicit food, provision and clothing. He secured two carloads free of freight charges for Elsie and vicinity.

Mr. Jones was married August 28, 1879, in the city of Macomb, the county seat of McDonough county, Illinois. One son, Edward Lee, born of this union, September, 1882, died September 19, 1904. He was a school teacher.

In politics, Mr. Jones has held minor offices and taken an active part in local affairs. He has always been a Democrat and has been a delegate to conventions at various times and served as committeeman for this district. Mr. Jones engages in cattle raising and farming on quite an extensive scale. He raises Shorthorn grade and has made a thorough success of the business.

THOMAS F. CROUGHWELL.

Thomas F. Croughwell is a native of Connecticut, born in Jewett City, in the year 1881, his parents being John and Katherine (Falland) Croughwell. The father was of Irish descent, and was one of the pioneer settlers of Loup county, Nebraska. The grandfather, Thomas Croughwell, was also a pioneer settler of this territory.

The family came west and settled on a homestead west of Taylor and become prominently identified with the community and the growth of the county. Here the subject of this brief history grew to manhood and, besides assisting his father on the farm, attended school.

On May 14, 1907, Thomas F. Croughwell was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Miss Mary Cooney, of West Union, Nebraska. Her parents, William and Mary (Kennedy) Cooney, are farmers and pioneer settlers of the state.

Thomas F. Croughwell, by his intelligent participation in public affairs, has earned the respect and appreciation of his friends and neighbors. He has witnessed the growth of his county and has aided in every way he could to this advancement. He was elected county treasurer in 1907 and took office January 9, 1908.

GEORGE BEDDEO.

Probably no citizen of Harlan county, Nebraska, is better known for his active public spirit and good business judgment than the gentleman herein named. For the past twenty years and more he has been closely identified with the upbuilding of the better interests of his locality, and has incidentally become one of the substantial citizens of his county, held in the highest esteem and respect by all who know him. He owns a fine farm in Reuben township, section 13, where he occupies a fine residence and enjoys a peaceful and happy rural life.

Mr. Beddeo was born in 1832 in Wales, England. His father, Benjamin Beddeo, was a native of Wales, as was also his wife, who was Mary Miles. They both came to America when quite young and settled in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, in 1842, and later in Illinois, where our subject was raised, attending school in a log house. They were neighbors to Senator Cullom's father, their farms adjoining, and our subject and the well known senator were schoolmates during their boyhood days. In 1875 the family moved to Livingston county, locating near Pontiac, and there farmed for several years, the father's death occurring in Tazewell county, Illinois, in 1880. In 1886 Mr. Beddeo came to Nebraska and engaged in farming, purchasing two hundred acres of good land, which he has improved splendidly. He has erected one of the finest residences to be found in his locality, and has every convenience of modern times in his home and on the farm. He has a herd of thirty thoroughbred Shorthorn cattle, one hundred to one hundred and fifty hogs and other stock, and also does mixed farming on a large scale. Mr. Beddeo has been active in public affairs since coming here, serving on the town board for fifteen years, and also as justice of the peace for the same period. Politically he is an Independent. When the Grangers were organized in this community he was an active member of that body. For many years he has been class leader of the local Evangelical Church, and is an earnest worker along religious and educational lines.

In 1859 our subject was united in married to Miss Mary Richardson, daughter of John and Maria (Davis) Richardson, who were early settlers of Tazewell county, Illinois, and later moved to Livingston county, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Beddeo are the parents of the following children: Francis, a farmer in Iroquois county, Illinois, who owns a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres, valued at one hundred dollars per acre; Noah, deceased; Walter, of Orleans, Nebraska, there engaged in the real estate business; Elmer, manager for Ridgely & Co., Omaha, Nebraska; Mary, wife of Frank Carpenter, and Alvinus, both deceased.

DAVID R. SNYDER.

For over twenty years the gentleman whose name heads this review has been identified with the development of the financial and social interests of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, has gained a high station as a citizen and incidentally become one of the substantial men of his community. He is the owner of a fine one thousand one hundred and twenty-acre ranch in Sidney precinct.

David R. Snyder was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, on February 4, 1851, was reared and educated there, following farming during his boyhood years. His father, David Snyder, who is of German descent, still lives in that vicinity; his mother, Elizabeth (Replogle), also of German descent, died December 31, 1890. In 1876 David left home and came west, locating in Polk county, Iowa, where he remained eleven years, coming to Cheyenne county in 1887, arriving in the vicinity March 11th of that year. In the fall of 1886 he filed on a homestead in section 26, township 13, range 50, on which he settled during the following year, and he has made it his continuous residence since that time. He has about eighty acres cultivated, and runs a herd of one hundred cattle and twenty-five horses. In 1907 he built a fine two-story, seven-room house, and with the large barns, granary and sheds, together with an ample supply of water, he now has one of the best equipped farms in Cheyenne county.

Mr. Snyder was married at New Enterprise, Pennsylvania, November 16, 1873, to Miss Rosana Ebersole, a native of Bedford county, born February 3, 1851. Her father, Abraham Ebersole, is now living at Altoona, Pennsylvania. Her mother was Barbara Bowman.

While living in Pennsylvania both Mr. and Mrs. Snyder became members of the German Baptist church. Mr. Snyder is independent in politics and takes an active part in local affairs, especially those pertaining to educational matters. He is an Odd Fellow.

EDWIN L. HOUGEN.

Edwin L. Hougén, one of the thrifty young farmers of Trognitz precinct, Cheyenne county, Nebraska, was born in Norway, November 17, 1866. In 1888 he left his native land, sailing from Trondhjem to Hull, England, and crossing to Liverpool, sailed on the Eldorado. After a voyage of eleven days he landed in Quebec, whence he proceeded to Minnehaha county, South Dakota, and from there removed to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, locating on a homestead on the northwest quarter of section 14, township 16, range 53, which is now his home place. He has an additional Kincaid claim of three hundred and twenty acres in the same section. He cultivated one hundred and fifty acres of land and runs about seventy-five head of cattle and a bunch of horses. He is an earnest worker and his industry and good management have made him a fine home and farm with good buildings and improvements. We call attention to a view of the home and surroundings to be found on another page.

Mr. Hougen was married June 28, 1892, to Miss Ellen Viken, who was a native of Norway. She came alone from the old country by the same route Mr. Hougen came, leaving Norway April 1st. After a voyage of eleven days on the Atlantic she landed in America, and reached Dell Rapids, South Dakota, the 25th of the same month. Mr. and Mrs. Hougen have five interesting children, all at home, Ella R., Clarence O., Lewis M., Gilbert W. and Lily A. Mr. Hougen was the oldest of seven boys in his father's family. His wife's mother still lives in Norway, but the other parents on both sides of the family are now dead, having spent their entire lives in Norway.

Mr. Hougen is a Republican in politics and earnestly supports the principles of his party. He has been active in public matters, and is treasurer of school district No. 86. He was reared in the Lutheran church in Norway.

WILLIAM SHANNON.

William Shannon, one of the foremost farmers of Sheridan county, has built up a good home and valuable estate by his honest dealings and industry, and is respected and esteemed by all who know him.

Mr. Shannon was born in Jackson county, Indiana, in 1858. His father, Samuel Shannon, was a farmer of Irish-Scotch descent, born in Illinois, where he died in 1868. His mother, who was Miss Acenith Gordon, was born in Indiana of Scotch parents. She died in 1871, leaving a family of six children, of whom our subject is the third member. At the age of thirteen years he began working out by the month on different farms in the vicinity of his home, following this occupation for thirteen years. During this time he farmed in Arkansas one year, and in 1881 went to Iowa. In 1884 he came to Sheridan county, locating in section 26, township 32, range 45, which land he still holds. He filed on a tree claim and homestead without seeing either place. His intention in coming west was to get free land near Omaha, but being unable to secure the land there, he came on further west in the state. The first year was spent in working for the different settlers in the locality, breaking land and doing all sorts of work, and in the fall he built a dugout and a sod barn on his own place. The following year he went to work farming his land and also working for neighboring ranchmen in order to make a start for himself. He was getting along very nicely and making a good start when the dry years struck the country, and at the end of ten years, after losing several crops in succession, and experiencing many hardships and discouragements, he found himself worse off than when he landed here. He had his share of a pioneer's life, and does not want any more of it. More than once he has been lost on the plains, and obliged to spend the entire night tramping. One time in particular he lost his way, was without a coat and unable to find any sort of shelter, and was compelled to keep walking all night to keep from freezing to death. He has often seen the time when he was short on rations and it was a puzzle to know where the next sack of flour was coming from. Many times he grew discouraged and almost gave up the struggle, and had he been able to do so, would have sold out his holdings, but he is glad now that he stuck to it, and says he could never have done so well in any other place. He has a ranch of one thousand six hundred acres, farms two hundred acres of this and uses the balance for hay and grazing land for his cattle, running about one hundred and seventy-five head of stock all the time. He has his place well improved, all fenced and a complete set of good farm buildings, and has accumulated all of this property in the last twelve years. While adding to his farm he was in some cases obliged to sell the buildings on the land which he bought in order to make his payments on the property.

In 1888 Mr. Shannon was married to Miss Josephine Edgel, who was born in Illinois in 1867. Seven children have been born of this union, namely: Florence, Lee, Mary, McKinley, Forest, Shelby and Helen, all born and raised in their present homestead. Mr. Shannon is a staunch and intelligent Republican who has never voted any other ticket, but never votes it entirely straight. He has held local office at different times, and takes an active interest in educational affairs in his community, having been on the school board for many years. He would like to sell his land if he were able to obtain his price.

A. F. MALOY.

A. F. Maloy, an enterprising and intelligent agriculturist of Deuel county, is a resident of section 35. He has spent many years in that section and is one of the best known and most highly esteemed men of his county.

Mr. Maloy was born in Wisconsin, and first saw the light January 23, 1854. There were eight children in his father's family, four boys and four girls, he being the sixth in order of birth. They lived in Wisconsin until he grew to manhood, when he left home and went to Chicago, remaining there for four years, then came to Nebraska, locating at North Platte, arriving at the latter place in May, 1885, but only spent one month there and moved to Keith county, locating on the Platte river, and has lived continuously on that river since that time. He came into Deuel county in 1891, landing here on August 1st, and at once filed on a homestead and proved up. He had also owned a good homestead in Keith county, which he sold on leaving there. Besides his homestead rights he proved up on a timber claim, and he has two hundred and forty acres in the home ranch which joins the town of Oshkosh, besides four hundred acres in another tract. There is a large amount of hay and grazing land, besides quite a piece of fine alfalfa. He has three hundred and twenty acres on the table land, and in addition to these different farms, controls a leased school section.

Mr. Maloy has recently erected a handsome residence on his ranch near Oshkosh, and has one of the most completely equipped ranches and finest homes in the county. He runs quite a large herd of stock, including a fine bunch of horses, and takes especial pride in these animals, owning some very fine ones. Mr. Maloy was married to Susan Duffin, at the home of the bride's mother in Deuel county, on November 11, 1890, her parents being old settlers here, originally from Iowa, where Mrs. Maloy was born. Our subject and his estimable wife are the parents of the following children: Katie, Mary, Frank, Theresa and Herbert, all at home, the younger ones attending school. Mr. Maloy's parents are dead, while Mrs. Maloy's mother is living and still occupies the old homestead.

Our subject has served as justice of the peace of Oshkosh precinct, and is now moderator of school district No. 131. He takes an active part in all local affairs, and is classed among the progressive men of his time. He votes an Independent ticket and lends his influence for the upbuilding of the better interests of his community.

CLARENCE HERBERT.

Clarence Herbert, whose fine farm in section 1, township 29, range 47, Dawes county, is a credit to his locality, is a man of untiring energy, and classed among the wealthy agriculturists of his section.

Mr. Herbert was born in Madison, Wisconsin, in 1845. His father, John Herbert, was a farmer, of American stock, and he married Mary Ann Dayton, of Wisconsin. The family moved from Wisconsin to Illinois when our subject was a small boy, and they lived there for several years, then went to Indiana and remained up to 1866. In 1864 Clarence enlisted in Company B, Ninth Indiana Infantry, and was ordered south with his regiment. He saw service with the Army of the Cumberland, and with General Thomas at Nashville, at the battles of Franklin, Springhill, Pulaski and Columbia. He was sent into Texas, and they remained there up to the close of the war, receiving his discharge in September, 1865, having served in all one year and nine months. During that time he was twice wounded, once at Nashville, and the second time at Madison, Indiana, accidentally. After the war he returned to Indiana, and began working on the railroad, traveling over a large portion of the United States, and in this way saw a great deal of the different states and localities. He followed this work for twenty-five years, being employed by the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company for eleven years in western Nebraska.

About 1869 Mr. Herbert settled in Michigan with his family, he continuing on the road, and during some of that time worked in the lumbering woods, spending several years in that region, then in 1885 came to Nebraska and began working on railroad construction, as the Chicago and Northwestern Railway was being built through Valentine to the west. In June of that year he took up a homestead in Dawes county, building a log house, and made this his home. He still followed railroading but his family lived on the homestead and proved up on the land. About 1896 he began devoting more of his time to farming and ranching, and has succeeded in a marked degree, now owning a ranch of two thousand acres, all of which is fenced and in fine shape. He has two wells and wind mills which furnish a fine supply of water for all farming and household purposes, having two hundred acres under cultivation, and employs modern methods in farming. He is progressive and prosperous, and classed among the oldest settlers and influential residents of his locality, having always taken an active part in the history of the region from its early development. He has experienced much hardship and privation here, going through the drouth periods on this ranch, losing several crops, and when hauling supplies from his trading point was compelled to camp out at night under his wagon. His first team was a pair of oxen, and with these he broke up a large part of his homestead.

In 1871 Mr. Herbert was married to Miss Phoebe E. Toal, daughter of George Nelson Toal, a farmer and carpenter, who was born and raised in New York state. Mrs. Herbert's mother, prior to her marriage was Sarah Hall, also a native of New York state. To our subject and his good wife were born three children, namely: Fred, Charles and Ernest, and to Mrs. Herbert and the children belong much credit in the accumulation of their property, as they worked very hard to keep the work on the home place going while the husband and father was working at railroading.

WARREN CASS SYLVESTER.

Cass Sylvester, a representative farmer of Kaya Paha county, is one of the prominent old settlers of that section of the country, and a man of energetic nature and honest dealings. He has acquired a good farm and pleasant home, and during his residence here aided materially in the development of the agricultural resources of the locality.

Mr. Sylvester was born in Berrien county, Michigan, February 14, 1864. While he was still a lad his parents moved to Hamilton county, Nebraska, remaining there up to 1882, when they came to Keya Paha county. His father, Moses A. Sylvester, was a cooper by trade, following that calling and farming all his life. He died here in 1902, leaving a widow with a family of nine children, our subject being the seventh member. The mother is still living in this county. When Cass was twenty-one years old he took up a pre-emption here, but could not prove up without mortgaging the place, so filed homestead papers on it and in due time proved his claim. He paid five hundred dollars for a relinquishment, and purchased horses and machinery to run the place, which was partly improved, and he continued to improve the place since he has owned it. He has set out over a hundred fruit trees, besides erecting good buildings and fences. He cultivates about sixty-five acres, and the balance of the one hundred and sixty of which his farm consists, is used for pasture and hay land. He keeps quite a lot of stock on the place—cattle, hogs and horses.

Mr. Sylvester was married February 7, 1894, to Miss Lizzie Peterbaugh, whose parents were early settlers of Keya Paha county, coming here in 1881. To Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester have been born the following children: Homer A., Elsie V., Albert J., George, Earl

Mr. Sylvester is a Populist, but does not take an active part in public affairs, although he lends every influence in his power for the upbuilding of his home county and locality.

B. M. FOX.

A history of Deuel county would be incomplete without a sketch of the man whose name heads this article, so closely allied has his life been with the upbuilding of the county and surrounding country. Born at Omaha, Nebraska, July 18, 1868, Mr. Fox has probably seen more of the ups and downs of this life than the average man of twice his years. Mr. Fox is still a young man but by thrift and industry he has acquired a goodly amount of this world's goods and now resides on a ranch on section 29, township 16, range 42.

Henry R. Fox, the father of our subject, left Omaha in 1876, going to the Black Hills in South Dakota. The silver mines in the Black Hills were the center of western emigration at that time. In 1879 our subject with the balance of the family started for the Black Hills. They travelled on the train as far as Sidney, Nebraska, where they were compelled to take the stage the balance of the journey to their destination, where they joined the father. The family remained in South Dakota about six years, then removed to Nebraska by stage, settling on a ranch about five miles east of where Oshkosh is now located, on the North Platte river. The father of our subject homesteaded and proved up on the claim, residing there until his death in December, 1905. After the death of the father, our subject remained on the ranch and improved and enlarged it, until it contained ten thousand acres. Mr. Fox managed the ranch for about seven years, then sold a half interest in it, forming the Fox Land & Cattle Company, which was merged into the Western Land & Cattle Company in 1904, Mr. Fox being heavily interested as a stockholder and serving as foreman of the ranch until March, 1908, when he sold out his interest and located on section 29, township 16, range 42. This is now known as the Home Ranch and consists of about three hundred acres. Mr. Fox is extensively engaged in stock raising, running at this time about five hundred head of cattle and horses. He makes a specialty of draft horses, of which he has a splendid drove. Mr. Fox has made a study of scientific stock raising, which with his wide experience as a stock man, makes him one of the best judges of stock in the west.

Mr. Fox was married on October 8, 1893, to Alma I. Moore, at Big Springs, Nebraska. It will be remembered that 1893 was the year of the greatest of all world's fairs known in history—the World's Fair at Chicago—and Mr. Fox went to the fair on his wedding trip. Mrs. Fox is a native of Wisconsin, coming to Big Springs with her grandparents in 1885. Her father and mother died when she was a little girl. Mr. and Mrs. Fox have three children, as follows: Ruben, Clayton and Hope, all living at home.

Mr. Fox takes an active part in all public affairs of the county and state and is probably one of the best known stockmen in the west.

Henry R. Fox, father of B. M. Fox, was born in 1836, his parents being pioneers in Ohio, where Mr. Fox was born. He was married in Omaha, Nebraska, about the close of the Civil war. In 1876 he went to the Black Hills, his family following three years later. The Black Hills country was at that time booming, and Mr. Fox was one of the first to settle there. He helped pull the first saw mill into Deadwood, and also took an active part in Deadwood affairs at that time.

In 1885 he returned to Nebraska, settling in Deuel county, where he homesteaded a claim on the North Platte river. The homestead is now a part of the ranch owned by the Western Land and Cattle Company. The life of Mr. Fox was a varied one and he could relate many interesting stories of his early life. When a young man he went to New York city from Ohio, going by boat and stage. Then he went to San Francisco via the Isthmus of Panama, returning by stage. After returning from California, he entered the government service, freighting across the plains. He followed this for several years before going to the Black Hills. Mr. Fox was a very interesting man, having traveled a great deal, and was a representative citizen of Deuel county up to the time of his death, which occurred in Deuel county in December, 1895. His wife is still living and is now a resident of Omaha.

MORSE P. CLARY.

Among the representative men who now make Deuel one of the leading counties in western Nebraska, none are better or more favorably known than Morse P. Clary, who resides on the northwest quarter of section 14, township 15, range 42, in Ash Hollow district.

Mr. Clary was born in Quincy, Adams county, Iowa, October 20, 1858. He lived in Warren county a greater part of the time until March 18, 1886, when he joined his father, who had preceded him to Cheyenne, now Deuel county. His father settled in Deuel county, then known as Cheyenne, in 1885. Our subject homesteaded and proved up on the southeast quarter of section 28, township 15, range 42, and still owns the farm. He now owns about eight hundred acres, also a school section of six hundred and forty acres. Of this he cultivates about one hundred acres. He is engaged extensively in stock raising, running at this time about two hundred head of cattle, besides a splendid drove of horses. His ranch is one of the best equipped in western Nebraska, and is provided with all modern improvements.

In political faith Mr. Clary is a Republican. He takes a very active part in all public affairs, and has served as county commissioner two terms, 1892 to 1898. He has also served as treasurer of the school district, in which he lives, and was assessor in 1891. He has been especially active along educational lines in his county, having assisted in organizing several school districts, and has done as much if not more, than any other man in Deuel county to promote more and better schools.

Mr. Clary was married to Lou C. McNaught, at Indianola, Iowa, January 21, 1881. She is a native of Illinois and has two sisters living in western Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Clary are the parents of eight children, named as follows: March D., who married Nona West, auditor for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway; May, a teacher in the Kimball schools; Frank, bookkeeper for a loan and trust company at Omaha; Nona, a teacher in the public schools; Josie, also a teacher; Ray, Oren and Cora Maud.

Ash Hollow, as the district in which Mr. Clary and family live is locally known, is famous in western Nebraska history, many stirring scenes having occurred there in pioneer days.

D. B. Clary, father of Morse P. Clary, the subject of the above sketch, was born in Frederick county, Maryland, September 1, 1821. At the age of thirty years, he emigrated to Indiana, where he remained about eight years, preaching the gospel, having been ordained a Methodist minister and licensed to preach prior to his removal to Indiana. From Indiana he removed to Iowa and later, or in 1885, to Nebraska, where he served as a minister for two years. He was a preacher of the gospel for a total of thirty-six years. Mr. Clary was married September 16, 1851, to Rachel Ann Hooper. Six children blessed this union: Olive, Elmira, Ella, Victoria, Morse P. and Frank.

RESIDENCE OF HENRY SUDMAN,

Mr. D. B. Clary now makes his home with his son, Morse P., and is rounding out a life spent in making this world more pleasant for his fellow men. He is a preacher of the old school and in the thirty-six years of active service he has had a varied and interesting experience, having had an opportunity to study human life in all its various phases. During his ministry he has received over eight hundred converts into the church. Aside from his duties as a minister, he always took an active part in the educational and moral development of the community in which he lived, and when his work is ended on this earth, it can truly be said of him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

FRANK J. BELLOWS.

Frank J. Bellows, now a resident of the thriving town of Kimball, Nebraska, is also one of the early settlers and prominent pioneers of Kimball county, locating there when that county was still a part of "old" Cheyenne county. He is the owner of a fine estate, and one of the wealthy residents of his section, at present occupying the position of bookkeeper for Mr. Gus Linn. He has acted in that capacity for the past eight years, during the same time personally superintending the management of his extensive ranching interests.

Mr. Bellows was born in Cass county, Michigan, on the 4th of January, 1854, and grew to manhood in his native state. His parents lived there many years, both now being dead, and he has two brothers still living, one residing in Michigan and one in Indiana, while a sister is married and lives in Kimball county. In 1883 our subject went to Indiana, following farming there up to 1886, then came to Kimball county, arriving here in October, and filed on a homestead on section 10, township 14, range 55. He began to farm, experiencing many discouragements during the first few years, meeting with losses due to drouths and other causes, but gradually improving his claim, and proving up on his place, constantly acquiring additional land as he became able, and built up a good ranch. He is now owner of six hundred and forty acres of deeded land, also controls one section of school land besides other leased land in the vicinity of his home ranch. He deals extensively in stock, running a large herd of high-grade horses, and quite a bunch of cattle. He has about sixty acres of land under cultivation, good fences all over the ranch, and altogether has one of the best improved properties in the county. He is well and favorably known all over this part of Nebraska, and highly esteemed as a citizen and successful business man.

On the 23d of December, 1880, Mr. Bellows was married to Miss Katie A. Renninger, in Cass county, Michigan. They have no children. Mr. Bellows is a staunch Republican and has attended many county conventions and taken an active part in local and county affairs, serving as county clerk during 1894-1895. In 1899 he was appointed, and later elected county surveyor, and held that office up to 1908.

HENRY SUDMAN.

Henry Sudman, well known as a leading farmer and ranchman and public-spirited citizen of Keith county, has been closely identified with the development and upbuilding of that region for many years. He is highly esteemed by all as a prominent old-timer in western Nebraska, and has accumulated a valuable property in Paxton precinct by dint of honest industry and faithful effort.

Mr. Sudman was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1863, and was reared on a farm, receiving the rigid training that usually fell to the lot of the German lad in the middle classes. When he was seventeen years of age he started out for himself, coming to the United States, and after landing in New York city, struck out directly for the west, locating in Brule, Nebraska, where he began work as a section hand on the railroad. Later he was at Ogallala, also in Colorado, following railroading continually up to the spring of 1883. He then began working on the ranch, and for five years was employed by one ranchman, at the end of that time purchasing his present farm, and began a ranch of his own. He had but a small start, and his first building was a sod house, in which he "batched it" for two years, occupying the same shanty for about eight years after his marriage. He witnessed all the hard times on his farm, and during the years 1890-1894 lost every crop. Since then he has been very successful in raising good crops, and has three hundred and sixty acres of land irrigated under the Keith and Lincoln Counties Irrigation District Ditch. His ranch contains twenty-five hundred acres, and he is engaged principally in the cattle, horse and hay business. Mr. Sudman has erected a handsome residence on his ranch, two stories high, twenty-six by twenty-eight feet, with a one-story addition of sixteen by twenty-six feet, also had good barns and other buildings, wind mills, wells, fences, etc. In 1904 Mr. Sudman had the misfortune to lose his barn by fire, also considerable farm machinery, which was a serious loss to him, but he has replaced this property, and is prospering remarkably in every way. An excellent picture of Mr. Sudman's residence will be found on another page of this volume.

Mr. Sudman was married in the fall of 1890, to Miss Mary Ambrassat, of German descent. Nine children have been born to them, named as follows: Henry, Charles, Sophia, Minnie, Eddie and Emil (twins), Arthur, Albert and William. They are a happy and congenial family, and all are well liked in their community.

JOSHUA B. LEADER.

Joshua B. Leader, residing in section 20, township 30, range 26, Cherry county, Nebraska, was born at Mount Joy, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, April 21, 1856, and was reared on a farm. His father, Joshua Leader, was of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, and was a leading druggist of Mount Joy, while the mother, Agnes Gault, was born in Baltimore. Our subject was the only son in a family of four children and was obliged to make his way in life at the early age of eight years, his father having been killed in an accident while trying to catch a team of runaway mules. When old enough to choose an occupation he learned the carpenter's trade, and followed that trade for several years near his home until coming west in 1879. Early in May of that year he sojourned at Abilene, Kansas, but work being scarce for carpenters he came to Sterling, Nebraska. He secured employment in the bridge and building department of the Atchison & Nebraska, now the Burlington railroad, and was soon advanced to the foremanship of the water supply service, erecting tanks, wind mills and water equipment along the line, retaining this position until 1882. Mrs. Leader having been appointed teacher in the Plattsmouth schools, Mr. Leader resigned his position with the Burlington railroad water service and obtained employment in the shops of that company in Plattsmouth, staying there six months. After working as brakeman for that road for about a month he resigned and secured employment with the Union Pacific, where, through the help of one of his friends, who was a conductor on that road, he was promoted to a like position in five months. Owing to a wreck March 1, 1885, he was let out, but a month later secured a position on the Elkhorn and Missouri Valley railroad and on April 5th was made conductor on a construction train west of Chadron. When this work was completed he secured a position in the operating department and after braking for six weeks was made freight conductor and in 1889 was promoted to passenger conductor, where he was employed until October, 1902, at which time he resigned to take personal management of his ranch property, which he had purchased in March, 1897, and had kept in charge of a foreman until he could give it his personal attention.

Here he has engaged in the stock business, keeping about four hundred head of cattle and twenty-five horses, using eight hundred to a thousand tons of hay per annum, all grown upon the wide meadows of his sixteen hundred-acre ranch. He has the best improved ranch in the sand hills, fitted up with every convenience, having an elevated tank with which to water his lawn and supply the bathroom and kitchen of his fine ten-room house. Besides five ordinary wells there is one artesian flowing well which is not surpassed in quality in all that region. An ice house and cold storage chamber are supplied with ice cut from an extensive lake near the residence, which during the hunting season supplies the larder with an abundance of waterfowl. He has fine barns and a shed three hundred and fifty-eight feet in extent to accommodate his stock. He has spent about five thousand dollars in buildings on his ranch and can shelter every head of stock he owns. The ranch consists of sixteen hundred and forty acres of land besides a five-year lease on a section of school land adjoining. This is all fenced and altogether is one of the most valuable estates in the county.

Mr. Leader was married April 5, 1880, to Miss Olive Moorman, born in Columbus, Ohio, being the daughter of Thomas J. and Mary (Gates) Moorman, the latter a distant relative of the governor of Illinois. The father was in early life a planter in Virginia and later was a land owner in Columbus, Ohio. Coming west he conducted for from twelve to fourteen years a chain of stores in Lexington, South English and New Sharon, Iowa, in which he was very successful.

Although Mr. Leader has always voted the Republican ticket he has never sought public preferment, and does not care for public life, preferring to devote his time to the building up of his ranch and home place, an estate in which he may take just pride. For four years he was chief of Division No. 173, Order of Railroad Conductors, at Chadron. In the Masonic order he has made marked advancement, holding membership in the Blue Lodge, No. 551, founded by his father at Mount Joy, Pennsylvania. He has been a prominent member of the Chapter and Commandery at Chadron and of the Shrine at Omaha. Like most railroad men Mr. Leader is a jovial, genial companion, and a most hospitable host to anyone who may be so fortunate as to be a visitor at his ranch.

AUGUST BERGMAN.

August Bergman, a leading farmer and stockman of Phelps county, Nebraska, resides on his fine estate located in Westmark township, and is well known as a successful agriculturist and worthy citizen.

Mr. Bergman was born in Sweden in 1861, and came to America when a youth, his parents settling in Moline county, Illinois, in 1878, where he grew up and lived until the year 1882, when he came west and landed in Nebraska, and with his father, John Bergman, settled in Phelps county, Nebraska, on a homestead and remained there until the latter's death, which occurred in 1905. He had reached the age of seventy years, and had spent an honorable and upright life, esteemed by all who knew him for his honesty and strict integrity. Father and son worked together in building up the farm, and now have a valuable property, having put up a fine residence, and six large farm buildings for sheltering their cattle, horses, hogs and grain. They have always acted on the theory that one hundred and sixty acres well tilled and improved, devoted to mixed farming and stock raising, is sufficient for one family to attend properly, and have been successful in all their undertakings. They have always kept enough stock to consume all the hay and grain raised on the land, except the wheat, which has been for family use, and marketed what they did not need. In the hard years their stock furnished them with a good living, and during the prosperous times made them far more by feeding than had they sold their corn crop. Without feeding this year, a wagonload of hogs brings about one hundred dollars, and it would require a good many trips to town with corn to amount to this sum. Mr. Bergman also had the good judgment and foresight to secure about three hundred and twenty acres of pasture land in Union township, a few miles from the home farm, which furnishes all the hay needed for his stock. At this writing he has seventy-five cattle, Shorthorns and graded stock, and feeds about a carload each winter, which nets him a neat sum. His hogs consist of purebred and mixed Poland Chinas, and these he disposes of whenever they are ready for market. He is well satisfied with the success he has attained, and, like thousands of others of his countrymen, he has found America a veritable "land of promise." and Phelps county the "land of plenty." He and his father made a competence here, starting virtually on nothing. His mother makes her home with him at present, and the family are all members of the Swedish Free Mission church, located at Phelps Centre.

In 1887 Mr. Bergman married Miss Salma Bergquist, daughter of Andrew Bergquist. Mr. and Mrs. Bergman have five children, as follows: Elmer, who assists his father in the farm work; Paul and Joel, Marie and Ruth.

JOHN. LISTER.

John Lister, one of the sturdy and vigorous farmers of township 24, range 48, Box Butte county, is a worthy member of the ranks of old settlers of this part of Nebraska, and as he looks about on the broad acres and the beautiful little cities and towns that have sprung up in the wake of the early settler; as he recalls the past and thinks of the transformation that has made a fertile garden out of a smiling prairie wilderness, he may well say, "All of which I see, and a part of which I was," and he and his compeers are no small part of this great change. It is with peculiar pleasure that the pen of the historian undertakes to trace such a career.

Mr. Lister was born in Norfolk, England, August, 1862. His father, John Lister, was a fish peddler by occupation. He married Charlotte Holmes, who was also born and raised in the vicinity of our subject's birthplace. The latter grew up there and followed farming as a young man, starting to work out and earning his own living when he was but seven years of age. When he was thirteen years old he lost his mother by death, and his father only survived her five years, so he was left alone in the world at seventeen years of age. At that time he left his native land and came to the United States, landing in New York city in 1884, and from there went direct to Cleveland, Ohio, where he spent two years and worked at West Cleveland as farmer. In 1886 he came to Nebraska, at first locating in Holt county, remaining for about one year, then moved to his present location in Box Butte county, taking up a homestead in section 20, township 24, range 48. His first building was a sod shanty which he built himself, and he started to develop his farm, breaking land for crops and working out at freighting, and anything he could find to do in the locality. He had nothing to start with, only a few personal possessions, and had a hard time in getting started. His first team was a pair of mules which did all the work on his own place and he also used them to haul timber, break up land for his neighbors, etc. All his wood for fuel was hauled from the Platte river, and during the long trips which consumed several days, he was obliged to lie on the ground under his wagon at night, often in very severe weather, and suffered the usual experiences so familiar to the pioneers of those times. After many hardships and much hard labor Mr. Lister became more successful and he has accumulated a nice property. As the years grew better, the country becoming more thickly settled and towns being built up in this vicinity, he enlarged his farm, kept improving it and is now one of the well-to-do men of his community. He owns a fine ranch of eleven hundred and fifty acres, situated six miles southwest of Alliance. He has one hundred acres in hay land, and farms quite a large portion, all of it being well fenced and supplied with substantial buildings. He has erected a handsome residence, has many fine trees for shade and also fruit trees which he planted himself, including an apple and plum orchard, also small fruits.

In 1893 Mr. Lister was married to Mary Coley, daughter of John Coley, of Irish stock. Mr. and Mrs. Lister have two children living, Mary, aged twelve years, and James, aged fourteen years. Two others, George and William, died during infancy. The mother died in November, 1903, leaving a sorrowing family to mourn her loss. She was a lady of most estimable character, beloved by all who knew her, and was sincerely mourned by her devoted family and many friends.

During Mr. Lister's early residence in this locality he had all the experiences common to the life on the frontier, helping in the building up of its resources, aiding the settlers, and has been a part and parcel of its growth and development. Politically he is an Independent.

GEORGE M. ELLIOTT.

George M. Elliott, a prominent farmer and stock raiser of Brown county, Nebraska, was born in the town of Bovina, Delaware county, New York, September 3, 1847. His father, Robert Elliott, was a farmer by occupation, of Scotch birth, as was also his mother, Jane (Dalton) Elliott. There were seven children in his parents' family, of whom he was the fifth, being reared and educated in his native state. In 1866 the family came west, settling in Grant county, Wisconsin, where they lived on a farm for two years, then moved to Poweshiek county, Iowa. Our subject lived there with his parents up to 1879, then moved to Osceola county, taking a homestead and proving up on it. He farmed there for some years, and during the grasshopper raids suffered the destruction of all his crops, also losing much through the wet seasons, so becoming discouraged with conditions he gave up the struggle and sought other regions. In 1888 he first came to Brown county, and for the first year was employed by Hall & Davidson, bankers, working on a salary. He then rented land and began on his own account with his entire capital comprised in a yoke of oxen; he had a hard time at first, however remaining on this place for five years. He then traded his stock for a farm on Buffalo Flats, which property he still owns. For six years he lived on the Winters farm, east of Long pine. In 1903 he purchased his present farm, located in section 5, township 30, range 20, through which Long Pine creek runs, giving an abundant supply of water. Here he has improved the place, putting up good buildings, fences, etc., and has a valuable estate. There are twelve hundred acres in the farm and ranch, of which one hundred acres are cultivated. He is engaged principally in stock raising, of which he has made a pronounced success with horses, cattle and hogs.

Mr. Elliott was married March 25, 1872, to Miss Mary Jane Cummings, a native of Jefferson township, Poweshiek county, Iowa, born of old American stock. Her father, Alexander Cummings, was an old settler in Indiana, from which state he served through the Civil war, dying eventually from disease contracted during the service. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott have a family of seven children, named as follows: Robert, David, William, Philena, Erastus, Flossy and Roy, all born in Iowa excepting the last named, who was born in Brown county. In politics he is independent and fraternally a member of the lodge of Royal Highlanders at Long Pine.

Mr. Elliott occupies a foremost place in the ranks of the successful and prosperous citizens of Brown county, and is held in the highest esteem by his fellowmen.

CONRAD T. STIKKER.

Conrad T. Stikker, an old and highly respected citizen of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is owner of a fine ranch of eleven hundred and twenty acres in section 34, township 17, range 48. He is a gentleman of exemplary character, and has spent the past eighteen years in this vicinity, and is one of the leading pioneers of the county, having watched the growth and taken an active part in its development since locating here.

Mr. Stikker is a native of the village of Arnt, Aurich, Hanover, Germany, and was born September 29, 1846, and grew to manhood in his native country. He served through the Franco-Prussian war, participating in the battles of Le Maes, Coulie and Orleans. He came to the United States in 1887, having sailed from Bremen Haven March 27, and after a nine days' voyage landed in Baltimore. His first location was in Dawson county, Nebraska, where he spent two years, then came on to Cheyenne county, and was among the early settlers here. He arrived here in the spring of the year, and immediately filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, which is the beginning of his present vast estate. He went through the usual experiences of the old-timers in the vicinity, meeting with discouragement and failure at different times, but through it all never lost hope and stuck to his original intention of building up a good home in the wilderness, and how well he has succeeded is evidenced by his present prosperity. He has one hundred and seventy-five acres under cultivation and raises fine crops of small grains and corn, also has large tracts of hay land and good pasture for his herd of one hundred and thirty cattle, besides other stock, including thirty horses. His ranch is improved with good buildings of all descriptions, fenced in good shape, and is one of the best equipped in the locality.

Mr. Stikker was married to Miss Johanna Middens, in Germany, on June 23, 1880, and together they came to the new world to seek a fortune and build up a home for themselves. Five children have been born to them, named as follows: Tonjes, Henry, Bernhard (born in Germany), Grace and John (natives of Nebraska), all living at home. The parents of both our subject and his wife are now deceased.

Mr. Stikker is active in local affairs pertaining to good government, and is a leading citizen in school matters, now serving as moderator of district No. 20. In political views he is a strong Republican, and is a member of the Lutheran church.

BENJAMIN J. JONES.

Benjamin J. Jones, an old settler and prominent resident of Garfield county, Nebraska, occupies a nice home on section 21, township 22, range 14, owns an extensive ranch and is recognized as one of the influential and well-to-do citizens of his community.

Mr. Jones was born in county of Cork, Ireland, in 1843, grew up there and when he was twenty years old left his native land and came to the United States. He first settled in Boston, where he engaged in the livery business and carried it on for about seventeen years. He then struck out for the west and landed in Nebraska the 7th of March, 1880. Here he filed on a homestead and timber claim and proved up on all of it. His son Ed. also took up land under the Kincaid law adjoining his father's land. Our subject later purchased more land in the vicinity until he is now proprietor of twelve hundred and sixty deeded acres. He has about one hundred and fifty acres of this under cultivation, and the balance is used for pasture and hay land. He raises considerable corn, oats and other small grain, keeps a large herd of cattle, and enjoys the distinction of owning some of the very best stock cattle in the county. He deals almost exclusively in Shorthorns, preferring this breed to any other for this region. He usually markets two or three carloads each year and makes a good profit from his feeding. Mr. Jones's ranch is well supplied with good buildings, including house, barns, granaries, large cattle sheds, fine groves, trees and orchard. He has an unlimited water supply, obtained from two flowing wells on his ranch, one of which reaches a depth of one hundred and seventy-five feet, and the other one hundred and eighty feet, and the water flows from these with considerable force and runs the whole year around. There are about a dozen or more of these wells in this part of the county, and they furnish the purest and clearest water for all uses. In 1905 Mr. Jones decided to try raising clover on his farm, which was a radical departure from the former practices, as it was generally believed that the soil was not well enough adapted to its growth, and he was ridiculed on all sides for this, but he stuck to his purpose and seeded down a patch of land. He was most successful, and now has a fine clover meadow. In 1907 he harvested his second crop of the grass, had a splendid yield, and has proved that it is as easy to grow clover here as it is all other grasses and grains. Mr. Jones has made quite a success of English blue grass, and says it can be grown very successfully here.

In 1867 Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Mary Noonan, a native of the county in which our subject was born, in Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of four children, three of whom are living, namely: Edward B., B. J. and Mary. One son, John, is deceased. The family are members of the Roman Catholic church, and are very well known and highly esteemed in their community. In political sentiment Mr. Jones is an Independent, and is an admirer of Bryan.

EMIL SINDT.

This gentleman is among the oldest settlers in western Nebraska, coming to Franklin county in 1887 and locating in Macon, where he lived for eleven years engaged in farming and stock raising. He bought land in section 17, Farmers township, and farmed a section of land, and owned one hundred and sixty acres that lies northwest of the town of Franklin. Mr. Sindt is proprietor of eleven hundred and twenty acres in all, and raises and feeds from one hundred and sixty to two hundred head of cattle each year, and from two to three hundred hogs, which he ships to market. He is one of the progressive and up-to-date agriculturists of his section, and has been very successful in his farming and stock raising enterprises since coming here. Mr. Sindt is a native of Holstein, born near Kiel, Germany, in 1867. His parents were both born in that place, and spent their lives there. Our subject grew up in Germany, and came to the United States in 1885, locating in Scott county, Iowa, where he spent several years. He much prefers Nebraska to Iowa as a farming and stock raising country, and since he settled here land which he could have bought for ten dollars per acre then is now worth sixty.

Mr. Sindt has an elegant farm and has made his home one of the attractive places in the county by ornamentation, a splendid avenue of trees leading from the highway to his residence in the midst of a fine grove, the whole making a fine approach. So many farmers seem too negligent of these inexpensive but splendid additions to the value and beauty of their farms, which really cost so little except the time and labor spent.

Mr. Sindt was united in marriage in 1889 to Miss Emily Kruse, also a native of Kiel, Germany, who came to America in 1889. They are the parents of eight children, named as follows: Annie, Carl, Henry, John, Benjamin, Martha, William and Lena.

Mr. Sindt is a splendid type of the robust, manly German settler, whose individual success has added so largely to the success of this whole United States, and his wife and children are also of this stamp of German-Americans, industrious, intelligent and progressive, making substantial and worthy citizens of any community. The family belong to the Lutheran church at St. Paul, Nebraska.

JOHN A. WALFORD.

John A. Walford is one of the well-known residents and early settlers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska. He has given liberally of his time and influence in the development of the resources of the locality where he has passed many years, and takes considerable pride in the fact that he has watched the growth of the county from the early days of its settlement. Mr. Walford has a pleasant home and valuable estate in section 24, township 17, range 48, a view of which we present on another page.

Mr. Walford was born in Peoria county, Illinois, on February 25, 1863, and grew to the age of ten years in that vicinity. At that time his parents moved to Iowa, settling in Adams county, where they took a farm, and his boyhood days were spent in that state, assisting his father in operating the home farm. In the spring of 1887 he came to Cheyenne county and filed on the homestead which he still occupies, originally proving up on one hundred and sixty acres, and has since added to this, now owning a whole section. He farms one hundred and twenty acres, and uses the balance as a ranch, running quite a bunch of cattle and sufficient horses for all farming and ranching purposes.

Mr. Walford's father is still living in Adams county, Iowa, at the advanced age of eighty-one years, but his wife is dead. John A. was the second member in a family of three children, all of whom are living.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN A. WALFORD,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF FRANK A. HAND,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

Mr. Walford is one of the leading public-spirited men of his community, always lending his best aid for the good of the locality. He is at present serving as school moderator of district No. 19. In political sentiment he is a Republican.

FRANK A. HAND.

The prosperity enjoyed within the borders of Cheyenne county is due in a large measure to the enterprise and thrift of the agriculturists of that region. Their well improved and finely tilled farms evidence good management and painstaking care, and in no locality is this more apparent than in Sidney precinct. Among the residents of that locality is the gentleman whose name heads this sketch. He is a well-to-do and worthy citizen, and has gained a valuable estate by his persistent industry and honest dealings, enjoying the esteem and universal respect of his fellowmen.

Mr. Hand was born in Branch county, Michigan, on October 4, 1863. His father, Cyrus A. Hand, was a native of Seneca county, New York. His mother, who was Emma Fetterley, was born in Madison county in the same state. The former was a typical representative of the New England Yankee, of mixed nationality, the mother being of Pennsylvania-German descent.

Our subject grew up in Michigan to the age of twenty-one. In April, 1885, he came to Nebraska and located at Sidney, where he followed the occupation of contractor and builder for a number of years. He acquired a tract of land in Cheyenne county, bought a pre-emption right, and took up a timber claim, also homestead of one hundred and sixty acres lying in section 32, township 13, range 49, and during this time still worked as a builder in the county, doing most of his work in Sidney, a distance of six miles from his farm, over which he traveled every morning and evening while proving up on his land. His chores and other farm work was done after the long drive every night. His first house was a rough shanty, and in this hut his first child was born, the infant being one of the first white children born in that locality. Mr. Hand was able to gradually improve his place more rapidly as the section became more thickly settled, and he put up substantial stone barns and other buildings. In 1908 he remodelled the dwelling, making it one of the largest and handsomest ranch houses in the country. Gradually adding more land to his original possessions, he is now the owner of sixteen hundred and ten acres, all situated in sections 30, 31 and 32, township 13, range 49, all lying in one body. He farms two hundred acres and is extensively engaged in ranching, running as high as two hundred and fifty head of cattle some years. We invite attention to the view of his handsome residence appearing on another page of our work.

Mr. Hand was married at Sidney May 30, 1892, to Miss Alma Palmer, a daughter of James E. and Maria J. (Secor) Palmer, now living in Colorado. To them have been born the following children, all of whom are living at home and form a most interesting family group: Emma J., Hazel A., Clara A., Vera A., Nora A., Lester A. and Esther Alice. Mrs. Hand was born in Wayne county, New York, coming to Nebraska with her parents in 1887, where he became acquainted with Mr. Hand. He and his charming family take a leading part in local affairs, both social and politically, and they have a large circle of warm friends and good neighbors. Mr. Hand is a staunch Republican, active in party politics. He affiliates with the Frank Welch Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Sidney.

JOHN JOHNSON.

John Johnson, for the past twenty years and more a resident of Cheyenne county and proprietor of a fine farm in Trognitz precinct, is a man of wide agricultural pursuits and has a thorough knowledge of his calling. In his early youth he chose farming as his vocation, and has perfected himself in this line, and through systematic labors and good judgment has acquired a valuable property and a home with all the comforts of life.

Mr. Johnson was born in Sweden, April 16, 1863, and was reared there, following the life of the middle class of that country, remaining with his parents until he was about eighteen years of age. He was the youngest of the four living children of his parents, an equal number having passed to the great beyond. On June 3, 1881, he came to America, sailing from Liverpool in the Glasgow, landing after sixteen days in Quebec. He came directly west to Illinois, locating in Warren county, where he followed farm work for six years. He then came to Nebraska, taking as a homestead the southwest quarter of section 6, township 16, range 52, and has since filed on the northwest quarter under the Kincaid law. He started to develop the farm and accumulate a competence, and while he had many discouragements at first on account of the unsettled condition of the country and met with losses in crops and cattle, he gradually forged ahead and was able to improve his land extensively. He erected good buildings, and worked into the stock business, at the present time having over eighty head of cattle and quite a bunch of horses. He has one hundred and sixty acres under cultivation, raising good crops of small grain, and has been very successful in both farming and the stock business, owning about eight hundred acres jointly with his wife.

Mr. Johnson was married to Mrs. Bettie Nelson, at Sidney, Nebraska, November 24, 1895. Mrs. Johnson was born in Sweden and was a widow with two children, Ernest Alfred and John Oscar, when she was married to our subject. Mr. Johnson's parents are both dead, having spent their entire lives in Sweden. The family have a wide acquaintance in the locality, and enjoy the esteem and respect of all who know them. Mr. Johnson is prominent in local affairs and known throughout the county as a citizen of sterling worth and a farmer of intelligence and enterprise. In political sentiment he is a Republican. Religiously he was reared in the Lutheran faith.

HARRY L. BARTLETT.

The name of Harry L. Bartlett is a familiar one to the residents of Dawes county, Nebraska, where he has lived for many years, locating here when this region was practically in its infancy, and has taken a leading part in its development and growth from its early settlement. He owns a well improved and valuable estate in section 6, township 29, range 47, and enjoys a pleasant and happy home.

Mr. Bartlett was born in Amherst, Massachusetts, in 1865. His father, Alfred E., married Rebecca Putnam, also born and raised in Massachusetts, and they afterwards came west and were among the oldest settlers in Nebraska, where the father engaged in the farming and ranching business. The subject of our sketch was but three years of age when his parents settled in Audubon county, Iowa, and he was reared and educated there, attending the country schools during his boyhood. At the age of twenty Mr. Bartlett came to Nebraska and settled on a homestead in the southeastern corner of Dawes county, "batching it" for several years, living near a brother who had settled here some years before. He proved up on his claim, and was in the cattle business from the first, farming a small portion of his place, and during the hard times working in the Black Hills in the mines. He spent a short time at Deadwood. He filed on another homestead in section 12, township 29, range 48, and remained for four years, farming during that time, but proved up also and located on his present farm in 1893. Here he bought land, put up buildings and developed a good ranch and has been most successful in every venture, the place consisting of thirty-two quarter sections, a large part of which lies along the Pepper creek. He has it all fenced and cross fenced, and devotes his time to the sheep raising business principally although he has about thirty horses and a few head of cattle. One hundred and fifty acres are devoted to farming purposes, raising small grain, corn, oats, etc., for feed for his stock.

In the early days of Mr. Bartlett's residence here he went through many rough experiences, in travelling by team through the wild country, surrounded by wild beasts and spending many a night sleeping on the snow covered ground. For some time he was employed as stage driver, carrying the mail from Hay Springs to Nonpareil, in Box Butte county, and at that time there were only three dwelling places on the road between these two towns.

Mr. Bartlett was united in marriage in 1893, to Miss Bessie Fenner, daughter of Bradford Fenner, an old settler in this state. Prior to her marriage Mrs. Bartlett was a teacher in the schools of Dawes county. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett are the parents of two children, namely: Arthur, aged fourteen years, and Raymond, aged ten years.

Mr. Bartlett is a Republican in his political views and takes a keen interest in party affairs.

CLAUS ROHWER.

The above named gentleman resides on section 3, township 32, range 44, of Sheridan county. He was born in Holstein, Germany, in 1857, and was raised on a farm there until twenty-three years of age. His father, Max Rohwer, who was born in 1817 and died in 1899, and his mother, who was Margaret Rohwer, born in 1818, and died in 1900, never left the fatherland. There were three boys and two daughters in the family, our subject being the youngest member of the boys. He started working for himself on farms in Germany when sixteen years old, but spent some time at home with his parents, and in 1880 he came to America, locating in Fremont, Nebraska. Here he worked out on farms for two years, then spent a year in Wyoming and a short time was in eastern Iowa.

In the spring of 1884 he filed on his present pre-emption. He had shipped a car of stock from Walcott, Iowa, to Valentine, and drove them from there to his farm. At this time he had two other Germans in partnership with him. He immediately began building a set of farm buildings on his place, and the house he put up then is still standing. During the first year he worked on the railroad and the following year broke up some land and put in a crop. He "batched it" on his claim up to 1886, when he was married to Miss Annie Shicowsky, born in Holstein, Germany, in 1863, who came to America when a young woman, settling in Sheridan county. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rohwer, who are named as follows: Emma, Olga, Minnie and Johnnie, all born and raised on the present pre-emption.

For a few years everything went along nicely. Mr. Rohwer raised a few good crops and was just nicely started when the dry years came, and from 1893 up to 1897 he had hard work to keep things going. He often felt very discouraged and would have left the place if he had found a buyer, but now is very thankful that he stuck to it. Times got better and he has succeeded in a marked degree. He now owns four hundred and eighty acres of good farming land, and cultivates about one hundred and thirty acres, keeping about fifty head of cattle and twelve horses. He has erected a good set of farm buildings, and has his land all fenced and cross fenced. During 1906 he put up a fine house and large barn, costing him about two thousand dollars. He is well satisfied with what he has done since coming here, and feels that he could not have done any better in either Germany or Iowa, and probably not nearly so well. He does not care to sell his holdings, and would not care to live anywhere else, as he likes the location and has every convenience of a model rural home, with the mail brought to his home every day, and pleasant and comfortable surroundings.

Mr. Rohwer is not a party man in local affairs, and never held any office except local, and never sought one. He is a Republican.

Mr. Rohwer is an industrious and energetic worker, and shows good judgment and marked ability in all his business dealings. He is much above the average in intelligence and is always interested in all that tends to the advancement of conditions in his locality. He tells of the hard times he passed through during the drouth periods, and states that at one time he seeded about fifty bushels of wheat, and did not raise enough to get the seed back. Of late years he has raised as high as thirty-three bushels of wheat per acre, thirty of corn and about sixty of oats, and his potatoes have yielded a banner crop, going nearly one hundred bushels to the acre.

JAMES S. CAMPBELL.

Among the active workers in local political and educational affairs in Keya Paha county, Nebraska, and one who has always taken a deep interest in the development of the commercial and agricultural interests of his locality, the gentleman above mentioned takes a prominent place.

Mr. Campbell was born in Adams county, Iowa, March 28, 1858, and reared on his father's farm. The latter, Benjamin C. Campbell, served in Company F, Twenty-first Missouri Regiment, for three years, and had two brothers killed in that war. In 1863, while the father was still in the army, the mother, who in her youth was Elizabeth Scott, moved with her family to Adair county, and in 1871 migrated to Polk county, Nebraska. In a family of seven children, our subject was the third in order of birth. At twenty years of age he began farming for himself in Polk county, attending Cornell College, in Iowa, until he was twenty-six. He came to Keya Paha county in 1884, taking up a homestead on section 2, township 33, range 24, his present farm. He put up all his buildings himself, using the timber from his own land, on which there is also plenty of fine running water. During the first years he went through hard times, and was obliged to haul all provisions from Ainsworth, his nearest trading post. He had but little money to start with, and worked hard to establish his farm and home, but has been amply rewarded for his labors. He now has four hundred and eighty acres of deeded land and two hundred and eighty acres under the Kincaid homestead law, cultivating one hundred acres of this and using the balance for hay and pasture land for his stock, of which he keeps from seventy-five to eighty head of cattle, part of them registered Short-horns, and thirty good horses. He has of late taken up the breeding of mules.

Mr. Campbell was married in Polk county, April 13, 1884, to Miss Tennie Arnott, a native of Wisconsin, who came to Polk county with her parents, David and Jane (Forsythe) Arnott, in 1882. Five children have been born to them, namely: Arthur D., Evan H., Ellen, Ida and Flora, all living at home at present except Arthur, who is lumbering in Washington.

Mr. Campbell is a man of wide experience and superior intellect. He received a good education, and for seven years followed ministerial work in Brown and Cherry counties in the Methodist Episcopal church. He has also been active in political circles, is a Republican and elected county treasurer in 1889, serving four years. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen.

GEORGE GUNDERSON.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal review is well known in Kimball county as a progressive agriculturist and stock grower, having up to 1907 been engaged in the sheep raising business, also a prominent shipper of his locality. He is now a resident of the town of Kimball, connected with the blacksmithing department in P. Maginnis' establishment.

George Gunderson was born in Florence, Nebraska, January 9, 1875. He is a brother of Hans Gunderson, one of the early settlers in western Nebraska, and was the second youngest child in his father's family, growing up on the frontier and is a typical representative of the sturdy native born and bred Nebraskan. A sketch of this brother appears elsewhere in this volume. In 1888 our subject came to Kimball county and filed on a homestead on section 30, township 14, range 53, proved up and lived there for several years, going through all the early hardships of the pioneers in the section. He sold this homestead and now has a Kin-kaid claim of four hundred and eighty acres in section 26, township 14, range 54, on which he raises sheep and horses, also farms about forty acres of the place. He has been very successful in his different enterprises, and for so young a man is the possessor of a tidy fortune, gained through his individual effort, thrift and good management.

Mr. Gunderson was married at Kimball, in September, 1898, to Miss Gertrude Frederickson, who was born in Denmark and came to the United States about the year 1892. They have three children, all bright and interesting young people, and they are named as follows: Ida, Helen and George Carl.

In 1904 Mr. Gunderson was elected coroner of Kimball county, and held that office one term, proving himself a capable official. He is a Republican.

ISADORE D. WHALEY.

Isadore D. Whaley, a prominent business man of Hyannis, Nebraska, has built up a good home and acquired a leading position in the affairs of the community through his integrity and honesty in all his dealings.

Mr. Whaley was born in Simcoe, Lower Canada, in 1863. His father, Milton Whaley, was a native of Ireland, and his mother, who was Loretta Green, was born in America, of Irish descent. He was reared in Ohio, the family having settled there in his early boyhood, and he attended the common schools, and later the high school at Geneva, Ohio, from which he was graduated in 1885. He also took a course at Payne Avenue Schools, Cleveland, Ohio, and acquired a thorough schooling, which stood him in good stead during his later career. After leaving school he travelled for a time, going all through Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, spending several years at Minneapolis, engaged in the furniture business. He next went to Colorado and was in Leadville during the early history of that region. From there he moved to southern Colorado, then to New Mexico, so that by the time he was twenty-two years of age he had seen more of the United States than many men twice that age, and through travel had acquired a wide knowledge of conditions existing in different parts of the country. He returned to Ohio in about 1885, settling in Ashtabula county, and made that his home for about five years, then came west to Nebraska, his first location being Grand Island. After spending three years in that vicinity he associated himself with the Burlington railroad with headquarters at Dunning, and was in the employ of that company for two years. He came to Grant county, still working for the Burlington railway, and has spent in all thirteen years in the service of that road. During his early residence in this vicinity he had taken up a homestead in section 31, township 24, range 31, Grant county, and now owns a tract of six hundred and forty acres.

Mr. Whaley was married in 1885, to Hattie Williams, daughter of James H. and Hattie E. (Stevens) Williams, the father a prominent veteran of the Civil war, and an old settler in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Our subject is the father of three children, namely: Milton H., Ella and Charles. The family occupy a pleasant home in Hyannis, Nebraska, and are highly esteemed by all, and considered among the leading old timers of the region. Mr. Whaley has always been actively engaged in helping to build up his community, assisting in the development of the agricultural section and is a worthy citizen. Personally he is broad-minded and liberal in all matters, and has had a large and varied experience in the affairs of his country for so young a man.

Special mention should be made to Mr. I. D. Whaley's children, and also his son-in-law, as they are among the most widely known musicians of the west. They have an orchestra of their own and have played in eastern and western Nebraska. Milton H. Whaley is a prominent cornet player; Ella Whaley, now Mrs. C. E. Frostic, is a pianist; Charles Whaley is a clarinet player and Mr. C. E. Frostic, the son-in-law, is a violin player.

HENRY GROSENBACH.

Henry Grosenbach, of Emerson township, Harlan county, Nebraska, extensive land owner and successful farmer, came to this county in 1887, purchasing a farm in section 1, consisting of six hundred and forty acres. He was born in Tazewell county, Illinois, and his father, Jacob Grosenbach, settled there in the pioneer days of that state, farming on forty acres, and eventually became a large land owner. He came from Germany as did also his wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Rorebach. Our subject was raised in Illinois and farmed there up to 1887, then moved to Nebraska, engaging in mixed farming and stock raising, and from the very first has been most successful. He has kept adding to his holdings in this county and is now proprietor of over two thousand acres of land, and is one of the wealthiest men in his locality. He devotes all his time and attention to his farming operations, and everything is kept in the finest condition possible, with every improvement for the prompt carrying on of farm and domestic work.

Mr. Grosenbach was married in November, 1874, to Miss Elenora Ficht, a native of Tazewell county, Illinois, also born and raised there. They have a family of ten children, named as follows: Samuel, living at home with his parents; Henry, Daniel and John, all of this county; Edward, living at Lincoln, Nebraska; Lizzie (married), Katie (married), and the other three children deceased.

The family are members of the Evangelical church, and highly respected members of their community. Our subject and family removed from the farm to Mascot Village in September, 1908. He built a fine residence with modern conveniences. He has retired from active life.

WILLIAM TOULSON.

The gentleman whose name heads this review is one of the foremost citizens of this locality. He is one of the early settlers in Nebraska, and has done his full share in the development of the agricultural interests of the community where he chose to make his home. He lives on a well improved farm in Brown county, and is a representative farmer and worthy citizen. An interesting picture of his place will be found on another page of this volume.

Mr. Toulson was born in the village of Caythorp, Lincolnshire, England, July 5, 1837. His parents were day laborers in England, where they lived and died, never having left the mother country. Our subject was reared in the locality in which he was born, with meager school advantages. He began working out at the age of six years, scaring birds and picking stones, doing more strenuous labor as soon as he grew old enough. He determined to strike out for himself, and in 1873 came to America, sailing from Liverpool, October 2d on the City of Paris, of the Inman line, landing in New York October 12th, locating in Crawford county, Iowa. He secured work, saving his wages with which to send for his family, which he did in the spring of 1875, they joining him in June. In 1883 he located in Nebraska, settling on his present farm in section 10, township 31, range 22, where in time he acquired four hundred and eighty acres, of which he has since given a half section to his son. Here he was among the first settlers in this locality, there being but one house between Ainsworth and Plum creek, the whole country being practically a wilderness. The place he settled on had no improvements whatever, but he went to work and soon had built up a good home, and gradually added the improvements necessary for running a successful farm. He and his son Tom together now own eight hundred acres of land, part of which is in a high state of cultivation. He also has one of the finest orchards to be found in Brown county, containing five hundred fruit trees of all kinds, in splendid condition. His garden is one of the best kept and most productive in the locality in which he resides.

Mr. Toulson was married in Manham-on-Trent, England, November 5, 1860, to Miss Jane Hunt. Six children have been born to them, four of whom are now living, named as follows: George, deceased; Enoch; Mary Jane, wife of Oscar McIntosh, of Washington; Ann Elizabeth, who married George Rmert, of Ainsworth; Rachel, deceased, and Thomas. The two youngest were born in America.

Mr. Toulson has always evinced a lively interest in all local and state affairs, and has held the office of assessor of his township, as well as taking an active part in all educational and religious work in his community. He is one of those who organized and established the schools in his vicinity, and at different times has held school offices for many years. He was instrumental in 1904 in establishing Island Grove Methodist church, of which he is a member, and contributes liberally to its support. He enjoys the confidence and esteem of his fellowmen. Politically he is independent in politics, supporting the candidate whose moral character seems to him to be the highest.

PAUL R. BORGQUIST.

The gentleman above named is so widely known that the people of Cheyenne county need no introduction to him. He is a pioneer of that region, and by his labors there has aided materially in the development of the farming, commercial and social interests of his locality. He is now one of the extensive land owners, farmers, market gardeners and stock raisers of Cheyenne county, and has gained a fortune through business foresight, honesty and good management. He makes his home in Sidney precinct.

Paul R. Borgquist was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, January 27, 1864. His father, who was a hospital steward, removed with his family to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1867, where they lived for about one year, and in 1868 removed to Fort Preble, Maine, remaining only six or seven months. He was next stationed at the fort at Sidney, Nebraska, remaining one year, then went to army posts in Wyoming. In April, 1871, he returned to Sidney and resided in that vicinity the rest of his life. He acquired a tract of land east of Sidney on section 34, township 14, range 49, and accumulated over one thousand acres of ranch land. Of this Paul cultivates eighty acres and runs about one hundred and fifty cattle and thirty head of horses. His ranch is well supplied with good buildings and improvements, they being located on Lodgepole creek. About two hundred acres is irrigated and part of the tract is devoted to market gardening, a very remunerative branch of farming.

Mr. Borgquist's father, Carl E., was born in the province of Smoland, Sweden, May 18, 1826, and came to the United States in 1849.

He enlisted in the Mounted Riflemen, United States Army, for frontier service, and continued in the army until the Civil war, and served as hospital steward in the medical department until 1871. On his retirement from the hospital service in 1871 he entered the business world, opening a drug store and handling a stock of general merchandise and carried on the same successfully for twenty years. During this time he became largely interested in a big herd of stock and many acres of land, and retired from the drug business in 1891, taking up his residence on his ranch, where he lived to the time of his death, August 6, 1896. He was one of the staunchest gold Republicans throughout the silver campaign of those times, and was prominent in all political matters. He married Mary Kenney, a native of Ireland, born about 1838, their marriage occurring August 19, 1862. She still resides on the home ranch with her son. They were among the earliest settlers in western Nebraska, and passed through all the hardships of early Nebraska times. Our subject has one sister married, now living in Jackson's Hole country in Wyoming. Mr. Borgquist is a prominent Republican and chairman of the county committee since 1904. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Ancient Order United Workmen at Sidney. A view of the ranch home with its picturesque surroundings is shown on another page of this work.

JONATHAN F. YOUNG.

The above named gentleman is numbered among the leading business men of Cody, Nebraska, near where he has resided for the past fifteen years, and has become one of the successful and prosperous citizens of the town.

Mr. Young was born at Arkadelphia, in Clark county, Arkansas, July 3, 1862. His father, John D. Young, was by trade a carpenter and millwright, and of Scotch-Irish descent, while the mother, Miss Martha Humphrey, was a member of an old Georgia family. Our subject's parents died when he was thirteen years of age, and he went to Jersey county, Illinois, where he lived with an uncle for some years, in which locality he was educated, remaining until he was twenty-one years of age. He was the second in a family of five children, and began to make his own living when about fourteen. About 1882 he left Illinois and went to St. Louis, and later to Texas, working in machine shops for seven years at different places. He learned telegraphing and worked at this profession in stations along the main line of the Chicago & Northwestern in Iowa and South Dakota, and branches in Nebraska for a period of eight years. He first came to Cherry county in 1893, and has been here almost constantly ever since that time, engaged in telegraphy the succeeding five years. In 1897 he resigned and went on a ranch located twenty-five miles southwest of the town of Cody, and still holds a part of this place. He engaged in the lumber business in Cody during 1904, associating himself with his father-in-law, John Bishop, and they have built up a large trade in this and the adjoining counties. He has erected one of the finest dwellings in the village, convenient to his place of business.

Mr. Young was married in 1894 to Miss Laura E. Bishop, born in Monroe county, Iowa, daughter of John Bishop, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work. One son has been born to this family, John Dickey Young, namesake of his grandfather.

In political sentiment our subject is a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat, and takes an active interest in all party affairs, local and state, and has served as assessor of his precinct. His lodge affiliations are varied, holding membership in the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Pythias, the Workmen, the Woodmen and the lumbermen's association known as the Con-catinated Order of Hoo Hoos.

ABNER BLACK, DECEASED.

Prior to the demise of the gentleman named above he was one of the prominent agriculturists of Deuel county, widely known as a successful and prosperous farmer and worthy citizen, and his family had the sympathy of the entire community in their loss.

Mr. Black was born in Marion county, Iowa, in 1855, and raised in a small town there. His father, Absolam Black, was of Irish-American stock, and a lawyer by profession, having a large and lucrative practice in Knoxville and the surrounding country, and served two terms as state's attorney in Marion county, Iowa. Our subject lived with his parents up to the time when he was twenty-one years of age, excepting for about four years after he was fifteen, which was spent in Texas following the ranching business in that state. In 1874 he returned to Iowa and was married there two years later and located on a farm, where they lived for a number of years, then went to Texas and lived on the state line for about three years. In 1888 Mr. Black moved with his family to Sheridan county, Nebraska, locating near Lakeside, and remained in that vicinity up to 1900, when they moved to Ellsworth. In 1902 he purchased the Ellsworth Hotel, and was also interested in land in this county, his sons having large ranches near his homestead. Mr. Black's death occurred in October, 1906. He left a family of two children—Fred, born in Decatur City, Iowa, in 1877, and Ora, born there in 1878. The former was married in 1899 to Miss Alice C. Davis, a native of Williamsburg, Iowa, born in 1877. Mr. Black's widow, whose maiden name was Amelia J. Cox, lives on the old homestead located near Ellsworth. The sons are extensively engaged in the stock business, and run about six hundred head of cattle and fifty head of horses. Both own homesteads near their mother's farm. Fred having worked for the Spade ranch for several years prior to establishing his ranch, and at the same time his brother Ora was connected in the ranching business in Ellsworth. Together they own a fine ranch, with plenty of hay land and good range, and like this region, as it is not so thickly settled here and best suited to their purpose in the stock raising business.

Mrs. Black, Sr., is a daughter of Gabriel Cox, born in England, who came to this country with his family when Mrs. Black was a very young girl, locating in Dubuque, Iowa. Her parents are now living in Kansas, and she paid a visit to them in 1906, finding them both hale and hearty at the advanced age of seventy-eight years.

The Black family is among the prominent residents of Deuel county, and are highly esteemed by all who know them for their industry and thrift and their true worth as good citizens and neighbors. Ellsworth is their postoffice and nearest trading point.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Andrew Johnson, an old settler and enterprising ranchman of Sioux county, Nebraska, owns a valuable estate in section 19, township 35, range 54. He has always identified himself with the public affairs of the community in which he made his home, and became widely known for his thorough appreciation of the wants of the community and is universally esteemed and respected for his many sterling qualities.

Mr. Johnson was born in Calmer, Sweden, June 27, 1858. He was raised on a farm. His parents were wealthy and he had a beautiful home and every advantage of the better class in that country, receiving a good education, and spent a happy and care free boyhood in his native land. He remained in Sweden until he was thirty-one years of age, then started out for the new world, landing in New York city in 1889. He came directly west, stopping at Leadville, Colorado, where he had a brother living, and made that his home for two years, engaged in railroading.

In 1893 he came to Nebraska and settled on a ranch two miles southwest of Ardmore, and there he was married to Miss Helen Johnson, who came to this country from Sweden, where she was reared on a farm. They built a log house on a homestead on which he had previously filed, and for about seven years worked at railroading. This was during the hard times prevailing throughout that part of the state, and while they went through many hardships and suffered losses from crop failures and other causes, Mr. Johnson always had plenty of money and managed to find work enough to keep them in the necessaries of life and did not suffer the privations that fell to the lot of so many of the pioneers of the region. He remained on that farm up to 1901, then settled on his present ranch, which now consists of six hundred acres, all of which is fenced and supplied with good improvements. The ranch is located on Indian creek and has a fine water supply, plenty of timber, and is one of the best improved places in the locality.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are the parents of six children, who are named as follows: Oscar, Mary, Alice, Sarah, Albin and a baby not named. They are a bright, intelligent group, and the family have a pleasant and comfortable home, well liked by all in the community.

EMILE SCHOENENBERGER.

Emile Schoenenberger is the owner of a fine farm in Rock county, Nebraska, not far from the town of Newport, which invariably attracts the attention of the passing traveler, who quickly notes that it is in the care of a competent farmer and good business man. The place is under good cultivation, and is improved with handsome and substantial buildings, including a very comfortable residence. He is advancing in years, but still retains strength and vigor of body and mind, and is one of the most highly respected old settlers in all this part of Nebraska.

Mr. Schoenenberger was born in the village of Waldresbach, Canton Schirich, province of Loraine, France, April 28, 1842, and during his boyhood and early youth found employment in a silk factory. In 1865 he crossed the ocean, embarking at Havre on the sailing vessel Willer, and after a voyage of forty-two days landed in New York, from whence he went to Chicago. In making his way to La Salle, Illinois, it took him a month to reach his destination, as he was carried on by mistake to Rock Island, and he was three or four days returning to the point he desired to reach. At Ottawa he found work for a whole year and his next move was to New Orleans, where he worked till the outbreak of the cholera in 1868. From thence he went to St. Louis and thence to Highland, Illinois, where he found work for nine months. Returning to Ottawa for a year's work, he next went to Amboy and for seven years was in the employ of the Illinois Central Railway Company, two years in the round house and five years on an engine as a fireman. Leaving the railroad service he came west, living one year in Wright county, Nebraska, and then, in May, 1884, he took up his residence in Rock county, settling on section 24, township 31, range 17, where he still resides. He has passed through many and varied experiences and knows what pioneering means. But he has worked and endured and waited, and now a very large success has crowned his industry and persistence. He is the owner of a good farm, which he devotes largely to stock raising and the shipping of hay, of which he sells about ninety tons a year. He has secured a thriving grove of about five acres, which he planted and cultivated himself, as well as an orchard of thrifty growing trees.

Mr. Schoenenberger was married in 1892 to Mrs. Elizabeth Shilling. Her people were German and never came to this country. She is the mother of Henry, Mary, Henry (2), Minnie and Lester Schoenenberger.

To the subject of this writing, as to others on the frontier, came various trials and troubles. In 1903 fire destroyed his barns and granaries, and his horses and cattle were burned in their stalls. During the prolonged dry seasons of 1893 and 1894 he lost his crops, and it required all his energy to save his stock. All that, however, seems like a dream today in the midst of comfort and plenty. A Democrat in political affairs, he is a good citizen and seeks the welfare of all in his talk and vote.

Jacob Schoenenberger, the father of Emile, was a foreman in a silk factory and a man of considerable prominence in his day. On his death the widow, with uncommon executive ability, filled his place for fourteen years, having charge of over a hundred operatives. They spoke both French and German, and reared their children with more than the usual care and intelligence. His wife was in maidenhood Elizabeth Marschall, a descendant of an old French family, and late in life came to this country, where she died in 1880.

LEWIS F. FAIRCHILD.

One of the successful of the younger ranchmen of Keith county and one who has done his share toward the upbuilding and material development of the territory, is Lewis F. Fairchild, who resides on section 9, township 15, range 40. Our subject was born on a farm in Illinois in 1864, his father being Lewis M. Fairchild, a prominent farmer in those days.

Lewis F. Fairchild was reared and received his early training in his native state, not leaving there until he had almost attained his majority. In 1884 he came west to Colorado, locating near the city of Denver. He was a pioneer of the country about Julesburg, where he built up a good farm and home. He came to his present location and has been engaged almost wholly in cattle raising, of which he has made a fine success. He has built up a good home and business and has attracted many warm friends by his many excellent traits of character and his progressive methods.

In September, 1889, was celebrated the wedding of Lewis F. Fairchild and Miss Almira O'Neil, daughter of Michael O'Neil, who was one of the pioneers of Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Fairchild have had six children—Fred, Florence, Francis, Freeman, Oliver and Elizabeth.

JOHN FERGUSON.

The gentleman whose name heads this biographical sketch occupies an influential position in the business and commercial circles of Blaine county, and is at the head of one of the leading financial institutions of the county. He is president of the International State Bank of Brewster and holds an enviable reputation as a banker and business man. In addition to this, he and his family operate a large ranch of about forty-five hundred acres, one of the best equipped and most profitable in the territory.

Mr. Ferguson is a native of Scotland, born in 1847 on a farm. His parents, William and Jannette (Fleming) Ferguson, were farmers and taught their son the habits of thrift and industry which have made him such a success in life.

Mr. Ferguson was married June 10, 1868, to Miss Jane Robertson, also a native of Scotland. Her father, Robert Robertson, was a contractor. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson have ten children—Bessie W., now dead; Nettie F., Robert W., John R., George A., Hugh R., Effie, Stella, Allen and Lyle S.

The subject of our sketch was reared in bonnie Scotland, where he received his early education and training. Coming to America when he was a young fellow, he landed in New York city, leaving June 28, 1868, and removing to northern Ohio, where he worked near the city of Cleveland for two months. In September of that year he came west to Omaha and worked in the Union Pacific railway shops of that city. He had learned the carpenter's trade and followed that line for some time. In the spring of 1869 he went to Dodge county, Nebraska, and settled on a homestead and built up a fine little farm home on a tract of one hundred and twenty acres, where he lived for twenty-two years. He came to Blaine county in 1891, leased considerable land, bought a relinquishment for his oldest daughter and established a great ranch of forty-five hundred acres east of Brewster about ten miles on the Loup river. The ranch is finely improved with house, barns, fences, etc., and bears evidence of many successive years of hard and intelligent labor.

Mr. Ferguson has weathered all the storms of adversity of pioneer times, the years of drouth and hard times and the financial crises of painful memory. And he has steadily increased his fortune until today he occupies a commanding position among his fellows. He is widely known as a keen observer of matters of a public nature and his advice is sought on all questions of importance to the community. He is a Democrat in politics and now a member of the board of county commissioners, serving his third term. He has held several minor offices.

DAVID N. BROWER.

David N. Brower, for nearly twenty-five years a worthy member of the farming community of Box Butte county, is well known throughout this region as a gentleman of energetic character and good citizenship. He has aided materially in the development of that part of the state of Nebraska, and has a valuable estate in sections 14, 15, 22, 23 and 28, township 24, range 49. The fine appearance and apparent thrift of his farm bespeaks the wisdom of his choice in locating there in the early days and remaining to become one of the substantial men of his county.

Mr. Brower was born in Wayne county, Iowa, in 1858, and was raised on a farm. His father, Carrington Brower, was of American blood, and the family lived in Iowa during the pioneer days of that state, our subject receiving his education at the country schools and working at home until he was about nineteen years of age, then started on a farm laboring for himself. He purchased a farm in Iowa in 1881 and farmed it for four years, when he sold out and came west. In 1885 Mr. Brower came to Nebraska, locating in Box Butte county, at the Point of Rocks, driving through from Iowa together with a party of three other emigrants looking for a location in this region. They were on the road, camping out nights on the ground, arriving in this locality May 1, 1885. After staking out a claim and filing on his land, Mr. Brower built a sod house, stable and other necessary buildings, and farmed there for about three years, also freighted through the country from Valentine to other points, which helped considerably in making a living. In 1888 he left that place and came to his present location, which is situated on Snake creek, nine miles from Alliance. When he took the place the land was barren prairie, and he went to work at once to improve it, putting up good buildings, fencing it well, and has quite a large part of it under cultivation at this time. In the spring of 1895 a prairie fire swept the section, and he lost his barns, a large quantity of hay, wagons, mowers, plows, harness, etc., and suffered damage to the extent of many hundreds of dollars. Mr. Brower now owns a splendid ranch of nine quarter sections, all in one piece, and he engages principally in the stock business, raising cattle and horses. He had a very small start on coming here, and considering this has made a splendid success in building up a good home and ranch, and has also gained an enviable reputation as a leading settler and one who has aided materially in the success and prosperity of his locality. He is a modest, substantial ranchman, who in his quiet way has made himself a part of the community in which he resides by giving generously of his money and influence to every movement for the public good.

In 1882 Mr. Brower was married to Rebecca Baggs, of Appanoose county, Iowa. To Mr. and Mrs. Brower ten children have been born, named as follows: Susie, Betsy. Charlie, Edith, Willie, Harley, Elmer, Hazel, Roy and Alice, an infant deceased. All were born in Nebraska excepting Susie and Roy, who were born in Iowa, and all were reared and educated in this county.

FRANK H. BARBER.

Frank H. Barber, one of the most successful and well-to-do ranchers and farmers of Deuel county, Nebraska, lives on a lovely farm on section 32, township 16, range 41. He has gained prominence by his progressive and up-to-date methods and has made a mark in the community as a man of strong convictions and fearless adherence to the right as he sees it.

Frank H. Barber was born near Detroit, Michigan, December 16, 1863. His parents, Gabriel and Meribah (Crandle) Barber, were natives of Canada, the paternal grandfather being French.

The subject of our sketch was reared on a farm in Dunn county, Wisconsin, to which locality the family moved about 1870, and where Frank received a common school education. He came west to Deuel county, Nebraska, in 1885, taking a homestead in section 32, township 16, range 41, on which he put up a sod shanty about eight feet square and six feet high. He had hauled sufficient lumber for a comfortable house, but the cowboys used it for fuel. He had only ten dollars in money, no horses, harness, nor saddles, he broke bronchos for use as a team, borrowed harness and wagon from the cattle company and put in a crop. He worked for the Ogallala Cattle Company as cowpuncher on the open ranges between the North Platte and the Big Horn mountains, and trailed cattle from Keystone to Little Thunder, Wyoming, sleeping in the open all the time. He steadily improved his farm and stuck to it with a determination to make it a good home, but he witnessed very hard times indeed. During his trips to the west Mrs. Barber taught school and built a comfortable sod house to replace the small one in which they had been living. After he had been "dried out" by drouth for several years Mr. Barber installed irrigation and then for three years in succession saw his crops destroyed by hail. But with the passing of pioneer days times became better, crops have yielded larger returns and the later years have brought material advancement to the financial affairs of our subject. He now has eight hundred acres on the bottoms of the North Platte river, his land being all naturally sub-irrigated and not nearly so liable to be injured by drouth as other lands on the higher levels. It is also all under ditch, so it can be irrigated from the top as well. He cultivates all but about one hundred and sixty acres, with two hundred of it in alfalfa. He has a fine stone house, large barn, with sheds, together with numerous other outbuildings, and has a fine grove of trees. Mr. Barber formerly raised cattle, but now he pays more attention to hog raising and has a small bunch of horses. Everything about his fine ranch bears witness to the success and prosperity attending its owner.

Mr. Barber was married February 21, 1886, to Miss Carrie Clack, a native of Wisconsin, and a daughter of Henry and Ann (Blain) Clack, a native of Michigan. The father was a native of London, England, and immigrated to Canada, later settling near Detroit while the Indians were still plentiful there. His farm is now within the city limits of Detroit and divided into city lots. Mr. and Mrs. Barber have four children: Burt, a graduate of the North Platte high school, class of 1908, is now attending the State University; Hazel is a student in the Lincoln city schools; Cecil and Edna.

Mr. Barber is a strong Republican and staunchly supports the principles of his party. He was county commissioner of Deuel county for two terms, and has been school treasurer for eighteen years, and has always assisted in furthering every project that promised for the advancement of the local affairs of the locality in which he lives.

Indians were still in the country when Mr. Barber settled here, as many as three hundred having camped on Blue creek. In the fall of 1886 they killed cattle and made the settlers somewhat uneasy, they congregating at one time at a stone house for defense. There were many dangers in the early day that are easily escaped now. At one time while fording the river with his wife and her parents Mr. Barber and the family had to sit on the backs of the seats while the water surged over the seats of their vehicle, so deep was the water. Mrs. Barber taught the first school of the district as mentioned above.

Mr. Barber is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Masonic order at Ogallala and with his wife has taken the degrees of the Order of the Eastern Star.

We present for inspection a view of Mr. Barber's premises, with its unusually fine grove, elsewhere in this work. It is one of the best improved farms in the county.

JACOB B. SMITH, DECEASED.

Jacob B. Smith for many years prior to his demise was known as a prosperous farmer and worthy citizen throughout the locality in which he resided. He was one of the pioneer settlers in Sheridan county, Nebraska, and owned a valuable estate in section 26, township 29, range 44, where his family still reside.

Mr. Smith was born in Union county, Pennsylvania, April 24, 1829, and was raised there. He was of English descent, his father and six brothers having crossed the ocean together in 1798 and settled in Pennsylvania, where they were among the earliest settlers in that state. Our subject was the oldest member in his father's family of ten children, all born and raised in Pennsylvania. He remained with his parents on their farm until he was thirty years of age, and in 1867 left his native state and came west, locating near Tipton, Iowa, where he farmed for about eight years. He then moved to Ames, Iowa, and farmed there for eleven years, and in 1888 came to Nebraska and settled on the farm mentioned above, located in Sheridan county, and remained on this place up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1902. When he first came to this place there was not a stick of timber on it, and he broke up some of his land, but during the first years he was unable to put in very large crops, and about three years after he located there the dry years came on and for several succeeding years he lost every crop. One season he put out eighty acres of millet, and could not even cut it to get the seed back, and went through all kinds of hard times. He experienced all the hardships and privations which the settlers of those times went through with hailstorms, grasshopper raids, etc., and it was a number of years before he was able to get ahead at all. He gradually improved his farm and added more land to it when the good years began, and at his death owned eight hundred acres of good land, and his sons and daughters also have taken up quite a good deal of homestead land adjoining his estate. They do not farm very heavily now, and had about eighty acres of small grain in 1906 and raised a crop of two thousand five hundred and thirty bushels in all, and whatever farming they do is very profitable. They are engaged to quite an extent in stock raising, and keep about three hundred and twenty-five head of stock on the place and use all the farm produces for keeping this stock and do not market anything which they raise except wheat and potatoes.

Mr. Smith was married in 1862 to Miss Eliza M. Bingaman, a native of Gleniron, Union county, Pennsylvania, born in 1838. Her father was Jacob Bingaman, of German descent, and he fought in the Revolutionary war, and also in the War of 1812, having come to this country when a young man. There were nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who are named as follows: Charles, James and Mary, born in Pennsylvania; William, Carson, Luella, Sadie, Frank and Susie, born in Iowa. Grayson postoffice is located on this farm and Miss Susie is postmistress and has been for six years. Five of the children have homesteads adjoining the father's estate, a section apiece under the Kincaid act.

Since locating in Nebraska the family have all enjoyed the best of health, and are well satisfied with what they have accomplished here. Mrs. Smith has revisited the old home in Pennsylvania, but has no desire to return there to live. They suffered a sad loss in the husband and father's death and had the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement, as he was highly esteemed by all who knew him and a worthy citizen.

JAMES T. RYAN.

James T. Ryan was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, October 17, 1853, and was the son of Samuel Ryan, a native of the state of Maryland and a farmer by occupation, and whose grandfather served in the Revolutionary war. Our subject's mother was Elizabeth Taylor, a native of Ohio.

James T. Ryan was reared on a farm in his native state, receiving the education afforded by the district schools. He learned telegraphy when a boy and worked for several years for the Cleveland, Pittsburg & Wheeling Railway Company. In 1876 he came west to Bureau, Illinois, and engaged with success in agricultural pursuits for about five years, removing thence to Audubon county, Iowa. After three years in the latter state he came to Keith county, Nebraska, and in the spring of 1884 took a pre-emption claim west of Ogallala on the South Platte river, and very soon thereafter he took a homestead on which he proved up, since selling both tracts. He made this his home, living in a sod house and undergoing all the hardships and hard times of pioneer life. He experienced losses of crops from drouth and also by a serious fire that destroyed about four hundred dollars' worth of improvements; but he maintained his home on the farm and worked his way to success and a comfortable competency. He came to his present farm in sections 20 and 29, township 30, range 40, in the spring of 1895, purchasing at first one hundred and sixty acres, and later adding a half section more. He now has a splendid ranch of four hundred and eighty acres in the South Platte river valley, all well improved. His trees are especially fine and he has seventy-five acres of alfalfa that is the pride of the farm. So far as he knows this was the first grown along the south river within the limits of the county. The entire tract is irrigable, and one hundred and sixty acres are already under ditch.

Mr. Ryan has taken a lively interest in all affairs of local importance and has done his share in adding to the material growth of his community. He has held various local offices and is known everywhere as a conscientious citizen and a thorough and progressive business man. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Congregational church and of the Masonic and Pythian fraternities at Ogallala.

DAVID H. BERG.

David H. Berg, well known as a leading farmer of Dawes county, Nebraska, is a resident of section 30, township 30, range 47, where he owns a well improved and valuable estate.

Mr. Berg was born in Marshalltown, Iowa, October 2, 1878, and is a son of John Berg, a stonecutter by trade and native of Sweden, who came to the United States when a young man. David lost both parents when quite young, about four or five years old. Both died in Iowa. When our subject was five years old the family came to Dawes county with the grandparents, Charles and Grace Berg, who took up government land, driving overland from Valentine with a team and wagon, which contained their household goods. The grandfather, Charles Berg, filed on a homestead four miles north of our subject's present location, and their first dwelling was a sod shanty. They began to open a farm, planting trees and breaking up land for crops with a team of oxen which they purchased on landing here and with which most of their work was done for a number of years. Our subject's grandfather died here in the year 1897. The grandmother, Grace Berg, lives in Chadron and is quite active at the ripe old age of seventy-eight years.

In 1891 Mr. Berg took up a homestead in section 30, township 31, range 47, and proved up on it, constantly adding improvements and buying more land as he became better able, and is now owner of a splendid ranch consisting of sixteen quarter sections fitted with a complete set of good buildings, putting down wells and windmills, which supply an abundance of good water the year round. He engages principally in cattle raising, also farms about one hundred acres, on which he raises good crops of small grains, etc. Mr. Berg has done exceedingly well since locating here, is a thoroughly practical farmer and employs modern methods in all his operations.

In political sentiment Mr. Berg follows the Republican party and takes an active and commendable interest in all county and national affairs, keeping abreast of the times by constant and intelligent reading.

JOHN SIEFER.

Among the well known and most successful ranchmen and farmers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, the gentleman above mentioned deserves a prominent place. He is a man of active public spirit, and a leading citizen of his community, residing in Eagle precinct, where he has a pleasant home and valuable estate.

John Siefer is a native of the village of Imbsheim, district of Buchsweiler, province of Alsace, Germany, and was born October 8, 1863. He grew up in the mother country, where his parents spent their entire lives. The mother, who was Katharine Ernst, is still living, but his father, Jacob Siefer, died in 1907. John came to America when a young man, sailing from Havre in the Labrador and after a stormy voyage of twenty-one days landed in New York December 7, 1881. Locating at first near Corydon, Harrison county, Indiana, he spent about eight months there, and then went to Iowa, remaining for five years engaged in farm labor in Boone county and on the railroad at Boone. He next came to Nebraska, settling in Cheyenne county, where he was among the early settlers. In the spring of 1887 he filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres on section 30, township 17, range 47, on which he made final proof and secured a patent to the land. He has succeeded in accumulating a fine tract of land, now being proprietor of eleven hundred and twenty acres. He has about one hundred and fifty acres under cultivation, raising good crops, and has fine hay land and pasture for one hundred head of cattle and twenty-five horses. His residence is now situated on section 32, and he has the entire place fitted with good buildings and all necessary improvements.

Mr. Siefer was united in marriage to Miss Pada Frerichs at the latter's home in Cheyenne county on May 16, 1897. They have a family of seven children, namely: Hannah, Harm, Maggie, William, John, Mabel and Ella, all living at home, the elder children now attending school. Our subject is director of school district No. 69, and has always taken an active part in school and local affairs, helping in every way in his power in the development of his locality. He is a Republican and is a member of the Republican committee of Cheyenne county. He is a member of the Sidney lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

WILLIAM S. ROWAN, SR.

William S. Rowan, Sr., holds a prominent place among the prosperous and successful agriculturists of Keya Paha county. His home is on section 12, township 34, range 18, and his well appointed residence, barns and finely cultivated fields bespeak the man of progress and energy.

Mr. Rowan was born in the town of Newton Stewart, Scotland, in 1838, his parents residing there until their demise. They had a family of eight children, of whom three were sons, and of these our subject was the only one to grow to manhood. He remained at home until he was twenty, then went to South America, spending three years in Dutch Guiana as overseer for his uncle in large lumbering interests, and in British Guiana for three years as overseer on a large sugar estate. From there he came to the United States in the fall of 1864. He landed in New York, immediately secured work as a carpenter in the graphite mines of Ticonderoga, in the northern part of the state, for a year, then went to the iron mines at Hammondsville, where he was employed at the same work for five years. For a time he mined graphite on contract and later was employed at Rodgersville or Lynn mountain as carpenter for the Hudson and Delaware Canal Company for three years. Being offered the foremanship of a large Virginia plantation and a tract of Florida land, he refused both on investigation. The family lived eight months in Springville, Iowa, prior to coming to Nebraska. In 1884 he came west and located in Keya Paha county, Nebraska, settling near McLain Mills, on Keya Paha river. He remained there for seven years, then took up his present farm as a homestead. He had a little money, but had to buy all his stock and machinery to start farming; he made his first garden with a spade and rake, having no team at that time. During the early days he had a hard time to get along; the family lived in a rough sod house for some years, then bought a house in the neighborhood and moved on to his place. He went through all the pioneer hardships and experiences he ever cares to, but has been well repaid for his perseverance and industry in that he is now the owner of a fine farm of eight hundred and forty acres and two hundred in the home farm, and six hundred and forty acres in sections 29 and 30, in township 34, range 17, all cleared, mostly all in hay and pasture land. He farms about one hundred and fifty acres each year, and is engaged extensively in hog and cattle raising.

Mr. Rowan was married in Brooklyn, New York, January 6, 1868, to Miss Agnes Melbourne, who had waited nine years for him to establish a home for her. She was born and reared in Dumfries, Scotland, and was the sixth daughter of John and Agnes (Bauley) Melbourne. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rowan: Thomas, John M., Margaret, who died at the age of ten years; William S., Jr., Violet, now Mrs. Donneaud, of Keya Paha county; and Andrew F., all living near their parents' home at this writing.

Mr. Rowan is recognized as one of the leading men of his county, and takes an active interest in all matters that tend to the advancement of his locality. He is a Republican in political faith, and served as county commissioner for three years. In the old country he was a member of the United Presbyterian church, while Mrs. Rowan was of the Established church. They are now holding communion with the Free Methodists.

HENRY VICK.

Among the leading old-timers in western Nebraska who have succeeded in accumulating a handsome property by dint of industry and honest dealings, supplemented by thrift and good management, the gentleman whose name heads this review deserves special mention. Mr. Vick has a handsome home in Union Valley precinct and is considered one of the foremost citizens of the section, highly esteemed by all.

Henry Vick is a native of the village of Letschow, near the city of Schwan, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, born January 20, 1867. His parents, Karl and Dorothy (Schroeder) Vick, are still living in that country. He came to America in 1884, sailing from Hamburg on the Moravia, and after a voyage of fourteen days landed in New York. The first year was spent at farm labor in Wisconsin.

After drifting around in Minnesota for a time he came to Nebraska, arriving in Cheyenne county in the fall of 1887, and filed on a homestead in section 32, township 17, range 48, and started a home and farm. He had a hard time to get along during the first few years, meeting with many discouragements and failures of crops, but gradually improved his place and bought additional land, put up good buildings, fences and windmills, and is now owner of a fine estate of twelve hundred and eighty acres. His elegant residence, lately erected, is situated on section 29, surrounded by every necessary building and improvement, with a good water system and fine young groves. We call attention to an engraving of the premises on another page of this work. He cultivates about two hundred acres, raising small grain, and has about one hundred head of cattle and thirty-five horses. Mr. Vick is a wide-awake, prosperous and successful ranchman and farmer, a typical representative of the west.

Mr. Vick was married on April 16, 1895, at the bride's home in Cheyenne county, to Anna Busacker. They were the parents of five children, named as follows: Dora, Lillian, Paul, Louis and Ella, who form a very charming and interesting group. The wife and mother departed this life April 16, 1905, and her death was a severe loss to her devoted family and large circle of friends, as she was a lady of most estimable character and lovely disposition.

Mr. Vick is active in local affairs, at present acting as director of school district No. 20. In political views he is a Republican.

ROSWEL P. SCOTT.

Roswel P. Scott, one of the best known residents of Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county, is owner of a ranch of seventeen hundred acres in Camp Clark precinct, and a man of influence and wealth. He has the distinction of having been the original resident of the town of Bridgeport, and the first business man of that place; he has always done his utmost to promote the welfare of the region where he chose to make his home many years ago. For some years he was engaged in the real estate and insurance business there and to his efforts are due much of the progress and development of the agricultural sections in western Nebraska, as he has been the means of bringing many settlers to these parts. As a young man Mr. Scott followed the profession of civil engineer, and has assisted in railroad building in a number of the western states. To him also is due the building of the Belmont and Brown Creek ditch through Morrill county, an enterprise that was instrumental in bringing him into this region which to his foreseeing eye was promising enough to induce his permanent residence.

Mr. Scott was born in Mahoning county, Ohio, December 15, 1863, where the first twenty-two years of his life were spent. Here he attended the common schools and at the college at Newton Falls learned surveying. Coming west he found employment for his talent in Colorado in 1885, and for five years traveled through all the western states, surveying in Colorado, Utah and Montana. He finally landed in Cheyenne county in 1890, to take charge of the irrigation survey and while here filed on a homestead in section 5, township 19, range 50, proving up on his claim, and has since added greatly to his ranch. He has erected elegant buildings, and put many improvements upon his ranch, which is known as one of the most valuable in the region, four hundred acres of which are irrigable. He has three hundred and twenty acres under cultivation, using a large part as pasture and hay land for a bunch of cattle and horses.

Mr. Scott was the fourth child in a family of eight born to his parents, Alexander and Harriet (McKinsey) Scott, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio respectively, and he has two sisters and four brothers now living. One brother, Elbert, came into Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county in 1895, becoming a member of the firm of Bearline & Scott, dealers in hardware and harness. In 1897 our subject married Miss Jessie E. Poole, who is a native of Henry county, Illinois, and to them have been born the following children: Mabel, Esther, Alexander, Florence and John. Mrs. Scott is a daughter of Sidney and Dora (Cassell) Poole, well known as early settlers in Cheyenne county.

Personally Mr. Scott is a most clever and interesting gentleman, one who has read much and spent considerable time in study and travel, and is actively interested in everything pertaining to the good of the people in his locality. He is prominent in Masonic circles, having entered that order when but twenty-one years of age in Ohio; his membership was transferred to the lodge at Glenwood Springs, Colorado, in 1887. In politics he is Democratic.

JOHN TRINDEL.

The subject of this brief biography is of old Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, better than which it is hard to find. His father, Alex Trindel, was one of the early pioneers of Indiana and settled in the timbered country thirty-four miles from the Ohio river. The maiden name of the mother of John Trindel was Margarett Caster, and she was a native of Beaver county, Pennsylvania. Her parents were Americans of Dutch descent.

John Trindel was born in Ripley county, Indiana, October 28, 1840, and was reared on the farm engaged in agricultural pursuits. The terrible war of the rebellion drew him to the front in the interests of his country and its flag. He enlisted in the One Hundred and Twenty-third Indiana Volunteers, Company H. Those years were memorable ones and he saw much service. He was with his regiment when the army started on the Atlanta campaign, thence back to Nashville where he participated in the battle of Nashville, next he was in the battle of Franklin and other minor engagements. Thence to Cincinnati and on to Washington, from whence he went to Morehead City, North Carolina, and then marched to Goldsborough, where his regiment joined Sherman's army. Mr. Trindel was present at the surrender of Generals Johnston and Hood. At the close of the war Mr. Trindel returned to his home in Indiana and followed farming for years until coming west in March, 1884.

John Trindel was married in January, 1884, to Miss Mary E. Carlisle, who was a native of Maryland, born in 1862. She was the daughter of John Wesley Carlisle, formerly a slave holder of the South, and Lucetta (Black) Carlisle, who died when Mrs. Trindel was eleven years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Trindel have seven children: Samantha, born February 1, 1885; Ella, born December 29, 1887; Benjamin, born December 22, 1888, died January 22, 1889; George, born November 12, 1889; Reuben, born August 1, 1894; Nancy, born February 5, 1892; and Della, born July 25, 1899.

In March, 1884, soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Trindel came west, locating in Custer county, Nebraska, on a pre-emption claim. After living there for one and a half years they proved up on their claim. During this time Mr. Trindel labored hard to get along as he had nothing to start with, and a great deal of the time he worked out by the day. After proving up on his pre-emption claim he looked around for more land, and October 16, 1887, located on his present homestead five miles west of Taylor, on section 25, township 21, range 19. Here he had a team and something to do with, and he met with good success for several years up till 1890. Then the drouth years set in and several crop failures made times very hard. Nothing but the best of grit kept Mr. Trindel on the farm, but he hung to it and at last things got better. He has succeeded in building up a good home and farm and is favorably known as one of the leading old settlers.

PHILLIP F. NELSON.

Phillip F. Nelson, among the well-known settlers in western Nebraska, lives on section 25, township 35, range 35, Cherry county, where he has built up a fine ranch and home, and is recognized as one of the prosperous and successful citizens of this region.

Mr. Nelson was born in Denmark March 12, 1865. His parents were farmers, and he was reared there until he was ten years of age, when the family, of whom he was the fourth child, came to America, settling in Clinton county, Iowa, living most of the time in the city of Clinton; later they went to South Dakota, where they were among the pioneers of that section of the country, residing in Douglas county for two years and for six years in Turner county. There they went through ox-team experience, and lived in a sod shanty for several years, and also occupied dugouts there during the early days. Mr. Nelson filed on a claim in Charles Mix county, where they had a hard time at first, and met with many discouragements in the loss of crops, hard winters, etc., but gradually built up a home and farm.

Our subject came to Cherry county in the spring of 1888, settling on his present homestead on June 16th of that year, comprising three hundred and sixty acres of deeded land and four hundred and eighty acres homestead under the Kincaid law. When he arrived here all he had left after filing on his claim was a dollar and a half in money. He built a sod shanty and went to work at once in breaking up his land and raising some crops. For a number of years he had a hard time to get along, but as the times grew better he began to raise good crops and improved his place with good buildings, fences, wells and wind-mills, and now has a good ranch, containing in all eight hundred acres. He engages in stock raising almost exclusively, and has done exceedingly well in this line of work. About 1902 he began the business of drilling wells, in which he has become very successful, contracts coming to him from a wide circuit of country.

Mr. Nelson has taken an active part in local affairs since locating here, and has held office of assessor at different times and has served as justice of the peace ten or twelve years. He is thoroughly familiar with conditions throughout this part of the state, and has aided in the development of the resources of the region in a marked degree. He is a man of energetic habits, sterling character, and richly deserves the prosperity which has come to him. Politically he is a Republican. A view of the residence of Mr. Nelson will be found elsewhere in this work.

Mr. Nelson was married October 10, 1897, to Miss Fredericka Svarivar, a native of Sweden. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have a family of three children, named as follows: Arthur, Oscar and Anna.

Thomas Nelson, a brother, closely associated with Phillip, was born in Denmark April 15, 1852, and came to America with the mother, Phillip and a sister, the father having preceded them the summer before. He has eight hundred acres of land in the sections west of Phillip's land, and is developing a valuable estate.

JOHN BISHOP.

The subject of this review is well known throughout the locality in which he resides as an energetic and industrious business man and worthy citizen. He is an old settler in Nebraska, and has done his full share in the advancement of the commercial and agricultural interests of his community.

Mr. Bishop is a native of Lawrence county, Indiana, born at Bedford, June 17, 1829, where he was reared and educated. His father, Samuel D. Bishop, was a carpenter of American stock, born in Connecticut, and his mother was Miss HulDAH Daniel, also an American. There were seven children in his parents' family, of whom he was the fourth member, and at the age of fourteen years he left home and started out for himself. He served as a soldier in the Mexican war, participating in the battle of Buena Vista. After the close of the war he came to Monroe county, Iowa, filing on a quarter section of land in 1849. After farming for fourteen years he next moved to Miles county, in western Iowa, and remained there for a number of years, shipping the first load of cattle from that point over the newly completed Northwestern line. In 1887 he came to Cherry county, Nebraska, taking up a homestead and living on it until he proved up, adding to his acreage from time to time until the ranch contained four hundred and eighty acres, all of which he recently sold. He built up his farm and had many interesting experiences during his long residence on the frontier. When he came west he drove through from Indiana to Iowa, a distance of five hundred miles; in a wagon, and camped out on the road at night. During the Mexican war he served in the Second Indiana Regiment for one year, and when returning from Mexico, rode all the way from that country to Iowa on horseback. This was in 1847, and the whole country was then a wild place at best. He also spent some years flat-boating on the Wabash, Ohio and Mississippi rivers in the early forties, making a number of trips to New Orleans and back.

In 1904, in partnership with a son-in-law, Jonathan F. Young, he engaged in the lumber business in Cody, and they have built up a large and flourishing trade. Their residence is one of the handsomest and best equipped in the village of Cody.

Mr. Bishop was married in Indiana in 1848, to Miss Mary J. Humston, a native of that state. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, of whom three are living named: Sarah L., now Mrs. Weed; Cassie B., wife of E. L. Kelley, and Laura B., now Mrs. J. F. Young.

In political sentiment Mr. Bishop is a Republican.

SUBSTANCE OF INTERVIEW WITH MR.
E. S. HILL, OF INDIANOLA, NEBRASKA.

Taken Tuesday, May 12, 1903.

I came from Tabor, Fremont county, Iowa, in company with G. A. Hunter, William Wygent, Mr. Wygent's son Day, L. B. Korns and Henry Madison. We left in the spring of 1872, and according to the best of my recollection, we arrived at the mouth of Red Willow creek on the last day of April, 1872. I think that is the date. We crossed the Missouri river at Nebraska City, and came by way of Lincoln. Lincoln was a very small place at that time. We also came through Crete and York, both of which were new towns then. Then we came on up to old Fort Kearney, on the Platte, and so on up to the old Plum creek ranch. There we struck across the divide, and struck the Republican at the mouth of Turkey creek, where Arapahoe now is. We passed very few teams on the road.

There was a log cabin or two at Arapahoe. Captain Murphy, of Plattsmouth, and George and William Colvin were there. William Colvin had a small log shack with a few goods in it in the grocery line. From there we came on to Burton's Bend on Elk creek, where we found Ben Burton. He was occupying a log shanty, I think. He was following trapping and hunting. He came on with us a part of the way to where Cambridge now is. There was no visible wagon track we could follow after leaving Arapahoe. At Cambridge we found a fellow by the name of Mike Foley, who had a brush shanty on the east side of the creek. It was late in the afternoon when we arrived there. We had to build a bridge across the creek to get our wagons over. On the west side of the creek we met Mr. Foley coming down the Medicine with a saddle of elk on his horse. He met us very kindly, and told us of a good place to camp for the night and divided his meat with us.

From there we came on, following up the river without any wagon tracks to guide us at all. We saw plenty of game along the stream—elk and deer—but we didn't get any. Mr. Korns went out and tried to get an elk, but did not make it out. We followed the river up to Dry creek, just west of the village of Bartley. We did not see anyone until we arrived there the next morning. We camped at this place over night. We found over on the east bank a stake driven into the ground, with a shingle or a piece of cracker box nailed to it, marked "Billingsville." We looked over the ground, and were very well pleased with the land and the location, and we all thought that some day there would be a town there. We learned afterward that this stake had been driven by one of a party of government surveyors. The next morning we met John S. King coming down the river on his horse with his gun. He had been to the mouth of the Willow. He was the earliest settler in Redwillow county. He had a shanty near where the Pat McKillip ranch now is. He had a shack down in the timber near the river. He tried to induce us to go back with him, promised to show us the best land there was on the river, but we had started for Redwillow creek, and didn't like to turn back. So he concluded to go on with us. He turned around and returned with us to Redwillow creek, where we arrived that same night. We crossed Coon creek near where the bridge now is, south of Indianola. We got stalled in the creek, and pulled through only after several hours of hard work. We went on to the mouth of the Willow and camped. Mr. King was with us all this time. The next morning when we woke up we saw a little smoke just up the creek from our camp, and concluded we had struck a camp of Indians. We sent out scouts to investigate, and they came back and reported that Charley Moran, a government scout and wagon master from Fort McPherson, was in camp there. They had come over from the fort to hold a pow-wow with Whistler, chief, I think, of the Sioux Indians, who had agreed to meet them at this point to have a talk. We camped there about three days with these men, and the next day we crossed the river—waded across—and Moran shot a very fine deer, which we brought to camp and divided among all hands.

From there we went up the river five or six miles to look at the country, and then came back to the Willow and resumed our old camp. We looked around for a while, and finally concluded to make settlement on claims. We were in the Lowell land district, but the office was not open until the 12th of August, following this.

I stayed here with a fellow by the name of Charles Sanders. We camped on the present town site of Indianola. We were really the only inhabitants of this county that summer. Mr. Hunter and Mr. Korn's returned in a short time to Fremont county, Iowa. I was waiting, before going home, to file on my claim at Lowell, Nebraska, which I did on the 12th day of August, 1872, and from there I went back to Iowa and returned in September with my wife and child. We had a very hard winter, and had a hard time to get along that winter. We went through a great many privations to hold the country. Before going back to Lowell I met D. N. Smith on the ground where Indianola now stands. He was B. & M. land agent in this country, locating land for the Lincoln Land Company, and being an old acquaintance of mine, wanted to know what I was here for. I told him I came out to have a good time, and liked the country so well I thought I would take a claim, and had concluded to wait until I could file on the land. He made arrangements with me to come back and talk matters over. He said he wanted to locate a point here that would be as nearly centrally located in Redwillow county as possible, and in his conversation said that he had a good show here to get the county seat when the county was organized.

The next summer—the summer of 1873—Washington Hinman, Leslie Lawton and myself were appointed by Governor Furnas as commissioners to call an election for the purpose of locating the county seat. The election was held on the 23d day of May, 1873, in an old log house, near the mouth of the Willow. At that election I. J. Starbuck was elected county clerk, George A. Hunter sheriff, myself county judge, B. B. Duckworth treasurer, ——— Lyons county superintendent, and William Berger, William S. Fitch and B. F. Bradberry county commissioners. The first meeting of the county commissioners was held in a tent which I occupied on the town site of Indianola. After this election I went to North Platte to prove up on my homestead. I located on section 7, township 3, range 27 west, part of the town site of Indianola. The town site also included a part of section 18, located by Mr. Hunter.

The same fall the Lincoln Land Company built a frame building for a hotel. It stood where A. Lord's hardware store now is. They also built another frame building sixteen by twenty-four feet directly south of where Lord's building now stands, which the company loaned the use of to the county for a court house, until other arrangements could be made. They also built another building of the same size on the northeast corner of block 39, for a store building, which was rented to parties by the name of Allison & Woods, of Kearney, and occupied as the first store in Redwillow county.

The first term of court in this county was held in this court house by me. I think the first case was a case arising out of a dispute over a load of buffalo meat, or something of that sort. Another early case was one that arose over an assault and battery.

A fight took place in the fall of 1873 between the Sioux and the Pawnees, near where Trenton now is, in Hitchcock county. The Pawnees were defeated by the Sioux, and those who were able to get away came down the river and passed through Indianola in charge of a government agent from the Pawnee reservation. Later the government sent teams hired in the valley to pick up the plunder and bury the bodies of the dead Indians. I think about ninety of the Pawnees were killed. While they were passing through here I had quite a little scuffle with three Indians. I was sitting in the door of my place. I had pulled one of my boots on, and had the other in my hand, when the Indians came up to me. I fought them with my boot until the government agent saw the fracas and came up and drove the Indians off, and told me what the trouble was.

During the summer of 1873 quite a number of other settlers came in and located on lands adjoining Indianola, and along the Willow. Our supplies came from Lowell, between sixty and seventy miles away. If we wanted a pound of sugar or a sack of flour, we had to go there for it. I went to Lowell quite a number of times in the winter, sleeping in my wagon. Our mail was brought up by parties coming up the valley from Arapahoe, and I don't know how much farther. The mail for Indianola would be left with me. Anyone going out or coming up would get the mail and bring it in. This applies to the fall of 1872 and the summer of 1873.

We had quite an Indian scare during the fall of 1873. The Indians threatened to attack, and we called a meeting of the citizens to devise ways and means for protecting ourselves, at the Willow. I was elected captain of the company. I was instructed to write to Governor Furnas for arms and ammunition for self defense. I received a letter from him in which he said that he regretted that he would be unable to furnish arms for us, as the state had no arms at its disposal. So we didn't get them. But a little later we did get fifteen, or maybe thirty stands of arms from some source. They were sent to the sheriff for distribution among the settlers. We felt reasonably safe with the arms, but never had any occasion to use them on the Indians. Mr. Stenner was killed on the Beaver in 1873.

In 1873 the Indians made a raid from Kansas across the Beaver into Nebraska, and on the way killed Anton Stenner. He was shot in his wagon, and his family—his wife and children—came over to Indianola, where they have resided ever since. Some of them live here yet. They killed everything they could find on the ranches, such as cattle, pigs, chickens, etc. They ripped open feather beds, and gave the feathers to the winds. They crossed the Republican at or near Culbertson.

There was a man who came over from the Beaver and said the Indians or a party of them were headed this way. We gave the alarm here to everybody as far as we could give them notice. That was Sunday morning the news came to us. We camped that day on the Indianola town site. We formed a barricade of the wagons, etc., and put every team inside. We sent out scouts to look the matter up. Ike Starbuck was sick half a mile out of town, at James Hatton's. He was brought in on a bed and left at the hotel. James Doyle had a band of horses up near Culbertson which he brought down here. He had a mare in the band that had a colt, which he left at home. When we found out this was a false alarm with regard to the Indians, we wrote a note and tied it on this mare's neck and turned her loose, and she went back home, and that gave word to the settlers up there. This was on Monday. The next day we disbanded and dispersed. I was living one mile west of town on a pre-emption at that time, and when I heard that the Indians were coming I hitched up my team and came down here with my family and the neighbors.

Washington Hinman came here in the summer of 1872, crossing the Republican river at the mouth of the Willow on the fourth day of July with a portable steam saw-mill, which I helped put in place and operated during that first summer I was here. I helped to cut the first saw log that was ever cut in the county.

After the fight near Culbertson, one squaw got away from the Sioux and crawled out into the buffalo brush, and was brought down here by a hunter in his wagon, and left, as she was not able to go any farther. She had an arrow wound in her left breast, and one behind her left ear. Her papoose had been killed, so she said. We could make that out. She was left at the cabin of Mr. Korn on the west side of Coon creek. They tried to get her into the house, but she wouldn't go in. So he placed his wagon cover against the side of the cabin, and they put her into it on some straw and some blankets. The next morning we found her dead, and we took a mowing machine box and we wrapped her up in a blanket, put her in the box, and buried her on the west side of Coon creek, near where the present Indianola cemetery now is. This is the first grave we have any knowledge of in Redwillow county.

William Berger was killed by lightning in the summer of 1873, I think it was, and just one month later Thomas Thomas was killed in the same way. He went out to feed a buffalo calf after a shower, and as he set the bucket down the lightning killed him and the calf. I made twenty-five coffins here out of goods boxes and slabs—cottonwood slabs and pine boxes. I presume twenty-five or thirty pieces went into this coffin of Berger's. The river was up when Berger was killed, and we had to build a boat to get over. When Thomas was killed, we had to ford the river with our teams, and the water would run into our wagon boxes. His funeral was held one Sunday.

The survey, when I came here, extended to between ranges 28 and 29. There was a government party here in the summer of 1872, going on west with the survey. We held our election here in the year 1873, and the result was that Indianola was selected as the county seat, that is, sections 7 and 18, and part of another section. Sixty-three votes were cast at that election, which was held on May 23, 1873.

JUDGE EDGAR S. HILL.

Judge Edgar S. Hill, recently retired from all active business, is one of the best known residents of western Nebraska. He is one of the older settlers of this locality, coming to Nebraska in 1872 and settling on a pre-emption, and this land is the section on which the city of Indianola now stands.

Mr. Hill was born in Wakeman township, Huron county, Ohio. His father, Leveritt Hill, was born in Bridgewater, Connecticut, and his mother, who was Esther Strong, is a native of Woodbury, Connecticut. Her ancestor was Lieutenant John Strong, who came to America in the next vessel which left England after the Mayflower. The Strongs took a prominent part in the Revolutionary war, and among those who figured in the early history of the United States, and Mr. Hill is a near relative to the Shermans and the Beechers. In 1856 he was a teacher in the public schools at Hamburg, Iowa. He cast his first vote for Fremont, and this being the only Republican vote at that point the Democrats refused to accept it. After his father's death, the family moved to Tabor, Iowa. In those days this was the headquarters of John Brown, Jim Lane, and the Kansas anti-slavery forces, and in 1856 Mr. Hill enlisted in a company which was formed there to defend the anti-slavery party, with G. B. Gaston as captain, and Mortimer P. Clark first lieutenant and our subject second lieutenant, and the latter was identified with all of the activities of those days. At one time he helped hide Jim Lane, afterward United States senator from Kansas, under a load of hay in order to convey him to a place of safety; and he was intimately associated with John Brown, Jim Lane, C. W. Cook, and all of the men who were interested in affairs which eventually led up to the war between the north and south. His brother, Rev. Edwin S. Hill, was for thirty-nine years pastor of the Congregational church at Atlantic, Iowa, and during the Civil war served as first lieutenant in Company A, Fourth Iowa Regiment, and took part in many battles. He is now located at Redlands, California. Of two other brothers, J. C. is living, and J. M. Hill is deceased.

In 1859 our subject crossed the state of Nebraska on the California trail, fording the Platte rivers, his destination being California. When Mr. Hill first came to Nebraska he arrived here in company with George A. Hunter, L. B. Korn and W. Weygint, all of whom came from Tama, Iowa. Mr. Hill took a homestead and commuted, later settling on his pre-emption Mr. Hill farmed on a small scale. This place was located one mile west of town of Indianola, and he also had taken a tree claim of eighty acres adjoining the pre-emption, and he worked both these places for twelve years, and then the Lincoln Land Company purchased eighty acres of his homestead and laid out the town site of Indianola. This was done in 1873, and the Burlington & Missouri railway was laid through here in 1880, and the county was organized, Indianola being made the county seat in 1873. Mr. Hill took an active part in all these affairs, and he has since been one of those who has helped make Redwillow county one of the most prosperous in western Nebraska. He was appointed commissioner by Gov. Furnas to organize the county. The first white settler in this county, so far as can be learned, was John S. King, now deceased. For many years our subject was county surveyor, and acted as treasurer of the first school board in Redwillow county. He served as county judge for two terms, being the first to hold that office in the county. He enlisted in the Fourth California Infantry, Company G, and served for three years in lower California, Arizona and New Mexico. All through those states the rebels were strong and tried to organize and carry the territories into the confederacy, but were kept in check by the presence of the Union troops.

Judge Hill has the distinction of having married the first couple in Redwillow county.

In 1867 Mr. Hill was married to Miss Delia Jones, of Dover, Windham county, Vermont, daughter of Solomon and Mary (Estherbrook) Jones, who came west and located in Tabor, Fremont county, Iowa, in 1857. Mr. and Mrs. Hill have three children, who are named as follows: George C., located at Cripple Creek, Colorado, president and general manager of the Frees & Hill Lumber Company; Lena E., of Denver, who for the past seven years has been a trained nurse in St. Luke's Hospital. She was graduated with high honors at the head of her class, and since entering the profession has been very successful in her chosen work; and Frank, who died in infancy. Mr. Hill was one of the organizers of the Congregational church of Indianola, and has served as trustee and chairman of the board ever since. At the first county election held in Redwillow county, Nebraska, B. F. Bradbury was elected county commissioner. He died in 1905, and was buried here. The officers elected at that time were as follows: Probate judge, E. S. Hill; county clerk, Isaac Starbuck, now of Salt Lake; county treasurer, B. B. Duckworth; sheriff, G. A. Hunter, now of Los Angeles, California; surveyor, Page T. Francis, now of Crawford county, Nebraska; county coroner, J. D. Hill; constables, W. Reddick and William Wilson.

JOHN FITZGERALD.

Among the prosperous and successful farmers of western Nebraska, the gentleman above named occupies a leading place. He came to Box Butte county during the earliest years of its settlement and has remained to see the wild prairie region changed into a thriving agricultural and commercial center, and has the pleasure of knowing that a goodly part of this success has been due to his own efforts and good management.

Mr. Fitzgerald was born in county Limerick, Ireland, June 29, 1857. His father, Pat Fitzgerald, had visited this country as early as 1840, then returned to his native land. Our subject grew up there, and as a young man followed the occupation of farming. In 1880 he came to America, and for four years after landing here worked at railroading, and then two years were spent in farming in Cass county, Nebraska. During his work on the railroad he travelled over a large portion of the country, going as far south as New Orleans, north to Deadwood, South Dakota, and in other parts of the United States. While the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road was being put through Alliance Mr. Fitzgerald was with that company, and later did considerable railroading through this county and also to the north, working for a while in a store in Deadwood.

Mr. Fitzgerald came to his present location in 1888, filing on the land as a homestead. This is situated in section 35, township 24, range 48, and he at once went to work to build up a good home, proving up on the farm in 1894. After coming here his first team was a pair of mules which he used to break up his land and he still owns one of them, now twenty-six years old, which has done a great deal toward making his place the highly cultivated tract it now is. During the first years he worked out a great deal in the vicinity of his home, freighting through the country, as he had very little money to start with, being just nineteen dollars in debt after getting his farm under way. He experienced all the hardships and suffered the usual privations met with by the pioneers of those times, but gradually became better able to improve his farm, adding to his acreage as he prospered, so that he is now proprietor of a ranch of six hundred acres, located five and a half miles south from Alliance. This place is fitted with good sod buildings and every convenience in the way of modern machinery, etc., and he is now perfecting plans to build a fine grout dwelling. He is engaged principally in stock raising, running at present about fifty head of cattle and ten horses.

Mr. Fitzgerald was married in the fall of 1888, to Mary Hutchinson, who was born and raised in Ireland, where her father followed the occupation of farmer and fisherman all his life. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald are the parents of six children, namely: Martin, John, Mary, Ellen, Maggie and Katie.

GEORGE D. ASHWORTH.

Among the early settlers in this part of the country who has aided materially in the upbuilding of the community in which he chose his home, the gentleman above mentioned holds a prominent place. Mr. Ashworth has resided in this county since 1885, and has always been one of the leading citizens in the developing of the commercial and agricultural interests of this region. Mr. Ashworth is a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, born December 7, 1839. His father, James Ashworth, was a plasterer by trade, and an early settler in Wheeling, West Virginia, coming from Lancashire, England, in 1850. His mother, Annie C. Stroup, was of Dutch parentage, born in Germantown, Pennsylvania. There was a family of six children, and our subject was the second member. He was reared in West Virginia and at the age of twenty-one years enlisted in Company K, Second West Virginia Infantry, and was among the first volunteers to offer their services to their country. He was under the command of General McClellan, and with the Army of the Potomac from 1862, participating in the battle of Antietam and many other severe engagements. He remained in the army until the close of the war, receiving his discharge May 28, 1866, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He then returned to West Virginia, where he farmed for a year, then came back to Kansas, engaging in farming and cattle raising until 1875. During the latter year he went to Colorado on a hunting trip, in search of buffalo which roamed the plains in that region. In the spring of the following year he visited the Centennial at Philadelphia, remaining at that place for six months visiting a sister. From there he went to Belmont county, Ohio, and lived there until 1885, when coming to Nebraska, he settled in Brown county on the 20th of March. He at first first rented land near Long Pine, living in a log cabin for a few years; part of the time he secured work in a flouring mill in Long Pine to make a living, having practically no capital to start with when coming here. In 1887 he settled on a homestead in section 19, township 29, range 20, and here put up farm buildings, and improvements, remaining until he proved up on the claim. He now owns a farm of one hundred and sixty-two acres, with three hundred and thirty acres of Kincaid homestead adjoining, and is engaged in hay and stock raising, meeting with great success in both enterprises.

Mr. Ashworth has gone through many hard experiences since first settling in this section. He has had many misfortunes and financial losses, but by dint of his energy and perseverance has conquered conditions, and is now in a position to enjoy the fruits of his hard labor and take comfort in his old age with his competence which is a result of much hard work and honest thrift.

Mr. Ashworth was married December 9, 1877, at Martinsville, Ohio, to Miss Mary L. Giles, daughter of Jonathan and Louisa Giles, of Yankee-English stock. Two children were born of their marriage, namely: Clyde and Anna Lilice. Mr. Ashworth has always been active in local affairs, and has held numerous offices in his community. He is Republican in his political views and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Ainsworth.

WILLIAM A. HOPPING.

William A. Hopping, one of the old settlers of Perkins county, now residing on section 3, township 9, range 35, is one of the energetic, intelligent and worthy citizens of that region, and as such has gained a host of friends. He is proprietor of a fine farm, has devoted his entire career to agriculture, and is thoroughly versed in his calling.

Mr. Hopping was born in Jasper county, Iowa, April 12, 1861. His parents were of American stock, the father a farmer by occupation, and our subject grew up on a farm, receiving a common school education and during boyhood learning to do all kinds of hard farm work. When he was a small boy his father died, William remaining with his mother in Iowa until he was twenty-five years of age, then came west to Nebraska, locating in Perkins county in 1886, homesteading on section 9, township 9, range 35. When he first landed in this country he drove from North Platte by team, coming by train to that point and having with him his family and all their goods including horses, cattle, machinery, furniture, etc. He built a shanty and went through all the pioneer experiences in getting his farm started, witnessing drouths and suffering crop losses, but never became discouraged even if it was hard work to get along and make a living. He stuck to his claim, proved up on it and managed to add improvements little by little.

Two brothers of Mr. Hopping came to the region about the same time he did, and went through the same hardships in establishing their homes, and both of them, Sidney and Timothy, are now well-to-do farmers. The mother, one sister and another brother now own an extensive ranch adjoining our subject's place, and all are well-known and highly esteemed as progressive citizens.

Mr. Hopping's ranch is well fenced and cross-fenced, and he has a complete set of good buildings on it. He is engaged in stock raising to quite an extent, but cultivates considerable land, raising grains, hay, etc. He makes a specialty of horse raising, keeping the draft horse exclusively, and he has some of the finest animals on the market. Every horse on his place is raised as a pet and can be safely handled by anyone.

Mr. Hopping has always taken a commendable interest in local affairs, and has served as county commissioner for one year, his brother Sidney also holding this office for one term.

JOHN W. TROXEL.

John W. Troxel was born on a farm in Saunders county, Nebraska, in 1876. His father, John Troxel, was a farmer and pioneer settler of Saunders and Loup counties, Nebraska. His mother's maiden name was Mary Groves, and she now lives in Taylor, Nebraska, the deceased father's biography appearing elsewhere in this volume.

The family came to Loup county in 1879 and engaged in farming, the subject of our sketch remaining at home working on his father's farm until 1894. John W. Troxel was a hard working young man and very materially assisted in making the old home farm a success.

In the summer of 1894 he carried the mail from Burwell to Almeria for four months, and then went to Wyoming, where for part of two years he was engaged at different jobs. In 1898 he went into Custer county, working out for others at farm work and also did some farm work for himself.

In 1902 John W. Troxel and Miss Hattie Gunnarson were united in marriage and one child has come to bless this union, Francis. Mrs. Troxel was a native of Sweden, her father being Oscar Gunnarson.

Mr. Troxel purchased the farm where he now lives in the fall of 1907, and he now owns three hundred and twenty acres in section 23, township 24, range 25, and section 25, township 21, range 19. This ranch is in a desirable condition with good buildings, orchards, groves and gardens, making a good home, with eighty acres of plowed land now, but this amount will be steadily increased. Mr. Troxel is one of the leading men of the community and he stands well among his neighbors and friends. He is industrious and thrifty and is on the road to wealth and prosperity.

D. F. FICKES.

D. F. Fickes, one of the well-known citizens of Deuel county, is a prosperous and well-to-do farmer of Loss Creek precinct, Deuel county. His residence is on section 25, township 17, range 44, and he is the owner of half a section of valuable land, adjoining the village of Oshkosh. He is a gentleman of integrity and good judgment and well merits the success and enviable reputation which he enjoys.

Mr. Fickes was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, January 11, 1858. There were nine children in his father's family, of whom he was the youngest. He grew up there and his brothers and sisters still make that locality their home, although both parents are now dead. In 1878 he left home and started for himself, going into Ohio where he remained for a time, then returned to Pennsylvania and followed farming there for several years. In 1888 he drifted to Tennessee and spent about four years there, coming to Deuel county, Nebraska, in the fall of 1892. Here he took a homestead on section 25, township 17, range 44, and still occupies the place, which he has built up into a fine farm. The home place contains three hundred and twenty acres, and he also has a quarter section of upland, cultivating about one hundred and fifty acres and using the balance for hay and pasture. Mr. Fickes has erected good buildings of all kinds, and has every convenience for the proper handling of his farming interests.

In 1884 Mr. Fickes was married to Miss Irene Fought, the event occurring in Sandusky county, Ohio, she being born and reared in that state. Both Mrs. Fickes' parents are deceased. Two children were born to our subject: Howard, now twenty, and Orvin, seventeen years old.

Mr. Fickes is prominent in all local affairs and is interested in all things pertaining to county and state matters. During the fall of 1908 he was elected county commissioner, and will hold that office for three years. In politics he is a Republican and is one of the leaders of his party in the county.

When Mr. Fickes first settled in this county he had poor crops; the years 1894-'95 were almost total failures, making it difficult to get along. Since 1896 crops have been very favorable and Mr. Fickes is prospering. He now has a very fine orchard on his farm.

DAVID A. LAWLER.

Another old settler who has done his full share in the upbuilding and development of his section is the gentleman whose name heads this personal history. Mr. Lawler resides on his well-improved estate in section 4, township 12, range 35, Keith county, and is a highly esteemed citizen and worthy neighbor and friend.

David A. Lawler was born in DeKalb county, Illinois, November 26, 1856. He is a son of Joseph Lawler, a farmer of that section who was born in county Clare, Ireland, and emigrated to America in 1849; and his mother was Ellen (Halborn), born in Brooklyn, New York, also of Irish parentage. They were married in DeKalb county, Illinois. Our subject was raised in his native state, attending the country schools, and was taught early in life to do all kinds of farm work. He lived with his parents until he was twenty-five years of age, then came to Keith county in 1884, locating on his present farm in the spring of that year, building a frame shack as a dwelling, which he occupied for many years and now uses for a barn. His first team was a yoke of oxen, and he went through all the pioneer experiences, witnessing the drouths and grasshopper raids. For a number of years he did contracting and building through the country, then went into stock raising, all of the time holding to his farm and adding improvements as he was able. Often he had a hard time to get along, on account of losing crops and meeting with failures in different enterprises, but he finally was able to get ahead and lay by a little, adding to his original tract, so that he now has a ranch containing four sections, including a section of school land, with nine hundred acres cultivated, on which he has raised as high as fourteen thousand bushels of corn and ten thousand bushels of small grain in a season. He has a complete set of good farm buildings and improvements, a large, commodious barn with many other outbuildings, and keeps quite a herd of stock, some two hundred cattle and thirty-five head of horses. He also has a good orchard started, and some small fruit. We are pleased to present a view of the home and its pleasant surroundings on another page of our work.

Mr. Lawler was married April 28, 1884, to Miss Anna Wenner, born near Mankato, Minnesota, a daughter of Peter and Gertrude (Tieman) Wenner, both of whom died in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Lawler have a family of eight children, namely: Marion, Lester, Elma, Fern, Robert, Isabel, Lewis and Harvey, all bright and interesting young people, and they have a pleasant home and a host of friends in the community. Our subject has held school office for years past, and has helped establish and maintain the schools in his locality. In 1888 he was elected county commissioner on the Democratic ticket, and takes an active part in local politics. He, with his family, is a member of the Catholic church and affiliates with the Modern Woodmen and the American Order of Protection.

JULES E. TISSOT.

Jules E. Tissot was born in Renan, Berne, Switzerland, in 1864. He was raised there, remaining with his parents until the death of his father, in 1875, and came to America in 1883, landing in New York March 1st, of that year. He was joined here by his mother, in 1885, who now lives with her son. He is the youngest of four sons, three coming to this country and settling here. When he arrived in this country he had a small amount of money, and he went directly to Wisconsin where he stayed for a time, then went back to Ohio and spent one year. In the spring of 1884 he started for the west, and stopped in Knox county, Nebraska, for a short time, then came on to Sheridan county. Here he filed on a pre-emption, located in section 9, township 29, range 45, and proved up on it as a homestead. He also took up a tree claim, and later sold his relinquishment and his homestead and moved to the sand hills in 1890, locating near what is now Luella Postoffice, where he engaged in the ranching business.

Mr. Tissot lived on this place for several years, and was there during the Indian scare, but remained there through the dangerous time, and never had any serious trouble with the redskins. When he landed in this region the road ended at Valentine, and he filed on a pre-emption and started to work for the Hunter & Evans outfit, remaining with that firm during the winter of 1884-'85, and continued working out on different ranches up to 1887. During the latter year he was married to Miss Jennie VanCamp, born in Wisconsin in 1870. They had two children, namely: Arthur E. and Mabel J., and in 1895 the mother died. Two years later Mr. Tissot was married to Miss Cecile Franc, a native of Switzerland, born in 1864, who came to America in 1897. Her father, Louis Henry Franc, was engaged in the hotel and butcher business in that country, and neither parent ever left their native land. Three children resulted from this marriage, named as follows: Jules H., Cecile and Ernest Eugene, all of whom were born and raised in this locality.

Mr. Tissot settled on his homestead in 1887, putting up his first buildings of sod. During the first years he farmed, but during the dry years he quit trying to farm any, and went into the stock raising business, which helped him out to considerable extent. He had a hard time to keep in feed, being obliged to haul hay for twenty-one miles with which to keep his stock. In the spring of 1905 he sold thirteen hundred and sixty acres of deeded land and three hundred and fifty-seven head of cattle and nineteen horses, besides all farming tools, and moved to California, where he invested in a fruit ranch. He paid ten thousand dollars for this ranch, and in less than a year sold it for fifteen thousand five hundred dollars, which was pretty good interest on his money. He went out there principally for his health, but did not entirely recover it, and in 1906 returned to Sheridan county. He has not as yet purchased any land here, but intends to invest in this county. He may buy back his old place, as he has it in fine shape, supplied with an irrigation plant. He was secretary of the Mirage Irrigation Company in his locality during all the time he lived in that locality.

Mr. Tissot has done exceedingly well since coming to Nebraska, and has accumulated a large estate here, and will undoubtedly make this his future home, as he states he would never go east to live. He was postmaster at Mirage for nine years, and has held local office at different times, but never taken any active part in politics, although he is a straight Republican. He cast his first vote for a Republican candidate and has voted that way ever since.

GUST ERICKSON.

Gust Erickson, a prosperous and successful farmer and ranchman of Trognitz precinct, Cheyenne county, Nebraska, and highly respected for his many good qualities, was born in Sweden on April 22, 1856, and raised and educated there, following farming in that country during his young manhood. Mr. Erickson's parents lived and died in their native country. When our subject was about twenty-five years of age he came to America by way of Goettenberg, Hull and Liverpool, landing in Quebec in June of 1881. He went directly west, locating in Roseville, Warren county, Illinois, where he remained for about seven years, working about two years on the railroad section and for five and a half years followed tiling near that place, then went further west, settling in Kansas, but did not like the country very well and only spent a year there, then came to Cheyenne county, arriving here in the spring of 1889, pre-empting a quarter section of land.

When Mr. Erickson first arrived in this section, there were but few white settlers in the vicinity where he took up a homestead, which was in section 6, township 16, range 52, and there was but little being done in the way of improving the country. He at once went to work to build up a home and develop a farm, proving up on his homestead and gradually adding substantial buildings and improvements. He now has a farm of three hundred and twenty acres, part of this being a Kincaid claim which he took in 1903. He has about seventy acres cultivated, and the balance in hay land and pasture. He keeps forty head of cattle and a small bunch of horses, and is on the high road to wealth, devoting all his time and attention to his farm, and as one of the old settlers he can contemplate the growth of the county, the history of which he knows by personal experience from a very early day.

Mr. Erickson was married in Warren county, Illinois, in 1884, to Mary Carlson, who died in Cheyenne county in July, 1894. Mrs. Erickson was a native of Sweden. She left a family of three children, namely: Edith, Mabel and Edwin.

Since coming to western Nebraska Mr. Erickson has done his full share toward the development of the commercial and farming interests of his locality, taking an active part in local matters generally. He is Republican in politics and a member of the Free Mission church.

JOHN POTMESIL, JR.

John Potmesil, Jr., who is today one of the worthy representatives of the best agricultural interests of Dawes county, Nebraska, has done much toward building up the locality in which he resides.

Mr. Potmesil was born in Bohemia in 1871 on a farm, and is a son of John Potmesil, Sr., also born and raised in that country, who served in the army in Italy in 1865, during the Austria-Italian war. He married Rose Sixta, also born and raised in Bohemia, where they married and where they had five children, of whom our subject was the second member, named as follows: Anna, James, Rose, Silvine, Frank and then later, Alice, who was born in Box Butte county, Nebraska. The family came to America in 1882, landing in New York city, and immediately struck out for the west, locating in Saunders county, Nebraska, where they made their home for three years, farming in that vicinity. In May of the latter year they came to the western part of the state, driving through with a team and covered wagon, camping out at night, and when they landed here they had just one sack of flour and fifty cents in money to start with. Our subject and a sister had stopped at Valentine, where they worked out by the week for some time.

The father selected a tract of land located near the Niobrara river, where his first building was a sod shanty, and he went to work picking up bones and hauling them for thirty miles where he sold them to make a living for his family. On two different occasions he was caught in severe snow storms and sufferred terribly from exposure, and one time shortly after settling here he made a trip of one hundred and fifty miles from their homestead to Valentine to get a sack of flour which he had left there on their way through from the east. This trip consumed quite a number of days to accomplish, as the roads were rough and unbroken, and he camped out at night under his wagon. While he was away the family were left without any protection and in danger of wild beasts which roamed the region, also from the Indians, and they had barely enough to eat to last them until he returned; but this is only one of the many instances where they suffered by the hard experiences of those early days. Our subject and his father bought ox teams after locating here, with which they broke up their land and put in crops, and they bought their first cow in the fall of 1885, purchasing her from the proceeds derived from their bone picking. They had just got nicely started when the drouths came and then they lost considerable money through failures of crops, and as they could not do much in the way of farming, decided to go into the cattle business, and this was a lucky venture for them, as they have built up a good home through their success in this line of work.

John and his brother, James, each took up a homestead in section 30, township 29, range 47, and together they now own a ranch of five thousand acres lying along the Niobrara river, three hundred acres of which is irrigated, all of it fenced and improved. They have good barns and sheds, a fine system of water works, stock yards, etc., and farm two hundred acres, keeping about five hundred head of cattle and one hundred horses. Mr. Potmesil is a Republican and a strong party man.

H. E. HART.

Among the younger members of the farming community of _____ township, none stands on a higher plane as a prosperous and energetic citizen than H. E. Hart. He is the proprietor of a fine farm and pleasant home, and numbered among the leading men in Keya Paha county, who is doing all in his power to build up and develop its agricultural and commercial resources.

Mr. Hart was born in Green county, Wisconsin, in 1876. When he was seven years of age his parents moved to Arkansas, where they remained for a year and a half, then came to Ord, Nebraska. His father, Philip Hart, was a farmer all his life, of German descent, and both he and his wife, who was Miss Elizabeth Verlie, were born in Wisconsin. They had three children, our subject being the eldest. At the age of eighteen years he started out for himself, following farm work in Nebraska, and has stuck to that business ever since. He bought his present homestead located on section 31, township 35, range 17, consisting of three hundred and twenty acres, and this he has well improved with good buildings, fences, etc. He farms about two hundred acres, and runs quite a number of cattle, leaning mostly towards the hog business, and keeps two hundred of these animals all the time. He only has horses enough for farm use, and finds that raising hogs for market is very profitable.

Mr. Hart was married in 1895 to Miss Esther L. Wallace, born in Merrick county, Nebraska, in 1879. Her people were of English descent, born in America, who settled in this state about 1877, and still live three-quarters of a mile from the place on which they settled when first landing here. Mr. and Mrs. Hart have one child, Florence E.

Mr. Hart is a Democrat, and although he takes an interest in local affairs, is not in any sense of the word a public man, preferring to devote his time to the development and improvement of his farm and home.

JOHN C. STEWARD.

Mr. Steward was born in Henry county, Illinois, September 4, 1859, being the eldest of eight children. He lived in Illinois until 1884 and came to Dawson county, Nebraska, in the spring of 1885. In the fall of 1885 he came to Deuel county (then Cheyenne county), and took up a homestead on southwest quarter, section 34, township 15, range 43, on which he put up a house and moved into same on March 28, 1886. In 1905 he sold the farm, and now resides on northwest quarter, section 12, township 12, range 42, Deuel county, where he owns one hundred and sixty acres of land. He is a farmer and stockraiser and formerly had large cattle interests. Mr. Steward has passed through the different times in Nebraska and is now one of the successful men in Deuel county.

Mr. Steward was married in Bureau county, Illinois, December 17, 1882, to Sarah Estabrook, a native of Illinois. They have nine children, named as follows: Alice M., Blanch V., married to Loren D. Root and living in Keith county, Nebraska; Archie C., Gertrude Irene, Pearl V., Clarence L., Ruby M., Ruth and Marvin D.

At the time Mr. Steward settled in Deuel county, the country was new and thinly settled. The hardships the settlers were compelled to endure, were severe, and Mr. Steward has had his full share. In those days, the settlers were satisfied if they could secure the necessities of life and the luxuries were unknown. When Mr. Steward settled in Deuel county, he lived in a house partly built of sod; even this was a step forward, for many houses were constructed entirely of sod. He at first had a pair of ponies to use in his work and later, a yoke of oxen. Good water was hard to secure, inasmuch as the settlers were not equipped with the necessary tools with which to dig wells. Water was hauled by Mr. Steward a distance of seven miles, and when he dug his first well, it was necessary to go down two hundred and thirty-six feet; his second well was two hundred and fifty feet deep. To add to the troubles of the pioneers, crops were uncertain; so little of the country was settled and the soil broken, that drouths were frequent, and many crops were almost or totally destroyed. At the time Mr. Steward lost his crops by drouth, he was compelled to work out and went to Colorado, where he secured employment. Later he returned to Deuel county and by hard labor and perseverance, has now a well improved place, equipped with all that is necessary to carry on successful operations. He has good buildings and improvements and today is blessed with a goodly share of this world's goods.

Marvin Steward, the father of our subject, was an old settler in Deuel county. He was a veteran of the Civil war, and the hardships he endured while in the service of his country injured his health so seriously that he never fully recovered, and in an effort to obtain relief he went to Chicago, where he submitted to a surgical operation, which caused his death.

The mother of Mrs. John C. Steward, Mary (Farrell) Estabrook, was a pioneer in Deuel county, where she homesteaded a claim and later proved up on it. She died in 1904, after an active and useful life.

Politically, Mr. Steward is a Republican, taking an active part in affairs of public interest. He has served as assessor, road overseer and is at present constable of Big Springs precinct. He takes an active part in educational matters and helped to organize the first schools in the county. The first schoolhouse was constructed of sod and this building was also used as a church and Sunday-school.

HENRY R. GRAGG.

Henry R. Gragg, one among the many who came to western Nebraska in 1894, and from a start of practically nothing have carved out for themselves a good home and comfortable competence by dint of perseverance and thrift, is proprietor of a fine estate in section 27, township 21, range 35, Hooker county.

Mr. Gragg is a native of Oakland county, Michigan, born on a farm there in 1877. James T. Gragg, his father, was a farmer by occupation, and is well known in Nebraska, having gone through pioneer experiences in Redwillow and McPherson counties, coming there in 1881 with his family. Our subject grew up in his home locality, assisting his father in the farm work until he reached the age of fifteen years, then started to work for himself, going to Hooker county and securing employment as a cowboy, later traveling all over that part of the state following ranch work. In 1901 he settled on the ranch he at present occupies, beginning with absolutely nothing excepting a team of horses. He took up the land as a homestead, and proved up on it in the fall of 1907. Besides this ranch he also lives on a Kincaid homestead of four hundred and eighty acres, and has the property well improved. He has about seventy acres under cultivation, and intends breaking up seventy-five acres more as soon as possible.

Mr. Gragg was married in 1900, to Miss Gertrude Bassett, whose father, Thomas M. Bassett, was a pioneer in McPherson county, Nebraska, and a successful farmer and ranchman of that locality. When he first struck that region he was a poor man, and in order to make a living for his family, began to pick up bones from the prairie and sold them for nine and ten dollars per ton. Mrs. Gragg's mother was Viola Hayward, of Iowa. To Mr. Gragg and his good wife have been born the following children: Robert, aged seven; George, eight, and Hazel, two years.

I. S. WALKER.

I. S. Walker, another of the well and favorably known old settlers who has passed through all the early Nebraska experiences, the good with the bad, is now nicely situated in Kimball, Nebraska, and is classed among the leading and worthy citizens of his locality. Mr. Walker has lived in Kimball county for the past twenty-two years, and holds the esteem of all who know him.

Mr. Walker was born in Saratoga county, New York, on January 25, 1861, living there until he was four years old, when the family, consisting of himself, father, mother, one full brother and three half-brothers, moved to Champaign county, Illinois, where he grew to manhood. While living in Illinois, the mother was taken away from her little family, her death occurring November 14, 1871. When our subject was twenty-four years of age he and his father came to Nebraska. He settled on a homestead on section 34, township 16, range 53, in Kimball county, proved up on the place, then sold out. His father also homesteaded, proved up and sold out, and the latter made Kimball county his home up to 1895, afterwards going to Colorado, dying at Julesburg, that state, on January 19, 1898.

Mr. Walker purchased a ranch on section 31, township 15, range 56, situated six miles west of the town of Kimball, in December, 1896. He had moved to Kimball in 1892, where he secured a position as a clerk in a store and filled the position very acceptably for one year.

He next went into the Bank of Kimball as a bookkeeper, and remained with the institution for four years in that capacity, then returned to his ranch, which comprises one whole section of land. Three years were spent on the farm, which is devoted to hay and stock raising, being admirably situated on Lodgepole creek, and he has added many improvements of all kinds on the ranch. In 1901 Mr. Walker again moved into the village, purchasing the Kimball Hotel, and still owns this property. In the spring of 1904 he engaged in the real estate business in partnership with C. A. Forsling, under the firm name of Forsling & Walker, which is the pioneer real estate establishment of Kimball county. The Kimball fraternal hall was built in 1904, Mr. Walker being secretary and manager of same, and he is also a prominent member of the Industrial Club of Kimball, acting as its secretary. He has always been in the front rank of any movement for the advancement of his town and county, and can justly be termed one of its leading public-spirited citizens.

On April 6, 1887, Mr. Walker was married in Kimball, to Miss Hattie E. Ainsworth. Mrs. Walker was born in Illinois and grew up there, coming to Nebraska with her parents, who were pioneers in Kimball county, in 1886. Her father is now dead, while her mother resides in Chicago, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have two children, Ethel Ethelyn and Ruth E., both at home.

JOEL WICKARD.

Joel Wickard, one of the most prominent early settlers of Cheyenne county, is proprietor of an extensive farm and ranch in Union Valley precinct, a man of excellent qualifications, and in whatever enterprises he has embarked, has met with great success. He has been an important factor in the development of the financial resources of the region which he has made his home for the past twenty years, and is widely and favorably known throughout Cheyenne and the adjoining counties.

Mr. Wickard, a son of John T. and Mary (Bigelow) Wickard, was born in Hancock county, Indiana, October 27, 1865, there growing to the age of fourteen years, then the family moved to Lawrence county, Tennessee, where they lived for about seven years. Several years were spent by our subject in different states, and he finally came to Nebraska, settling in Cheyenne county. He took up a homestead in 1888, filing on a claim on section 24, township 16, range 49. He went to work to build up a good home, proved up on the land, then sold out his holdings. He next went to Weld county, Colorado, and farmed there for six years, returning to his county in 1893, at which time he purchased the north half of section 4, township 16, range 48, and still occupies this as a homestead. The farm contains three hundred and twenty acres, all improved in good shape, having fine buildings, etc. There is one hundred acres under cultivation, and he runs about sixty head of stock, and is classed among the prosperous and up-to-date agriculturists in his locality. He is a skillful mechanic, using all kinds of tools, and is extensively employed to make the branding irons used in this vicinity.

Mr. Wickard was united in marriage September 6, 1886, in Kentucky, to Miss Edna Johnson, who is a native of Kansas and a daughter of Benjamin and Phoebe (Howe) Johnson; her mother resides in Oregon at the present time, but both parents of our subject are deceased. Eleven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wickard, named as follows: Bertha, married to William H. Ferichs, owner of a farm in Cheyenne county; Minnie, wife of Albert Ferichs, also living in this county; Walter, Effie, Marian, Ernest, Lillian, Bessie, Jennie, Luther and Leola, all at home. The wife died July 16, 1908. The family have a very pleasant home, a new six-room residence having been built in 1907. They are highly esteemed as worthy citizens and agreeable neighbors by all who know them. Mr.

RESIDENCE OF J. W. SEWELL, Garfield County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF JOEL WICKARD,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

Wickard is a man of broad ideas and has always staunchly supported the principles of good government regardless of party bias or political excitement, although he is a loyal Republican. At the present time he is serving his school district as director. He is a member of Dalton Camp, Modern Woodmen of America. A view of the ranch buildings is to be found elsewhere in this work.

JOSH. W. SEWELL.

Josh. W. Sewell, who owns a valuable property in section 17, township 22, range 15, Garfield county, is a well known pioneer of western Nebraska. He settled here when the state was in its earliest stages of development, and has watched its growth from a barren prairie to the highly cultivated region it has now become. Incidentally he has aided materially in its progress by helping to establish schools and giving liberally of his time and financial aid in every movement which tended to the bettering of conditions in his section of the country. Mr. Sewell farms along progressive lines, is a thorough stockman and agriculturist, and one of the wealthiest men in his county.

Josh. Sewell was born in Clinton county, Iowa, in 1856. He was raised on a farm and grew up in his native state, learning to do all sorts of hard farm work. Our subject came to Nebraska in 1883, landing here in January of that year, homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres and took a timber claim of one hundred and sixty acres more, making three hundred and twenty acres of table land located nine miles northeast of Burwell. He bought and sold grain during the early years here, also raised both on his ranch. During the year 1894 he experienced the hardest times he ever saw anywhere, and at that time many families who had settled here became discouraged and gave up trying to make a living, finally being forced to abandon their farms, but our subject stuck to his place, determined to "win out." He struggled on through that dry spring, and later the hot winds swept the section and destroyed crops, and he often became disheartened, seeing his corn crop, which looked so promising early in the season, literally burned out. July 26, 1894, he thinks was the hottest day ever known in this country. However, through all his failures and discouragements he came out with a strong heart and determined will, and when times grew better was able to improve his place and lay by a little money. His best year was in 1902, when he raised banner crops of corn, wheat, oats, barley and rye. That year he also fed several carloads of hogs for the market which netted him a tidy sum. Mr. Sewell claims that considering labor, etc., it costs less to produce the same crops in Nebraska than it does in the eastern states. His ranch is improved with a complete set of good farm buildings and every improvement in the way of farming machinery to facilitate his operations, also owning his own threshing rig.

Mr. Sewell has an excellent supply of water on his place, all coming from deep drilled wells, which furnish plenty of water pumped by windmills into supply tanks, which are placed at different points on his farm and this water is of the finest quality and clear as a crystal. He also has a fine grove and orchard, and his place as a whole presents comfort and good management.

In 1890 Mr. Sewell was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Mohr, a native of Germany. They are the parents of four children, namely: Julius, Eva, Clara and Ernest. Mr. Sewell takes an active interest in local politics, and has served as county commissioner for several terms, also as justice of the peace. He has been a member of the school board for many years. He is a Republican in political views.

ELVER L. HEATH.

Prominent among the old-timers of Nebraska who have spent the greater part of their lives in the upbuilding of the commercial interests of this section, watching its growth and development from its early inception, is the gentleman above mentioned, Elver L. Heath.

Mr. Heath is a native of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, born about twelve miles from Cleveland, March 16, 1853, and at the age of two months his parents came to Iowa, settling in Delaware county, where he was reared and educated. His father, Uri Heath, was a blacksmith by trade, who retired from active life in 1898, and came to Nebraska, making his home with his son the remainder of his life. Our subject is the fifth member in a family of ten children, and at the age of fifteen years he began learning the printer's trade in Webster City, Iowa. After thoroughly mastering this work he went to Essex, Page county, Iowa, and started a paper called the Essex Index. He first came to Nebraska in 1880, locating at David City, where he bought the David City Republican and edited this from 1880 to 1885, then bought the Rushville Standard, which he published up to 1900. In December of that year he started the Cody Cowboy, of which he is now the able editor, serving at the same time as United States commissioner, by which he is authorized to transact government land business here in the matter of homestead filings, taking first proofs, etc. He is doing exceedingly well in all his ventures, and building up a wide reputation as a successful business man. When he first reached Sheridan county he was practically "broke," and went to work building log houses in order to get enough money to have his household goods shipped to Rushville. He took a pre-emption in section 31, township 32, range 43, on which he built a log house, and afterward sold it when he moved to Cody. He disposed of six hundred and forty acres of land, receiving in all one thousand six hundred dollars. He is still owner of a six hundred and forty-acre homestead located three miles from the town of Cody.

Mr. Heath was married in 1886 to Ella C. Bailey, born at Mt. Carroll, Illinois, in 1858. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Heath, namely: Ada B., John M. (deceased), F. Kemp, Eva B., Austin W., Eliza (deceased), and Esther, all of whom were born and raised in this state.

Mr. Heath has always been active in political circles since young manhood, and was state representative from his district for the legislative session of 1891. Since that time he has never sought public preferment, and devotes his entire time to the different enterprises of which he is the head. Politically he is a Republican. During the existence of the Order of the Good Templars Mr. Heath was a prominent member. He now affiliates with the Masonic fraternity, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Woodmen and the Highlanders.

J. HAhLER.

J. Hahler, one of the prosperous business men of North Platte, Nebraska, is a man of industrious habits and energetic efforts, and a citizen of true worth. He is engaged in the stock and provision business, and has an extensive trade throughout the county. His home is in a good part of the city, and he has the welfare of his town at heart and aids every industry which tends to the growth and advancement of his locality.

Mr. Hahler first came to western Nebraska in 1878, settling in Lincoln county on a ranch which he operated for several years. He has been engaged to a great extent in buying and selling farms and city property, and he has been very successful in these investments. He has just recently sold his home property in North Platte for the round sum of ten thousand dollars, also three frontages to the Burlington & Missouri Railway Company, and it is stated that the new depot on this line will soon be erected on this site, and will be located on south Dewey street. He had been engaged in business in North Platte during the years 1883 and 1884, and afterward operated a large ranch in South Dakota, but returned to Nebraska, where he has resided continuously since. He established the leading meat market in this city in 1900, and was very successful in this venture, having an extensive trade and furnishing the people of the city with the finest meats to be had, running a strictly first-class market, and he was regarded as a business man of the highest ability, honest and fair in all his dealings. This business was sold in May, 1908, and Mr. Hahler devotes his time to stock shipping. He still buys and sells a great deal of stock. All of his meats while in the meat market were from cattle slaughtered right at home, and this insures the best and most delicious cuts to be found anywhere, as he is most particular in inspecting all the stock which is killed for his shop.

ISAAC L. YEARNs.

Among the vast acreage that has been opened up to cultivation during the past few years in Dawes county, Nebraska, a tract of seven hundred and eighty acres is owned and operated by the gentleman above named. This well improved and highly cultivated farm is located in section 7, township 31, range 50, all of the work of building this place having been accomplished during the last seven years, and he is recognized as one of the enterprising and progressive citizens of his locality.

Mr. Yearns was born in Marion county, Iowa, in 1861. His father, James B. Yearns, was of American blood, a farmer in later years, and in his younger days was a teacher, also practiced law for several years in Iowa. He married Miss Nancy Porter, a native of Indiana, born of American parents. Our subject was reared and educated in Iowa, attending the country schools while assisting his father in the work of carrying on the home farm, the latter dying in 1882, and after his death Isaac was the main support of his mother, up to the time of her death which occurred in Nebraska May 8, 1907. Our subject and his mother came to eastern Nebraska in the spring of 1879, settling in Burt county, where they were among the pioneer settlers, remaining there for three years. In 1884 they moved to Dawes county, Valentine, one hundred and thirty-five miles distant from their farm, being the nearest railroad point. Mr. Yearn took up a timber claim the previous year, and located on it in the spring of 1885, traveling by team from Valentine, the trip taking ten days. He also took up a pre-emption and lived on this for fifteen years, having with him his brother John, who died in Montana in the fall of 1891, and the mother lived with our subject up to her death. In 1900 our subject settled on his present farm in section 7, township 31, range 50, which was then partly improved property. He has kept adding to the place and has built it up in good shape, owning altogether seven hundred and eighty acres, well supplied with timber and with four living springs which furnish plenty of water for his stock. He has good buildings and the ranch is all fenced, and he is engaged principally in stock raising. He has gone through the drouth periods and other discouraging times, but has stuck to his farm through everything and made a success of his venture.

In political views he leans toward the Republican party, but votes the Independent ticket.

OTTO BERGER.

Otto Berger, an old settler in Long Pine, Nebraska, is one of the successful business men of that place, where he is engaged in the general merchandise business. Mr. Berger has a large trade, and is well known all through the locality as a capable and prosperous merchant, and one of the foremost men of the town. Mr. Berger was born in the village of Neufunnuksil, Ostfriesland, Germany, April 29, 1864. His father, Wilhelm Berger, is still living in the fatherland, engaged in the insurance business. Our subject was reared there and received a good education, coming to this country in 1882, sailing from Bremen Haven on the steamer Werra and landing in New York in February of that year. He spent the following year at Brooklyn and New York, employed as a grocery clerk, and then came west, where he located in Stewart,

Nebraska, working in a store for a year. He next took up a homestead near Hay Springs, and remained on it until he had proved up, going through the usual pioneer experiences, then moved to Carns, Nebraska, entering a grocery store for six or seven months, where he was employed by Tom Glover. In the spring of 1887 this stock was closed out and Mr. Berger left Carns and went to Bassett, clerking for Glover & Berger, the latter being a brother of our subject, who was associated with the firm for several years. In May, 1887, this store was also closed out, and he then went to Gordon, working for the same firm up to July 4th of that year. In September he and his brother returned to the fatherland, visiting the home folks for three months. On his return he started in business, buying a drove of horses from the Indians in Pine Ridge Agency, which he sold at Carns, trading a few of them for a clothing stock at Bassett, he moved the goods to Long Pine, to which he added a stock of stationery and pianos, for which he had traded his farm, and was thus enabled to form a partnership with his brother, J. A. Berger. This was Mr. Berger's start in business in Long Pine, under the firm of J. A. Berger & Company, the partnership lasting until the spring of 1889. A grocery stock was moved to Hay Springs and closed out, Mr. Berger remaining there for a year, and in the fall of 1890 finally dissolved partnership. He then put in a general line of goods at Long Pine, and here he has been most successful in building up an extensive trade throughout the county. His store is located on the principal corner of the town, and he has a floor space of seventy-five by one hundred feet, eighteen by thirty-six of this cut out to accommodate the Commercial Bank, of which he has served as president and vice-president. This bank was opened in December, 1905, and is one of the best equipped banks in Brown county. Mr. Berger devotes all his time to his business interests, and shows remarkable judgment in the management of his large enterprises. He has a branch store at Ainsworth, established in 1894, and another at Johnstown, established in 1900.

In the fall of 1888 Mr. Berger was married to Miss Marion Guy, daughter of William Guy, who was an early settler in Keya Paha county. They are the parents of one child, Edna, a graduate of the Lone Pine high school. Mr. Berger is familiar with almost the entire northwest part of the state, having at different times owned stores or worked in ten different towns in this vicinity. There are only two towns between Bassett and Hay Springs in which he has not at some time been located, Wood Lake and Crookston.

Mr. Berger and his family paid a ten weeks' visit to his native land in the spring of 1908, traveling through the Rhine provinces, Holland, Belgium and England, giving the family a knowledge of life in the countries of the old world.

In politics Mr. Berger is an independent. He is serving as worshipful master of the Masonic lodge and with his family is enrolled in the membership of the Order of the Eastern Star. He is also an active member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and also of the Methodist church.

BERNARD F. CROUGHWELL.

One of the best known old-timers in Loup county, and one who is universally respected, is the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this review. He has taken an active part in all matters pertaining to the public welfare and is considered a wideawake, public-spirited citizen.

Mr. Croughwell was born in April, 1857, in Wilmington, Will county, Illinois. His father, Thomas Croughwell, was one of the early pioneers of Loup county, Nebraska, was a stonemason by trade, and was engaged in work of contracting and building. The maiden name of the mother of the subject of our sketch was Margarette Slowey. The family moved to Connecticut when Bernard was quite small and he was reared in Jewett City, in that state. Until he was past twenty-one years of age he worked a great deal in a cotton factory and learned the spinner's trade. In 1880 he came to the far west, to Loup county, Nebraska. The country was new and there was work to be done in many different lines, and Mr. Croughwell was ready for work at anything. For a time he worked on the railroad which was being built from Grand Island, Nebraska, to St. Paul, later finding employment carrying mail from Ord to Burwell and continuing in this for nearly four years. Mr. Croughwell then engaged in the agricultural implement business at Arcadia and later, in 1887, opened up at Taylor in the same line. In 1899 he purchased a partly improved farm of three hundred and twenty acres three miles west of Taylor and began farming. He has worked hard and planned intelligently to make his property a marked success, and he has reason to be proud of what he has accomplished. He has a fine home and the buildings for the stock are in fine shape; there is a good orchard, growing a number of different kinds of fruits, such as apples, cherries and plums, etc., and there is also a fine grove of forest trees on the ranch.

In 1889 Mr. Croughwell was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Miss Annie Ellathorpe, a daughter of Levi and Hannah (Stubbs) Ellathorpe. Mrs. Croughwell was a native of Pennsylvania, where her father lived and died. Mr. and Mrs. Croughwell have one child, a daughter, Alvira Margarette.

The subject of this sketch has taken a prominent part in the affairs of his community, and as one of the oldest settlers he has taken pride in watching the splendid improvements of the country. He was one who helped locate the county seat at Taylor, and he is widely known as a progressive and earnest worker for anything in the way of advancement in county affairs. His stanch Republicanism is a matter of common knowledge.

Many peculiar and interesting experiences are related by Mr. Croughwell, one being as follows: Kid Wade, a notorious horse thief, stole three or four horses in Mr. Croughwell's neighborhood and about that time stopped a whole day and night at the latter's house, but Mr. Croughwell was unaware of the character of his guest. Mr. Croughwell and John Grimmit tracked the thief above the Calamus river, where the trail was lost. Not long after Kid Wade was captured and hung at Bassett, Ne-

FREDERICK G. BAUER.

The gentleman above mentioned is an enterprising young business man at Weyerts, and is well known to all the residents of his locality as a worthy citizen and active public-spirited man of affairs locally.

Frederick G. Bauer was born at Golden, Illinois, March 27, 1882. He was five years of age when the family came into Cheyenne county, Nebraska, where he was reared and educated. He has since lived in the county with the exception of about three years which were spent in Colorado, where he took up a homestead and started a cattle ranch. In February, 1907, Mr. Bauer disposed of his ranch and moved to Weyerts, where he is now engaged in the general merchandise business, and is rapidly gaining a good patronage throughout the vicinity. He is a young man of excellent ability, energetic and progressive, and bids fair to be one of the leading citizens of his community.

Mr. Bauer's mother is still living, at present residing on the old family ranch two miles west of Weyerts, where the father died August 9, 1898. There were twelve children in his father's family, of whom he was the ninth in order of birth. He is now married, the event occurring November 25, 1902, at Weyerts Lutheran church, when he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Folkerts. They are the parents of three children, namely: Louis, Leona and Alvin.

RESIDENCE OF J. LARGE,

Mr. Bauer is at present acting as postmaster at Weyerts, and is a most popular and efficient official, highly esteemed by all.

JOHN K. IRWIN.

John K. Irwin is a native of the state of Pennsylvania, born in Blair county, December 20, 1872. His father, Daniel Irwin, was of German descent and was a prosperous farmer in Pennsylvania. His mother was Tamar Emigh in her youth and was of German parentage. Both parents are now deceased.

Our subject lived in the state of his nativity until he was eight years old, when the family moved to Grand Island, Nebraska, where they settled on a homestead. In 1885 they came to Keith county, settling ten miles northwest of Ogallala on a homestead, where both parents died that same year. Our subject then started out for himself, working on several ranches, receiving at times only his board for the work he did. He settled on his present excellent farm and homesteaded in 1893, put up buildings and made a start. His farm comprises one hundred and seventy-four acres of especially choice soil on the bottoms of the North Platte river, where he has built up an admirable home and business. He has a few head of stock, but gives his attention principally to farming and gardening, at which he has made a fine success, raising twelve hundred to fifteen hundred bunches of celery per acre, four to five hundred bushels of onions and thirty tons of cabbage per acre. Our subject has had some misfortunes, but his thrift and energy have placed him in good circumstances. In the spring of 1891 he was seriously injured, getting his feet caught and both badly crushed in a hay press. This accident caused our subject to be laid up for an entire year, during which time he did practically no work.

John K. Irwin was married July 1, 1901, to Miss Hattie M. Shepard, whose father, William F. Shepard, is one of the prominent farmers and old settlers of Keith county. The mother was Julia A. Joplin in maidenhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Irwin have three children—May, Marie and Della.

Mr. Irwin has always been an interested participant in matters of a public nature and has held various political offices. He is a Republican in politics. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and of the American Order of Protection.

ISAAC LARGE.

The gentleman above named is owner of one of the finest farms and ranches in Keith county, Nebraska. He resides on section 23, township 13, range 35, and is one of the progressive and prosperous men of the locality.

Isaac Large was born on a farm in Woodford county, Illinois, July 24, 1860. His father was born in England, as was also his mother. They came to Illinois as pioneers, and our subject grew up in his native county. He left home in 1883, working for a year on farms in Gage county, Nebraska, and then moved to Buffalo county, locating on a tract of prairie land, and for twenty-five years farmed on it. This place was situated in the Elm creek valley, and Mr. Large built up a good home and ranch, doing much toward developing that part of the country. In the spring of 1907 he came to Keith county and purchased three hundred and twenty acres of his present estate, with one hundred and sixty acres under cultivation, and has raised two good crops since locating here. In 1908 he acquired two additional sections devoted to ranching and farming purposes. He has all good buildings and improvements, with two wells and windmills. His residence contains fifteen rooms in the two stories and attic, and is one of the handsomest country houses in the county. He has a large barn, a double corncrib, large chicken house and numerous other outbuildings. An elevated reservoir supplies the house with water for bath room and domestic purposes. We are pleased to call attention to a view of the fine establishment displayed on another page of this work.

Mr. Large is engaged in the business of buying and shipping stock, and has carried on this work for the past fifteen years. He has also dealt considerably in real estate in the region, and has been the means of inducing many eastern people to invest in property and settle in western Nebraska. One brother of Mr. Large owns a whole section of land seven miles south of the town of Paxton, and is also a large farmer and stockman.

On January 6, 1890, Mr. Large was married to Esther McMinn, a native of Noble county, Ohio, and a daughter of Robert McMinn, an old soldier and early settler near Overton, Dawson county, Nebraska. The mother was Miss Elizabeth Brown, a native of Ohio, now residing in Overton. The father was born in Pennsylvania and died in Nebraska in 1893. When he first settled in Dawson county there were but four farmers in the east end of the county and Overton was only a box car for the operators managing the trains. Indians were still plentiful in that region and many times Mrs. Large has visited their camps. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Large, namely: Adella, Edna, Elizabeth and Wayne, all at home.

Mr. Large is a Republican in politics and a member of the Evangelical church. He affiliates with the Workmen and the Odd Fellows, and with Mrs. Large has attained the Rebekah degree. All his lodge affiliations had been in Overton until the institution of an Odd Fellows lodge at Paxton in December, 1908.

LAWRENCE WALGREEN, DECEASED.

Lawrence Walgreen was one of the prosperous farmers of Sheridan county, Nebraska, who came to this state in the early stages of its development and built up a comfortable home in section 30, township 31, range 45, where he enjoyed an enviable reputation as a successful agriculturist and worthy citizen.

Mr. Walgreen was a native of Sweden, born in 1841, and raised on his father's farm until he was eighteen years old. He then came to America in 1869, having previously worked on farms for some time, and spending ten years in brick yards in Sweden. After landing here he located in Michigan and worked in a salt factory at Salsburg, Bay county, Michigan, and afterwards farmed for some years in the same state. In 1884 Mr. Walgreen came to Sheridan county and filed on his claim as a pre-emption, then went back to Michigan, and in May, 1885, he returned with his family. It took ten days to drive up from Valentine, and was a rough trip over unbroken roads through a perfect wilderness. Their first house was built of sod, and in this they lived for three years. The same spring he took up a tree claim, located in section 25, and began breaking up his farm, cultivating thirty acres, which he put into crops the following summer. He worked hard and succeeded in raising several good crops before the beginning of the dry years, and as he had raised some stock they helped to support the family. He built up his home and added to his farm gradually, purchasing before the prices raised in this section, and at the time of his death owned twelve hundred and eighty acres of good farming land. Of this he cultivated about one hundred acres, and used most of his produce on the farm. He kept over a hundred head of stock, and from this source made enough to pay for all the land he bought. He had his land all fenced, and built twelve miles of fencing.

Mr. Walgreen was married in 1874 to Miss Annie Helma, born in Canada in 1854 and raised in Michigan, of French-English descent. Twelve children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Walgreen, who are named as follows: Mary Ellen, Katie, Lawrence Philip, William H., Julia, Annie, Clara, Fred, Edward, Grace, Clyde and Leland, all grown except three, and nearly all settled near their parents' home. Mr. Walgreen was assisted in his farm work by his boys, and together they did all the work on his large estate. To his family is due much credit in helping him in every way to build up his home. When they came he only had four horses, one cow and sixty dollars in money, and a large family to support. They had a hard time to get along some times, losing his first two crops through hailstorms, and the first winter he worked as a freighter from Chadron to Deadwood, and also to Fort Robinson in order to support his family. The place is now well improved, and he considered that he had made as much if not more than he could have made in Michigan. His health was better here and they never had occasion to call a doctor for any member of the family until 1906. He was contented here and satisfied to spend the rest of his days in this locality.

Mr. Walgreen died April 13, 1907. Eight of the children are still living with their mother and assisting her on this valuable estate. The others are married or live elsewhere.

JOHN ROBINSON.

John Robinson, well known as a representative farmer of Deuel county, has a home of great comfort in Loss Creek precinct. He was born in Jo Daviess county, Illinois, November 25, 1851, and made that his home until he was seventeen years of age.

In 1868 Mr. Robinson left his native state and came to Nebraska, locating at first in Columbus and later in Platte county, also spent five or six years at St. Paul, finally landing in old Cheyenne county in June, 1885, and was the first man to build a house in this valley. He filed on a homestead and pre-empted a claim on section 34, township 17, range 44, proved up on both and afterwards moved to section 36, where he now lives. This is a school section and joins the town of Oshkosh, and he is one of the original settlers and the first settler to bring his family into the valley. Here he went through all the pioneer times in getting his farm established, meeting with every sort of frontier experience, and took an active part in the development of the section.

Mr. Robinson is now one of the large land owners in the county, having about eight hundred and twenty acres of splendidly improved land. About two hundred acres are cultivated, and the balance is devoted to ranching purposes, having large hay fields and plenty of grazing for a herd of three hundred cattle, and he also has quite a bunch of horses. He has a handsome residence and nice surroundings, substantial barns, etc.

Mr. Robinson was married in Le Mars, Iowa, on February 6, 1882, to Mary Doolittle, who was a native of Wisconsin. Both Mr. and Mrs. Robinson's parents are dead. Nine children have come to bless their home, named as follows: John Edwin, single; George L., married and living in Deuel county; Carrie Ella, wife of Bird Rogers, they living in Cheyenne county; Mabel Clare, wife of Robert Miller, also living in Deuel county; Mary Lillian, Floyd, Elizabeth, William C. and Frank, all at home. One brother of our subject lives in Deuel county, while a sister makes her home in California.

Mr. Robinson is a Republican. He was elected county commissioner in 1889, holding that office up to 1894, also has served this county as surveyor, and is prominent in all county and state affairs. He is a leading citizen locally, now being a member of the school board.

JENS C. MENG.

Jens C. Meng, one of the leading citizens of Sioux county, Nebraska, who has by sheer force of character and strength of will enjoined with native intelligence and a good practical education, has won for himself a fine position among the men who have made the west the prosperous country it has become.

Mr. Meng was born in Schleswig-Holstein, Denmark, in 1856, on a farm. His father, George, was a carpenter and followed that occupation in connection with his farming operations up to the time of his death, which occurred in his native land in 1865. Our subject was reared in Denmark, following farming during his boyhood, and up to his sixteenth year, then came to America, landing in New York city. He came west, locating in eastern Nebraska, near Yankton, South Dakota, and spent some time in Cedar county, Nebraska. His time was spent on farms, and he also attended school, striving to improve his education, and finally went on a rented farm in that vicinity, spending in all eleven years in Cedar county. From there he moved to South Dakota, where he lived for three years, and in 1886 came to Sioux county, Nebraska, and filed on a pre-emption. He drove into the county from Chadron, camping out on the way, encountering hard storms during the trip. He located on Hat creek, taking a pre-emption, timber claim and later a homestead. He put up a log cabin, and during the first summer had no stable for his stock, and had a hard time to make a living, trying hard to improve his place. On arriving in the county he walked to his claim from Chadron, which was his nearest railroad town. Much of his time was spent at railroad construction during the hard times, in this way being able to add a little money for the support of his family, and after times grew better he was able to add good buildings and other improvements to his home and farm. His ranch now consists of ten hundred and forty acres, with three hundred and twenty acres of leased land, all of it being fenced and cross fenced, and he engages principally in stock raising. The ranch is admirably situated for a stock ranch, having plenty of running water the year around, and is one of the valuable estates in his locality.

Mr. Meng was married in 1882 to Miss Christine Smith, a native of Schleswig-Holstein. She was reared in Denmark, her father and mother both dying there. Mrs. Meng and her sister Inger came to America in 1881, settling in Cedar county, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Meng have five children, namely: George, Mary, Hans, Jim and Lillie, all bright and intelligent, and a great help to their parents. They have a pleasant and happy home, and are held in high esteem as good neighbors and worthy citizens.

Mr. Meng is counted among the leading old settlers of his section, and one who has taken an active part in its development. He is an independent voter, always supporting the best man, and his influence is used for good government. In 1898 he was elected county commissioner and has held that office for two terms.

JOHN B. SHAW.

Among the old-timers of Keya Paha county who has done his share in developing the resources of this region and who has always taken an active interest in advancing the best interests of the county is the above named gentleman.

Mr. Shaw was born in Cataragus county, New York, May 30, 1848. His father, Angeloah Shaw, was born of American stock, and a farmer by occupation. He was an early settler in Nebraska, coming here in 1876 with his family, consisting of himself and wife, who was Miss Mary Sapney, of Italian-English blood, with their seven children, of whom our subject was the eldest. He remained at home assisting his parents in carrying on their farm until he was twenty-four years of age, then started to working on a farm for himself in Trempealeau county, Wisconsin, locating there in 1864. He lived in that state for ten years and then came to York county, Nebraska, taking up a homestead of eighty acres, on which he proved up in due time, building a nice house, in which he lived for nine years. Moving from there to Keya Paha county, he pre-empted one hundred and sixty acres in sections 3 and 4, township 34, range 18, on which there was a large growth of natural timber. This place was only slightly improved, so he erected all the farm buildings and broke up more land as rapidly as he could. In 1898 he took an additional eighty acres under the homestead act, and now possesses six hundred and forty acres, all of which lies on Shingle creek. He cultivates sixty acres and keeps about seventy-five head of cattle and twenty horses, besides other small stock. When he first arrived in this locality he had less than a dollar and was forced to do all kinds of work to make a living during the hard times. He was handicapped by the dry years and many other discouraging circumstances, but he persevered and won success, well satisfied with the result of his hard labors and rough pioneer experiences.

On December 24, 1872, our subject was married in Trempealeau county to Miss Harried E. Baker, a native of the state of Michigan, born in 1854. To them have been born twelve children, of whom the following survive: Estella, married Frank Patton, living in Mills, Nebraska; Maggie, now Mrs. Fred Ogden, also of Mills; Albert H., Elsie and Orville. The family have a very pleasant and comfortable home and enjoy a host of warm friends and acquaintances in their community.

ing for the best interests of his locality, although he has never sought public preferment.

L. R. BARLOW.

L. R. Barlow, the popular and genial postmaster of Lodgepole, Nebraska, is one of the influential and prosperous citizens of Cheyenne county. He is a large land owner in this section and one of the old settlers, having passed through all the Nebraska times, and only four residents have the distinction of a longer residence in Lodgepole than himself. He has been active in all affairs pertaining to the upbuilding of the community, and has been postmaster of Lodgepole for eleven years. He is a prominent member of the county committee, and is active in county and state politics and a strong Republican.

Mr. Barlow is a native of Duanesburg, Schenectady county, New York, born March 10, 1862. He grew up in that locality, went to school and worked at different lines there until he was twenty years old. His mother died in 1866 in New York state, and the father in 1904 at Burtonville, New York. Our subject first landed in Cheyenne county in 1882, locating at Lodgepole, and at once took charge of what is now the old "Coombs Ranch," used as a sheep ranch, remained for a year, then spent a few months in Chicago visiting, but returned to Lodgepole and took up ranching permanently, following that work for fifteen years. He then went back east on a visit, taking along with him a carload of horses of his own raising.

Mr. Barlow homesteaded a tract during his early residence in Cheyenne county, filing on section 32, township 14, range 46, and sold the place in 1901. At the time of the sale of this homestead he owned a section and three-quarters of land, well stocked and in fine shape, all of which he had accumulated by his industry and good management. He is now owner of a good ranch property situated on Cottonwood creek, south of Lodgepole, consisting of three hundred and twenty acres, on which he runs about fifty head of horses. During his residence here he has owned and sold many ranch properties, and has been most successful in all his transactions in buying and selling horses.

On October 16, 1888, Mr. Barlow was married to Clara Belle Bates in Lodgepole. Mrs. Barlow was born in Wayne county, New York, and came to Lodgepole in 1888. She died in 1900, leaving two children, Floyd D. and George W. Mr. Barlow married again in 1902

Cora Davis at Chappell, Nebraska, the second Mrs. Barlow being a native of Red Oak, Iowa, born on February 22, 1884, coming to Deuel county, Nebraska, with her parents at the age of two years. Of this union one child was born, Fern Barlow, aged five.

GEORGE H. DOVE.

George H. Dove, who has a comfortable home and good farm in section 23, township 21, range 11, is one of the oldest settlers of western Nebraska. He has spent the past thirty-three years of his career in this country, going through the pioneer days and braving many hardships and privations in carving out a name and fortune for himself, and is now one of the foremost men of his section, prosperous and a gentleman of firm characteristics, whose high standing in his community is well merited. He has been quite a broncho buster and cow puncher since coming to this western country, serving much of his time on the largest ranches in the west.

Mr. Dove was born in Henry county, Illinois, in 1869. His father, Thomas Dove, was a native of England, who came to the United States in 1848, settling in Illinois as a pioneer, and died there in 1872. He married Lucy R. Hurlbert, a native of Vermont, of English blood also, and they raised a family of two children, of whom our subject, George H., was the first member and Thomas F. was the second child. George Dove came to Nebraska in the year 1875, and immediately upon landing here took up a government claim and proved up on it in due time, then bought more land, and at the present time is proprietor of half a section of good land. He has a good home and his farm is well improved with good buildings, fences, wells and windmills, etc. He also has planted nice groves of trees, has many kinds of fruit and raises fine vegetables. He engages principally in grain and stock raising, and has made a good success in both branches.

Mr. Dove is of an honest and conscientious nature, a hard worker, and has gained the respect and esteem of all with whom he has had to do and he is considered one of the well-to-do men of his locality, a public-spirited citizen, always ready and willing to assist in promoting the best interests of his community.

Mr. Dove is a bachelor. His good old mother lives with him and is one of the brightest-minded old ladies to be found. Politically he is a Republican, but has never aspired to office.

J. B. REED.

J. B. Reed, a resident of Emerson township, Harlan county, Nebraska, is one of the best known stockmen of this part of the state, as was also his father, D. J. Reed, now of Kansas City, who settled in Emerson township in 1884, purchasing an eight hundred-acre ranch on the Republican river bottoms, and was the heaviest feeder of cattle and hogs in this part of the state of Nebraska.

Mr. Reed was born in 1876 in Chicago, Illinois. Our subject is now owner of four hundred acres of good land, improved with good buildings, etc., and feeds all the grain and alfalfa he raises to his stock, as well as buying large quantities each year. He fits for market a great many cattle and hogs annually. In 1907 he raised about seven hundred young pigs and deals altogether in the red hogs. He has raised the Poland China in former years, but from his experience with both breeds considers the red hog best for general stock purposes, as they are more active and get out of the way of cattle quicker, while the black hogs are slow and liable to injury in being run with the cattle. Also, the red hog is much more prolific and better rustlers, and can be fitted for market just as quickly as other breeds and bring just as good prices.

Mr. Reed is a large breeder of good horses and has met with much success in this line of work also. He has thirty-five brood mares and two stallions, Bergeron being his Percheron and Forest Chief Jr. his Hambletonian horse. He also has a Kentucky mammoth jack on hand now and intends to devote his time to the raising of horses and mules, as he has found that it pays better to handle colts on high-priced land than it does to raise calves. Mr. Reed has one hundred and sixty acres of alfalfa, and raises good crops each season. He has sixteen hundred rods of woven wire fencing on his ranch set up with the best of posts, making it durable and adding wonderfully to the beauty of his ranch. He has a good set of buildings, with modern conveniences, a water system in the house and an electric light plant on the farm. He has built a model ranch and home.

PETER AUGUST PULTZ.

Peter A. Pultz, who has met with decided success along agricultural lines in Brownson precinct, Cheyenne county, is one of the old settlers of that locality. He has built up a good home and occupies a foremost place among the enterprising and worthy citizens of his community. He is a gentleman of good business management, and well merits his high standing as a citizen and farmer.

Peter August Pultz was born in Denmark, August 1, 1853. He grew to manhood in his native land, and at the age of twenty-seven years left his home and sailed for America, embarking at Esberg early in April, 1880, and after a voyage of twenty-seven days he landed in Boston. He came directly west to friends in Grand Island, Nebraska, and shortly afterwards secured work at Dix, in Kimball county, on the railroad as a section hand. He worked for several years on the railroad and a short time on ranches.

In the spring of 1884 he filed on a homestead in section 28, township 15, range 51, and also a tree claim, on which he has lived ever since, building up a good ranch and home. He is proprietor of four hundred and eighty acres, cultivating a small portion of the land and using the balance for hay and pasture, running in all about fifty head of stock.

Mr. Pultz has erected good stone buildings of all descriptions. One of the notable improvements is an elevated supply tank, from which he can run water to any part of the ranch. Prior to his marriage he was engaged in well drilling and has put down a number of wells in his section of the country. He found this work profitable and he met with marked success in the business.

In 1907 Mr. Pultz was united in marriage to Miss Serena Frederickson, who was born in Denmark and came to America one year ago. Mrs. Pultz's mother is still living in Denmark. Mr. and Mrs. Pultz occupy a pleasant home and are favorites with all their neighbors. A son, Frederick, was born to them July 7, 1908.

In political views our subject is an independent, in religious affairs an adherent of the Lutheran church.

We take pleasure in calling attention to a view of the substantial stone dwelling and surrounding farm buildings which will be found elsewhere in this work.

MRS. LYDIA B. DYE.

The estimable lady whose name heads this personal history occupies a pleasant home and is one of the well known residents of Cheyenne county, Nebraska. Mrs. Dye is now serving as postmistress at the Dye postoffice, which was named after her family.

Our subject, whose maiden name was Lydia

B. Fletcher, was born February 20, 1852, at Augusta, Maine, and grew up there. At the age of sixteen her parents, Omar and Ruth (Bartlett) Fletcher, moved to Missouri, and were among the pioneers of Pike county, where the father died in 1883. The mother made her home in Nebraska for a few years and died there in 1892. Lydia was married in Pike county, February 21, 1878, to John F. Dye, a native of Pike county. His parents, Kenneth and Martha (Burroughs) Dye, natives of Kentucky. The young couple resided in Missouri four years and in 1882 settled at Denton, Lancaster county, Nebraska, where Mr. Dye engaged in farming and stock raising. In February, 1887, he arrived in Cheyenne county, and filed on a homestead in section 2, township 12, range 53, and filed on a timber claim in the same locality. There they built up a good home and spent many happy years together, watching the rapid growth of the country and accumulating a comfortable property for their later years. In June, 1904, Mrs. Dye took a Kincaid claim in the south half of section 2 and will prove up on it in June, 1909.

On March 25, 1891, Mr. Dye departed this life, deeply mourned by his family and friends. Since her husband's death Mrs. Dye has carried on the farm and every appointment of the place bears evidence of her good management and thrift. Of three children born to them two died in infancy. Earl was born in Denton, Nebraska, on November 12, 1886, and he now lives on a homestead in section 12, township 12, range 53, near his mother's ranch. He owns six hundred and forty acres of good land and helps his mother in carrying on her place, which also contains six hundred and forty acres. They are both engaged in stock raising and farming, and their herd of one hundred and sixty high-bred Herefords and Short-horn cattle is famous throughout the county. The son owns about forty horses at the present time, which he keeps for breeding and market purposes.

Earl was married at the residence of the bride's mother in Sidney, June 8, 1907, to Miss Lena Ottemann. One son has been born to them, Ralph Jerome. Mr. Dye is a Republican, active in local affairs, and is director of his school district, No. 31. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen at Sidney.

Mrs. Dye was appointed to the position of postmistress at Dye, an office established on the Dye homestead, in April, 1906, and has made a most capable and popular official.

On another page of this volume will be found an interesting picture of Mrs. Dye's residence and surroundings.

CAPTAIN E. M. FULLER.

Captain E. M. Fuller, a prominent business man of Merriman, Nebraska, is well known throughout the locality in which he resides as a prosperous and worthy citizen. He is a son of Martin and Phoebe (Cole) Fuller, both descendants of old colonial families.

Mr. Fuller is a native of Jefferson county, New York, born September 3, 1850. He was the only child of his parents, and at the age of fifteen started out for himself, securing employment on a square-rigged sailing vessel, the Montgomery, on the great lakes, and when he was twenty-one years old he was master of the John Braden. Our subject followed a sailor's life up to 1898, living at times in Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago, the latter place being his home for eleven years. In 1880 he took up a homestead on Bear creek, in Cherry county, on which he proved up in due time, sailing eight months of the year and living four months on the ranch. This he stocked up well and sold to an advantage some years ago.

In 1900 our subject came to Merriman, where he established the Anchor Bank, and is still engaged in operating this institution, which is regarded as one of the most solid in western Nebraska.

Mr. Fuller was married in 1874 to Miss Mary C. McKee, born in the state of New York. She died in 1896, and two years later our subject was married to Miss Doris Leaman, who is the mother of a son, Sidney.

In political faith Mr. Fuller is a Republican and has always voted this ticket. He has held local office at various times, and is a member of the county central committee. He has been a member of the Masonic order since the age of twenty-one and now affiliates with the lodge at Gordon. He also holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America at Merriman.

 DAVID GRIFFITHS.

Among those who have contributed to the prosperity of Phelps county, Nebraska, and whose patient industry and well directed energy have brought individual competence may be mentioned David Griffiths, of Rock Falls township, whose valuable estate lies in section 3.

Mr. Griffiths was born in 1854 in Wales, England. His father was also named David, and he lived and died in Wales. Our subject left Cefncoed, Wales, in 1879, and moved to Grundy county, Illinois, after spending a few months in Pennsylvania. He was in the coal mines in Illinois until 1890, when he came to Phelps county, Nebraska, and purchased two hundred and forty acres of farming land. He at once went to work breaking it up and erected a good set of substantial farm buildings, and from the start has been very successful in general farming and stock raising. He uses a portion of his farm for pasture, and runs from forty to fifty head of cattle and from fifty to one hundred hogs. He is progressive in his farming operations, and has one of the finest equipped farms in this locality. His land is well adapted for grain raising, and his wheat crop has shown a yield of forty bushels to the acre, and corn up to fifty bushels per acre.

Mr. Griffiths was married in 1878 to Miss Margarette Jones, who is a native of Wales, England. Mr. and Mrs. Griffiths have four sons and two daughters, as follows: Winnie, Thomas, Maggie, David, Morgan and Willie.

Mr. Griffiths is a man of active public spirit and is a deservedly influential and popular citizen, always working for the upbuilding of the better interests of the people of his community. He has served his township as assessor during the years 1893, 1894 and 1895, and for the past five years has held the office of treasurer of Rock Falls township. He also served as treasurer of school district No. 57 for twelve years, and is among the leading men in his township. He takes a commendable interest in local and state politics, was a member of the county central committee of his party for several years, and has been chairman of the township committee for the last seven years. He is an independent voter.

 WILLIAM H. BETSON.

A prominent old settler is found in the person of the gentleman herein mentioned. Mr. Betson has been closely identified with the history of the development and growth of Dawes county and the surrounding country for the past twenty years and during that time has built up a good farm and home, and incidentally gained an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and progressive agriculturist.

Mr. Betson was born in Pennsylvania in 1858. His father was a farmer and for many years tilled the soil in Montgomery county, and our subject was reared and educated near Philadelphia, getting a good common school education and meantime assisting his parents in the farm work. At the age of ten years he left home and started out for himself, working in his native state up to 1881, then he came to Kansas, where he was among the pioneers in Jackson county. He remained there for about eight years, and then moved to Nebraska, settling in Dawes county, where he took up a homestead in section 17, township 31, range 50, and started a farm, living in a rude shack during the first two years, constantly improving his place and building up until he has a ranch of nine hundred and sixty acres altogether. He has over two hundred acres of this under cultivation, and runs from seventy-five to eighty head of cattle each year. This place is all fenced and cross fenced, with good farm buildings, barns, sheds, etc. Besides farming and stock raising he has for the past six years been engaged in the threshing business, and now owns a fine twelve-horse-power steam outfit and threshes all over this and adjoining counties.

Mr. Betson was married in 1886 while living in Jackson county, Kansas, to Miss Anna Phillipi. Mrs. Betson's father was of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, and a pioneer in Kansas, where he farmed for many years. To Mr. and Mrs. Betson five children were born, namely: Charles, Alfred and Katie; Earl, a baby, and Alice, deceased.

Mr. Betson has always been active in local affairs, and has helped establish schools in his locality, and served on the school board for many years. In politics he is an independent, voting for the man he thinks best fitted for the office.

URIAH CHESTER, DECEASED.

The gentleman named above was for twenty-five years one of the leading citizens of Brown county, where he has always done his utmost in the upbuilding of this region, and he assisted materially in developing the commercial interests of the locality in which he resided. Mr. Chester was born in the village of Dudsville, Ontario, Canada, February 12, 1850, and came to Wisconsin in 1856 with his parents, the family being among the pioneer settlers in that state. His father, William Chester, was a mason by trade, a native of Ireland, born of English stock, who were driven from their mother country by the Catholics. Our subject grew up in Wisconsin, and when but a boy went into the lumber woods in Michigan, where he took charge of the woodwork on twenty miles of logging railway, remaining at this work for twelve years. He was engaged in building bridges, cars, etc., on this road, and experienced a regular lumberman's existence during this time. In 1883

Mr. Chester came to western Nebraska, settling on a homestead in section 27, township 28, range 21, fifteen miles southwest of Long Pine. There he built a frame house, being associated with his brother, William Chester, whose sketch appears in this work on another page. The two worked together engaged exclusively in stock raising and ranching. They proved up on their place and bought more land until they owned two thousand acres in 1904, then sold out their holdings for a good round sum. The ranch was one of the best equipped in the vicinity, having plenty of cattle sheds, four deep wells and windmills, etc. They had five hundred head of cattle and twenty-five horses, and every penny of their property was made since coming to this part of the country out of the sand hills. When they first settled on their ranch there was only one house between their place and Long Pine, a distance of fifteen miles. Mr. Chester was married in Wisconsin January 11, 1873, to Miss Evelyn Thomas, a native of that state, daughter of William H. Thomas, one of the earliest settlers in Wisconsin. He was an attorney and a member of the territorial legislature for two terms, and later served two terms in the state legislature. For eight years he was state's attorney in Waukesha county, where his death occurred in 1902. He was a well known politician and public man, and one of the foremost citizens of Wisconsin, and his loss was deeply mourned by all who knew him.

One child resulted from the marriage of our subject, a daughter, Inez, wife of Charles C. Ball, who is an engineer on the Chicago & Northwestern railway.

Mr. Chester's death occurred in Long Pine March 29, 1908. He was a prominent Republican, and always attended the county conventions as a delegate, taking an active interest in all party affairs. He served one term as county assessor and for many years was precinct assessor. In the fall of 1907 he was elected county commissioner, having served but a short part of his term at the time of his demise. He was a Mason for twenty-five years and with his wife a member of the Long Pine chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which Mrs. Chester was a charter member and the first worthy matron.

EMANUEL TONGREN.

Emanuel Tongren, who was born in Wester Norlan, Sweden, in 1854, has for many years held an important position in the agricultural and commercial circles of Perkins county, Nebraska. His parents lived and died in their native land, where he was raised and educated, receiving a good common school training. During his young manhood he worked in the lumber woods in Sweden, and led a rugged, healthful outdoor life, remaining with his parents until he was thirty years of age, at which time he married Miss Anna Kaser, who was also born and raised in Sweden. Immediately after their marriage the young couple sailed for the new world, landing in New York city, and after a short stay there came west, settling in York county, Nebraska, but only remained there for two weeks, then came on to Perkins county. Here Mr. Tongren took up a homestead on section 26, township 12, range 40, and they started to build up a home and farm. He had but small capital to start with, putting up a rude frame shanty, and during the first years went through many hardships and privations. He witnessed the drouth periods, losing several crops in succession, and often had difficulty in making both ends meet in the struggle for a living, but as times grew better he was able to improve his place in good shape, and his various enterprises has been crowned with a very fair measure of success, and he has become one of the solid and substantial men of his locality.

Mr. Tongren is now the owner of a ranch of eight hundred acres, and of this he farms about two hundred acres. The entire place is well fenced and improved with good buildings, etc. He is engaged in stock raising to quite an extent, and is up-to-date and progressive in all his undertakings.

During the early part of his residence in this section he went through the hardship of being without water, and was obliged to haul it a distance of four miles, but as he became better able, and conditions improved, he had wells drilled, and now has a fine supply, pumped to different points on his farm by wind mills, and has every convenience in the way of machinery and farm implements to make his work easy.

Our subject has one son, Peter Tongren, who is attending school in Grand Island, Nebraska, and who will graduate from the Grand Island Business College in 1909.

ALBERT METCALF.

Albert Metcalf, one of the prominent young farmers of Grant county, Nebraska, is proprietor of a well improved estate in section 2, township 23, range 39. He is energetic and progressive, and well merits his success as a modern agriculturist and ranchman and his enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Mr. Metcalf was born in Washington county, Maine, in 1865. His father, also named Albert, was a tinsmith by trade, and followed that occupation nearly all his life. Albert was raised in a small town in his native state and remained with his parents until he was twenty-two years of age, then struck out for himself, coming west and settling in Custer county, Nebraska, where he followed farm work for three years. He came to Grant county and located on a ranch fourteen miles southeast of Hyannis. This place was called the "Spring Valley Ranch," and he held the position of foreman for about three years. He next emigrated to Oregon, but only remained there for a short time then returned to Nebraska, and took charge of the old Collins ranch, which he operated for three years. From there he went to the S. S. Sears ranch and ran that for a time, and in 1903 settled on his present ranch in section 2, township 23, range 39, filing on the land as a homestead. He began making improvements as fast as he was able and built up a good ranch and at the present time is owner of a fine tract, consisting of six hundred and forty acres, all fenced and fitted with good buildings, wells and windmills, and is extensively engaged in the stock business, dealing principally in cattle. Although Mr. Metcalf is comparatively a young man, he has been most successful and has become widely known through the region as one of the substantial residents of the county, and is up-to-date and modern in his methods of operating his ranch.

Mr. Metcalf was married in 1893, to Miss Velma Wright, daughter of Aaron Wright, a well-known ranchman of Grant county, and early settler in this region. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf, named as follows: Charles, Mary, Albert, Velma and Ina, all charming young people, and theirs is one of the most hospitable and congenial families a weary traveler would care to meet. Our subject takes a commendable interest in local affairs.

SWAN P. JOHNSON.

Swan P. Johnson, one of the leading old-time residents of Nebraska, and a man who has devoted much of his time to the upbuilding of the community where he makes his home, commands a high station as a citizen and leading agriculturist of Deuel county. He resides in Swan precinct, Deuel county, and has the distinction, with his brother Charles A., of being the first settlers on the table land.

Mr. Johnson is a native of Sweden, born July 21, 1857. He was raised and educated there, remaining with his parents until he was a young man twenty-two years of age, then came to America alone to seek his fortune. He settled in Henry county, Illinois, and lived in that locality for six years, then came to Deuel county, arriving in the region in the spring of 1886. The following spring he filed on a homestead on section 14, township 13, range 44, which adjoined the ranch of his brother, Charles A. Johnson, who had come to America in 1881, and homesteaded in Deuel county in 1885.

Our subject started in with a brave heart to develop a farm and build up a good home, and although meeting with many discouragements in the way of loss of crops during the drouth seasons and from other causes, he gradually improved his farm and became the possessor of additional land in the section, so that he is now owner of six hundred and forty acres, all of which is in first-class condition, having about two hundred acres under cultivation, on which he raises good crops. He is also engaged quite extensively in the stock business, having seventy-five head of cattle and quite a number of horses. His ranch has a fine set of farm buildings of all kinds, and he is counted among the progressive and up-to-date agriculturists and stockmen of his vicinity.

Mr. Johnson was married in Henry county, Illinois, February 9, 1884, to Miss Augusta M. Bergman, also a native of Sweden, she coming to this country in 1881. Seven children were born of this union, namely: Fannie M., born in Illinois, now living in California; Amanda, married to August Anderson, they living in Deuel county. The following are at home: Edwin, Harry, Annie, Victor and Herman, all of whom assist in the work about the ranch. Mr. Johnson's father is dead, but his mother is still living in the old homestead in Sweden, and both the father and mother of his wife reside in that country. Our subject is deeply interested in school affairs in his township, at present serving as moderator of district No. 24. In politics he is a Republican, and firm in his convictions.

JOHN WEINEL.

Among the progressive and well-to-do agriculturists of Box Butte county, a prominent place is accorded John Weinel, who resides on his fine farm of one thousand two hundred acres in section 25, township 25, range 49. Here he follows mixed farming, and is a man of marked business ability and untiring energy.

Mr. Weinel was born in Hessel, Germany, on a farm, in 1850. His parents were born and reared in that country, and spent their entire lives there, our subject living at home during his boyhood, and was married in his native village in 1876 to Margrett Danges. Together the young couple came to the new world to seek their fortune and build up a home for themselves and their posterity. They landed in New York city in April, 1884, and went directly to Marshalltown, Iowa, making that locality their home for two years. At the end of that time they came to Nebraska, arriving at Hay Springs by railroad in the spring of the year 1886, settling at their present location. Their almost sole possessions were a team and wagon, which they had driven from Iowa. They bought two cows after landing here, and filed on a homestead, putting up a rough shanty, which they occupied for a number of years.

During the first year our subject made twenty-seven trips to Hay Springs, seventy or eighty miles distant, on freighting expeditions. They went through all the hardships and privations so well known to the early settlers of this state, meeting many disappointments in failure of crops by drouths and hailstorms and just as they were beginning to get along a little better had the misfortune to lose their barn, six horses, one thousand bushels of grain, granary and stable by fire. This was in 1893, and it was a severe setback to Mr. Weinel, and it was a long time before he recovered from this misfortune in a financial way. The country was continually being more thickly settled, as when he first landed here there were only three shanties occupied by white settlers in his part of the township. However, the pioneers began to rush in, times grew better, and he was able to add many improvements, also purchased many acres additional, so that he is now owner of one thousand three hundred and sixty acres of fine land, all fenced, which he uses as a stock ranch, also does some farming. He leases, besides this large tract, a large piece of land adjoining his ranch, devoting quite a number of acres to the raising of potatoes, which yield a fine crop and nets a considerable sum each year.

Mrs. Weinel died on the homestead in 1886, leaving a family of four children, namely: Pete, John P., Fred and Maggie. Mrs. Weinel was a lady of most estimable character, greatly beloved by all who knew her, and she was sincerely mourned by her family and many friends. In 1889 our subject was married the second time, to Minnie Sass, of Box Butte county. She was born in Hamburg, Germany, coming to the United States when a young girl, and was one of the early settlers in Nebraska.

Mr. Weinel takes a leading part in every movement started for the good of his community, and has done his full share in the upbuilding of this section. A picture showing the homestead ranch of Mr. Weinel appears on another page.

G. W. HUNTINGTON.

G. W. Huntington, whose pleasant home in township 30, range 45, bespeaks painstaking care, is a pioneer settler of Sheridan county, and one of the highly esteemed and worthy citizens of that region. He has devoted many years of his life to agriculture and met with pronounced success in his labors. He is now proprietor of a fine farm, and enjoys well merited prosperity, which has been attained solely through his own unaided efforts.

Mr. Huntington was born in Compton county, Canada, November 1, 1845. His father, Benjamin Huntington, was born in Vermont and went to Canada when a young man, settling on a farm there, and his wife was also a native of Vermont. Of a family of five children our subject was the youngest, and is now the only one living. His father died when he was fourteen months old, so he has no recollection whatever of him, and he was raised on a farm where he had to help in the work and from the time he was ten years old helped to support his mother, doing hard work on neighboring farms for which he received twenty-five cents per day. Often after the day's work was done he and his mother together would make a pair of pants in the evening, for which they would receive fifty cents, which helped in making the living for the family. His mother died when he was about twenty-one years of age, and soon after this the children came to Wisconsin, landing there on March 28, and they farmed in Sauk county for a year, then moved to Minnesota and farmed for three years near Plainview. They then returned to Wisconsin and remained for twelve years engaged in farming, and owned eighty acres of good land and was in fairly good circumstances. His wife's people had settled in Nebraska, and her mother was anxious to have them move there, and urged them to come and settle on her land in Sheridan county, so he sold off his personal property and came on with his family, arriving here October 10, 1888. His mother-in-law mortgaged his stock and he paid the interest, which acknowledged the debt, and he finally lost all his property in 1892, leaving him with only one horse. He then went on to rented land and tried farming during the dry season but had to give a third of everything he raised. He got small crops every season and had a little grain to sell each year so he managed to get along. In 1891 he had bought a threshing machine and during the dry years threshed through the country from Pine Ridge to the river, often doing three jobs of threshing in one day, and in that one season threshed for one hundred and six days. During the hard times his wife wanted him to leave the place and try it somewhere else, but he had nothing to start over with, so stayed on here, and since the better years began he has added to his farm until he has eight hundred acres, besides a farm which he gave to his son, and in 1904 he cleared up his last debt and put one thousand one hundred dollars in the bank. He has seen as hard times as any man in Sheridan county, but has come out in good shape, and thinks he is worth more today than if he had remained in Wisconsin and is satisfied to stay here unless he has a good chance to dispose of his property, in which event he will go still further west. He now rents out his farm, keeping a small piece of ground for himself and runs a few head of stock and some chickens, which more than keeps him, and he is also able to lay up a little as he goes along.

Mr. Huntington was married in 1869 to Miss Alma Young, a native of New Hampshire, born in 1853 and raised there until twelve years old, then went to Canada with her parents. Her father was of Scotch descent, a farmer and blacksmith by trade, and her mother of English blood. To Mr. and Mrs. Huntington five children have been born, namely: Amos, Edna, Anna, Edith and Ida, all living near the old home. Mr. Huntington has never given much time to politics and has never held an office, devoting his attention to the building up of his home. He is a Democrat.

CHARLES McDONALD.

Charles McDonald, president of the McDonald State Bank of North Platte, Nebraska, is one of the foremost citizens of that city, and has been a prominent factor in the upbuilding of the commercial and financial interests of this locality.

Mr. McDonald is a native of Tennessee.

His father, Alex. McDonald, was a native of Virginia, and lived there until the year 1791, when the family came west, settling in Jefferson county, Tennessee, where the subject of this sketch was born October 25, 1826. His great-grandfather, Alex. McDonald, was an old settler in Virginia before the Revolutionary war, and during that struggle between the nations he was staff officer in George Washington's staff. Our subject's mother was Miss Mary McClister, whose father was also a soldier in that war, and was one of the army who crossed the Delaware with Washington at the battle of Trenton.

Mr. McDonald came to Nebraska in 1855 and located in Pawnee county. In 1860 he came to Lincoln county, which he helped to organize, then called Shorter county, and afterwards was properly organized and renamed as Lincoln county. At this time he lived at Cottonwood Springs, Nebraska, where he operated an overland ranch and store where Fort McPherson was afterwards built. He was the first county official, being elected judge of the county immediately at its organization. He also held the office of county clerk for one term, and lived at Cottonwood Springs up to April 24, 1872. Mr. McDonald then sold out his property at Cottonwood Springs and moved to North Platte, where he has resided ever since. The government purchased his ranch and store, where the reservation was established, paying him six thousand dollars for the property. After moving to North Platte, Mr. McDonald was elected county superintendent of schools and served for two years, and afterwards held the office of county commissioner for one term. In 1873 he opened a general merchandise establishment in North Platte, and continued in this business up to 1899, meeting with great success, and carried on a flourishing trade from all over Lincoln and adjoining counties. He has accumulated a large fortune and owns valuable property in North Platte, also several hundred acres of the best land in the county located near the city in which he now resides. He has a fine home, and is one of the wealthiest men in this locality. In 1878 he purchased the bank of which he is now president, which was the first banking institution in North Platte, and it is one of the most reliable and solid in this section, and is now incorporated under the name of the McDonald State Bank.

October 14, 1858, Mr. McDonald was married to Miss Orra B. Henry, of Omaha, a native of Hamilton, New York, born in 1840. She came west in 1856 and was the first white woman to locate in this county. One son, W. H. McDonald, was the first white child born in Lincoln county, and he is now cashier of the bank of which his father is president. Another son, James Boyd McDonald, is a merchant in North Platte. He is a member of the state Democratic committee, also secretary of the county Democratic committee, and widely known all over the county as a man of active public spirit. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald also have two daughters, Mrs. W. C. Reynolds (see sketch in this book), and Mrs. F. S. Mooney, both residents of this city. The latter's husband is cashier of the First National Bank of North Platte.

Mr. McDonald has been a Mason since 1857. In political faith he is a strong Democrat, and has always voted that ticket.

ADOLPH NIKONT.

Adolph Nikont, brother of Ferdinand Nikont, whose sketch appears in this volume, is also numbered among the old settlers of Box Butte county, Nebraska, and has spent the last twenty years of his career in farming and ranching here.

Our subject was born in Russia in 1869, of German ancestry and grew up there, receiving a common school education, remaining in the land of his birth up to the age of fifteen years, then came to America with his father and mother and together they came to Nebraska, locating in the eastern part of the state. Adolph followed farming, working out by the month for two years in Dodge county, and when he was seventeen years old came to Box Butte county, and worked at railroading for a few years. For the first few years after locating in this region he went through many hardships and bitter experiences, but was brave and faithful, and with his brothers and parents managed to get along very well and built up a good home for themselves. The original homestead was taken in section 28, township 27, range 51, by our subject's father in 1886, and both father and mother died there. And our subject now occupies the old original homestead that his father and mother did on settling here in pioneer days.

After working long and faithfully to build up a comfortable home and improve his place, and getting along very well, in the spring of 1907 Mr. Nikont was burned out, losing hay-barn, harness and many other things, which was a severe loss to him. Mr. Nikont is a hard worker, honest and industrious, and richly deserves all the success which has come to him since locating here. All of his time is devoted to his farming and ranching interests, and he is highly esteemed in the neighborhood as a worthy citizen.

WILLIE E. FARR.

Willie E. Farr is a prosperous and successful farmer, whose home is not far from Newport, Rock county, Nebraska, where he is highly esteemed for his manly character and the possession of those particular traits that mark the good citizen, the kindly neighbor and the upright man. In his own career are presented the many advantages of a rural life; and now, at the prime of his powers, and, coming from a youth and manhood that have been peaceful and orderly, his vital forces are not lessened, but rather increased and strengthened.

Mr. Farr was born on a farm in the town of Brandon, Franklin county, New York, March 15, 1860, and was reared to a life of honest industry after the old American fashion. His father, Chauncey Farr, was born in Massachusetts, and came of an ancestry long known in New England, as did his mother, Sarah Drew. They were the parents of three children, the subject of this writing being the second member of the family. When he was twenty years of age it seemed the time had come for him to care for himself. In 1872 he went to Vernon county, Wisconsin, where he was engaged in farming for some ten years, acquiring familiarity with western agriculture, and becoming ready for the crowning test of his ability to make a home on the great prairies on the far side of the Missouri. This test he successfully passed in 1882, when he came to Rock, then a part of Brown county, Nebraska, and took up a pre-emption claim in section 2, township 29, range 17, which he presently brought into fine farming condition. He was married in Rock county, October 10, 1885, when Miss Addie Muselman became his wife. Her people were early settlers in Iowa, and were very highly regarded by all who knew them for their excellent character and worth. To Mr. and Mrs. Farr have come the following children: Gertrude, Clifford, Eugene, Fern and Roy. For some two years prior to his marriage Mr. Farr lived alone, making his home in a frame shanty, the material for which he had hauled from Stuart. The farm where he is found at present writing was bought by him in 1900, and to-day he is the proprietor of a fine body of land consisting of nine hundred and sixty acres peculiarly adapted to the raising of hay and a general stock business. In stock he aims to keep on hand about one hundred and seventy-five head, and makes a habit of selling about three hundred and fifty tons of hay a year. Thus it may be justly said that Mr. Farr has developed two farms since his coming to the state. Good groves are flourishing on both places, and nearly all the trees on both were planted by him. He is a Democrat and a strong Bryan man, but takes no very active part in party affairs, as he prefers to give heart and strength to the home and its interests. Socially he is a member of the lodge of Odd Fellows and Workmen of Newport.

W. J. McINTOSH.

W. J. McIntosh, one of the leading citizens of western Nebraska, is an old settler of Deuel county. He is the owner of a well improved and valuable farm on section 25, township 17, range 42, and is also interested in other enterprises, being president of the telephone company of Oshkosh, and occupies a high position as a business man and worthy citizen.

Mr. McIntosh was born in Trimble county, Kentucky, on October 9, 1851, growing to the age of six years in that county, then removing with father and mother to Illinois, where they made their home for nine years. The family came to Nebraska in 1866, locating on Blue creek, in Butler county, and lived there for a number of years. Our subject came into Deuel county in 1887, homesteading on sections 1 and 2, township 16, range 44, proved up on the claim, and later removed to his present location, where he has a farm of three hundred and twenty acres, taken under the Kincaid act. He has erected good buildings and put many improvements on the place, cultivating fifty acres, and is also engaged in the stock business, running a bunch of cattle and horses. During his younger years Mr. McIntosh learned the carpenter's and builder's trade, and has worked at this off and on during his career.

Mr. McIntosh was married in Atchison county, Missouri, in 1882, to Miss Nancy I. Pebley, who is a native of that state. Six children have come to bless their union, named as follows: J. C., Owen, Emmett, Leonia and Robert, who are single and live at home, while William F. is married and resides on a ranch in Deuel county. The parents of both our subject and his wife are deceased. Mr. McIntosh is classed among the leading old-timers of his county and has done much to further the interests of the community in which he chose his home. He is prosperous and successful and is held in the highest esteem as a worthy citizen and good neighbor. He is a Republican in political sentiment.

JOSEPH O. BARTON.

Joseph O. Barton is one of the most prominent and successful of the pioneers of Blaine county, Nebraska. He has always had strong faith in himself and in his adopted state and by intelligently following up-to-date methods has accumulated a competency to bring him comfort with advancing years. He rejoices in the confidence of his fellows and wields a strong influence in his community.

Mr. Barton's native state is Wisconsin, where he was born on a farm on the Sugar river, December 15, 1847. His father, Alexander, was born in Paris and came to America when he was a young man. Our subject's mother was Angeline Erno in her girlhood days and was a native of St. Johns, Canada, being of French ancestry.

Our subject was reared on a Wisconsin farm and became inured to hard work, imbibing the principles of thrift and enterprise which have strongly characterized his whole life. His father died when Joseph was six years old and as soon as he was large enough he helped to support the widowed mother. The years of toil and self-sacrifice for those who depended on him left their inevitable stamp upon him, and gave him traits of character that have materially aided in his march to success.

Joseph O. Barton was married January 5, 1872, to Miss Edna R. Davenport, who, although American born, was of French and German blood. Her parents were Nora and Louise (Buzzle) Davenport, the father being a miller by occupation. Mr. and Mrs. Barton have had three children: Edward T., Laura May, and Guy C., now dead.

In 1874 our subject left Wisconsin in a covered wagon and started on a long drive to the great new west, coming to Garfield county, Nebraska, settling on land about two miles from where Burwell now stands, and living there for eight years. His brother George slept in a barn for a long time after coming here to guard the horses from the Indians. The Indians were still in the country and they committed many depredations, even going so far as to commit two murders in our subject's neighborhood, and at times these marauders of the west made it extremely dangerous for the pioneers. Horses were stolen and many things of usefulness and value were carried away. There were twelve families in the neighborhood and they took turns about going for supplies to Grand Island, the nearest market town, a hundred miles away, and our subject has slept under his wagon many a night on these long freighting trips. His experiences of the hardships of the pioneer days were most severe and only a sturdy and worthy nature brought him through to success. He lived a long time in a sod house and he was not surrounded with many of the luxuries of life. It was a hard everyday struggle for maintenance and to improve his land. He saw the grasshoppers come in clouds and overrun the country, eating and totally destroying the crops for three successive seasons—these fierce little insects even ate the clothes on the line and the curtains at the windows of the houses. They were the most terrible pest ever known in the country and wherever they went they wrought ruin and devastation. Our subject had six total failures of crops and had to make a living by hauling posts and railroad ties which could be gotten out of the territory in those days.

In 1882, almost broken in fortune, our subject determined to move and he came to his present location in Blaine county, and started anew. He put up a sod house and started at the lowest round of the ladder. But times were better and he has steadily advanced in prosperity in all lines. He has now a splendid farm of four hundred and eighty acres and his son has six hundred and forty acres. His fine house, barns, granary, corn cribs and groves of forest trees (of which he has fifteen acres) all emphasize his success. His farm is known all over the country as the Riverside Ranch, and he is widely known as a successful stock raiser and farmer. He has struggled hard for a competency and now in his advancing years, he views with complacency and satisfaction the abundant fruits of his persistent labors.

Mr. Barton has always exhibited a strong interest in political affairs,—helped to organize Blaine county and was one of the first county commissioners and has been a member of the school board for years. As a progressive citizen and leader of public sentiment he stands in the front ranks. He served his country with honor and credit in the Civil war and during the days when the Indians were terrorizing the west. He joined the Twentieth United States Infantry and saw service in the south and after ninety days he was sent up to Minnesota to help quell the Indian outbreak just after the well known New Ulm massacre. With his company he was after the Indians in Minnesota, Dakota and other localities. Throughout his life Mr. Barton has been in the forefront of affairs and has come to occupy an important place in the modern development of the locality in which he lives.

G. F. SALTSGABER.

G. F. Saltsgaber, who enjoys the comforts of a rural home in Liberty township, Kearney county, Nebraska, is one of the best known old settlers in this section of the country, and his labors here have become a part of the state's history. His life has been one of many experiences and he is honored as a public-spirited citizen and prosperous agriculturist of his county.

Mr. Saltsgaber is a native of Ohio. His father, George Saltsgaber, came to Nebraska in 1892, and died here in 1897. He was a native of Reading county, Pennsylvania, where the family had resided for generations, and they have an annual reunion in Ohio, which is attended by all the relatives. In 1906 this was attended by two hundred and seventy people. This association keeps all family records, which go back for two hundred years. Our subject's mother, Anna Stoutsenbarger, is a daughter of Daniel and Rowenski Stoutsenbarger, and his paternal grandmother was Hannah Keller, of Reading, Pennsylvania. In 1873 Mr. Saltsgaber began work as an apprentice, going into the building and contracting business at Pioneer, Williams county, Ohio, when but seventeen years of age, and has followed his trade ever since. In this county, Adams and Buffalo counties he has, since 1876, contracted and built a large number of farm houses and barns, and he has put up many of the best residences of this section. Most of the farm buildings in Eaton township have been put up by him, and he has contributed largely for the past many years to the general prosperity of this locality and had all the building contracts he could handle, often being obliged to turn them away. He has a foreman who has worked for him for twenty-one years, and he is trusted and liked by every one with whom he comes in contact, either in a business or social way. Besides his contracting Mr. Saltsgaber owns a fine farm of three hundred and twenty acres, one hundred and sixty acres being on section 11, of Liberty township. The other one hundred and sixty acres are on section 2, Liberty township. He took up a homestead on May 24, 1876, and still occupies this home, and the farm is carried on by his sons, who engage in mixed farming and stock raising.

Mr. Saltsgaber's wife was Miss Ida Kirkpatrick, born and reared in Pennsylvania, daughter of James K. and Catherine (Wright) Kirkpatrick, who came here in 1879. Their marriage took place in 1880, and to them have been born the following children: Roy, Jay, Guy, George, Mona and Pearl. Our subject has two brothers in Kearney county—Levi, residing at Kearney, and Dan, of Minden. Another brother, William, died here in 1898, aged fifty-two.

Mr. Saltsgaber is a fine type of the German citizen, many of whom were raised in Pennsylvania. He is intelligent and broad-minded, alive to the best interests of his community and always ready to do all in his power to advance conditions for the people. He has filled all the local township offices and is a leader in township affairs. In politics he is an independent. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows lodge, and also a Woodman.

GEORGE DEGRAW.

George DeGraw, one of the prominent citizens of Camp Clark precinct, has for the past twenty years made that vicinity his home. During that time he has developed a good farm by dint of industry and thrift, supplemented by honesty and good management. He has also been instrumental in helping to bring about the prosperity enjoyed in the farming community of that part of Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county, and done his full share in its upbuilding.

Mr. DeGraw first saw the light of day in the city of St. Paul, Minnesota, where he was born November 5, 1863. There he grew to the age of eleven years, when his parents moved to Nodaway county, Missouri, where they resided five years prior to moving to Smith county, Kansas. In 1880 Mr. DeGraw left home and for seven years made his home in Marshall county, Kansas. That year they came to that part of Cheyenne county that was in 1908 set off as Morrill county and filed upon and proved up a homestead in section 34, township 17, range 50, which later was sold to Mr. Tom Freeman. In 1901 he purchased one hundred and sixty acres in section 12, township 20, range 51, which he is developing into one of the finest dairy ranches in western Nebraska. All of it is irrigable and about one hundred acres have been seeded to alfalfa. The balance will be sowed to that plant for plowing under from time to time to enrich the soil. Mr. DeGraw is increasing his dairy herd as rapidly as he can breed the kind of stock he desires. Comfortable buildings are on the place and shortly larger and more commodious structures will replace the primitive ones first built on the place. His farm is considered one of the best under ditch in the vicinity, on which he raises splendid crops of small grain, raising as high as forty bushels of excellent hard wheat to the acre.

Mr. DeGraw's parents, Frederick C. and Elizabeth (Todd) DeGraw, have since 1889 been living in the Big Horn basin, Wyoming, where they have a fine property.

Our subject was married to Miss Stella Wymer, a native of Minnesota, their wedding occurring in Sidney, Nebraska, December 7, 1897. That Mr. DeGraw is a true adherent of the Roosevelt idea is evidenced by his interesting family of seven children, who are named as follows: Frederick C., Hannah, Iris, May, Nellie, Georgia and Eugene. Their home is one of the pleasant spots to be found in that region, and they have a host of friends and acquaintances by whom they are held in high esteem.

Our subject is a staunch Republican and fraternally a member of the Masonic lodge at Sidney.

A view of the farm buildings, with a view of the hill and valley landscape surrounding, is to be found elsewhere in our work.

WILLIAM NEWTON FOSTER.

William Newton Foster, of Davison precinct, Cheyenne county, is one of the old settlers of western Nebraska, and since locating here has been one of the foremost citizens of this section, taking an active part in the development of the agricultural and commercial resources. He has also accumulated a nice property for himself and built up a good home, incidentally acquiring an excellent reputation as a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Mr. Foster was born in Charleston, Coles county, Illinois, on October 8, 1868, a son of Josiah and Susan F. (Hayden) Foster. The family moved to Douglas county, Illinois, about 1876, locating at Tuscola, and it was here that Mr. Foster was reared, attending the common schools and working on the farm. The parents moved to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, locating six miles north of Potter, where they established a ranch. The father, a minister of the Methodist church, became circuit rider, holding meetings throughout the region. For one year he was in charge of the pulpit at Harrisburg, but later he returned to the ranch.

Newton came to Nebraska in the fall of 1887, settling in Sidney, and soon afterwards he filed on a homestead in section 32, township 16, range 50, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres, to which he has added another quarter section of Kincaid homestead. He has a well improved estate, farming about two hundred and thirty acres, and is a progressive, up-to-date agriculturist, having his ranch fitted with necessary buildings, fences, windmills, reservoirs, cisterns, etc. He has been through all the old Nebraska pioneer times, and tells many interesting experiences occurring while he was an old-time "cowpuncher." He was employed four years on the TwoBar ranch and was manager and foreman of the Camp Stool ranch in Wyoming for five years. He farmed in Missouri in 1896 and followed the same occupation two years in Kansas. During the winter of 1904 and 1905 he was proprietor of the Le Grand Hotel in Sidney. From June, 1902, to 1906, he had the contract for carrying the mail between Sidney and Ickes, on the route to Camp Clark.

Mr. Foster was united in marriage June 24, 1896, at Seymour, Missouri, to Miss Irene Brooks, who was born in Michigan and came as a child with her parents, Philo and Laura (Marvin) Brooks, to Cheyenne county, where she was reared and educated. Two children have been born of their union, Crystal and Eugene. They occupy a prominent place in neighborhood affairs, and their home is one of the most pleasant and hospitable to be found. A view of the premises is to be found elsewhere in this work. In political sentiment Mr. Foster is a loyal Republican, and active in local political matters. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias at Sidney and with his wife affiliates with the Knights and Ladies of the Fireside.

JOHN E. HENDRICKS.

John E. Hendricks, a leading business man of Cody, Nebraska, was born in Hocking county, Ohio, January 8, 1864. His father, H. R. Hendricks, was a farmer, of German-American stock, and his mother, who was Mary Clark, was also of American blood. Our subject was reared on the farm until he was eighteen years old, then left home and came to Nebraska, locating at O'Neill, where he did general work in that vicinity for two years, then came to Cherry county and has made this his home ever since. During the first years he worked on ranches, and in 1891 took up a homestead, where he engaged in the cattle business. In 1900 he started in the saloon business, but only ran this a short time, and opened a meat market in Cody in 1905, to which he is adding a stock of general merchandise. He has built up a good trade and is one of the well-to-do merchants of the place. He has a neat and thoroughly up-to-date store and his goods are of the best.

RESIDENCE OF GEORGE DE GRAW,
Morrill County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF W. N. FOSTER,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

When Mr. Hendricks landed here this region was all Sioux county, and he was among the first settlers to come in west of Valentine. He has seen all the ups and downs of western Nebraska, and has done his share in building up the country. He was the first constable of this precinct and has always taken an active part in local political affairs, voting the straight Democratic ticket. During the winter of 1884-1885 he conducted a roadhouse at Cody, and this was the first building in the now thriving town.

Mr. Hendricks was married June 5, 1888, to Miss Martha Craig, a native of Blue Earth county, Minnesota. She is the daughter of American parents, who were early settlers in Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Hendricks have a family of five children, all born and raised in Cherry county, named as follows: Pearl, Fay, Myrtle, Ernest and Clifford.

Mr. Hendricks is a member of the Cody lodge of Yeomen.

PETER PETERSON, Sr.

Peter Peterson, Sr., a prosperous farmer of Union township, Phelps county, Nebraska, is one of the leading citizens of his community.

Mr. Peterson was born in the province of Helsingland, Sweden, and came to this country in 1868. He located in Knox county, Illinois, for some time, then came to Phelps county in 1887. He has no recollection of his father, he having been accidentally killed before our subject was born.

After settling in this county in 1887 he took a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, and afterwards bought an adjoining one hundred and sixty-acre tract, and on this three hundred and twenty acres he now resides. Our subject's two sons own four hundred and eighty acres in section 31, this township. The lands are mostly pasture, and they run from one hundred to one hundred and twenty cattle all the time, and do considerable hog raising. They also raise grain with good success on the level uplands, together with plenty of hay, but as yet they have not started any alfalfa. Mr. Peterson is assisted in his farm work by his sons, Peter Peterson, Jr., and Samuel, who have always lived at home, and this family is a good example of the progressive, thrifty and successful Swedish settlers of Phelps county. They have built up a fine farm and comfortable home, and enjoy the respect and esteem of all who know them.

On May 14, 1865, Mr. Peterson was married to Miss Ellen Samuelson, also a native of Sweden. They have a family of seven children living, including the two sons mentioned above, and two younger sons and three daughters.

Mr. Peterson takes a commendable interest in all commercial affairs in his community, is a member of the Lutheran church, in which he is a most earnest worker, and lends his influence to the upbuilding of the better interests of the locality in which he makes his home. In politics he is a Republican.

CHARLES LANGE.

For nearly forty years the gentleman whose name heads this personal history has been associated with the agricultural interests of western Nebraska, and as one of Dawes county's old settlers and worthy citizens he is well known and highly esteemed. Mr. Lange is proprietor of a fine estate in section 16, township 31, range 50, and has accumulated his property and gained his good name by his persistent labors and honest integrity.

Mr. Lange was born in Germany in 1856, and with his father, Charles Lange, came to America in 1868, the family settling in Henry county, Illinois. They remained there up to 1871, then moved to Nebraska, locating near Lincoln, settling on a tract of wild prairie land, where they began as pioneers, opening up a farm and beginning the work of establishing a good home and accumulating a competence. Our subject was but a boy and he attended the country schools and during his leisure hours assisted the family in carrying on the farm, remaining with his parents up to 1889, when he came to Dawes county and located on his present farm. This was all wild prairie land with no improvements whatever, and he had not much to start with, but gave his whole time and energy to the development of his farm, and succeeded in a marked degree, as he is now owner of four hundred and eighty acres of good land, three hundred of which are highly cultivated, and the balance is in pasture and hay land. He has built a good house, substantial barns and other buildings, and his land is all fenced. Ash creek runs through the place, furnishing plenty of good living water the year round, and he has also plenty of timber and shade trees on the farm.

In 1883 Mr. Lange was married to Miss Augusta Nieman, born in Germany, where her father was a merchant, and never left the old country until very late in life. He died in Lincoln, Nebraska, soon after coming over to the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Lange have a family of seven children, named as follows: Fritz, Willie, Adolph, Richard, Otto, Martha and Carl.

FRANK BREWSTER, DECEASED.

Frank Brewster, deceased, was one of the prominent citizens and deservedly esteemed residents of Springview, Nebraska, a man of exceptional business capacity, who met with success in whatever he undertook in a business or professional way. Mr. Brewster served as county clerk of Keya Paha county and was a gentleman of integrity and enterprise, who won the entire confidence of his fellowmen as an efficient and popular public official.

Mr. Brewster was born in Chicago, Illinois, March 4, 1865, and was reared and educated there. His father, Charles F. Brewster, was of English blood, a printer by trade, following that work in Chicago for many years. The mother was Matilda D. Willson. Our subject was the second child of a family of seven, and at the age of eleven years started out to make his own way in the world, obtaining employment as an errand boy for the Omaha Bee, and he continued in the newspaper business, working up gradually until he had thoroughly mastered every detail of the work. He attended night schools to obtain his education, and has followed newspaper work and the printer's trade in nearly all of the central states.

In 1887 Mr. Brewster came to Keya Paha county, locating at Norden, and there published the Borealis. He was appointed postmaster, serving ten years, and he was later elected county commissioner, in which he served two terms. He was elected to the office of county clerk, assuming the duties in January, 1906, and died April 12, 1908, while in his second term. Ever since settling in this section he had been active in political and newspaper work, and was counted one of the most helpful of the settlers in building up the region and looking towards the advancement of the interests of the people throughout his locality.

Mr. Brewster was married on February 2, 1886, to Miss Belle Pulver, a native of Wisconsin, whose parents, Oliver and Hannah (Bixby) Pulver, were early settlers in southern Polk county, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Brewster were the parents of two children, namely, Earle F. and Aileen E.

Mr. Brewster always voted the Republican ticket, and his newspapers supported the principles of that party. He was a member of the Methodist church and affiliated with the Masonic and Woodmen orders.

FRIEND DICKINSON.

For over thirty years Cheyenne county has had a representative citizen in the person of Friend Dickinson. He has given the best years of his life to the development of a farm, and incidentally the development of the financial interests of the community where he chose his home, and in his declining years enjoys the esteem and respect of his fellowmen. He has a pleasant home in Lodgepole, where he also owns a large amount of property, besides being an extensive land owner in the county.

Mr. Dickinson was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, September 1, 1844, and lived there until seven years old, then the family moved to Washington county, Iowa, later went to Colorado, on Boulder creek, and in 1866 he returned to Iowa, where he spent about seven years. In the spring of 1873 our subject came to Nebraska, locating in Redwillow county. When he first came to this region the country abounded in wild game, and he engaged in buffalo hunting on Beaver creek for three years. He came into Cheyenne county in 1876, driving from Redwillow county, and for about six years freighted through the country, between Sidney and Deadwood, coming in contact with the usual life of the frontiersman. He arrived in Deadwood just before the big fire in that place, and witnessed many incidents of the early days in the west which have become a part of the history of that section of the country. On his first trip into the Black Hills he passed the remains of several emigrant outfits. These outfits had been destroyed and the people who had owned them had met death at the hands of the Indians.

In 1883 Mr. Dickinson took up a timber claim on Lodgepole creek and subsequently acquired three tracts of land in that vicinity aggregating fourteen hundred acres, which he still owns. The buildings on this property are situated on section 26, township 14, range 48, lying along the creek. This place is rented at the present time, being used principally for ranching purposes. He has built a fine business block in Lodgepole, and also owns the Stone Hotel at that place, besides a town dwelling.

Our subject was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Prosser in the fall of 1871. Mrs. Dickinson died in Lodgepole in 1886, leaving four children, namely: Daniel, married and now living in Deuel county, Nebraska, on the North Platte; Pluma Ella, married to H. R. Neumann, of Cheyenne county; George and Charles, also married and settled in comfortable homes of their own in Cheyenne county, all filling honorable positions in the world. Mr. Dickinson was married again in 1899 at Chappel, Nebraska, to Mrs. Nettie (Stoutz) Allington, and of this union two children have been born, Mildred and Patsy.

Mr. Dickinson is a successful and prosperous business man, and a genuine westerner. In national issues he is a Democrat. He joined the Masonic order while living at Chappel.

JAMES R. ROMANS.

James R. Romans came to Nebraska when the western part of that state was, as you might say, still in its infancy, and has remained here through all the changes that have taken place in the past thirty years, aiding materially by his influence and financially in the development of its natural resources. He occupies a high position as a worthy citizen and prominent old-timer, and deserves prominent mention for his patriotism and loyalty for the state of his adoption.

Mr. Romans was born in Wisconsin in 1864 and is of Scotch-Irish descent. His father was a farmer and dairyman in Wisconsin, and our subject grew up there, assisting his parents in the farm work and attending the country schools, where he received his early education, and he has supplemented this by constant study and wide reading, now being a well posted man on every topic of general interest. In 1878 he left Wisconsin and came to Nebraska, locating in Colfax county, only remaining there one year, then moved to Garfield county and homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of government land. This is situated in section 33, township 22, range 16, and here he has built up a good home and farm, raising principally corn, oats and wheat, which show a splendid yield each year, and by which he has made considerable money. He also engages in stock raising, principally cattle. In addition to these enterprises he carries on a dairy business, making a specialty of cream, and this also nets him nice money.

In 1894 Mr. Romans married Miss Lola Hennick, a native of Missouri, raised and educated in that state. Mr. and Mrs. Romans are the parents of four children, named as follows: Harley, Charles, Vernice and Robert. The family are active and highly esteemed members of the Christian church, well liked throughout their community. Mr. Romans has served as road overseer for several years, and has also been a member of the school board. Politically he is an independent voter.

HENRY LUEKING.

Henry Lueking, an enterprising and prosperous agriculturist of Harlan county, Nebraska, is a resident of Spring Grove township, where he has developed and improved a fine farm. He is a man of untiring energy and sterling character, esteemed and respected by a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Lueking is a native of West Phalen, Germany. His father, Gotlieb Lueking, came from the north of Germany, near Bremen, settling in Gage county, Nebraska, in 1882, and lived there for many years, his death occurring in Harlan county in 1903. Our subject located on his present farm in 1887, coming into the county three years before that time. He first bought a homestead right and has been steadily adding to this until he now owns five hundred and sixty acres of good land in section 18. He has made every improvement on his place, having erected one of the finest residences in the county, also other commodious and substantial farm buildings. For many years he has been engaged in mixed farming and stock raising, now running from sixty to seventy-five head of cattle and about the same number of hogs, besides plenty of horses for farm use. He shows a decided preference for the Poland China hogs, of which he has a fine drove.

Mr. Lueking takes an active interest in all local public affairs, serving his community in different capacities. From 1902 to 1904 he held the office of township assessor, and in 1904 was elected county supervisor, serving his term and again elected the following term. He is a strong Republican, and is one of the leading citizens of his section, admired by all for his strict integrity and honesty of dealings. Prior to settling in this county he resided in St. Louis, Missouri, where he was engaged as a workman for the St. Louis Stamping Company.

Our subject was united in marriage in St. Louis on October 15, 1882, to Miss Louisa Maschmeyer, a native of Germany, who came to America in 1881. Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lueking, Frank and Fred, are farmers in Harlan county, while three reside at home with their parents, namely: Otto, Walter and Lawrence. Another son, Henry, is engaged in the hardware business at Oxford, Nebraska.

His daughters are: Mary, married to Martin Schepker, in eastern Nebraska; Louisa, Ella, Minnie, Tillie and Sophia. The family belong to the Lutheran church and are devoted members of that church.

FRANCIS S. BIBLE.

Francis S. Bible, one of the well known men of Keith county, is a substantial and prosperous resident of Paxton precinct. He has been in the well business in Perkins and Keith counties for many years past, and has put down a large number of wells all over the country. This work has taken him to nearly every farm home in the region, and he is perhaps better known than any other man in the region.

Mr. Bible was born in Richland county, Wisconsin, June 9, 1865. His father, Enoch Bible, was a farmer, a native of Tennessee, and settled in Wisconsin when he was a young man. About 1868 the family returned to Cocke county, Tennessee, and after remaining there for nine years they went to Clinton county, Indiana, and farmed for a number of years. When Francis was twenty-one years of age he came to Keith county, arriving here in June, and on the 15th of that month filed on a homestead in section 18, township 11, range 36, since set off to Perkins county, and worked out in the vicinity for about a year. His first building was a sod house, and this he occupied all alone for about two years, going for his provisions to Paxton, about eighteen miles distant. He had a team of small ponies, with which he did all his work during the first summer, and he was obliged to live in the most frugal way in order to get along and prove up on his claim. Hard times struck him in 1894 and he left his homestead and traveled in Iowa, Indiana, Missouri, Arkansas and other parts, digging wells part of the time, going through the country in a covered wagon, and encountered many interesting experiences. While in Arkansas Mrs. Bible was taken sick and died, and after this sad event Mr. Bible went to Indiana and remained some time. He eventually came back to Keith county and worked out on different ranches up to 1903, purchasing his present farm on section 2, township 13, range 36, which then was but little improved. In a short time he had put the place in good order, and now has a good ranch of eight hundred and eighty acres in the South Platte valley, the land bordering on the river for two miles. He has put up good buildings, planted trees, both shade and fruit, and has an orchard of three hundred trees, which is pronounced one of the finest in the section. He cultivates about one hundred and eighty acres, engaging in diversified farming, and is getting on to financial independence. During 1891 Mr. Bible was burned out, losing about everything he had, which was a severe setback for him during the hard times that were then almost upon him.

Sometime after starting in the well business in 1886 he dug a well to the depth of one hundred and ninety-seven feet by hand, and for this work received no pay, a hardship not easily endured during those stringent times.

In 1896 Mr. Bible was married to Miss Clara M. Dougherty, of Tuscarawas, Ohio. Her father, George Dougherty, a native of Willesburg, West Virginia, was a miner in Toronto, Ontario, while her mother was Annie Lee, of Oxford, England. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bible, named Evaline.

Mr. Bible has always taken an active interest in local matters tending to improve conditions. He has served as justice of the peace for two terms, and held other minor offices. Politically he is a strong Republican. In religion he is of the United Brethren denomination. He is a Modern Woodman and a member of the Modern Brotherhood of America.

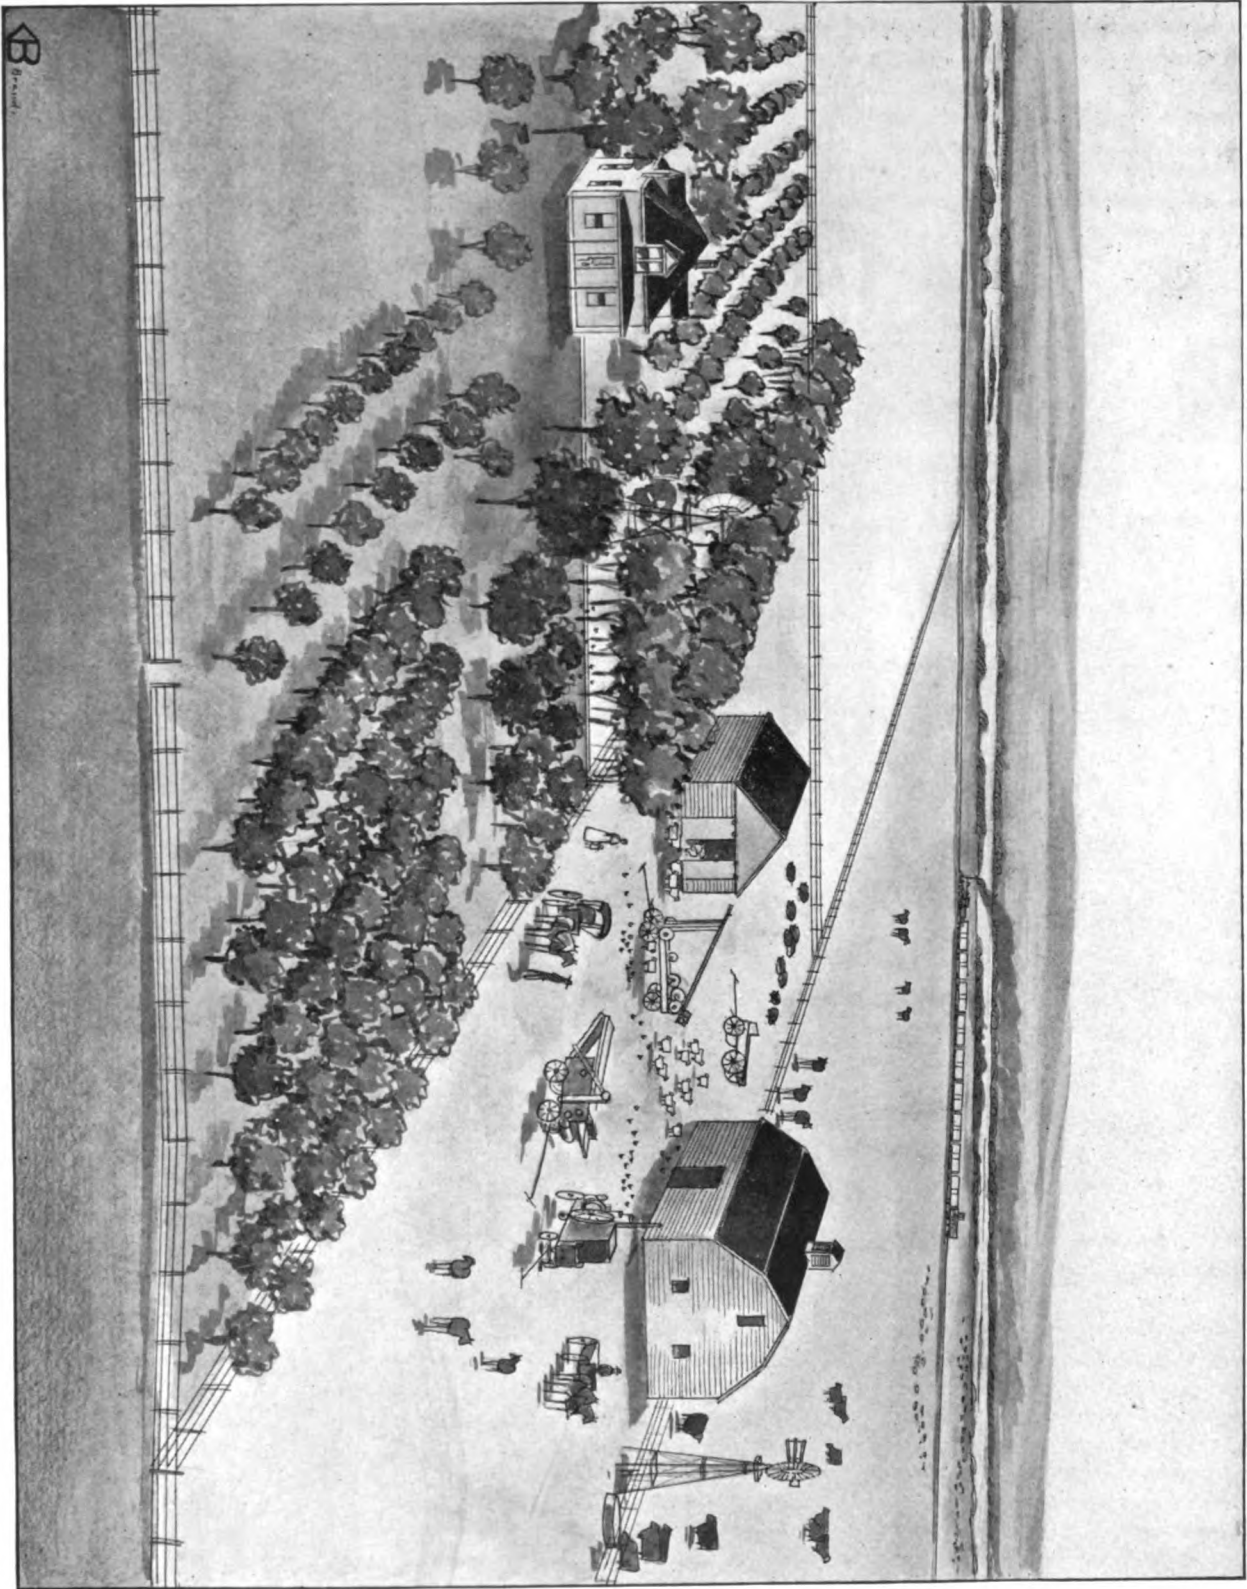

We show a fine view of the new residence and buildings constructed on Mr. Bible's ranch in 1909.

SYDNEY S. MARCY.

Among those who came to Nebraska in the early days and have here built up a good home and farm through thrift and industry is the gentleman above named. Mr. Marcy resides on section 24, township 30, range 45, Sheridan county, and is one of the successful and prosperous citizens of his community.

Mr. Marcy was born in McHenry county, Illinois, in 1848, and raised on a farm there. His father, Danforth S. Marcy, was of old Puritan stock, born in Connecticut, and settled in Illinois in 1834, where he farmed for many years. He married Elizabeth Metcalf, born in Steuben county, New York, of English-Dutch origin, and they had a family of six children, of whom our subject is the fifth member in order of birth. In 1866 the family moved to Iowa, locating in Buchanan county, and there engaged in farming, remaining up to the death of the husband and father. Our subject lived at home until twenty-two years of age, then started in farming for himself, teaching school during the winter months. He farmed in Iowa for twenty-two years, during the first few years living on rented land, then purchased a place of his own, and only left Iowa to get more land, so went to Montana, but did not like the country and only stayed eleven months. In the fall of 1888 he came to Nebraska and located on section 15, township 30, range 45, as a pre-emption, and later took a homestead and proved up on it. He later traded them for town lots in Marengo, Illinois, but never went back there to live, selling those lots in 1897 or 1898 after buying his present home in 1896. Here he has nine hundred and sixty acres of mixed land, farming and grazing, and farmed some during the dry years, but for the first two years he was on the place he had a hard time to get along. He gathered together some stock and used the produce he raised on the place. Most of the time he carries about three hundred head of stock. When he landed here he had about six hundred dollars in money and he went to work at once and built a good house and other farm buildings, and the following spring put in a good crop. The place is all fenced and in good shape, and he will spend the balance of his days here.

"TRIANGLE B RANCH," RESIDENCE OF FRANCIS S. BIBLE,

In 1870 Mr. Marcy was married to Miss Hattie J. Blood, born in Connecticut in 1849. Her father, Nathan Blood, was of English stock, born in Connecticut, as was also her mother, who was Harriet N. Clark. Mr. and Mrs. Marcy have a family of four children, named as follows: Eugene E., Clarence S., George E. and Minnie Ethel. The family are well liked in the community and have a pleasant home. Since living here the health of every member has been much better than when they lived in Iowa, where four daughters died. They have only had to have a doctor a few times since coming here, and then only in the case of accidents to Mr. Marcy. For a time the family have tried living in town, but did not like it and do not know of a place where they would rather live than their present home. Mr. Marcy has never had any desire to hold office, although he always takes an interest in local affairs, voting for the man best suited to the office. Politically he is a Populist.

W. C. REYNOLDS.

William Cannon Reynolds is a well known and highly respected resident of North Platte, Nebraska, and is one of the prominent railroad men in the Union Pacific service.

Mr. Reynolds is a native of Danville, Illinois, born in 1857 on a farm. His father was James Reynolds, who was a foreman in the employ of the Wabash Railway Company at Danville up to 1867. After spending some years in the west he moved to Indiana, where he bought a farm. He died in Danville, Illinois, November 18, 1903. Our subject's mother was Sarah E. Smith, a daughter of Abraham Smith, who was an early settler in Danville, Illinois, and a soldier in an Illinois regiment in the Civil war. He was one of the men who went to that state when it was comparatively a wilderness, purchasing land for two dollars per acre, which is now worth two hundred and fifty dollars an acre. His wife was a Miss Paine, descendant of the famous Paine family of England. Mr. Reynolds, our subject's father, came west and located in North Platte in 1867. Our subject was reared and educated at Danville, Illinois, and came west to North Platte in December, 1876. He started to work for the Union Pacific railway, being employed in the roundhouse six months, afterwards as fireman, and fired for one engineer for six years, namely, Charles Smith. In 1883 he began as an engineer on this road in the freight service, continuing in the work up to 1898. For the past ten years he has been engineer on a passenger train, his run being from North Platte to Grand Island, Nebraska. He is proud of the fact that he ran the engine on the special which carried President McKinley on his last trip over the Union Pacific road, and has run the engine different times when Mr. Harriman, president of the road, has gone through here. He has a splendid record for faithfulness and close attention to duty, and is one of the most trusted and well liked men in the company's employ.

Mr. Reynolds is well situated financially, has a large interest in town property in North Platte, owning some of the best sites in the business portion of the city.

Mr. Reynolds married Miss Nettie V. McDonald, daughter of Charles McDonald, a banker in North Platte. She was born and reared in Lincoln county. A sketch of her father's life appears in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds have two children—Charles M., attending school at Quincy, Illinois, and William Edward, at home. The family have a fine home and a large circle of friends and acquaintances. They are active members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

PETER HANSEN.

Peter Hansen, one of the old and honored residents of Sioux county, who occupies a pleasant home in section 5, township 34, range 54, presents in his own career an inspiring illustration of the power of pluck and persistence against every sort of trial and danger. Such are the men who teach us the uses of adversity, and to whom we may well turn for wisdom in the time of trouble.

Mr. Hansen was born in 1860 in Schleswig-Holstein, in the province of Hadesleben, formerly Denmark but now belonging to the German government. His father, Christ Hansen, was a day laborer in his country, and spent his whole career there, his death occurring in 1864. Our subject grew up in Germany and Denmark, and as a boy learned the moulder's trade, working for seven years in a foundry, and at the age of seventeen years started out for himself, coming to America. After landing in New York city he struck out for the west, going to Milton, South Dakota. That region was then all new country and scarcely a settler excepting the Indians who roamed the plains, and there were plenty of buffalo, antelope and other wild game. He spent about a year in that locality, then went to Cedar county, Nebraska, and farmed for about five years, also did quite a good deal of work as a sailor on the steamboats that plied the river. In the spring of 1881 he was a witness of the terrible havoc wrought by the floods on the Missouri river, and during that catastrophe managed to rescue many who were in danger of drowning, and was the means of saving three persons who were in dire distress. He filed on a homestead in South Dakota near Scotland, in Hutchinson county, proved up on the land and then sold out, coming to Sioux county, where he filed on a claim and still occupies this place, which is situated in section 5, township 34, range 54. He drove from his former place in South Dakota, bringing with him two ox teams and wagons, twenty-four head of cattle and five horses, also a bunch of chickens, which furnished them with fresh eggs during the whole journey. When they camped out along the way the chickens were let out of their coop, and at the time of starting on their travels again they would all come at a call and be ready to enter their coop of their own accord. On arriving at their destination Mr. Hansen and his family started to make a home, putting up a log house and barns, and these buildings are still standing on the homestead. Chadron was then the nearest railroad town at that time, and that was a distance of forty-five or fifty miles. During the first few years he had a hard time to make a living and save money enough to put on any improvements. He raised some crops, and also bought vegetables and other produce, which he sold all over the country, even going as far as Deadwood with his goods, selling to the railroad contractors and hands. He was interested in the horse business and made one trip to South Dakota in this connection, selling horses at Yankton, Vermillion and Gavil. As he prospered he steadily improved his ranch, added to his original tract, and at the present time is owner of twenty-one hundred acres, lying along Hat creek, including his Kincaid homestead and the land of his mother and sister, all fenced and in fine shape. He farms about sixty acres, and the balance is used for ranching purposes. Mr. Hansen's mother now lives with him and is quite active in spite of the fact that she is ninety-one years old.

Miss Mary C. Hansen, a sister of our subject, has been in Nebraska with him ever since he first came to this region, witnessing the same pioneer experiences, and is also one of the well known early settlers. She took up a homestead and pre-emption, proving up on both, and is now owner of six hundred and forty acres in the vicinity of her brother's ranch. She is an excellent business woman and personally manages her property. Mr. Hansen is a Democrat in political views.

GEORGE W. DWINELL, DECEASED.

George W. Dwinell, one of the early settlers in western Nebraska, who has done his full share in the upbuilding of this part of the country, was born in Harvard, Massachusetts, in 1833, and his death occurred in February, 1907. His father, Benjamin J. Dwinell, was a blacksmith by trade, of Yankee stock, born in Worcester county, Massachusetts, and his mother was a native of New Hampshire, born in Londonderry, of American stock, she being an aunt of Horace Greeley, and the one who first taught him his A, B, Cs. There was a family of eight children, four boys and four girls, our subject being the fourth member in order of birth. About 1845 his parents came to Rochester, New York, and he was raised there until he was twenty-two years of age, then obtained employment on the New York Central railroad, running between Rochester and Buffalo for nine years, four years of this time acting as conductor. At the end of this time he resigned his position with the company and went south, where he ran a train in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, employed by the government on the Memphis & Charleston railway. His headquarters there were at Huntsville, Alabama, and he continued at this until after the close of the war, up to 1866. He then went back to Michigan, locating at Lansing. There he was conductor on the Chicago & West Michigan railroad for ten years, when the illness of his wife compelled him to resign and move west, so they came to Denver, and he railroaded in Colorado up to 1883, then came to Long Pine and worked as a passenger conductor up to 1885. He had a splendid record all through his career as a railroad man, and was a faithful and efficient employe, well liked by his superior officers and the public. In 1884 he built the Dwinell Hotel at Long Pine and acted as proprietor for a term of years. This was the finest hotel in this part of Nebraska, and was a great Sunday stopping place for commercial men, who always managed to make the town if they were anywhere within reaching distance of the place. In 1888 Mr. Dwinell sold out this hotel, and the following spring made a trip to Maine, where he visited with his wife's relatives, and after coming back to Nebraska he took charge of the New York Hotel in Fremont, remaining in that up to 1891. He was a genial, whole-souled man, popular with all, and made a great success of the hotel business. Mr. Dwinell was prominent in all local affairs, and served as a member of the town board for five years. He was justice of the peace, having held that office for four years or more.

Our subject was married in 1855 to Miss Helen Cook, a native of New York state. She died at Denver, Colorado, in 1882, leaving one son, Charles B. Dwinell. In 1883 Mr. Dwinell married Barbara J. Glidden, she being a widow with two children, namely, E. F. Weymouth and Fannie.

HOWARD MILES.

Howard Miles, who is one of the solid and successful business men of Paxton, Nebraska, is also one of the old settlers of Keith county. He is classed among the well-to-do citizens and leading men of the section, and has acquired all his possessions through energetic labors and good business management, and is now prepared to enjoy his declining years surrounded by all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life.

Mr. Miles was born September 15, 1854, in Muscatine, Iowa. His father, Henry Miles, was born in England, coming to America as a young man, and was an early settler in Iowa. He married Jane Hoag, a native of Vermont. The family lived near Springdale, Cedar county, Iowa, during the boyhood of our subject, and he received his early education in the public schools, later attending the Quaker college at Springdale. After attaining manhood he located in Audubon county, Iowa, where he lived for a few years, then moved to Defiance, in Shelby county, and from 1876 to 1882 was engaged in the mercantile business at that place. After that he drifted around for a time, and in January, 1884, landed in Kearney, Nebraska, obtained employment in a store and worked as a clerk for two years, then came to Paxton. Here he was the second man to put up a building, erecting a small store, and began the hardware business. He gradually enlarged his establishment as his patronage increased, and has built up a splendid trade. He has a full line of general goods, and has the confidence and esteem of the entire countryside, owing to his honest dealings and strict integrity. Mr. Miles has the distinction of having been in continuous business longer than any other old settler in Keith county, and all of the time carrying on the same line of work. He has a store built entirely of native stone, which was hauled from within one-half a mile of Paxton. Mr. Miles has homesteaded and owns considerable land in the vicinity of Paxton, besides several dwelling houses in the town and other property. Since settling in this region he has been through various experiences, at one time having his safe blown open and destroyed. Another instance was when burglars entered his store and did considerable damage, although they took very few goods. Besides his store, Mr. Miles has always been interested in the horse business, and still raises a few horses.

In 1886 Mr. Miles was married to Miss Emma Webster, who was born and reared in Iowa, a daughter of William and Jane (Smith) Webster. They have two children, Delight and Angie.

Mr. Miles is a Bryan Democrat and has served as precinct committeeman for his party. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity at Defiance, Iowa; the Odd Fellows at Sutherland, transferring to the Paxton lodge when that was instituted in December, 1908, and has served the Paxton camp, Modern Woodmen of America, as clerk for many years.

LEWIS F. RUPPEL, SR.

Lewis F. Ruppel, Sr., has been an important factor in the evolution of Loup county, Nebraska. He was born in Wellersburg, Somerset county, Pennsylvania, in 1847. His father, Christian Ruppel, was a native of Germany, and was a shoemaker by trade, becoming a pioneer of the great state of Iowa, where he died in 1861. The mother's maiden name was May Holtseider, and she was also a native of Germany; she died in Maryland in 1849.

In about 1853 the family moved to Iowa, where the subject of our sketch spent his early years working on the farm and attending the country schools. When he was fourteen years old, owing to the death of his father, he started out for himself. In 1864 he enlisted in the Forty-seventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, Company I, and was sent south along the Mississippi river. After the war was over he went to Pennsylvania, taught school for a while and then took up dentistry and followed that profession for several years in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

In 1871 Mr. Ruppel, Sr.; was married to Miss Katherine Barker, who was born in West Virginia. Her parents, William and Mary (Knaval) Barker, were farmers by occupation. Mr. and Mrs. Ruppel, Sr., have seven children, namely: William A., Grace, Edgar, Lewis F., Jr., Mary, Katherine and Lowrie.

The subject of this biographical sketch brought his family west to Nebraska in the year 1878, first settling on a farm in Johnson county, where he followed the agricultural business for four years. In 1882 he moved to Loup county, locating in the valley of the North Loup river. The country was new, without any improvements, wild game was abundant and antelope and deer roamed over the raw prairie. Mr. Ruppel built a house of sod and also put up other buildings of like material. The nearest railroad point being at North Loup, occasioned many long trips for supplies, and the subject of our sketch made several such journeys, hauling freight for the neighbors. Once the trip required six days and his expenses amounted to ten dollars and he only received four dollars for his pay.

The first county convention was held in Mr. Ruppel's yard and he was nominated for two offices at that time, and he was elected the first county surveyor of Loup county. The early days were full of interesting experiences for the family. At first they had an ox team and Mrs. Ruppel rode the plow behind these oxen more than once, and they were used to carry the family to church and Sunday school. When the family came to Loup county they drove from Johnson county in a covered wagon and were three weeks on the road, camping out on the way. They experienced all the hardships of the years of drouth and at times it was very discouraging. For seven years only small returns were received from the farm.

Lewis Ruppel, Sr., now has a fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres, all fenced and improved with a good class of buildings. He has a nice modern farm house thirty-two by thirty-six feet, two stories high, and has one of the finest orchards in this part of the country, consisting of two hundred peach trees, also cherry, apple and apricot trees. His fruit has taken first premium several times in district fairs in competition with the product of this and adjoining states, and such has been his success that he now devotes a large part of his time to fruit raising. He cultivates about two hundred acres of his land and his sons, Lewis and Lowrie, have done most of the farming for the past ten years.

Lewis Ruppel, Sr., stands today as one of the most respected of the old settlers in this part of the state. He has always done his part in all affairs and he has won a high place in the history of his community.

WILLIAM T. JONES.

In compiling a list of the representative farmers of Sioux county, Nebraska, a prominent place is accorded the name of William T. Jones. For many years he has been engaged in agricultural pursuits in township 31, range 55, and has done a large part in developing the resources of that locality, and enjoys the respect and esteem of all who know him. He has a comfortable home in section 25 and is the owner of a good farm.

Mr. Jones is a native of Albany, Green county, Wisconsin, born in 1864, and was raised in town. His father, George J. Jones, came to America from England, where he was born and reared, and where he worked as a shoemaker for many years. He married Jane Gravenor in America, at Albany, Wisconsin, and lived there for many years. Mrs. George J. Jones was a native of Wales.

When the Civil war broke out the father enlisted in the Twelfth Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, saw hard service, taking part in many battles, and was one of those who never returned to the waiting family at home. He died in the army at Key West, Florida. In 1876 the mother with her family moved to Minnesota and settled in Martin county, where our subject grew to manhood, remaining in that country for nine years, then came to Nebraska, locating at first in Seward county, where he operated a farm for seven years, and while on that place went through all the pioneer experiences in opening up his farm. He helped open up the surrounding country, and lived here up to 1894, then moved to Sioux county, and had practically nothing to start with outside of his strong arms and willing hands. He broke up some land for crops the first year, and the following year was obliged to work out most of the time to make a living, receiving for his labor the munificent sum of eighty cents per day, with dinner thrown in, and the next year had his wages raised to one dollar a day. For about two years he lived on a farm four and a half miles south of Harrison, then moved north of town and worked in a sawmill for some time, receiving eighty cents a day as wages. In 1898 Mr. Jones took up a homestead near Andrew, Sioux county, proved up and improved it in good shape, working out a good deal of the time, and managed to save up quite a little money and make a good living for his family. As times grew better he purchased land adjoining his original homestead, put up good buildings, and is now owner of six hundred and forty acres, all of which is fenced, supplied with good buildings, wells, windmills, etc., and he controls besides his deeded land about fourteen hundred acres of leased land, using it as a stock ranch, on which he runs a large number of cattle for market each year. He is on the high road to success and wealth, and his present prosperity is due entirely to his own unaided efforts and gained by hard work and honest and conscientious dealings with his fellow men. These qualities never fail to bring a rich reward.

Mr. Jones was married in Seward county in 1887 to Miss Sadie E. Harper, who was born and reared in Iowa. She is a daughter of William Harper, a well known old settler of that state, who died when she was a child. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of four children, namely: Pearla May, married and residing in Sioux county, near her father's place; William T. Jones, Jr., Sadie E. and Panzy M., all at home and bright, helpful children. Mrs. Jones was postmistress at Andrews part of 1906 and 1907 and she opened the first store at Andrews, but sold out in 1907. Mr. Jones has held school office for a number of years and has been one of the foremost men of his locality in helping establish schools and building up the community. Mr. Jones has been in the employ of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad off and on ever since coming here. Special mention should be made of W. T. Jones, Jr., who at the age of thirteen years was employed by the Chicago & Northwestern railway to run their steam pumps at different places—quite a responsible position and an honor to a lad of thirteen.

GEORGE SCHREAR.

George Schrear, an early settler of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is one of the most highly respected and esteemed citizens of his community. He has a pleasant and comfortable home and valuable estate in Brownson precinct, and has gained his entire property through industrious effort and honest dealings, supplemented by thrift and good management.

Mr. Schrear was born in Prussia, December 25, 1835, and lived in his native land until fifteen years of age. Wm. Schrear, his father, with the family, sailed from Havre, in the fall of that year and after a voyage of a month, landed in New York. He settled at Beardstown, Illinois, and for eight or ten years followed carpentering as a vocation. He then removed to Logan county, Illinois, and later to Macon county, Missouri, where he and his wife died.

George Schrear lived in Logan county, Illinois, until 1888, coming at that time to Cheyenne county. He at once filed on a homestead and timber claim on section 20, township 15, range 51, and started to build a home and develop a farm. He acquired a three hundred and twenty-acre ranch and engages in stock raising on quite an extensive scale, also cultivates about seventy-five acres. He has at the present time twenty-five to thirty head of cattle and ten to fifteen horses, and has all good improvements necessary for the proper operation of his ranch. Mr. Schrear was married in Logan county, Illinois, to Abigail Robinson, a daughter of George and Gertrude Robinson. Mrs. Schrear was a native of New York state, and died on the home farm in 1907, leaving a sorrowing family, and many friends to mourn her loss. She was a lady of most estimable character, and greatly beloved for her kindly disposition and generous nature. There were three children born to Mr. Schrear and his wife, namely: William, holding the position of section foreman on the Union Pacific at North Platte, Nebraska; and Henry and Rebecca. Henry Schrear was born in Logan county, Illinois, October 13, 1875, and is now living on the home ranch, assisting his father in carrying on the place. He is a thorough ranchman and is a young man of fine ability, energetic and industrious. The daughter also lives at home.

Mr. Schrear is a Democrat in political sentiment, and is an earnest worker for party principles. The family were members of the Christian church in Illinois. A view of the home is shown on one of the illustrated pages of this volume.

JUSTIN V. JARDEE.

Justin V. Jardee, a successful and highly respected member of the farming community near Newport, Rock county, Nebraska, who has lived a simple and unpretentious life, is now enjoying the fruitage of industrious years. Such men as he who live honestly and square with the world, who pay their debts and make their own way are the pride of the imperial state in which their lot is cast, and of these, Nebraska has her full share.

Justin V. Jardee was born in Oswego county, New York, September 9, 1849, where his father, Joseph Jardee, was engaged as a machinist. He died in Buchanan county, Iowa, in 1883, and is remembered as a man of high character, and genuine worth. Catherine M. (Johnee) Jardee, the mother of Justin V., had a family of sixteen children, of whom Justin is the eighth, and reared them to honesty, industry and frugality.

When Justin V. Jardee had reached the age of twenty-four years, he left home, and started out in life for himself. He was married in Iowa to Miss Catherine Menuey. Her father, Anton Menuey, came to Rock county in 1891, and here he died ten years later. He was a man of more than usual parts, and was most highly regarded by those who knew him best. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jardee were born five children, Lewis H., Justin A., Albert E., Emma F., now the wife of James Brown, Leadville, Colorado, and Edward L.

After their wedding Mr. and Mrs. Jardee remained in Iowa, and engaged in farming on rented land for about ten years, but as the profits of his labor did not seem to remain with him, they finally concluded to seek a home in a region where government land could be still secured. For that purpose in 1883 the family came to Newport, Nebraska, bringing with them a team and wagon, three cows, and enough money to build with. Mr. Jardee settled on a homestead claim in section 6, township 31, range 17, and began farming operations after the old frontier fashion with sod corn and vegetables. Success has attended his operations from the beginning, and though he has experienced many trials and tribulations, yet his career has, taken altogether, been quite free of misfortunes of the more serious cast. By availing himself of the provisions of the tree claim act, Mr. Jardee was able to secure an additional quarter section, and as a consequence owns today a half section of land, which it is to his pride and credit compares well with any other farm in the county. His buildings are modern and convenient. The grove on the farm has some very choice forest trees, with many fine pines. A view of the home and surroundings is shown on another page of this volume. There are many fruit trees doing well under his close care, and the Jardee homestead is widely known and favorably noted. He is an independent Democrat politically and with his family is a member of the Catholic church.

JOHN F. HOOK.

John F. Hook, a successful farmer of Cherry county, resides on his well-improved estate on section 32, township 33, range 33.

Mr. Hook was born in Bartholomew county, Indiana, February 2, 1835, of American parents. He was reared there on a farm, and was the eldest of six children. At the age of eighteen years he began working at the carpenter's trade in Iowa, following that for a time, then started farming, combining the two occupations. He came to Cherry county in 1886 and took up a homestead and after proving up on it sold it to his son-in-law, and later took an additional four hundred and eighty-acre farm, situated on the Niobrara River. This is fairly good land altogether, two hundred and forty acres being farming land and the balance hay and pasture. Here he has built a good house, fenced the place and has built the place up in good shape. In the early days after coming here he ran a sawmill on his farm and returned to that occupation in the spring of 1908, setting up a mill on the Niobrara south of Cody. All of his life has been spent on the frontier, and he likes the west.

Mr. Hook was married in 1860 to Miss Martha Hill, born in Illinois in 1838, she died in Nebraska in 1880. Her parents were pioneers of Illinois, and later were among the early settlers of Iowa. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hook, of which six are living: Ellen, wife of Joseph Jackson, Roswell; Ida married to Harris Johnson, deceased; William, Nettie, wife of Rollin Poland, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; and Etta, wife of George Barnes.

Mr. Hook has always been active in local affairs in his community. In 1863 he was elected sheriff at Yankton, South Dakota, and served for one year. He is a Democrat in political affiliations.

ROBERT M. MORRISON.

Robert M. Morrison, a prosperous farmer of Phelps county, Nebraska, has established a fine farm in Union township. His father originally came from Antrim county, Ireland, about the year 1850, settling in McLean county, Illinois, where he lived for fourteen years. After this they lived in Putnam county, Illinois, for eight years, and in 1884 our subject came to this county with his parents, Richard and Elizabeth Getty Morrison, settling in section 13. They bought the one whole section of railroad land, his father breaking the land and putting up buildings. The father died in October, 1887, aged fifty-five years, and after his death the management of the farm fell on his five sons and three daughters. They are as follows: Thomas, who now owns one hundred and sixty acres of good farming land in this township; James, postmaster at Wilcox; John M., located at Loomis, owner and manager of an elevator and milling business, also dealing in grain; Mary W., wife of R. W. Taylor, of this county, both now dead; Richard, who since 1884 has owned and lived on one hundred and sixty acres in section 13, this township; Anna, residing in Chicago, Illinois; Elizabeth, now Mrs. I. O. Redfern, of Holdrege, and Robert M., the subject of this sketch. The mother, now aged sixty-nine years, lives with her children. A sketch of her brother, Hamilton Getty, appears in this volume.

Mr. Morrison is the owner of a one-hundred-and-sixty-acre farm in section 13, township 6, range 20, Phelps county, all of this land being under cultivation. He is successfully engaged in mixed farming, and has a good supply of farm machinery for carrying on a well conducted farm, together with good buildings and comfortable home. He was married in 1900 to Miss Ethel G. McClymont, daughter of James McClymont (a sketch of whom is given in this book), of Industry township, Phelps county. Our subject has three children, as follows: Helen Marguerite, Robert Dewitt and Ethel Miriam.

Mr. Morrison is a man of active public spirit, and takes a leading part in all educational and religious matters in his community. He is director of district No. 60 of his township and has served as trustee and Sabbath school superintendent at Loomis for several years past. In political faith he is a Republican, has served his party as treasurer, and been elected clerk of Union township several times, but never qualified.

JOHN HAMILTON.

The subject of this review was one of the first men to locate on the upper end of Indian creek, Dawes county, Nebraska, and is one of the interesting characters one occasionally meets in traveling through the western country, intelligent, energetic and industrious, who by dint of honest endeavor and strict attention to duty have accumulated a valuable property and gained an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and good neighbor. Mr. Hamilton resides on section 10, township 31, range 50, and occupies a foremost place among the oldest settlers of the region.

Mr. Hamilton was born in Morgan county, Illinois, in 1829. His parents were pioneers in that state, coming from Kentucky in their youth and built up a good home, raising their family in Sangamon county on a farm. At the age of twenty-two our subject left home and started out to make his own way in the world, following farming in his native state for some time. In 1865 he moved to Livingston county, Missouri, where he farmed for nineteen years, then came to Dawes county. He traveled from Missouri to this region by a team and covered wagon, and although the trip was a rough one he was not daunted by any kind of rough experiences, as his entire life had been spent on the frontier and he was well used to a pioneer's life. After coming here he located on a tract of wild prairie land in section 10, township 31, range 50, where he put up a rude log cabin, and still lives on this place. Here he has gone through the drouth periods when nearly all his crops were destroyed, and has often met with discouragements and loss, but never gave up courage, and is now well repaid for his perseverance and industry. He is owner of a ranch of nine hundred and sixty acres, two hundred acres of which is cultivated, and is extensively engaged in stock raising, running a large number of horses and other stock. His ranch is all fenced, and Indian creek runs through the farm, making plenty of good water all the year around.

Mr. Hamilton has been closely identified with the development and upbuilding of the agricultural and commercial resources of this section of Nebraska, and his name deserves a prominent place in the history of its growth.

J. CLAY FOX.

J. Clay Fox, a prosperous farmer of Rock county, Nebraska, has a pleasant and attractive farm home near the thrifty burg of Newport, which his own exertions have won from the wilderness, and which ranks among the best in the county. He has experienced the hardships of life in a new country, and, after the passage of but a comparatively brief period of time, can recount stories that seem all but incredible to the present generation, so changed in every way has northern Nebraska become since his career began on these vast prairies.

Mr. Fox was born on a farm, in Green county, Pennsylvania, September 3, 1846, and was reared to a life of honorable labor. His father, Allen Fox, was a farmer, of Irish parentage, and never came west of Ohio. His mother, Sarah Hickman, was born of English parents, and was the mother of eight children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the fifth in order of birth. He started out in early life for himself, and donned the blue during the closing scenes of the great war for the Union, enlisting in March, 1864, and serving until August, 1865, as a member of the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, under the command of J. M. Schoonmaker. He made a good record as a soldier, and as the years advance no scenes in the course of his varied career are dearer to him than those that recall tented field and battle line when he, a youth aflame with martial ardor, followed the starry banner until it floated free over a land of union and liberty for all.

The wedding of Mr. Fox and Miss Sarah Ann Evans was celebrated December 20, 1866, and to them were born, Lawrence V., Forney L. G., Lindsay J., Sherman A., Daisy D., and Franklin G., all attaining manhood and womanhood, there having been no death among them to the present time. The newly married couple spent two years in Pennsylvania, and then removed to Licking and Franklin counties, Ohio, where for fourteen years Mr. Fox was busily engaged in farming, and establishing quite a large business in digging ditches for tiling swamp land and was noted as an expert in this line of industry. In the fall of 1884 he made his first appearance as a settler in Rock county, Nebraska, after having spent two years in Des Moines, Iowa, and took a pre-emption claim on Ash creek, on section 10, township 31, range 17. This not proving an entirely satisfactory location, he accepted a good price for it, and bought a relinquishment on section 14, township 30, range 17. He owns at the present time the east half of section 14, and the north-west quarter of section 24, of the same township and range. In all, he owns and operates four hundred and eighty acres, and, as noted above, has made it one of the most notable farms of the entire region.

When Mr. Fox arrived in Nebraska he had sixty-three dollars in money, having chartered a car for household goods and stock, which consisted of one mare, two cows, two hogs and some poultry. He paid fifty-nine dollars for lumber with which to build a one-story shanty, lined with tar paper. Upon his place there is a flourishing grove, all planted and cultivated, by himself. Including the fruit and evergreen trees, he has thirty-one varieties, all free and vigorous growers on his place, and it is a revelation of what may be done in the way of tree culture on the Nebraska prairies. When he began at this work there was not so much as a stick or a brush to be found on the place.

As showing the possibilities of agricultural life in Nebraska Mr. Fox made the following report of his farming operations to the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, at their request, November 14, 1906:

"I raised thirty acres of corn, cost in labor and seed forty dollars. I had one thousand two hundred bushels, worth twenty cents per bushel, two hundred and forty dollars. I have three hundred and forty-five tons of hay worth eight hundred sixty-two dollars and fifty cents. I consider my farming this year for three hundred and twenty acres has yielded two thousand dollars. Farm land sells here for ten dollars per acre. I raised this season on thirty-five square rods of land the following crops: Sixty-five bushels of onions, one weighing two and one-half pounds, receiving from the Iowa seed company the sum of ten dollars as a prize for the largest onion. From seven hills of squashes had two wagon loads, thirteen squashes making a load of a double box, the largest weighing one hundred and twenty-six and a half pounds. Also had fourteen bushels of potatoes, one and a half bushels of onion sets, two pounds of onion seeds, one barrel of pop corn, and at the market price here, this land netted about fifty-two dollars, including ten dollars prize money. This land was not irrigated." This report was widely published and did much to turn home seekers in this direction.

Two prize winning onions, raised by Mr. Fox in successive years, weighed one pound thirteen ounces and two pounds nine ounces, respectively, each onion securing a prize of ten dollars. Ten cows in the dairy branch of his farming net $6 per week the year round.

Mr. Fox has on his place some two hundred apple trees that are vigorous growers and fine bearers of very desirable fruit. In fruit as in everything else he has sought the best, and will not be satisfied with inferior articles in grain, stock or land. In political matters he is a Republican, but has steadfastly refused to become a candidate for any official position. He has many friends, and takes a deep interest in everything pertaining to the general welfare of his town, withholding his support from no enterprise calculated to prove of public good. He is a comrade of the Stuart post, Grand Army of the Republic.

BERT J. BATES.

In reviewing a list of prominent business men and agriculturists of Cheyenne county, a leading place is accorded the name of Bert Bates. This gentleman has been associated intimately with the development of that section of the country financially, and his extensive interests have been a factor in its upbuilding. By his praiseworthy example, honest dealings and good business management he has become known throughout Cheyenne county as a citizen of true worth. He is engaged in the real estate business in Lodgepole, under the firm name of The Bates Land Company, buying, selling and improving farm and ranch property throughout Cheyenne and the adjoining counties.

Bert J. Bates was born in Wayne county, New York, December 28, 1866, and grew up in that locality. At the age of twenty years he came west, arriving in Cheyenne county February 20, 1886, where he followed farming and ranching during the early years. He filed on a homestead in section 34, township 14, range 47, proved up on the land, and is now owner of eleven hundred and twenty acres, all in one body, besides a tract of one thousand acres of tableland, situated about twelve miles north of Lodgepole. He has seventy-five acres of the original homestead under cultivation, and has the balance in hay and range, and has been engaged principally in ranching during the past sixteen years. He is at present devoting his attention exclusively to horses, running about fifty head.

When Mr. Bates landed in Nebraska all the money he had in the world was five dollars, from which small beginning his success has been remarkable, as he has accumulated every dollar of his property through his industry, integrity and strict attention to business, entirely unaided. About 1904 he removed to Lodgepole from his ranch, and started in the livery business, carrying that on for about two years, after which he discontinued hiring horses and conducts a feed stable. In 1906 he established himself in the real estate business, which has grown to large proportions in the short time he has been engaged in the work.

Mr. Bates was married on June 18, 1889, in Cheyenne, Wyoming, to Miss Belle Scanlan, who was born in Niota, Illinois, April 1, 1867. The parents of both of them have passed to the great beyond. Five children have been born to them, named as follows: Verne, Ruby, Bertha, Doris and Nellie, all living at home, forming a charming and interesting family. Mr. Bates is prominent in local, county and state affairs. He is a member of the town board, and a director in the People's Bank of Lodgepole. Politically he is a Republican. He affiliates with the Masonic order at Chappell and the Woodmen at Lodgepole.

CLARENCE C. COBLE.

Industry, perseverance and integrity are the stepping stones by which the gentleman here named has reached success. He is the owner of one of the finest farms in Grant county, and has acquired the same by faithful and untiring labor and good management, supplemented by honest dealings. He began with very little, met with many reverses, went through hardships and roughed it during his early settlement here, but nothing discouraged him and he is now one of the substantial citizens of his community as a reward for his earnest efforts. Mr. Coble is a typical westerner, and genial gentleman. He has accomplished a great deal for a man of his years, and richly merits his splendid success in the accumulation of a valuable estate of about six thousand acres, deeded and leased together. He has a fine home and outbuildings, etc., and four windmills. He puts up five hundred tons of hay each season, carries a herd of three hundred to five hundred head of cattle, and from fifty to seventy-five horses.

Clarence C. Coble was born in Darke county, Ohio, in 1868. His father, Henry, was a leading ranchman and old settler in Grant county, and he married Caroline Speelman, of Darke county, Ohio. Our subject was reared in the east, receiving a common school education, and in 1888 came west, locating in Grant county, and was the first of his family to emigrate so far west. His first location was seven miles south of Hyannis, and there he put up a rough shanty, stable and corrals for his stock, all being built of sod and the roof of his house was made of poles and rushes, covered with sod, but of late he has built a fine modern residence. His first team were a pair of oxen, and he did all the work of breaking land and hauling supplies for the first eight years. His start was on a very small scale, and during the first four years he lived all alone, cooking his own meals and caring for all his wants. He often was an eye witness to serious fires which burned the surrounding prairies bare of grass, etc., and many times worked entire days and nights helping save property in his vicinity. He also spent a good deal of his time working on ranches as a cowboy in order to earn money to improve his place. He did build up a good ranch, although he had many hard times and suffered much loss on account of the dry years and other causes, but stuck to his ranch and after a time got into the cattle business and succeeded splendidly in his venture in that line. He has since devoted his entire time and attention to the raising of stock, and has done well.

Mr. Coble was married in 1891, to Lucy Briton. She is a daughter of Washington Briton, who was a well-known farmer in Ohio, where Mrs. Coble was born and raised. Three children were born as a result of this union, namely: Goldie, aged sixteen; Crystal, aged thirteen; and Delmar, aged seven.

Our subject has always done his share as an old settler, taking an active part in local school and political affairs, and is held in high esteem in his community as a worthy and public-spirited citizen. He is a Democrat in his views, but votes for the best man that he thinks is for the masses of the people.

FRANK BANDERET.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is one of the very earliest settlers in western Nebraska, and a prominent citizen of Woodson precinct, Perkins county, where he has a good home and valuable estate. He was born in Switzerland in 1857, and raised on a farm there. As a boy he learned the butcher's trade and worked at that for a number of years. He came to America at the age of twenty-three years, and after landing in New York city went to Winnebago county, Wisconsin, where he followed his trade for six years.

In 1885 Mr. Banderet made a trip through Nebraska, and at that time saw many wild horses, antelope and other wild animals, and while through here he filed on a claim, this same land now being in Woodson precinct. He located permanently on a homestead in Perkins county in 1885, put up a rough shanty and started to establish a farm. His dwelling was a sod house, fourteen by twenty-four feet in size. In all he lived in three different sod houses. He went through pioneer experiences with his family. He finally proved up on his land, although he was obliged to work out at times to make a living, and at the time the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway was being put through the region he helped in the construction of the same. He had no well on his place and during the first year hauled water for household use from Keith county, a distance of nine miles, and all supplies were hauled from North Platte, forty miles away. During the bad years he lost several crops by drouth, hail storms, and finally was obliged to abandon his homestead. He had a few horses and some other stock and he kept these and gradually built up a little stock business, which helped him through the hard times. In 1897 he bought his present ranch, the buildings of which are situated on section 30, township 12, range 35, and here he has a good home and farm, well improved in every way with buildings, etc., having a barn with a capacity for thirty horses, corn cribs, granary, house, twenty-four by twenty-four feet and fourteen by twenty feet. He owns in all fourteen hundred and forty-eight acres, and runs considerable stock, and does a large farming business. He has a fine Percheron stallion, registered, Paul, weight sixteen hundred and ten pounds at two years. He also raises the Jersey red hogs.

Mr. Banderet was married in 1884 to Miss Sophia Steck, who was born in Wisconsin, both her parents being natives of the old country, who came to America during their youth. Two children blessed the union of our subject and his estimable wife, named Dorothy and Harry.

Mr. Banderet has always been actively interested in all matters which tended to the betterment of his community. In 1895, during the hard times in his section, he went to Wisconsin and solicited a car load of grain which he had shipped to Wallace, Nebraska, for the relief of his neighbors. This was given free by the people of his old Wisconsin home. In his political views he favors the Populist party. He has always taken an active part in public affairs and has held various local offices.

FRED CROOK.

Fred Crook, a prominent farmer and well-to-do resident of Paxton precinct, is owner of a fine estate on section 6, township 13, range 35, and an old settler in Keith county, who is well and favorably known throughout the region.

Mr. Crook was born in the village of Meinche, province of Hanover, Germany, January 9, 1862, and reared on a farm. His father was a carpenter by trade, and spent his entire life in his native country, as did the mother, Sophia Lauschor, in maidenhood. At the age of nineteen he came to America, sailing from Bremen Haven in the Strausburg, and after a voyage of seventeen days landed in Baltimore. Coming directly west he located first in North Platte, Nebraska, and after a short time there, moved to Brule, where he remained eighteen months, securing employment on the section work of the railroad and then came to Paxton, where he was similarly employed. He followed that occupation for twenty-two years, and for ten years of the time was foreman of the section. Our subject filed on his present homestead in 1884, and has spent the entire time on the place. He first built a sod house, in which he lived with his family for many years. He made many improvements, and continually added to his acreage as he became able, and is now owner of four hundred and fifty acres of good ranch and farm land, with a complete set of good farm buildings. He runs about fifteen horses, fifty cattle and as many hogs. He is interested in dairying, selling the product of sixteen cows in town.

RESIDENCE OF FRED CROOK,

In 1893 Mr. Crook was united in marriage to Miss Augusta Ambersot, whose parents were early settlers in Keith county. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Crook, named as follows: Fred, Harry, Lena, Willie, Allie, Emma, Eddie and Minnie. They are all bright, intelligent children, and are being taught to be a help and comfort to their parents. Their home life is congenial, and the family is held in the highest esteem in their community. Mr. Crook is a Republican in politics, a member of the Lutheran church, and of the Paxton lodge of Modern Woodmen.

We show a view of Mr. Crook's home with its many growing trees and orchard on another page of our work.

ARNOLD PETERS.

For the past twenty years the gentleman here named has made western Nebraska his home, and now resides on section 14, township 29, range 45, where he has a pleasant home and valuable property. He is a thorough and systematic farmer, and held in highest esteem by every one in his home community.

Mr. Peters was born in Calumet county, Wisconsin, in 1866. His father, Peter Peters, was born in Holland, and came to America at the age of twenty-six years, settling in Wisconsin, where he was among the pioneers of that state. He married Mary A. Vanderloop, born in Holland, who came to this country with her parents when ten years old, and they had a family of eleven children, of whom Arnold was the fourth member in order of birth. He remained with his parents up to the time he was twenty-four years of age, then left home and worked out one year in Butler county, Nebraska. In March, 1890, he again came to Nebraska, locating on section 14, township 29, range 45, as a homestead, also took a pre-emption south of this place, and later turned it into a tree claim, buying a relinquishment. There was only a sod shanty on the place when he took it, and all the money he had to his name was seventy dollars. He borrowed enough to purchase a team of oxen and his land, then worked the oxen six years before he was able to buy horses.

In 1891 he built a new sod house, in which he lived with his family up to 1903, then built a nice frame house in which they now live, which is a modern house in every respect and fitted up with all conveniences. After taking his farm he broke up some of his land and put in a crop of sod corn, and after it was nicely started and he expected a large crop, it was entirely destroyed by a hail storm. Then the dry years came on and he was obliged to quit farming, so gathered some stock around him and started in the stock business. He was always able to raise a good crop of corn and potatoes, and never had to buy any feed. He had a number of cows and some chickens, and these about kept the family in provisions, and everything he could save went into the purchase of more land, at one time trading six steers for a quarter section of land. He never had any idea of leaving the place, but kept on buying land while it was cheap, fencing it as he was able, buying most of his fencing of his neighbors when they gave up their land and moved away. He now owns eighteen hundred and forty acres of mixed farming and grazing land, most of which lies along the river, using all of it as pasture and farming land. In 1905 he rented a large piece for which he received a dollar per acre cash rent. He runs one hundred and twenty-five head of stock and uses most of his produce on his home farm. He has some alfalfa which is doing well, and will put in more later.

Mr. Peters was married in 1892 to Miss Minnie Jahn, a native of Austria, born in 1874. Her parents were born and raised in Austria and came to this country when young people, settling in Nebraska in the early days, now making their home in Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Peters have five children, namely: Anna M., Lena M., Josephine A., Elsie M. and Francis Joseph, all born and raised on their present homestead.

Mr. Peters is well satisfied with what he has accomplished here and would not care to return east to live. The only drawback is the long distance to town, but that is a minor consideration. He gets his mail at Hay Springs. He is an independent voter in local affairs, but in national affairs leans toward the Democrats, although he never dabbles in politics to any great extent.

BERTON K. BUSHEE.

A prominent place among the list of prosperous and energetic business men of Kimball county is accorded the gentleman's name mentioned above. Although comparatively a very young man, his influence is keenly felt in the financial and political circles of his community, and he is recognized as one of the leading men of affairs here.

Berton K. Bushee was born in Dartford, Wisconsin, May 3, 1871. His father was a native of New York state, born in 1820, and died in Kimball county, June 10, 1893, while his mother was born, reared and married in Wisconsin, and died in Kimball county, Nebraska, in November, 1894. He was the only child of his parents, and received his early education in the state of his birth, coming to Nebraska with his father and mother in 1888, the former homesteading on section 20 township 16, range 53, and altogether they built up a good home and farm here. In 1892 our subject filed on a claim for himself, proved up on it and then sold out. He was elected county superintendent of schools in 1895, holding that position up to 1900, and was again elected in 1904, holding the office for one term. During his first term he had settled in the town of Kimball, and made that his home afterward. He was elected a member of the village council in 1904, and served for two years, then was elected mayor of the town. In 1898 he had engaged in the general mercantile business in partnership with Henry Vogler, and was associated with that gentleman for eight years, then bought his interest in the concern, and is now sole owner and manager of the business. He has enlarged his stock and has one of the best equipped stores of the kind in the county, with a steadily increasing patronage.

Mr. Bushee was married April 4, 1894, to Ruth B. Cunningham, who was born in Missouri, coming to Nebraska with her parents in 1881, and locating in Cheyenne county, where they still reside. Our subject has one child, Helen Bernice, now eleven years of age, who is a charming young miss.

Since locating in this section Mr. Bushee has been active in politics and takes a great interest in all matters appertaining to national, state and local affairs. He is president of the Commercial Club of Kimball, which organization is an important factor in the business and social affairs of western Nebraska. He is also vice-president and director of the Bank of Kimball. Politically he is a Republican. In the fall of 1908 Mr. Bushee was elected representative of the fifty-fourth legislative district on the Republican ticket.

CHARLES E. WILTSEY.

Charles E. Wiltsey, one of the enterprising and energetic citizens of Box Butte county, where he takes high rank for his sterling qualities of heart and mind, was born in Warren county, Illinois, in 1859, and comes of an old Indiana family. He is justly proud of his lineage, and retains unsullied the honored name that has come down to him from his fathers. The father, Henry Wiltsey, was born and raised in Indiana, and he married Sarah J. Thomas, also a native of that state. The family came to Illinois in the early forties, and our subject was born and reared in that state until he reached the age of nine years, then with his parents, settled in Lucas county, Iowa, on a farm. There Charles attended the country schools where he received a good education, also helped his father carry on the work on the home farm until the time of the latter's death, which occurred December 28, 1886. Both mother and father died in Iowa, and our subject lived on the farm and carried on the work up to the spring of 1890. Besides operating his father's place, Charles bought a farm of his own in 1890, and worked that for a number of years before leaving Iowa. He built up a good home and made a great success there, but decided to try his fortune farther west, so in 1901 left that state, and came to Nebraska, landing in Box Butte county on January 1st, of that year. He bought land and has added to his original holdings until he is now owner of a ranch of twenty quarter sections, all deeded land, which is considered one of the most valuable estates in the county. This is located in section 1, township 27, range 49. He has three hundred acres seeded in tame grass, also crops four hundred acres, besides running a large number of cattle and other stock. The whole place is well fenced and improved in fine shape, and he is one of Box Butte county's representative farmers, a leading citizen of his community.

Our subject was married in the fall of 1887 to Miss Electa D. Rockey, and to this union have been born six children, named: J. L., C. C., Walter, Edna May, Jenevieve and Glen.

Mr. Wiltsey has always voted the Republican ticket.

WILLIAM H. SPRAGUE.

To the present visitor of the agricultural district of Garfield precinct, Keya Paha county, a pleasant sight in the well-improved farms and highly cultivated tracts greets the eye, and it is hard to conceive of the transformation that has taken place in this locality within the past quarter of a century. When the gentleman above named located on his present farm on section 9, township 33, range 22, there was not a building in sight and the land was in its wild state, but he foresaw the possibilities of the region and remained to become owner of one of the well improved farms of this thriving district, and is now enjoying a competence as a result of his labors. He is widely known throughout the country as one of the oldest settlers, a prosperous and energetic farmer, and commands the respect of the entire community.

Mr. Sprague was born in Ogle county, Illinois, September 9, 1847, where he was reared and educated on a farm, learning to do all kinds of hard work while still a mere lad. His father, John W. Sprague, was born and reared in Providence, Rhode Island, of American stock, and when twenty-one years of age he was married in Ohio to Elizabeth Smith, a native of that state. Although city bred he adopted farming as an occupation directly. He was the father of thirteen children, our subject being the second member. When he was nine years of age the family moved to Poweshiek county, Iowa, and thence at eighteen years of age he started out for himself as a farm laborer. In 1880 he moved to Carroll county, Iowa, where he started a farm for himself, remaining there five years, and then came to Keya Paha county, taking up his present farm as a home-stead. This was an entirely unimproved property, and did not have a stick of timber on it, so he at once began improving it, planting a large number of forest trees, and fruit trees of different varieties. He built a sod-log house, and lived in it for fifteen years, then erected a nice frame house. During the dry years he had many discouragements and often felt like leaving the place, and although many of his neighbors moved away he determined to stick to it, and managed to get along some way. At that time he lost all his trees and had to replant the grove which is now one of the thriftiest in the region. He also lost cattle from blackleg and pinkeye, and seemed to have every kind of misfortune. He left the place in September, 1892, and returned to Iowa, where he rented a farm for eleven hundred and ten dollars cash rent, but transferred his lease there six weeks later to resume his efforts in Nebraska, and has stuck to his farm ever since. He now has eight hundred and eighty acres of good land, one hundred and fifty acres under the plow, and keeps as many as ninety cattle and from twenty to twenty-five horses, besides raising about one hundred and twenty-five hogs each year for market. He has ten miles of fence on his place and everything is in first-class condition, showing the greatest care and good management in its operation. His cave, recently constructed, is one of the finest in the county.

Mr. Sprague was married November 12, 1871, to Miss Helen Helmer, born in Rock county, Wisconsin, in 1847, her parents settling in Iowa in 1851, where she attained womanhood. Mr. and Mrs. Sprague have one child, George W., besides two adopted children, Clyde Lester and Sarah Lena. During the early years there was a hard time to establish schools in this region, and Mr. Sprague and his neighbors broke land for a settler in payment for his services as a teacher. He has always taken an active part in local affairs looking to the best interests of his community, and is one of the leading men of his locality. Politically he is a Populist and in religion is a member of the Church of the Latter Day Saints.

W. W. BOWER.

W. W. Bower, for many years a progressive and successful farmer of Deuel county, is a prominent member of his community, and well and favorably known throughout the region, having first seen Nebraska in 1878, and was among the first settlers to begin farming.

Mr. Bower was born in Texas, and first saw the light on January 7, 1863. He grew up there, and when about fifteen years of age, "hit the trail" for himself, accompanied by two brothers, going to Julesburg, Colorado, in 1878. They remained there a short time, finally securing employment on the L. F. ranch, and worked for the outfit for four years, following the range all of that time. Our subject returned to Texas in the fall of 1881, soon returning to Nebraska, trailing a bunch of horses for himself, and going into Kansas where he engaged in the ranching business in the Cherokee strip. He was in partnership with his two brothers, and in the spring of 1883 they left him, coming to Cheyenne county with a bunch of horses, he remaining there buying and selling horses through Kansas and in adjoining states, keeping this up for several years. After a year spent in Denver, Colorado, he came to Deuel county, arriving here in 1890, and at once filed on homestead rights on sections 8 and 9, township 17, range 45, and engaged in the ranching business afresh. He increased his herd of cattle and horses constantly, also purchased additional land, and is now owner of eight hundred acres, which he has in pasture and hay land for his stock, keeping cattle, horses and hogs. His ranch is well improved with a complete set of substantial buildings, and is one of the valuable estates in the county. The ranch is located about eleven miles northwest of Oshkosh in the North Platte valley, and is entirely under irrigation.

In 1904 Mr. Bower established a general merchandise store in Oshkosh, putting in a complete stock of goods, and has built up a large and constantly increasing trade throughout the surrounding country. He has one of the large store buildings of the town, twenty-four by sixty feet, and besides this has a shed and store room.

On August 29, 1883, Mr. Bower was married to Miss Sylva Thomas, the marriage taking place in Kansas. Mrs. Bower is a native of Pennsylvania. They have two children, Zulah, wife of Will F. Gumaer, they residing in Oshkosh, and Beulah, who is living with her parents in the same town. Mr. Bower's parents are both dead, while his wife's mother resides in Kansas. During the years 1900-1902 inclusive, Mr. Bower filled the office of sheriff of Deuel county, and proved a very popular and capable public officer. He is one of the leading men of affairs in Oshkosh, and is a member of the Commercial Club of that town. Politically he is a Democrat, and takes an active part in local and county public affairs.

JOHN JOCHEM.

John Jochem was born in West Prussia, Germany, June 8, 1850. His father, Rhinehold, was a fisherman and sailor by occupation and was drowned when our subject was but three years old. The mother's maiden name was Helena Weber. After his father's death, John was reared in the family of an aunt until he was eleven years of age, when his mother was married again and our subject went to his mother's new home to live. In the meantime he worked out at various occupations, principally farming, and he served in the German army during the German-Franco war in 1870 and 1871. After the war he followed farming and for one whole year his earnings were only nineteen dollars in excess of his board, but after the first year, he was able to earn from fifty-one to sixty-one dollars and his board per year.

In 1875 John Jochem was married to Miss Wilhelmina Bomgardt, a daughter of poor but honest German parents. Their marriage resulted in five children: Charles, Gustav, Henry, John and Emma. The good wife died in Blaine county in 1894. Mr. Jochem was married again in 1895, taking for his second wife Miss Caroline Neiman, who was born in Germany and came to America to become Mr. Jochem's wife. They have one child, eleven years old, named Lena.

On the death of his first wife our subject was left with a family of small children for whom he had to take the place of both father and mother, having to do all the serving, cooking, washing and all other duties required in caring for the little ones. Times were exceedingly hard, crop failures followed season after season for several years and the hardships that our subject had to endure cannot be enumerated. But he never once thought of breaking up his family or his home, and by hard, persistent work he kept the children together and maintained the home. He knew his second wife only through friends and by correspondence, and after they had determined to marry each other, between them they managed to get enough money together to pay her passage over to America. She has been an admirable helpmeet and by her work and industry has greatly assisted in building their pleasant home. Our subject has reared a large and interesting family and he has reason to be proud of his children.

Our subject came to America in 1881, landing at New York, from whence he went to Plano, Illinois, where for several years he was on a farm and then for three years he worked for the Plano Harvester Company. In 1886 he came to Omaha, remaining one year. He then came to Blaine county, Nebraska, bringing goods and chattels amounting to about eight hundred dollars. He first settled on a homestead six miles north of Brewster, remaining there for seven years. But bad luck was with him here, the land was not good and it was here that his first wife died. In 1895 he settled on his present homestead in section 4, township 24, range 22, and, although he started with almost nothing, he and his good wife and family have built up a good home and ranch of eight hundred and ninety-three acres. He has a good house, large barns and has the land improved in an up-to-date manner. He has good groves of forest trees, an orchard of apple trees, plums and cherries, and an abundance of small fruit. Mr. Jochem is enjoying prosperity and is esteemed by his associates as a man of sterling worth and honorable character.

EDWARD T. GREGG.

Edward T. Gregg, a popular and capable citizen of Dawes county, whose residence is located in section 4, township 28, range 51, is one of the men of whom the people of the surrounding community are justifiably proud. He was born in the state of New York in 1857, a son of William T. and Elizabeth (McGregory) Gregg, natives of Scotland. Our subject's father was a railroad contractor, and assisted in the construction of the railroads throughout that part of the country. For a short time after the birth of Edward the family remained in New York, removing later to Vermont and Maine.

When our subject had attained the age of twenty-two years he left his home and came west to Marshall county, Iowa. Here he entered the milling business in the town of Quarry. In 1884 he came to Box Butte county, Nebraska, locating ten miles south of Marsland, where he took up a claim on pre-emption, and for six months lived in a tent. He then built a log house, the roof of which was blown off during a terrific storm. He then built a sod house. He came to Dawes county in 1885, driving from Gordon, taking up a homestead claim near Marsland. From time to time he added adjacent tracts of land to his original entry, and now has a large ranch of over seventeen hundred and seventy-five acres of deeded land extending along the Niobrara river, and three quarter-sections homesteaded in Dawes and Box Butte counties. He has one hundred and sixty acres under cultivation, and has one ice pond on his place that yields annually about ten hundred to twelve hundred car loads of ice.

Mr. Gregg has provided a nice residence for his family, a good well and wind mill, and has erected substantial buildings in which to house his stock. During the period of drouths so well known to early settlers of this section of the country, our subject was not discouraged by the many failures of crops which he experienced, and the faith which he had in this new country has not been misplaced. While the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad was in the course of construction through Dawes and Box Butte counties, our subject assisted in the surveying, and worked on the survey to Deadwood, South Dakota, and New Castle, Wyoming.

In 1877 Mr. Gregg and Miss Ida Thompson were married in Maine. She was the daughter of Joseph and Maria (Earl) Thompson. Her father was a shoemaker by trade. Mr. and Mrs. Gregg are the happy parents of seven living children, viz.: George, Charles, Ina, William, Fay, Doris and Earl; three are deceased—Ira, Frank and Harry. All the children with the exception of the two oldest were born in Nebraska. The first child born to them in this state came to them while living in the tent in Box Butte county.

In political matters Mr. Gregg is a Republican. He is a man who takes a prominent place in local affairs, and has held various school offices for years. He served as assessor for two or three terms. He has made many staunch friends, and is highly respected by all who have the pleasure of knowing him.

OLIVER JACOX.

In the vicinity of Thurman postoffice, Rock county, Nebraska, Oliver Jacox has made himself a good home and name of honor and worth. He has made a success of his vocation, and is one of the intelligent and enterprising men of the community. Here he has gathered around him a host of friends, who know him as a man of upright character, and through industry, honesty and perseverance he has gained a comfortable competence. A view of his residence and buildings may be found on another page of this work.

Mr. Jacox was born on a farm in Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, April 23, 1867, and from his early youth was inured to hard work. His father, John Jacox, was a native of the state of New York, where he first inhaled the vital air in 1836. He was a veteran of the Civil war, and for four long years wore his country's uniform as a member of the One Hundred and Fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. The mother, Victoria Russell, was also born in New York, and came of a Scotch parentage. They were people of fine character and noble aspirations, and reared their children to honest and generous ideals.

When Oliver Jacox was ten years old he began caring for himself, and for some years worked as a farm boy. In 1876 he came to Madison county, Nebraska, where he made his home for seven years. In 1883 we find him in Rock county, where his father had secured pre-emption and tree claims in section 31, township 29, range 18, and here our subject made a homestead entry in section 29, and the land thus secured has been converted by his unwearied industry and modern farming into one of the choice places of the county. Especial prominence is given to the dairy, forty cows now furnishing a large supply of excellent cream which is shipped to the east. This is the most profitable branch of industry on the farm.

Mr. Jacox was married in Rock county, August 7, 1897, to Miss Laura Miller, whose people came to Washington, Nebraska, in 1880. This has proved a peculiarly happy union, and it has been blessed by the coming of the following children: Cecil, Ward, Garland, Kermet and Irene. In Mrs. Jacox our subject found a brave hearted companion, and one ready for any privation that might advance the family interest. While in Madison county, they lived in a sod shanty, and when successive crops were taken by grasshoppers or died under dry and burning skies, her voice and face were always cheery.

Mr. Jacox is a strong Republican, but has never aspired to official position. His home and farm have been a large field for his activities. Fraternally he is a member of the Bassett Lodge of Odd Fellows. As has frequently been said of him, he deserves his success—he has earned it by his own hands and brain, having had no assistance outside of his own efforts and that of his estimable helpmeet.

LORENZ SAALI.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is in the front ranks of the prosperous and successful ranchmen of Cheyenne county. He is also one of the early settlers of that region, who has seen the many changes which have taken place in western Nebraska during the past twenty years, and has taken no small part in the development of the agricultural and ranching interests of his section. Mr. Saali owns a valuable estate in Union Valley precinct and is widely esteemed as a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Lorenz Saali was born in the village of Eberbach, district of Weisenberg, Alsace, that part of France which is now German territory, on October 2, 1858. His parents, Martin and Mary Ann (Meyer) Saali, are now deceased. Our subject grew up in his native land, following farming during his boyhood. He served two years in the Seventh Infantry of the German army. At the age of twenty-five he started for the new world, sailing from Bremen Haven on the American, landing in Baltimore after a fourteen days' voyage, March 8, 1883. He at first went to Winona county, Minnesota, where a brother had preceded him, and a year later came to Otoe county, Nebraska, farming near Nebraska City for three years. In the spring of 1887 he arrived in Cheyenne county, and immediately filed on a homestead in section 24, township 17, range 48, which is now a part of his ranch. He went through hard times during his early residence in Nebraska, but worked hard to accumulate a little property and build up a home, and although he met with many failures of crops during the dry years, he was in the main successful and has succeeded in a marked degree, now owning a fine ranch of nine hundred and sixty acres, all well improved with good substantial buildings, wind-mills and fences. He had a quantity of good timber on the land, but this is now almost exhausted. However, he has planted a fine grove, and has an abundant supply of good water. There are under cultivation about one hundred and twenty-five acres, with good pasture and hay land. He engages in stock raising on quite a large scale, running about one hundred and twenty-five head of cattle and sixty horses annually.

Mr. Saali was married in Cheyenne county August 12, 1901, to Miss Susanna Laibe, daughter of William and Barbara (Walberg) Laibe, both deceased. They have one child, Louis Joseph, born August 4, 1906. The family occupy a comfortable and pleasant home. They have a large circle of friends in their community.

In his political views Mr. Saali is a staunch supporter of the Republican party principles. He is a consistent member of the Catholic church. On another page of this work will be found a view of the family home.

EDWARD SATTERLEE.

Edward Satterlee, one of the prominent business men of Nenzel, Nebraska, is a comparatively young man who has built up a good trade and acquired a pleasant and comfortable home here.

Mr. Satterlee was born in St. Louis, Mis-

RESIDENCE OF LORENZ SAALI,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF OLIVER JACOX,

souri, January 29, 1861. His father, Thomas Satterlee, of American stock, ran a ferry boat on the Mississippi river for a number of years. Our subject's parents moved to Boone county, Iowa, with their family of five children, of whom he was the second member, when he was quite a young lad. He lived at home until reaching the age of fifteen years, then started out for himself, following different kinds of work. For five years he freighted, drove stage and railroaded in Texas, then went back to Iowa and remained there a few years, driving teams for different owners. In 1883 he located in Dakota and proved up on a homestead there, and after three years spent in that locality he came on to Nebraska and March 17, 1886, reached Cherry county. Here, on April 7, 1886, he took a timber claim, near Nenzel, which he still holds, and to which he has added until the ranch now comprises twenty-three hundred acres, improved with good buildings, fences, etc., and well stocked with cattle. He employs a good man to run this place, but still superintends the management of it. In 1896 he opened a store in Nenzel, which is in a flourishing condition, and enjoys a wide patronage.

On February 7, 1895, Mr. Satterlee was married to Miss Elizabeth Shaughnessy, born in Ohio in 1874. She came of Irish stock, and moved to Nebraska with her parents in 1878; at the present time they are residing in the city of Valentine. Mr. and Mrs. Satterlee have a family of seven children, named as follows: Frances, Dennis, Thomas (deceased), Margaret, Joseph, Edward and George, all of whom were born and reared in Cherry county.

Mr. Satterlee has always done all in his power to assist in the development of his county, and although he has met with severe losses at different times since coming here, he has never experienced the hardships and privations that fell to the lot of so many of the pioneers of Nebraska. He has accumulated a valuable estate and built up a comfortable home, and is well satisfied with the fruits of his labor and prepared to spend the balance of his life enjoying what he has worked so hard to attain. In political faith he is a Democrat and fraternally a member of the Georgia Lodge, Modern Woodmen of America. The members of the family are all communicants of the Catholic church.

JAMES SNYDER.

James Snyder, one of the early settlers in Nebraska, is well known all over Lincoln county as an enterprising and prosperous business man, and highly respected as a citizen. He resides in North Platte, where he has a comfortable home and he and his family enjoy a wide circle of warm friends and acquaintances.

He is a son of Anthony Snyder, formerly of Crawford county, Ohio, one of the oldest settlers in that locality. The family previous to this lived in Pickaway county, Ohio, and about the year 1840 they moved to Crawford county where the country was newer, and opportunities better for the pioneer settlers. In November, 1869, our subject first came to Nebraska, and in 1873 came to North Platte where he at once engaged in his chosen trade as a carpenter and builder. He worked at this for the following three years, and then obtained employment on the railroad, beginning as fireman with the Northern Pacific railway. He worked faithfully at this, attending strictly to his duties, and in 1881 was given the position of conductor with the company, and since that time has been employed in that capacity, being one of the oldest men in that work now serving with the Union Pacific people.

Mr. Snyder was married to Miss Mattie Scott, and they have a family of two children, named as follows: Ray, who is a conductor on the same road with his father, residing at North Platte. He was married to Miss Flynn, daughter of Thomas Flynn, of North Platte, who is an engineer. They have one son, Robert Snyder; Asa Snyder, the second son, is an engineer inspector on the Union Pacific railroad, also residing at North Platte, father of two sons, all being railroad men.

Mr. Snyder is a prominent member of the Order of Railroad Conductors, at North Platte, also of the Woodmen lodge at that place.

FREMONT T. BUCHANAN.

Fremont T. Buchanan has been a resident of Dawes county for many years past, and has built up a good home and property through strict integrity and good management of his different enterprises. Mr. Buchanan is counted among the leading citizens and is one of the oldest settlers in this part of the country, and held in the highest esteem by all who know him.

Mr. Buchanan was born in Hendricks county, Indiana, in 1863, on a farm. His father, R. M. Buchanan, was a farmer and school teacher in that state, and it is believed that he was a native of Kentucky. The father died when our subject was a small boy, leaving his wife, who was Miss Christina White, to care for their family of children. The mother died in Nebraska in the year 1905. When Fremont was ten years of age the family moved to Gentry county, Missouri, and there he grew up and was educated, attending the common schools and helping support the family. At the age of twenty-two he came to Dawes county, driving from Valentine with a team, spending the nights camped out along the road. Upon landing here he located on section 33, township 32, range 50, and at once went to work to build up a home and farm. He put up a log cabin, and started with a very small capital. His place was wild prairie land, and entirely unimproved, but he stuck to it and succeeded in building it up in good shape, and made money. He went through the usual pioneer experiences, and many times met with severe losses and discouragements, but never gave up, and is now the proud possessor of a fine four hundred and eighty-acre farm, improved in good shape. This is located on Indian creek, and he cultivates seventy-five acres, having the balance in pasture and hay land for his stock, running a large number of cattle and horses each year.

Mr. Buchanan is a Republican in politics.

THOMAS A. McKEOWN.

The farming community of Rock county has an able representative in the gentleman above named, who thoroughly understands all that is essential to success in Nebraska agriculture, and has won a pronounced success in all his grain and stock enterprises in the state. It has not been the result of accident with him that things go right but because he has studied and understood what was required and then has never hesitated to work and wait until things came right, as they always do to the man who is willing to pay the price.

Mr. McKeown was born January 9, 1852, on a farm in Putnam county, Indiana, where his youth and early manhood were familiar with toil and labor. His father, William McKeown, was a farmer, who was born in Scotland, and who came to Canada in 1846, and still later removed to Indiana. He married Miss Eliza Hall, who was of American descent, and a lady of much character. William McKeown and wife when somewhat advanced in years removed to Pottawatomie county, Iowa, where their lives ended.

Thomas A. McKeown left the shelter of the paternal home when about nineteen years of age, and struck out into the great world to find for himself the path to honor and wealth. He journeyed into the far west, and visited Nevada and Utah, but after a wide inspection of the mountain and valley country, decided to locate in Rock county, which he was sure would presently become the location of a very large population. In 1880 he took a pre-emption claim in section 11, township 30, range 17, and this desirable tract of land has been his home to the present time. Beginning under the simple conditions of pioneering days, for two years his only home was a sod shanty, which was finally replaced by a frame structure, the lumber used in its building being hauled from Stuart. Here for about seven years the young settler "batched" and hoped for better days, which finally came when Miss Mina Kirkland consented to become his wife, November 28, 1887. Her father, Samuel Kirkland, lived in Iowa, where he was well known among the old settlers of that state. Mr. and Mrs. McKeown are the parents of three children, Mack, Charles and Frank.

In 1888 their house was destroyed by fire, and while the blow was heavy they felt that they were fortunate to escape uninjured. The McKeowns have since built a fine residence on the farm, and regard themselves as most comfortably situated. The home farm consists of about eleven hundred and twenty acres of Elkhorn valley land, and is largely devoted to stock raising and shipping hay. In 1905 he wintered a hundred head of stock, and sold thirty-seven hundred and fifty dollars' worth of hay, and this beside grain and stock farming as ordinarily followed.

Mr. McKeown is a man of more than ordinary standing. In political relations he is a Republican, and in 1902 he was a member of the county board. Deeply interested in all vital public questions, he is known as a gentleman of the most excellent repute. Of the lodges, he holds membership in the Masons at Bassett and the Odd Fellows and Workmen at Newport.

JOHN H. COX.

John H. Cox, prominent in Cheyenne county, Nebraska, as a progressive farmer and successful ranchman, resides on his valuable estate in Chambers precinct. He is well-known to all the residents of that part of the county, having charge of the mail route between the town of Potter and Dye postoffice, being faithful in the performance of this duty, never allowing anything to interfere with the prompt delivery of the mails. He has a pleasant home, a new dwelling built in 1907, on the table land, the former residence having been on the lower elevation of the "draw."

Mr. Cox, a son of William A. J. and Elizabeth (Burton) Cox, was born in Jennings county, Indiana, February 15, 1862, and lived there until he was seven years old, at which time his parents moved to Lynn county, Kansas, and remained there for about eight years, when they went to Woodson county, living until 1899 in Neosho Falls, Kansas. At that time our subject came to Cheyenne county, where he worked as a stone mason and also farmed part of the time. He was for six years connected with a general merchandise establishment at Sidney, part of the time as proprietor and part of the time working as a salesman. In 1905 he took a Kincaid claim on section 30, township 13, range 52, which is his present home. Here he has about sixty acres cultivated, raising good crops of small grain, and runs a small bunch of cattle. He has his place well improved, and is now making extensive improvements as noted above, and for the time he has lived here has done remarkably well.

Mr. Cox was married to Miss Bertie Burton, at Neosho Falls, Kansas, June 20, 1886. Mrs. Cox is a native of Indiana, born April 3, 1871, and with her parents was among the pioneers in Kansas, where the parents still reside. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cox, Viola and Clara, both charming young ladies.

Politically Mr. Cox is a Republican. At present he is serving as school treasurer of his district. He is a member of the Potter Lodge of Maccabees.

JONATHAN L. COON.

The gentleman above mentioned is a prominent resident of Garfield county, where he has been active in all affairs of his locality for many years past. He has been financially successful since coming to this region, in 1877, and is considered one of the leading citizens of his county, highly respected by all who know him. Mr. Coon resides in Burwell at the present time, owns a nice home there and is one of the good farmers there.

Mr. Coon was born in New York state, February 12, 1840. His father, Charles Coon, was a native of that state, of Scotch-English descent, who married Phoebe Lamphear, born and raised in New York. When our subject was an infant the family left New York and emigrated to Wisconsin, where they took up a homestead and remained for seventeen years, then removed to Minnesota, locating in Freeborn county, and lived there up to May, 1877. Jonathan grew up in the northern country, following farm work during his young manhood, attending the country schools during the winter months and assisting his father at other times. At the age of thirty-seven Mr. Coon left Minnesota and came to Nebraska, landing in this state the 1st day of July of 1877. He settled in Valley county and filed on a pre-emption, on which he proved up, and later bought more land adjoining this. He was proprietor of two hundred and sixty acres of good land, located a few miles northeast of Burwell, where he superintended his farming operations, although he had retired from active work on his farms, and lived in Burwell. Lately he traded the above described property for his home in Burwell.

Mr. Coon was married on December 12, 1863, to Louise R. Maine, a native of New York state. Mr. and Mrs. Coon are the parents of two children, namely: Clara, wife of R. B. Miller, now living in Burwell, and William W. Coon, residing at Grand Island, Nebraska, with his family. Mrs. Coon died April 1, 1902, deeply mourned by her husband and family, and many kind neighbors and friends. In 1903 our subject was married the second time to Abbie C. Cornell, born and raised in Maine, of English-Scotch descent, a most intelligent and cultured lady. Mr. and Mrs. Coon are active members of the Baptist church, and highly esteemed by the community in which they live. Mr. Coon has never held office, although he takes a commendable interest in local affairs, voting the Independent ticket as his conscience convicts him, for the best man and for the general good of the masses.

C. R. CROFT.

C. R. Croft, of Farmers township, Franklin county, Nebraska, who is one of the progressive farmers of that locality, is a gentleman of firm characteristics whose high standing as a true and worthy citizen is well merited. Mr. Croft operates a fine farm of seven hundred and twenty acres, and engages extensively in stock raising, succeeding in his work along these lines to a marked degree.

Mr. Croft is a native of Iroquois county, Illinois, born in 1880, and is a son of Marshall Croft, who was born in Marshall county, Illinois, now residing in Naponee, Franklin county, Nebraska retired from the active work of a farm and ranch, on which he has spent a long and useful life. The father of Marshall Croft, James Croft, came from England in 1830, homesteading in Marshall county, Illinois, where the family lived for many years. Our subject's father was raised there, and married there. When our subject was a child of three years his parents moved to Nebraska, purchasing land in section 29, Farmers township, Franklin county, and as he was the only son, lived there together until 1900, when he took charge of the ranch and started in the ranching and stock business on his own account. He feeds, buys and ships about two thousand cattle and hogs each year, and besides this raises a large number which he ships also. He ships each week from Naponee about two car loads of stock, and is one of the best judges of his business in the locality. He devotes his entire attention to his work, and is building up a good farm and home by his good business ability and perseverance. He farms a large part of his ranch, and raises alfalfa exclusively, which is fed on the farm.

In 1900 Mr. Croft married Miss Lou Ray, daughter of John S. Ray, a sketch of whom appears in this work. To Mr. and Mrs. Croft have been born one son, Marshall.

MORRISON R. SCRIPTER.

The gentleman whose name appears at the head of this sketch is one of the acknowledged influential and successful ranchers of Keith county, Nebraska, and was one of the earliest pioneers of the state. He lives on a fine ranch in section 32, township 16, range 41, where he carries on a large and growing stock business.

Mr. Scripser is a native of the Empire state, being born in St. Lawrence county on a farm January 25, 1840, and was from an old family of the Knickerbocker state, that had lived in the east for several generations. His parents, Isaac H. and Jane (Day) Scripser, were farmers by occupation and were honored citizens of their community. When our subject was twelve years of age the family came west to Sangamon county, Illinois, locating twelve miles west of Springfield, where they were among the early pioneers. Here Morrison Scripser was reared, receiving his education and assisting his parents with the labors on the farm. In September, 1862, he enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and saw service in the south with the Army of the Cumberland. He served his country for three years, participating in many famous engagements of the Civil war. He was at the siege of Vicksburg and at Jackson, Mississippi, was in Arkansas and followed General Price through Missouri. He was in the battle of Nashville and participated in eighteen hard-fought battles, but he was fortunate in that he received only one small wound during his service. After the war was over he returned to Illinois, where he remained for about four years, going thence to Atchison county, Missouri, where his father settled in business. Here our subject remained until 1886, when he moved to Nebraska, settling as a pioneer near Red Cloud, in Webster county. Beginning with 1872 he had from time to time lived for varying periods in this state. He saw many discouraging times during these early days—witnessed the terrible grasshopper scourge which devastated the country for several years and lost several successive crops from various causes. In 1888 he removed to Deuel county, remaining there for about two years on a tree claim. In 1890 he moved to his present farm in Keith county, where he has resided ever since, building up one of the best ranch homes in the territory. There were but few improvements on the place when he came to it—a small stone house with a frame part, but in spite of the drouth and hard times our subject has worked his way to success and competency. He has four hundred and eighty acres of good land and devotes his attention to stock raising and farming. His farm contains a fine grove of forest trees, nearly all planted by his own hand. There are also a large number of plum, crab-apple and cherry trees and an abundance of smaller fruit. One hundred acres of the tract are irrigable from Clear creek, which flows an abundant stream through the place, fed by never-failing springs in the sand hills to the north. His house, built of concrete, is a fine one, of pleasing architecture, convenient and homelike. A view of the home with its magnificent groves and rugged, picturesque rock surroundings is presented on another page of our work.

Morrison R. Scripser was married March 18, 1880, to Miss Henrietta Cliff, who was born in Doniphan county, Kansas, and raised in Fremont county, Iowa. Her parents, John and Nancy (Dameron) Cliff, natives of Kentucky, were old settlers in the west, living along the river in Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska and Kansas, where the father was engaged in boating and rafting on the big muddy stream. Mr. and Mrs. Scripser are the parents of the following children: Harper C., married and living eighteen miles north of Kearney; Beulah, wife of Frederick Bennett, ranching in Keith county; Leora A., deceased; Irene, teaching in the Keystone schools; Morrison, Earl and Leotta.

RESIDENCE OF M. R. SCRIPPER,

During his long residence in the county Mr. Scriptor has been active in public matters and has efficiently held various offices. He has been especially interested in educational affairs, helping to establish the schools of the neighborhood and serving as a member of the school board. By his conscientious advocacy of right principles in both public and private business our subject has won a high place in the regard of his associates. Since attaining his majority Mr. Scriptor has steadily supported the Republican party.

L. R. Speer, residing on section 6, township 29, range 45, is well known throughout the community in which he has chosen his home as an industrious and energetic farmer and worthy citizen of Sheridan county, Nebraska.

Mr. Speer was born in Amboy, Lee county, Illinois, in 1868. His father, Z. C. Speer, was born and reared in New Jersey, and was a carpenter by trade. He married Miss Martha Van Ness, of German descent, and they had a family of four children, of whom our subject was the third member. At the age of sixteen years he came west and located in Chicago, working in the Pullman car shops for two years, and on different farms in that vicinity for another couple of years, and in 1889 came to Cherry county, Nebraska, and took up a homestead in section 15, township 32, range 39, and held it up until the dry years came on, then was unable to make things go right, so sold out his holdings for five hundred and fifty dollars, which he considered a very good price. He farmed there for several years, his place consisting of a quarter section, and after selling moved to Hay Springs, where he worked for one summer on the railroad, then clerked in a store up to 1906, when he moved to his present place. This consists of eight hundred acres, well stocked with horses and cattle. He works in partnership with Mr. Bray, of Hay Springs, who owns the ranch. He is sorry he sold his first homestead, as it would have been worth a good deal of money by this time, but will either buy another farm or take up a homestead in the near future. He likes this country better than any place he has yet been, and intends to remain as long as he wants to live in the country.

Mr. Speer was married in 1892 to Miss Bertha Richardson, born in Butler county, Nebraska, in 1874. Mrs. Speer is a daughter of Marcus L. and Clara Spain Richardson, born in Ohio, who settled in Butler county in the early days of that region. Mr. and Mrs. Speer have a family of five children, named as follows: Ruth, born in 1893; Estella, 1895; Mabel, 1901; Fred, 1903, and Harold, in 1906. Mr. Speer takes a commendable interest in all matters of local importance in his community, but has never had much time to devote to taking an active part in politics. Politically he is a Republican.

HAMILTON GETTY.

Should the reader ask for the name of a representative old settler and citizen of Phelps county, Nebraska, a man who came in mature life to breast the storms of the wilderness and hammer a home and fortune out of adversity, give him that of Hamilton Getty, the subject of this review.

Mr. Getty is a native of Antrim county, Ireland, who came to this country in 1859. He came to this state in 1884 and homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres in section 26, Union township, and afterwards bought one hundred and sixty acres adjoining. This he farmed for seventeen years with great success. In 1891 his wheat crop showed a yield of thirty-five bushels to the acre, and in 1892 it was forty bushels per acre, and his corn crop sixty-five. He always fed a large number of hogs, considering them a good investment, as this locality is peculiarly adapted for breeding with success. Before coming to this county, shortly after landing in New York, he obtained employment in training high-class trotting horses. He was very fond of caring for these animals, was very successful in the management of them and enjoyed the work of caring for them. He followed this business for some time, then came west to McLean county, Illinois, when he bought land and farmed for nineteen years, and from there he struck out for Nebraska, where he has since made his home.

Mr. Getty cast his first vote in this country in New York, voting for Abraham Lincoln, who was a candidate for the presidency the first time. He was married April 14, 1863, to Miss Ellen Powers, of New York city, also a native of Ireland. They have a family of six children, all of whom have received splendid educations and are now filling honorable places in life. They are named as follows: Annie Jane, now Mrs. D. J. Davis, of Loomis, whose husband is engineer of the Loomis flouring mills; Josephine, married to Rev. E. M. Johnson, professor in the college at Bethany, Nebraska; Lillian B., teacher of shorthand and typewriting in the Walla Walla Business College, in Washington; W. A. Getty, a traveling salesman, residing at Lincoln, Nebraska; H. N. Getty, locomotive engineer on the Union Pacific railway, and J. E. Getty, a farmer of Union township, living on his father's farm. A sister of Mr. Getty, Mrs. Richard Morrison, mother of Robert M. Morrison, of whom a sketch appears in this volume, resides in Loomis.

Mr. Getty has retired from active business and enjoys a pleasant home surrounded by a large circle of friends in Loomis, Nebraska. In politics Mr. Getty states he is an Abraham Lincoln Republican and a Bryan Democrat.

PAUL SERRES.

Paul Serres, one of the earliest settlers of Sioux county, coming here in 1887, is a prosperous and highly esteemed ranchman located on section 5, township 33, range 54. He has accumulated valuable possessions by his own work and judicious management, and is one of the truly self-made men of that region.

Mr. Serres was born in Luxemburg, Germany, in 1842, and was reared on a farm. He received a good practical training, and at the end of twenty-five years came to America, making his first settlement in Wisconsin, where he followed farm work. He was married there in 1877 to Miss Mary Friece, a native of that state, born in 1857. Mrs. Serres is the daughter of Peter and Mary Annie (Conrath) Friece, early settlers in Wisconsin, and well known farmers of that region. The young couple started a home and lived in Wisconsin for about ten years, and then came direct to Sioux county, Nebraska, where they settled on a homestead, building a log house with sod roof, and spent many years in that dwelling, but later put up a good residence, gradually improving their place. The first years were hard ones to them, as they were unable to raise any crops to amount to anything, and after trying hard to get along Mr. Serres became discouraged and had fully made up his mind to pull up stakes and try it some other place, but as he was on the point of loading up their possessions in a covered wagon and abandoning their farm, he determined to start again and trying stock raising, so he took an additional homestead in section 5, township 32, range 54, and got together a few cattle, and this was the beginning of his success. He now owns a ranch of over nineteen hundred and twenty acres, and besides his homestead, two sons are proprietors of six hundred and forty acres each in the same locality. The ranch is built up and improved in good shape, and there is a splendid water supply, two creeks running through the land. Every appointment of Mr. Serres' ranch shows the most careful management and good business judgment, and all has been accomplished by his own efforts, from a very small beginning.

Mr. Serres' family consists of himself, wife and nine children, as follows: Joe, Mary A., Herman, Theresa, Kate, John, Barbara, Louis and Paul. Three sons, John, Herman and Louis, died when young children.

In political sentiment Mr. Serres is a Democrat, but he does not give much attention to public affairs, nor seek public preferment, although he is always ready and willing to assist in every way possible any movement started for the good of his community.

EUGENE L. HUTCHISON.

Eugene L. Hutchison, a successful farmer of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, resides on section 6, township 33, range 24, and has been identified with the history of the development of western Nebraska from its beginning.

Mr. Hutchison was born in Calhoun county, Michigan, October 4, 1856, and in 1858 went with his parents to Wisconsin, living for ten years in Walworth county and in Juneau county two years, when they removed to Carroll county, Illinois, where they resided for the next decade. His parents came from New York, the father being a wagon-maker in his early days, and later a farmer. Our subject was the seventh in a family of twelve children, and when twenty-two years old left home and came to Nebraska, settling in Buffalo county. There he bought railroad land and started a farm, "batching it" for several years. He built up a good place, and did fairly well, but in 1884 rented his farm and moved to Keya Paha county, where he took a pre-emption, which is his present farm. He was unable to prove up on it, so took out homestead papers and now has a farm of one hundred and seventy-one acres, besides some leased school land. This is all well improved with buildings, fences, etc., and he runs forty cattle, the same number of horses and about sixty hogs, cultivating eighty acres, on which he raises good crops, having sufficient pasture for his stock. When first coming here he had a hard time to make a living, and in 1893-'94 he lost all his crops and was compelled to work out by the day, hauling cordwood to Fort Niobrara, fording the river with his load, to make enough to support his family; also hauled bones from the prairies to Valentine.

Mr. Hutchison was married in Loup City, Nebraska, November 26, 1881, to Miss Rebecca Roberts, whose parents were early settlers in Sherman county, where she grew up. Her father, James Roberts, was a soldier in the Union army. The mother was Susannah Ballard. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hutchison, named as follows: James R., Alice, Effa, Lee, Blanche, Lawrence, Ballard, Joseph and Neva, most of whom are settled near their parents' home.

Mr. Hutchison is a strong Democrat, and has always voted that ticket. He has at various times held local office, and always has been an active worker in school affairs.

ORLANDO M. GUNNELL.

Among the very old settlers of western Nebraska we mention the gentleman whose name heads this review. Since locating here many years ago he has done much in the way of helping to develop the country, and is one of the successful and prosperous business men of Keith county at the present time. He is engaged in the general merchandise business at Paxton, and is a leading citizen and active in local affairs.

Orlando M. Gunnell was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, August 8, 1849. His father, John Gunnell, a native of Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, was a farmer in Illinois, settling in Rock Island in 1852. He came to York county, Nebraska, in 1876 and moved on to Keith county in 1893, where he died twelve years later. He married Clarissa Mitchell, a native of Fayette county, Pennsylvania. She lives at present at Benedict, York county, with a daughter, Mrs. Charles Wonderly. Our subject was raised on a farm in Illinois, following that occupation during his boyhood, also learning the plow maker's trade, at which he worked in Rock Island and later at Moline, Illinois. In 1884 he came to York county, Nebraska, with his family, where he farmed for one year, then located at Stromsburg, engaging in the livery business for five years. In 1890 he moved to Big Springs, and established a lumber and grain business, remaining at that for about six years, but from 1893 to 1896 trade was not very profitable owing to the hard times in that vicinity. He disposed of this business and settled in Paxton, where he opened a store of general merchandise, and has done exceedingly well since coming here, having built up a good patronage throughout the surrounding country. He has a well equipped store, and a full line of general goods.

On May 25, 1881, while living in Rock Island, Illinois, Mr. Gunnell was married to Miss Catherine Johnston, whose father, William A. Johnston, a shoemaker, came to America from Ireland about 1851 or 1852 when a young man. He plied his trade in Philadelphia for a time and then came to Rock Island. Her mother, Mary Kane in maidenhood, was also born in the north of Ireland. Both parents were Protestant Irish and both died in Rock Island. Mr. and Mrs. Gunnell have one child, Clarissa, born at Rock Island, Illinois, August 27, 1882. She is now the wife of John Clair Cox, holding a responsible position with the Colorado Southern railroad, at Fort Collins, Colorado.

Mr. Gunnell is a strong Republican in politics, a member of the Odd Fellows and the Masonic order, holding membership in the blue lodge at Stromsburg, the Chapter and the Commandery at North Platte and the Shrine at Omaha.

JOHN HENRY FRANK.

Among the most respected and worthy of the old settlers of Loup county is John Henry Frank, who came to Nebraska in 1890 and has ever since identified himself with the interests of that grand western state.

Mr. Frank was born in Jackson county, Iowa, April 4, 1861, being the son of George W. and Mary S. (Wilcox) Frank. The father was born in Montgomery county, New York, where he remained until early manhood and then, in 1857, came to Iowa with the early pioneers, serving in the Civil war in Company F, Thirty-first Iowa Infantry. The mother was a native of Jackson county, Iowa.

John Henry Frank and Miss Ida M. Burlison were united in marriage November 12, 1887. Mrs. Frank's father, Charles Burlison, was a pioneer settler of Iowa, saw active service in the Civil war in the same regiment in which Mr. Frank's father served, and thus the elder men were old-time chums and comrades. Mrs. Frank's mother's maiden name was Mary Little, a native of Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Frank have had two children to brighten their home—Ralph S. and Viola Pearl.

When Mr. Frank brought his family to Loup county he found the most primitive pioneer conditions. The nearest railroad towns were Burwell and Broken Bow, but he had come to found a home and he went to work with a strong will. For six years he rented land in both Loup and Custer counties. He had almost nothing to start with—no team nor household goods, two trunks and six dollars and fifty cents in money and a wife and child were all his possessions. But these were enough when coupled with hard work and a strong determination to win. He got along, worked all the time, fought prairie fires many times to save his property and experienced all the rigors of pioneer life until finally he won out and now has a fine farm and ranch of six hundred and eighty acres. In 1897 he located a homestead on section 34, township 21, range 20, on which there were twelve acres plowed and a sod house with no roof. This became the start of his fine farm, on which he now has a fine house, also barn and sheds, the land being fenced and cross fenced. Mr. Frank has made a good home and is entitled to the competency he has attained as the result of constant and intelligent effort. He has done his share in developing the country as a pioneer settler.

HENRY I. DANTON.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is a well known citizen and very successful farmer with a pleasant home on section 22, township 24, range 50, in Box Butte county. He is a man of untiring energy and enjoys an enviable reputation as a public-spirited citizen and industrious agriculturist, who has placed himself in the front ranks of the well-to-do residents of that region, and who has acquired a valuable estate by his perseverance and good management.

Mr. Danton was born in England. His father, Isaac Danton, was also born and reared in England, following the trade of stonemason all his lifetime. He married Elizabeth Langdon, also born and bred in that country. When our subject was but one year of age the family left England and emigrated to the United States, and on landing in New York immediately went west to Wisconsin, where they located on a farm near Milwaukee. In 1875 they came to Nebraska, at first settling in Saline county, and lived there for about three years, then moved to York county, where Henry grew to manhood and the family saw many pioneer experiences while living in that region. In 1886 our subject came to Box

Butte county and filed on a homestead in the sand hills, twenty miles from Alliance, and worked on the railroad in that vicinity during a good part of the time, also worked in the silver mines of Colorado. Mr. Danton kept on improving his farm and bought additional land as he became able, and got into the ranching business on quite an extensive scale, and now has a well developed ranch consisting of nineteen hundred and twenty acres, all good land, and has built all good farm buildings on the ranch. Soon after arriving here, after filing on his homestead, he had just fifty cents in money in his pocket, and from this start he has accumulated a nice property by dint of hard labor and strict attention to business. He has witnessed all the changes that have taken place in the vicinity since its early settlement, and has done his full share in helping to develop the region, establish schools, etc.

Mr. Danton was married in 1894 to Miss Delia Steyer, born in Pennsylvania in 1870. Her father, George Steyer, was a farmer all his life, son of Absalom Steyer, a well known pioneer in the eastern states, who fought with General Washington in the Revolutionary war and had a brilliant record as a soldier. Our subject and his good wife are the parents of six children, who are named as follows: Chester I., Roy, George, Wayne, Anna and Frederick Archie. The family occupy a pleasant home and are well liked by all in their community as congenial neighbors and worthy citizens.

JOHN N. SCHERER.

John N. Scherer, whose biography forms an interesting page in the history of the early settlement of Nebraska, is a resident of Court House Rock precinct, Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county, where he has become widely and favorably known. He has developed a fine ranch there and is one of the energetic and progressive agriculturists of his community, where he enjoys a pleasant home.

Mr. Scherer was born seven miles north of Hillsboro, in Montgomery county, Illinois, March 15, 1859, a son of John H. and Nancy (Peters) Scherer, grew up there, attending the country schools and passing through the usual experiences of the country boy in those days and remained in his native vicinity until 1887. In 1886 he made a trip to western Nebraska, and being favorably impressed with the country filed a homestead entry in section 4, township 16, range 49, and also on a tree claim. The following year, as above noted, he brought his family to the west and has been a citizen of the country ever since. In 1889 the parents came west, and since the death of his father in 1896 our subject has secured title to the old homestead and in 1907 enlarged and greatly improved the dwelling, making a finely finished two-story home. A large concrete barn adds to the comfort of the stock and to the looks of the place. One of the three large reservoirs on the ranch is in front of the dwelling, making a beautiful lake and rural view. We present an engraving of the place, known as the Mud Springs ranch, on another page. The mother has filed on a homestead in the same section, but makes her residence most of the time in Sidney, where she owns a commodious town house.

Mr. Scherer is the owner of a fine ranch of eight hundred acres, of which he cultivates eighty, raising good crops of small grain, corn, etc. He uses a part of his ranch for stock, having plenty of hay and pasture land. His herd consists of one hundred head of cattle and thirty horses. He has a good set of farm buildings and all improvements. The ranch has a number of living springs, which furnish a fine supply of good water for all purposes, and from these come the name of the place, which is called the Mud Springs ranch. Since coming to this ranch Mr. Scherer has done exceedingly well, and although he has passed through some hard times in building up a valuable estate, he has a fine property to show for his efforts, and is counted among the successful and prosperous ranchmen and farmers of his locality.

Mr. Scherer was married in Montgomery county, Illinois, on January 1, 1884, to Miss Etta Lipe, a native of that county, and daughter of Noah and Elizabeth (Weller) Lipe. They have a family of three children, namely: Pearl, wife of M. M. Davis, residing in Sioux county; Leitha Fay and Ralph L., both at home.

In politics Mr. Scherer is a Republican and is of active public spirit, a gentleman of the strictest integrity of word and deed, who has a host of friends in his community. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at Sidney.

ADAM GUNDERSON.

The well regulated farms of Potter precinct contribute largely to the wealth of Cheyenne county. The gentleman whose name introduces this review is proprietor of a fine estate in section 12, township 14, range 52, is one of the substantial and highly esteemed citizens of his locality and has aided materially in its growth and development.

Mr. Gunderson was born in the village of Eskow, Norway, on October 20, 1847. He grew up in his native village and followed the occupation of farming and lumbering during his young manhood. In 1869 he left home and took passage July 10 from Christiana to Leeds, Scotland, proceeding thence to Glasgow, whence he sailed in an Anchor Line steamer, and after a stormy passage of nineteen days landed in New York. He came directly to Omaha and secured work at Florence, where he followed farming and logging on the river for about three years. He next came to Cheyenne county, arriving here on August 5, 1872, and for four years worked in the track department of the Union Pacific railroad, being promoted to a foremanship within nine months. For ten years he lived on section 2, township 14, range 52, without the formality of making a regular entry. In 1886 he filed on a homestead located in section 12, township 14, range 52, which is his present farm. He had a hard time in getting along during the first few years, suffering all the hardships and privations that fell to the lot of the early settlers in this section, but he never thought of giving up the struggle, and by dint of hard work and sturdy determination that marks the courage of the brave Norwegian emigrant to this country, has succeeded in accumulating a nice property. He is now owner of nine hundred and sixty acres, situated on Lodgepole creek, of which he has about one hundred acres under cultivation, all irrigated and a large portion is used for pasture and hay meadow. He runs about two hundred head of cattle and keeps fifteen horses for farming and domestic purposes. He is also owner and runs a fine flour and feed mill, which is located on his premises, the motive power being supplied by water from Lodgepole creek. To this, in 1908, he added a dynamo, installing electric lights in his residence, one of the finest and most substantial stone ranch houses in the valley. The stables, granary and other outbuildings are also of stone construction, making one of the best equipped establishments in the county. A view of this excellent place is to be found in our illustrated pages.

Our subject was married at Potter, Nebraska, November 20, 1873, to Miss Mary Rasmussen, who is a native of Denmark, born in 1854. She came to the United States in 1871 and located in Nebraska the same year. Mr. and Mrs. Gunderson have a family of nine children, named as follows: Robert, Gustave, Charles, Albena, Elmer, Anna, Emma, Walter and Myrtle. The four eldest are settled in establishments of their own, and the rest live on the home farm with their parents. In political sentiment Mr. Gunderson is a strong Republican and in religion adheres to the faith of the Lutheran church.

REV. JOHN P. GARDINER.

Through exceptionally good management and persistent hard labors the gentleman here named has acquired a well developed farm and is now enabled to enjoy the comforts of a modern farm home. He resides on section 2, township 33, range 35, and is numbered among the successful agriculturists and worthy citizens of Cherry county.

Mr. Gardiner is a native of Canada, born July 16, 1849. His father, Robert Gardiner, was of English birth, married in Ireland to Miss Matilda Becket, of Scotch-English descent. Our subject was the seventh member in a family of eleven children, and came to the United States with his parents when a young lad. When he was nine years old his father died, and after this he remained on their farm in Dallas county, Iowa, assisting his mother up to the time of her remarriage, and then he cared for the three younger children for three years. At the age of twenty-one years he went to Colorado Springs and spent one summer, then took up a claim in Greeley county, Nebraska. After a time he disposed of this and moved into Lincoln, where he lived for three years, following ministerial work in the pulpit of the Seventh Day Baptist. He first struck Cherry county in 1894, locating on a homestead, and has remained on this place up to the present time. He has added to his farm until it now comprises sixteen hundred acres, all lying next to the Niobrara river. Here he engages in stock raising and farming about six hundred acres of tillable land, on a part of which he has a good meadow of timothy hay. He keeps about one hundred head of cattle, a number of horses and sheep, and has at times a drove of two hundred hogs. He has a well improved place, where he has built up a fine home here. Fronting on the Niobrara river, the farm is well supplied with good water and a bountiful supply of wild fruit, etc.

On March 8, 1881, Mr. Gardiner was married to Miss Nora Weeks, born in St. Clair, Michigan, in 1863. With her mother and one brother she moved to Petersburg, Boone county, Nebraska, in 1878. Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner have a family of ten children, namely: James R., Myrtle M., Dora, Rosa (deceased), Carl, Lulu (deceased), Erma, Ralph, Emogene and Bernice, eight born and reared in Nebraska; Rosa and Lulu died in infancy.

Mr. Gardiner takes a deep interest in local and especially school affairs but has never held any office. He is a Republican, but is not a strict party man, voting for the best man every time.

JOHN W. ABBOTT.

The subject of this review, J. W. Abbott, is well and favorably known through Lincoln county, Nebraska, as an enterprising and prosperous business man of Hershey, where he has resided for the past several years.

Mr. Abbott is a native of Prince Edward Island, Dominion of Canada, and was born in 1871. His father, Theodore Abbott, came from England and his mother, Jessie Farquharson, is a native of Prince Edward Island, and sister of the Hon. Donald Farquharson, at one time premier of that province and a prominent member of the Dominion parliament. Our subject was reared in Canada and in 1889 came to the States, where he spent some years in traveling over the country, then came to Nebraska and settled in Hershey in 1891, being employed as agent and operator for the Union Pacific Railway. He held this position up to 1893, making this his headquarters, and then went farther west, traveling all over the western part of the United States. In 1900 he returned to Hershey, and was one of the organizers of the Bank of Lincoln County, being elected as cashier of that institution, at the same time engaging in the real estate and insurance business, in which he has been very successful. Under his management the bank has prospered and is one of the most reliable establishments in this part of Nebraska. Mr. E. F. Seeberger, of North Platte, is president of the institution. The town of Hershey has grown wonderfully in the past few years, owing to several large ranches in the locality having been cut up into small farms and sold to men who have gone into the sugar beet culture very extensively, this industry having made great progress in Lincoln county. Fully fifty farmers have located near the town of Hershey during the past two years, and this has been the means of increasing business of all kinds in mostly all lines, the trade having quadrupled in that time. There are about two thousand acres of sugar beets under cultivation near this town at the present time. The Burlington & Missouri railway has surveyed its lines to within one-half mile north of Hershey, and real estate values have gone up accordingly. All the country north of Hershey is well irrigated, and land sells at seventy-five dollars per acre. The farmers are able to obtain five dollars per ton for their beets, and fifteen tons per acre is an average yield.

Mr. Abbott was married to Myrtle A. Caine, a native of Kansas, and has one child, Charles T. Abbott.

NELS NORMAN.

Nels Norman, a prosperous and highly respected farmer of Dawes county, Nebraska, has a valuable estate in section 9, township 32, range 50. He has gained this property by good management and strict attention to the work in every detail, and is well known as a leading old settler and worthy citizen of his community.

Mr. Norman was born in Osterjotland, Sweden, in 1847. His parents were born, lived and died in Sweden, following farm work all their lives, and our subject was raised on a farm, where he learned to do all kinds of hard work, which fitted him for the struggles of later life in a new country. At the age of twenty-two he left home and came to America. After landing in New York city he came to Chicago, where he remained for a time, then drifted to the lumber woods of Michigan, where he worked during one winter. He next was employed on the railroad in Missouri for a year, and later was one year in Iowa, following farm work. In 1871 he returned to Chicago, where he was married to Miss Charlotte Boo, also born in Sweden, who came to this country in 1869. After his marriage Mr. Norman worked in Chicago for about nine years, being employed by an ice company, the firm of Griffin & Conley. About the year 1880 Mr. Norman went to Iowa and there worked on the railway for one year, then came to Wayne county, Nebraska, where he farmed for a short time. He moved to Holt county in 1883, and located in Dawes county two years later, in 1885, driving from Holt county, and camping out along the road at night during the trip. He brought with him two cows and a plug team to start with, settling on section 9, where he built a log house. He went through the drouth periods on that place, and met with many losses, and in 1901 moved to section 4. Here he has good buildings, house, barns, sheds, fences, etc., and plenty of good running water the year around, Indian creek running through his farm. His farm consists of nine hundred and sixty acres, and he also owns six hundred and forty acres lying two miles west of Whitney. He engages in stock raising extensively, running three hundred and fifty head of cattle and a few horses. His place is well supplied with timber, and he has a good orchard, and all kinds of wild fruit, etc.

Mr. Norman's family consists of eleven children, namely: Charles; Edward and Pete, twins; Hilma, Elmer, Ben and Willie, twins; Betsey, Tilda, Harry and Cal.

GEORGE A. SMITH.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is numbered among the old-time settlers in western Nebraska, where he has spent many years of his life in building up a home and an enviable reputation as a successful business man. Mr. Smith, by his faithful efforts to improve his circumstances and advance the growth of his locality, has placed himself among the prosperous and worthy citizens of Long Pine, where he now resides.

Mr. Smith was born at Yonkers, Westchester county, New York, in 1842. His father, Michael Smith, was born in England, a marine engineer by trade, who came to America when a young man of twenty-two years of age, and his mother was a native of New Jersey, born of English parents. In a family of nine children our subject was the fourth member, and he was obliged to strike out for himself at the age of ten years. When he was thirteen years old he obtained employment on a farm in Wisconsin and worked there for five years, then enlisted in Company F, Fifth Wisconsin Infantry.

He was with the Army of the Potomac in the Peninsula campaign, which included the battle of Fair Oaks and the seven-day fight. He received a wound which disabled him so that he was discharged in September, 1863. He was in the thick of the fight at Shenandoah Valley and was wounded five times. After leaving the army service he returned to Wisconsin, where he learned the blacksmith trade, and for twenty years followed this work, remaining in Wisconsin for three years, then going to Wyoming, where he worked for different stage companies at shoeing horses. He went back to Wisconsin in 1871 and worked as a blacksmith for six years, then came to Nebraska as a pioneer, still working at his trade. In 1882 he moved to Long Pine and opened up a lumber yard, the first ever started in the town, and ran it for a year, then sold out and located on a ranch fourteen miles southwest of Long Pine. He followed the ranching business for two years. In 1895 Mr. Smith and a son opened a large general store in Long Pine, and have run this store ever since, building up a good trade and having a complete and up-to-date stock of general merchandise. Mr. Smith was married in 1874 to Miss Alicia Chester, born in Canada and raised in Wisconsin. Her father, William Chester, was a native of the north of Ireland and her mother of old American stock, born in Vermont, she dying in Long Pine in 1906. To Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been born three children, named as follows: L. E., William C. and George A., Jr.

Mr. Smith has always taken an active and leading part in politics and has stumped Brown county for President McKinley. He is well known all over this section of the country, and is prominent in local and county politics, attending all the county conventions as a delegate. He is a staunch Republican.

JAMES M. NELSON AND VERNON A. NELSON.

The gentlemen above mentioned are prominent citizens of Chambers precinct, Cheyenne county, and have made western Nebraska their home for many years past, both being well known as active public-spirited men and always willing and ready to do all in their power to aid in the development of that region.

James M. Nelson was born in Lee county, Illinois, February 9, 1876, and Vernon A. in the same house with his brother, his birthday being February 1st of the following year. When small boys their parents came west with their family, settling in Dodge county, Nebraska, there taking up a farm, on which they lived for eight years. They next moved to Soquel, California, residing there three years, then returned to Nebraska and settled in Kimball county. James Nelson filed on a homestead and Kincaid claim, both in section 32, township 13, range 52, while Vernon secured a like tract in section 14, township 13, range 53. The former place has been transformed from prairie land to a fertile farm with good buildings, ample water supply with immense tanks for irrigation. He cultivates about two hundred acres, raising good crops, and runs about one hundred and fifty head of cattle and fifteen horses.

Vernon A. Nelson owns and carries on a ranch and farm which he took as a Kincaid homestead, containing five hundred and twenty acres, situated in section 14, township 13, range 53, Cheyenne county.

Both parents of our subjects, Lars K. and Anna M. (Dibdale) Nelson, natives of Denmark, are living and still occupy and operate a good ranch in Kimball county.

James M. Nelson was married February 22, 1905, at his father's ranch in Kimball county to Miss Gertrude Rasmussen, a native of Denmark, who came to America as a young girl and was reared and educated in Omaha, South Dakota, Colorado and Nebraska, where her parents from time to time resided. They are now living in Cheyenne county, where they own a good farm situated thirteen miles south of Potter, adjoining the Kimball county line. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson have two children, namely: Alice Evaline and Freda Shirley.

Mr. Nelson is active in local political affairs, and an independent voter, and always standing for the best interests of his community, helping to build the schools and taking an active part in their welfare.

VALENTINE HYDE.

Among the old settlers who are most esteemed for their successful record in the community is the gentleman whose name heads this biographical review. Valentine Hyde claims New York as his native state, having been born on a farm near Buffalo, May 30, 1849. His father was of German nativity, but came to America when he was young, following the shoemaker's trade and proving his love for his adopted land by becoming a Civil war veteran. Valentine Hyde's mother was Susan Holl before she was married and she was a native of Germany.

The subject of this history spent his youthful days in Cattaraugus county, New York, and in the village of Allegheny on the banks of the Allegheny river. He learned his father's trade and worked at it a considerable portion of the time, having a shop of his own in Allegheny up to the year 1884.

The marriage of Valentine Hyde took place in 1871 when he was wedded to Miss Malissa A. Holl. This union has resulted in ten children—Henry, Garrison, Vina (married), Fred, Susan (married), Roy, Guy, Stella, Leo and Jessie. Mrs. Hyde's parents were David Holl, a farmer and lumberman, and Amanda (Garrison) Holl, of Mohawk German descent.

In 1884 the lure of the far west fell upon Mr. Hyde, and gathering his effects together he came with his family and settled in Loup county, Nebraska, locating a prairie homestead on section 19, township 21, range 19. These were early days and the nearest railroad point was North Loup, sixty miles away. Mr. Hyde had but little means to start with, but he had pluck and untiring energy and he kept adding to his possessions every year. He built a sod house, which was usually the first home of every pioneer settler, and commenced improving his land. The succeeding years brought many hardships, the years of drouth being among the hardest to bear, but he always raised a little of various crops and success crowned his efforts in the end. He now owns a fine ranch of six hundred and fifty-eight acres, good buildings and a fine grove of forest trees and a nice orchard of various fruit trees. He cultivates about one hundred acres, the balance of his farm being devoted to pasture for his cattle and his horses.

Mr. Hyde has witnessed the country grow from a wild expanse of raw prairie to a land covered with fine homes and widespread evidences of thrift and prosperity. And in all this advance Mr. Hyde has largely contributed. It marks a great change from the day when deer and antelope were occasionally seen roaming the almost deserted prairies in the vicinity of Mr. Hyde's farm.

GUSTAV F. MITTELSTADT.

Gustav F. Mittelstadt, a worthy representative of an old and honored pioneer family of western Nebraska, is a successful and prosperous farmer and ranchman of Camp Clarke precinct. He is a man of integrity and honest principle, and a leading citizen of his community.

Mr. Mittelstadt was born in Germany December 18, 1863. When he was but three years of age his family, including father and mother, two sons and one daughter, immigrated to the United States, settling in Effingham, Illinois, where the father worked on the railroad and at his trade, that of a blacksmith, remaining there for several years. They went to Iron Mountain, Missouri, next, where Mr. Mittelstadt, Sr., was foreman at the smelting works for five years. Returning to Illinois, they settled at Altamont, engaged in blacksmithing until 1886, when they came to Nebraska, becoming residents of Cheyenne county. Here the father filed on a homestead in section 10, township 13, range 47, the place being situated four miles west and three miles south of Lodgepole, still occupied by the old folks. Gustav lived at home for a few years after coming here, then started out for himself, filing on a tract in the same section with the old folks, on which he proved up in due time, working in Cheyenne in a wagon shop to support himself and help the old folks until he could prove up on his claim. Selling this he bought in section 10, township 20, range 51, in 1897, and now owns two hundred and eighty acres of fine land. A large part of the place is under irrigation, on which he raises grain, hay and alfalfa, of which he has forty acres growing. Besides farming he engages to quite an extent in stock raising, running a large bunch of cattle and horses. He is developing interest in dairying, shipping the cream produced by ten or twelve cows. Mr. Mittelstadt has his place all in first-class condition, improved with a new residence and other good buildings, plenty of good water and windmills, fences and groves, and it is one of the valuable estates in the locality.

In 1888 Mr. Mittelstadt was united in marriage to Miss Freeland Abby at Lodgepole. She was a faithful wife and loving mother, and in 1902 departed this life, leaving five children, who are named as follows: Edith, Elma, Albert, Josephine and Edward. Mr. Mittelstadt was married to Miss Emma Ruepke at Siegel, Illinois, December 25, 1906.

Our subject is a man of active public spirit, taking a commendable interest in all affairs which tend to the benefit of his locality, and in political views is a staunch Democrat. He was reared in the Lutheran church.

NELSON A. GREEN.

Nelson A. Green was born in Janesville, Wisconsin, November 8, 1852, his father being Lucius Green, a native of New York and of Irish stock. The mother, Sarah Miller, was born in New York.

The family came to Iowa in 1855 and became pioneers of Allamakee county, where they remained until after the war. Our subject started out for himself when he was sixteen years of age, spending eight winters in the big woods and for six summers was engaged in rafting the logs from the woods to St. Louis, and many are the stories he relates of life on the river in early days.

In 1885 he came west to Nebraska, locating on his present farm in section 32, township 16, range 41, in Keith county. At that time provisions had to be hauled from Ogallala, thirty miles distant, the trip consuming two days. There being no bridges, the North Platte had to be forded, a dangerous proceeding at times. He started on wild prairie land with no improvements. He put up a small shack and commenced work in earnest. He was fortunate in spite of the years of drouth in the country, losing only one crop, while the other settlers lost several crops. Mr. Green continued improving his land and now has a splendid ranch of three hundred and twenty acres on the bottoms of the North Platte river, two hundred acres of which are irrigated with one hundred and sixty acres in highly productive alfalfa. In 1908 the seed from one fifteen-acre lot of this netted nearly six hundred and fifty dollars. He has a grove of fine trees and two acres of orchard that are hard to equal in the county. We show a view of the home and surroundings on another page that may give some impression of the luxuriance and beauty of his orchard and groves. Ruthton Station, with section house, stockyards and siding, are on his ranch.

Nelson A. Green was married in Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, September 23, 1873, to Miss Mary Burns, whose parents, John and Caroline (Darr) Burns, were natives of Pennsylvania. This union has been blessed with two children: Roy T., who has a ranch of eleven hundred acres in Logan county, Colorado, and Norman D., who is still under the parental roof.

In politics Mr. Green affiliates with the Republican party and has held several local offices, among them assessor and road overseer. Mr. Green has won his way by reason of his industry and his sterling traits of character and has filled a prominent place among the pioneer settlers of the county.

ERNEST T. BANIGAN.

Ernest T. Banigan, well known throughout Cherry county, Nebraska, as an early settler in the western part of the state, lives on section 26, township 33, range 34, where he owns a fine farm and is highly esteemed as a worthy citizen.

Mr. Banigan was born at Lena, Stephenson county, Illinois, November 25, 1867, and came to Hardin county, Iowa, with his parents in his childhood, where he was reared on a farm. His father, Peter Banigan, was born in Ireland, and when one week old sailed for America with his parents, who settled first in Canada, later moving to New York. He married Celestia Seaberry, whose ancestors were among the first settlers in America. Our subject was the third member of a family of six children, and when nineteen years of age started out for himself, having prior to that time been employed as a jockey on the race tracks. He came to Cherry county in 1885, took up a homestead, but was unable to prove up, so he relinquished it and sought employment on one of the many farms of the Boiling Spring flats. In 1901 he took up his present farm and owns a section of good land, farming part of it and keeping a few good horses, but not dealing in stock to any great extent.

Mr. Banigan likes Nebraska as a place of residence and intends to make it his permanent home. Politically our subject is a Republican.

A. J. FALK.

A. J. Falk, an enterprising and successful business man of Holdrege, Nebraska, is one of the leading carpenters and contractors of that city, where he has built up a profitable trade and has established a pleasant and comfortable home.

Mr. Falk was born in Sweden in 1855 and came to the United States when a young man, settling in Goodhue county, Minnesota, in 1867. In 1892 he came west and located in Holdrege, where he has lived ever since with a brief exception. Previous to this, about 1878, he settled on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres located in section 32, Center township, and farmed this land for two years, when he took up his work as a builder, and since then has followed this exclusively. He had learned this trade in Goodhue, Minnesota, where he did a good deal of carpenter work in the locality where he resided. During the past twenty-seven years he has built residences and taken contracts all over Phelps and some in the adjoining counties, and his reputation is of the very best and his work all first-class. For the past several years since residing in Holdrege he has put up many of the finest residences. In 1905 he built sixteen houses here, many of them large, all fitted with modern improvements, both in town and the country.

Mr. Falk was married in 1880 to Miss Ellen Swanson, born in Sweden. He has two children, a son, Frank Falk, holding the position of bookkeeper with the Phelps County Lumber Company, located in Holdrege, and a daughter, Tillie.

Mr. Falk is a member of the Swedish Mission church here, and has filled the office of trustee for some time past. He is an earnest worker in all religious matters, and a man of active public spirit. He does not seek public preferment in political affairs, but gives his whole attention to attending strictly to his business requirements in contracting.

ROBERT HARRISON.

A prominent ranchman and leading citizen is found in the person above mentioned, who is owner of a valuable estate in Sioux county, which he has built up during the past twenty years, going through all the pioneer experiences when first settling in the region. Mr. Harrison has succeeded remarkably well in his ventures along ranching and farming lines, has done his full share in the development of the locality where he chose his home, and is known throughout the county and vicinity as a worthy and substantial citizen.

Robert Harrison was born in Texas, in 1859. His parents were residents of the town of Indianola, Calhoun county, which lies along the gulf of Mexico, and his father followed the sea as an occupation for many years, being captain and pilot on a large ship in southern waters. He married Margaret Smith, of German descent, who died when our subject was a lad of four years. He was reared and educated in Texas, and when he was but seven years of age was obliged to shift for himself, living as best he could, and his father died when he was ten years old. He lived with different families, working for his board and keep, mostly on the ranches in that section of the country, and attended school when he was able, at times when he could not work at home, during the dull seasons, receiving a limited schooling. He began working as a cowboy when but a lad and rode all over the Texas ranges for years, and when but about seventeen trailed cattle from that state to Pine Ridge Agency, South Dakota. After that he worked on the White River range and was appointed foreman of Half Diamond E ranch. Seven years were spent on Chadron creek, in Dawes county, and, in fact, during those years he worked all over this country as a cowboy and ranchman, traveling from South Platte into South Dakota and Wyoming, leading the roughest kind of a life, and passed through many thrilling experiences in following his work.

After the region became more thickly settled Mr. Harrison went to Chadron, where he spent one year, and in 1887 came to Hat creek valley, locating on a homestead in section 13, township 33, range 54, in the foothills of Pine Ridge. There he built a log cabin and gathered together a few head of cattle and started in the ranching business. He worked hard and gradually accumulated property, added to his original ranch, and now has twenty-eight hundred acres of his own, besides leasing six hundred and forty acres, which he uses as pasture for his stock. The place is all fenced and in first-class shape, having some timber and numerous springs of running water, which he uses to good advantage in irrigating many acres. He has planted many trees, and has one of the finest apple orchards in the section, in 1905 having a yield of over two hundred bushels of the fruit from his trees. He also has many cherry and plum trees in bearing, and smaller fruits, such as currants, gooseberries, etc. Our subject has erected all good buildings, including a fine residence, with all kinds of barns, sheds and corrals, and altogether has one of the best improved properties in the county.

In the fall of 1887 Mr. Harrison was united in marriage to Sarah McIntyre, whose father was a well known old settler in Dawes county. Mrs. Harrison was born in Illinois and reared in Nebraska. To them have been born three children, namely: Robert W., Margaret E. and Helen.

JOHN DAUGHERTY.

John Daugherty is one of the old settlers of western Nebraska who well deserves a place in a volume of this kind. His home is on section 12, township 15, range 51, and he has long been regarded as one of the most substantial and highly respected citizens of Cheyenne county.

Mr. Daugherty was born in Sangamon county, Illinois, on the 29th of August, 1855. He spent his early life and received his early schooling in his native county, remaining there until 1886. On reaching early manhood he began life on his own account and engaged in the grocery business in Dawson, Sangamon county, Illinois, following this from 1880 to 1885. His next move was to Nebraska. He reached Cheyenne county in March, 1886, and took a homestead on section 24, township 16, range 53, which he sold in 1907. His present home on section 12, township 15, range 51, shows evidence of thrift and prosperity. Previous to taking up his present home—during 1891-1893—Mr. Daugherty was engaged in the grocery business in Sidney, and met with success in that vocation. He was elected sheriff of Cheyenne county in 1894, serving one term, and then entered the employ of the Union Pacific railroad and continued in train service and yard work up to 1906. He is at present filling the office of county assessor, elected in 1908, and will serve up to 1912. He has always been active in local affairs, taking an active part in politics, is a staunch Democrat, and his services are in demand at any important function pertaining to state or county matters of moment.

Mr. Daugherty was married in Sangamon county, Illinois, to Miss Arabella Conway on February 13, 1878. She was a native of Indiana and a daughter of Reuben Conway. She made a brave helpmeet and was greatly beloved by all who knew her for her many womanly qualities and sweet disposition. She departed this life in November, 1897, sincerely mourned by her family and many friends. Two daughters had been born of their union—Bertha C., who followed the profession of a trained nurse, and who is now the widow of J. C. Newbauer, and Grace C., living at home.

In September, 1899, our subject was married to Miss Kizzie Cushing, a native of England, who came to America with her parents in 1872. She was a child of ten years when the family located on the North Platte near the edge of the Pawnee reservation. At one time they fled to the roundhouse at Sidney, fearing an uprising of the tribe. Of his second marriage Mr. Daugherty has three sons, namely: John Peter, Charles Henry and Arthur Harris.

The family have a pleasant home and are among the prominent residents of their community. Mr. Daugherty is a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Workmen and the Knights of Pythias at Sidney.

HENRY MICHEEL.

Henry Micheel, known throughout Brown county, Nebraska, as a man of good citizenship and untiring energy, is a resident of Johnstown precinct, where he owns and operates successfully an extensive farm. He has been identified with the agricultural and business interests of this locality for many years, and while acquiring for himself a valuable estate, has also gained an enviable reputation as a good citizen and neighbor.

Mr. Micheel is a native of the village of Rellin, Holstein, Germany, born January 13, 1851. His father, Carl Micheel, was a farmer, who lived and died in Germany. In a family of seven children our subject was the oldest member, and he was reared and educated in his native land, at the age of seventeen starting out for himself, learning agriculture on a large farm, where he remained for three years. He then worked on another farm as foreman for one year and again as foreman and inspector for two years. Following that he entered the army and served for six and a half years, rising to the rank of sergeant in eight teen months. After leaving the army service he spent a year at home, then came to the United States, sailing from Hamburg on the steamer Selesia, landing in New York after a thirteen days' voyage in November, 1880. He came across the states to Nebraska, locating in Dixon county, and there settled on a farm of one hundred and sixty acres of unimproved land, renting also two hundred and sixty acres adjoining, and there farmed for two years. In 1883 he sold out his holding there and moved to Cherry county, where he took up a homestead and timber claim, some five miles south from Wood Lake, living in a tent for three weeks. He then built a house. The following year a tornado swept the vicinity in July, which turned his house about half way around on its foundation, and a severe hailstorm which struck them at the same time greatly injured his crops, a misfortune that happened time and again while living in Cherry county. In 1889 he sold that place and moved to Johnstown, where he ran a livery barn for three years. At the end of that time he sold out and went back to farming and worked on rented land for five years, then bought his present farm in 1897, located in section 8, township 29, range 24, which was entirely unimproved land, except for a fine growth of natural timber. Here he put on many improvements, building a good house and farm buildings. He has a ranch of six hundred and forty acres and engages in stock and grain raising. While farming in this county he lost seven crops, two years from excess of water and the other year through dearth of it. He has seen hard times, especially during the dry years, but came through all to final success and is now well satisfied with what he has accomplished here. He was the first settler in Fisher valley, his nearest neighbor being five miles away. While living in Johnstown he was active in local affairs, acting as constable, and also held several school offices.

Mr. Micheel was married in Dixon county in 1882 to Miss Bertha Reimers, a native of Germany, who came to this country in 1881, landing in New York in August of that year. To them have been born five children, named as follows: Carl, Harry, Nannie, Ella and Fritz.

Mr. Micheel is independent in politics, a member of the Lutheran church and affiliates with the Odd Fellows.

GEORGE ENGEL.

George Engel, of Perkins county, has made his way in the world by virtue of hard knocks and much work, and richly deserves the reward of that substantial success which has come to his industry and perseverance. He was born in Alsace, Germany, in 1857. His father was a carpenter in his native country, and there Mr. Engel was raised and educated, receiving the training usual to children of the middle class, and during his boyhood was apprentice to his father in the carpenter work, following the trade during his residence in Germany. He came to America when about twenty-seven years of age, landing in New York city, and came directly west, locating in Cass county, Nebraska. There he followed his trade, and in May, 1885, moved to Perkins county and filed on a homestead on section 6, township 11, range 39. When he landed here his start in money was a capital of three hundred dollars, and while it was not a very large sum, it was much more than the pioneer in this section usually had. He "batched it" at first and tried hard to get a home started, but often went through hard times, during the drouth periods, and many discouragements which fell to the lot of the average early settler.

In 1886 he married Miss Carrie Schaffner, who was born in Germany and came to this country in 1885. They have six children, namely: Will, Carrie, Herman, Walter, Emma and Anna, all bright and intelligent young people, and they form a happy and congenial family.

Mr. Engel has a ranch of about eight hundred acres, with two hundred acres devoted to farming, and plenty of pasture and range for his stock, of which he has quite a herd. He has good barns, sheds, windmill, fences and a fine residence built of cement blocks, thirty by thirty-six feet, and fitted with many modern improvements. He has gone through many hard experiences in building up this home, but is now happy in the thought of his success, which has come to him through his own individual efforts.

C. L. JOHNSON.

C. L. Johnson, who is classed among the intelligent and progressive agriculturists of Kimball county, Nebraska, is a resident of section 14, township 14, range 59. He has been located there since about 1885, and during the years of his residence has become one of the important factors in the development of that region. He is the owner of a valuable property there, and conducts successfully his extensive farming and ranching interests.

Mr. Johnson was born in Sweden March 2, 1856, and grew to the age of twenty-six years in that country. He was one of a family of eleven children, he being the fifth in order of birth, and he received the usual sturdy training of the children of that class in his native land, beginning at an early age to look out for himself and make his own way in the world. He came to America in 1882, locating in Vermont at first, but remaining but a short time, then came west to Omaha, Nebraska. There he passed through many different experiences as a stranger in a strange land, at one time having all his money stolen and being left without a cent. He worked in eastern Nebraska for over two years, then took a pre-emption and later homesteaded in Kimball county, settling on sections 6 and 14, township 14, range 59, which is now his home ranch. There he passed through all the early experiences of the settlers of that time, devoting most of his energies to the stock business. He has seen many hardships and privations in getting his start, but has come out victorious in the battle for a home and is now successful and prosperous, being owner of a fine ranch of four hundred acres, besides controlling leased land in his vicinity. He runs considerable stock, having a nice bunch of high-grade horses and cattle, which he sends to market and from which he derives a nice income. He has considerable of his land under cultivation and raises good crops of grain, etc. His place is improved with good buildings, the house being of a large L shape type, and the barn sixty by sixty-two feet, besides many good outbuildings, sheds, etc. He has a good water system on the premises and in the barn, making in all a model farm.

Mr. Johnson was married in Sweden in 1877, to Miss Caroline Anderson, and together they came to the new world to seek their fortune. They have no children. Politically Mr. Johnson is a Republican and he takes a commendable interest in all local affairs, looking to the best development of his community and the public good. He has served two terms as assessor of Kimball county. He has certainly done his share as an old settler, building his ranch from the wild prairie land.

GEORGE B. McNAMEE.

The gentleman whose name heads this review is classed among the prominent farmers of Merriman precinct, and is an old settler of Cherry county, Nebraska. He has acquired a valuable property by his labors and good management, and enjoys pleasant surroundings and an enviable reputation as a citizen.

Mr. McNamee was born in Jackson county, Ohio, November 7, 1850, and reared there until ten years of age when his parents moved to Harrison county, Missouri. His father, Hiram McNamee, a native of Ohio, of Scotch descent, was a member of the Home Guard, in Missouri during the Civil war. Our subject is the second member in a family of nine children, and at the age of twelve years went to live with an uncle near Mitchelville, Harrison county, with whom he remained for twenty-nine years, assisting him in the work on his farm, then left to start for himself. In 1889 he landed in Merriam, Nebraska, and lived on rented land for four years, then he took a homestead in Cherry county, twenty-five miles southeast of Gordon. During his residence here he was but two nights off his claim. He worked his farm and also handled cattle for J. C. Jordan during the following five years, and then started in the cattle business for himself. He began with twenty-five head of cattle and kept getting more until he sold at one time a drove of one thousand head. After this he started at farming and cattle raising on rented land on the Niobrara river, continuing this up to 1903. After living one year on Missouri Flats he took up his present homestead of four hundred and eighty acres on section 2, township 32, range 37, in 1904, and it comprises about one hundred acres of good hay land, the rest being excellent range. He constantly keeps about forty head of cattle and some horses. He also has a threshing outfit, having followed this business for thirty-two consecutive seasons and still enjoys that work. During the drouth seasons between 1893 and 1896 he lost all his crops, and these were his hardest times; to support his family he was obliged to haul posts and timber from his farm to town, making a bare living; he also did ploughing and other farm work for his neighbors in the spring, taking as payment for this work meat and vegetables to supply his family with provisions.

A view of the family residence will be found on another page in this work.

Mr. McNamee was married September 5, 186—, to Miss Nancy Ballard, a native of Indiana, born in 1851. Children have been born to them named as follows: Thompson G., deceased; Mary A., wife of H. A. Glendenning; Lora A., deceased; Lydia C., deceased; Warren P., deceased; Elma E., deceased; Dora M., deceased; Goldie E., wife of C. H. Stratton; George F., Clay N., Claude H., five of whom are living and two having died in infancy, before being named.

Mr. McNamee is an earnest and upright citizen, lends his influence and aid for the upbuilding of the better interests of his community, taking an active interest in all public affairs. He is a Republican in politics, has been justice of the peace for twenty-five years, having served in that capacity for eight years in Missouri before coming west. The family are members of the Methodist church.

PETER Z. GENTRY.

Peter Z. Gentry, one of the well-known farmers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is a prosperous agriculturist of Colton precinct, where he has spent the past twenty years. He has followed farming during his entire career, and despite many discouragements during his early residence in western Nebraska, he has thoroughly improved his farm and has become one of the well-to-do and substantial men of his community.

Mr. Gentry is a native of Rockingham county, Virginia, born November 5, 1863, and was raised there. Both parents are now dead, the mother dying when he was about two years old. He migrated to Keokuk county, Iowa, in 1881, where he remained for a number of years, then came to Nebraska, reaching Cheyenne county in 1886; he at once took up a homestead in section 24, township 13, range 48, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres. This he developed into a fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres, having secured the entire north half of section 34 and the southwest quarter of section 26. He has about fifty acres under cultivation, and runs about seventy-five head of cattle and twenty horses. In 1908 he erected a fine two-story dwelling of ornamental concrete blocks, which is to be followed shortly by a large and commodious concrete barn of sufficient dimensions to shelter all his stock and a large supply of hay and grain.

Mr. Gentry was married in Cheyenne county, on Christmas day, 1892, to Anna Lingenfelter. Mrs. Gentry was born in Scioto county, Ohio, in 1859; and her parents, Christopher and Phoebe (Serans) Lingenfelter, natives of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, have both been dead for a number of years.

Four children were born to Mr. Gentry and his estimable wife, all living excepting the eldest, and they are a very happy family, and enjoy a comfortable and peaceful home. They are named as follows: Roy (deceased), Mabel Alice, Earl Dewey and Ralph Schley.

Mr. Gentry is an active and wide-awake citizen, keeps abreast of the times and takes an active part in local affairs. He is an independent voter, and stands firmly for reform principles and the right. A fine view of the family residence with its substantial surroundings is presented in this work.

CHARLES ANDERSON.

Charles Anderson, who occupies a prominent place among the successful farmers of Sheridan county, Nebraska, owns a valuable estate in township 13, range 46. Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden in 1864, and was raised on his father's farm there. His father, Andrew Anderson, never left his native country, and the mother died when our subject was ten years old, he being the youngest of eight children. His father died March 1, 1908. At fourteen years of age he began working out, following farming for two years, then came to this country, locating in Des Moines, Iowa, working at anything he could get to do for three years. He then went to Marshalltown, where he worked for some time, and in the fall of 1885 came to Nebraska and filed on a homestead and timber claim in Dawes county, which he still holds. In the winter of 1885-1886 he returned to Iowa, and the following spring came back and put up some sod buildings on his claim. His house and barn were combined, as he was very short of money and had to take care of the pennies, having but a dollar and a half when he struck this vicinity. He at once began to build up his farm, putting in twenty-two acres the first year. He had only one team and one cow. About the time the dry years came on he was farming on quite a large scale, and he got some crops the first few seasons, then gave it up in despair, except raising a few potatoes and provisions for five years, during which time he was compelled to work out to support his family. All this time he saved his money and invested every cent he could in cattle, working on the irrigation ditch all the time he could spare. After working hard for ten years he was worse off than when he came, and was obliged to borrow money, paying seven per cent. per month for small loans. However, after a time he got started in the stock business and has bought more land, now owning seventeen quarter sections in Dawes county, and three quarters near Hay Springs. He farms eighty acres on the latter place and has two hundred head of cattle on his ranch, hiring a man to run that place all the time, he living on his Hay Springs farm in order to give his children the benefit of the better schools.

Mr. Anderson was married in 1887 to Miss Laura Stoudt, born and raised in Pennsylvania of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, her father Jacob Stoudt, having been a school teacher in the early days, the family settling in Dawes county in 1885. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have a family of four children, all born and raised on the old homestead, and named as follows: Jennie, Wallace, Emma and Francis. Our subject and his wife were the first couple ever married in the new court house at Rushville, Nebraska.

Mr. Anderson is well satisfied with what he has made here, all of which he has accumulated within the past ten years. He bought land because he was unable to sell his own, offering at one time to sell four hundred and eighty acres for six hundred dollars, and could get no bid on his place. He is glad now that he did not have a chance to sell, as he is satisfied here and should he make a change would go further west rather than east. Politically Mr. Anderson is a Populist. He has never held any office, as in the early days he had all he could do to make a living, and he has no desire for a public life.

THEODORE JOHNSON.

Theodore Johnson, who is widely known as a progressive tiller of the soil, has done much to quicken thought and help western farmers to a better understanding of the conditions under which the work must be carried on if they wish success. He owns a good farm in Box Butte county, which he has improved in fine shape, and is considered one of the well-to-do men of that locality.

Mr. Johnson was born in Larvig, Norway, in 1863, and was reared there. His parents came to America in 1887. As a young man our subject followed the life of a sailor in his native land, making trips to St. Johns, New Brunswick, also had visited Denmark twice, and in 1882 he came to the United States. He landed in Baltimore and immediately struck out for the west, locating in Green Bay, Wisconsin. He was accompanied by a brother, and they intended to secure work as sailors on the Great Lakes, but at the time they arrived here it was winter and the lakes were frozen over, so they went to work in the big saw mills in that region, and remained in the lumber woods for about five years. They spent some time at Ashland, Wisconsin, working in the lumber yards, and made good wages, receiving as high as three dollars and a half per day for their labor, which was considered very high in those days. Theodore was a sawyer in the mills, and in order to fill that position was obliged to do all the work connected with the lumber business to fit himself properly. Mr. Johnson came to Nebraska in the spring of 1886. He filed on a homestead in Box Butte county the following fall, locating seven miles southeast of Hemingford, and began with very little capital. The following spring he bought a yoke of oxen and began to improve his claim, building a sod shanty and dug-out combined, and there "batched it." The first summer he broke up some ground and put in a crop of sod corn. He also worked out by the day in the vicinity of his home to make extra money with which to improve his place, proved up on his land and lived there for fifteen years, going through the drouth periods and seeing his crops fail for several successive years. In 1900 our subject came to his present location in section 17, township 27, range 48, and here he has a good home. He has all good buildings, fences, windmills, etc., having expended in all about five thousand dollars in building and improvements. His ranch consists of about four thousand acres, and he farms only a small portion of it, using the balance as a ranch, engaging principally in cattle and horse raising. Mr. Johnson has accomplished all of this by his own unaided efforts, as when he located in this section there were no buildings of any kind or improvements on the place, and he often had to hunt out the boundaries of his farm by locating the corner stakes which had been set by the surveyors in the early days.

In 1888 Mr. Johnson was married to Miss Laura Anderson, born and reared in Sweden. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have a family of five children, named as follows: Oscar, Lizzie, Alfred, Christine and Olga.

Mr. Johnson is one of the oldest settlers of western Nebraska and has been closely identified with the development of the agricultural interests of the region since its beginning. He is a Republican, and active in local affairs. He has helped to build up the schools in the section, and is at present serving as school director in his district.

WILLIAM H. KAISER.

The gentleman above named is one of the well-known old timers in Dawes county. He was born in Evertsville, Pennsylvania, in 1839, of German stock. His father, was a cabinet maker by trade, born in Germany, who came to the United States as a young man, and he married Elizabeth Cessena, and she was born in the same house in which our subject was. When the latter was five years of age the family moved to Mahoning county, Ohio, and were among the pioneers in that vicinity, and there he was raised and educated. At the age of twenty-one years he went to Indiana and there worked as a brickmaker and painter for quite a long time. Then he enlisted in the Seventy-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, Company D, in August, 1862. He was twice rejected, but persevered and the third time was accepted. He saw service in the Army of the Cumberland, was at the battle of Perryville, Stone River, Tennessee, and on one of Stuart's raids was captured at Rome, Georgia. He was held prisoner at Belle Island and Richmond, Va., and later saw service in Tennessee, Alabama, and Georgia. Mr. Kaiser received his discharge from the army in July, 1865, then returned to his home and remained in Indiana up to 1871, then came to Gage county, Nebraska, where he was a pioneer and farmed for two years, leasing school land. About 1877 he bought a farm and lived on it up to 1887, and while on that land made a success of his work. He came to Dawes county in 1887 and settled upon a homestead located on Indian creek, south of Whitney, which at that time was all wild prairie with no improvements at all. Here he put up a board shack and lived in it the first winter and has steadily built up the place from that time on. He owns a ranch of one thousand and forty acres lying along both Indian and Butte Trunk creeks, and has spent eighteen years on this ranch. He is counted among the old timers of the locality and has done his share in building up the community.

Mr. Kaiser was married July 24, 1862, to Miss Nancy A. Stallard, daughter of James Stallard, a Methodist Episcopal minister, well known in Indiana. Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser have a family of six children, named as follows: Frank, Emma, Nettie, Omar, Grace and Fred.

Mr. Kaiser was justice of the peace for many years, and also was postmaster at Coxville, and his wife also held the office for about eight years, when it was discontinued in about 1905.

GEORGE P. EWING.

For the past twenty-three years the gentleman here named has been known to the citizens of Deuel county, and has gained a high station as a citizen and farmer. He has brought a wild and uncultivated tract under high cultivation and improvement, and is now one of the substantial landowners of the county, and stands foremost among the old-time residents of this locality.

George P. Ewing was born in New York state, on February 17, 1844, and grew up in his native community, receiving a common schooling, following farm work as a boy. He enlisted in Company G, One Hundred and Eighth New York Volunteers, in 1862, and served for three years. During his career as a soldier he participated in thirty-two heavy engagements, and was at the front all of the time. His father was a member of the same regiment with his son, and both have brilliant records as soldiers. Mr. Ewing was mustered out at Bailey's Cross Roads, Virginia, in 1865, returned to New York state, and about 1870 went to Michigan, where he remained up to 1885, at that time coming to what was Cheyenne county, now known as Deuel county. He filed on a homestead on section 6, township 15, range 44, and started to establish a farm and build up a home. During the first few years he had up-hill work, as the country was utterly wild and uncultivated, with settlers few and far between, and he had the usual experiences of the pioneers in the region. He was one of the very first settlers on the river, and started with very small capital, living in a rude shanty which he built himself, for a number of years, and worked hard to improve his place, eventually proving up on it. He took a Kincaid claim of four hundred and eighty acres, situated on section 10, township 18, range 45, and now has his home ranch on this tract, of which he farms two hundred acres, and is engaged in the stock business to quite an extent. He has made an ideal ranch out of the place, having it improved with good buildings, and every sort of modern machinery, etc.

Mr. Ewing was married in 1875 to Mrs. Anna Shove, who was a widow with two children. Six children were born to them, all of whom are now dead, and the mother is also deceased, her death occurring at Chappell, Nebraska, in 1903.

Mr. Ewing is a gentleman of broad mind and active public spirit, and keeps pace with the times in all matters of public interest. He is a Republican, and lends his influence for the best interests of his community.

JOSEPH LANGER, DECEASED.

Joseph Langer, born in the village of Freienthal, Austria, in 1863, was reared on his father's farm there until nineteen years of age, when he came to this country with his parents, locating in Polk county, Nebraska, where they found work for a time. He remained with them until 1864, then came to Keya Paha county, where he took up a homestead in section 24, township 34, range 24, on which he resided up to 1903, when he bought the present home of the family in section 11, township 33, range 24. Here he built up a good home and farm, consisting of seven hundred acres, about four hundred of which are under cultivation. He dealt extensively in stock, keeping about fifty cattle and twenty-five horses. He built a fine house, fitted up with many modern improvements, making one of the pleasantest homes in his locality. There is a fine orchard which he planted growing nicely, and everything on the place is in excellent order.

Mr. Langer, besides running his farm, was interested in Langer Bros.' general merchandise store in Norden. They have a large trade and as fine a stock of goods as can be found anywhere in a town the size of Norden, and are doing exceedingly well in the enterprise.

Mr. Langer was married in 1893, to Mary Korallewsky, born in Germany in 1873, coming to this country when ten years of age, with her parents, they being pioneers of Cherry county. To Mr. and Mrs. Langer were born a family of seven children, named as follows: Rosa, Joseph, Charles, Martha, Marie, Theodore and Agnes, all living at home at this time. The family is highly esteemed in their community, and popular members of society. Mr. Langer died October 12, 1907. He had been active in local politics, serving as county commissioner from 1903 to 1906, being the only Populist on the board. He saw his share of pioneer experiences, and had hard times since coming here, losing two crops by drouths, but never an acre through hailstorms.

RUDOLPH LANGER.

The gentleman above named, a younger brother of Joseph, whose sketch appears in this work, was also born in Austria, July 26, 1879. The family came to America in 1882, locating in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, where they lived for a year, then came to Nebraska, settling in Polk county. Two years were spent there, then they moved to Keya Paha county, where our subject grew up. The father, Lorenz Langer, served in the Austrian army for ten years; his death occurred here three miles north of Norden, where he had been farming for several years. He was one of the leading citizens of his community, and his death was a severe loss to his family and friends. The mother, whose maiden name was Allouisia English, was also born and reared in Austria, and is at present living with our subject in the town of Norden. She was the mother of nine children, of whom Rudolph was the seventh. At the age of fourteen he began working for himself, giving his wages to his mother after his father's death. He rented the home place and added to it, running the farm until 1904, when, in partnership with his brother Joseph, he established the retail general merchandise store mentioned. They carry a five-thousand-dollar stock of goods, and have the finest store building in Norden, enjoying an extensive trade from the surrounding country. When they first started this business they began in a rented store, but in 1905 erected a fine building, moving in the new place in February, 1906. Besides his town property, Mr. Langer has three hundred and twenty acres of fine land four miles from Norden.

Mr. Langer has never married, and lives with his mother who keeps house for him. He has done his share in developing the commercial resources of this region, and is one of the successful and prosperous business men of his locality. He is a Democrat and a communicant of the Catholic church.

FRANK B. CODR.

Frank B. Codr is a native of Moravia, Germany, where he was born in the year 1855. His father, Bartholomew Codr, was a farmer and emigrated with his family to America in 1872, landing at Baltimore, Maryland, and from thence coming to Nebraska, settling on a farm in Saunders county.

Frank B. Codr was reared on a farm and learned what the work of farming meant, but he was also able to spend considerable time in the country schools. At the age of twenty-three years he commenced farming for himself in Saunders county on rented land.

In the year 1880 Mr. Frank Codr was united in marriage with Miss Barbara Novak, a native of Bohemia. Ten children have blessed this union: Frank, Annie, Barbara, Joe, John, Anton, Lewis, Ella, Mary and Lillie.

In the fall of 1855 Frank B. Codr, with his family, moved from Saunders county to Loup county, driving over the country by team and wagon, and leading one cow. The family had five dollars in money after getting settled on their homestead on section 26, township 21, range 20. All the house that they had was a sod shanty to live in, and a sod stable, and they had to haul water a distance of two miles. For three or four years Mr. Codr had to work out in order to make a living for the family. A year after their arrival a horse was lost and thus they were left with only one horse, which was not enough to do the work required. Mr.

Codr had no money, so he had to buy a horse on time, giving his note drawing interest at the rate of three per cent. per month. It took five years to pay for the horse. Besides this there was the loss of several crops owing to dry periods. All this illustrates the hardships that sometimes seem to be a necessary part of the life of a pioneer. Mr. Codr fought a good fight, however, and at last has succeeded in accumulating eight hundred and forty acres, all deeded land, two hundred acres of which he cultivates, while the balance is devoted to the pasturage of his stock.

Mr. Codr's farm is a fine one, nearly all fenced, and there are large forest trees, and also a nice orchard of about two acres. Mr. Codr has done much toward improving the looks and values of his neighborhood and his work is appreciated by his associates.

THOMAS DENTLER.

Thomas Dentler, a representative farmer of Thomas county, Nebraska, resides on his well kept farm in section 12, township 26, range 26. He is classed among the successful agriculturists and ranchmen of his locality, and personally is a man of firm characteristics whose high standing as a citizen is well merited.

Mr. Dentler was born in 1850, in Northumberland county, Pennsylvania. He is of Pennsylvania Dutch stock, his father, Henry Dentler, having been a shoemaker by trade. He married Mary Stoughton, who was his second cousin, and when the Civil war broke out the father answered the call of his country to arms, saw hard service and was taken prisoner by the enemy, thrown into Andersonville prison, where he died in 1863. Thomas was reared in his native state, following farming and other occupations as a boy, and when he was about nineteen years of age came west, locating in Dodge county, Nebraska, where he had relatives, working on farms, also clerked in a store for two years, and later was employed in a lumber and coal yard in Scribner, Nebraska. He finally settled on a farm in that vicinity and spent many years there, building up two good farms, and in 1884 he brought his family to Johnstown, Nebraska. This was in 1884, and he filed on a pre-emption and tree claim and began a farm in Cherry county. During the first few years there the country abounded in wild game of all kinds, and he killed many deer close to his home. He put up a good eight-room house, and this was a famous stopping house for travelers and freighters for a number of years, his location being fifteen miles southwest of the town of Johnstown. In 1888 he sold that place and went to Colorado, where he spent one summer, but returned to Nebraska and started a boarding house in Scribner and also ran the hotel at that place for one year. The summer of 1891 he spent in Colorado, and in the fall of that year drifted into the sand hills of Cherry county, Nebraska, and for a number of years went from one place to another, visiting Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and part of the time in Fremont and other towns in Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN ENGELHORN,

Mr. Dentler first came to Thomas county in 1895, rented land which he farmed, also took up a homestead on section 12, township 24, range 26, and has lived there ever since. He now has six hundred and forty acres, and has developed a fine ranch, planting trees, fruits, etc., and has above seventy acres cultivated.

On July 3, 1871, our subject married Mary E. Cummings, daughter of William Cummings, a well-to-do farmer in Indiana, who died when she was a young girl, her mother having departed this life when Mrs. Dentler was but nine years old. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dentler, named as follows: Harry, Birge, deceased; Edith and Guy. They have an adopted daughter named Nina Pauline. The family occupy a pleasant and comfortable home, surrounded by all the conveniences of modern rural life, and their home is one of the most hospitable in the community, all well liked by their associates. During the time Mr. Dentler lived in Dodge county he served as justice of the peace for several years, and since coming to his present location has been assessor of the precinct for a number of terms.

JOHN ENGLEHORN.

John Englehorn, who is the possessor of a good home and well developed farm in section 9, township 24, range 49, Box Butte county, is one of the representative members of the farming community of that region. He is one of the old-timers of western Nebraska, coming here in 1888, and has watched the growth and development of the region from the days of its early settlement, and, incidentally, has taken an active part in its upbuilding.

Mr. Englehorn was born in the village of Baden, Germany, in 1843. His father, Jacob, was a farmer in the old country, and came to the United States with his family in 1849. There were seven children in the family group, of whom our subject was the third member. Their first location after landing on American soil, was at Lansing, Iowa, and there the father occupied a farm up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1881. Our subject was raised and educated in Iowa, and was early taught to do all kinds of farm work, receiving a common school education attending the country schools. After growing to manhood he lived at home and carried on the home farm for about fifteen years.

In 1888 Mr. Englehorn came to Nebraska settling in Box Butte county, purchasing the relinquishment on the tract of land which is his present location. This is situated in section 9, township 24, range 49. He started improving his place with a will, rapidly building it up and putting in crops, and while he met with the usual discouragements which came to every pioneer, has done exceedingly well. He spent considerable money in building up the place, planting trees, etc., and has one of the valuable farms in his section. In 1893 he had the misfortune to lose his barn by fire. This happened when his wife was the only person at home, and through the hardest work on her part she managed to save their stock and residence. However, a large quantity of hay and grain was burned up, and had it not been for Mrs. Englehorn's courage and presence of mind the loss would have been much greater, and great credit is due her. As it was, this caused a severe loss which they keenly felt, as during those times crops were poor and they had a hard time to get along. Several crops were complete failures during the drouths, but after these periods had passed they were able to get ahead, and constantly added improvements and bought more land, so that he is now owner of one thousand acres lying along the Snake creek, located about seven miles from Alliance. This is all fenced, and improved with good buildings, and he is mostly engaged in stock raising, finding this branch of ranching the most profitable in his locality.

Mr. John Englehorn was married in 1874 while residing in Iowa to Miss Emma Larson, who was born and raised in that state. Her father, O. C. Larson, was a native of Norway, who emigrated to this country in 1849, and settled in Iowa, where he was among the pioneers, and they occupied a farm in Taylor township, Allamakee county, for many years, both Mr. Larson and his wife dying on the homestead there, the former in 1899 and the latter in 1897. Mr. and Mrs. John Englehorn have three children living, namely: Minnie, now the wife of Odie Schofield, living at Salt Lake City, Utah; Hattie, who is a stenographer in Seattle, Washington, and Elmer, now a civil engineer in Seattle, Washington. They are all well educated and children any parent might be proud of, all filling honorable positions in the world. All were reared and educated in Box Butte county, and are proud of their home county. Otto W. Englehorn, another son of Mr. and Mrs. Englehorn, was drowned at the age of about twenty-five years in the shipwreck of the Valencia, near Vancouver Island, January 23, 1906. The remains were brought back to Box Butte county, where they were interred. A large number of people were present and paid their last respects to the deceased.

GEORGE H. SEAGER.

George H. Seager has resided in Cherry county for the past twenty-two years, and nearly all of that time occupied a homestead, situated in section 18, township 31, range 35, where he had a pleasant home and valuable estate. This he sold in the fall of 1907 and moved to Cody, where he has a goodly amount of income property.

Mr. Seager was born in Orange county, New York, May 16, 1836, of American parents, his father, John Seager, having taken part in the War of 1812, the grandfather Jacob in the Revolutionary war and the great-grandfather in the French and Indian war, while the great-great-grandfather participated in the war under the last king of Poland. George H. is the youngest in a family of nine children, and at the age of thirteen years started out for himself. He ran away from home at that age and since that time has seen his parents but twice. He was obliged to take whatever he could get to do in order to make a living, and during the first three weeks after he left home worked for sixty cents a week. He followed farming for several years, and at the age of sixteen learned the cigarmaker's trade, and later the carpenter's trade. He devoted most of his time to the former work, however, and continued at it for nearly thirty-two years. In 1862 he enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-seventh New York Regiment, serving as color-bearer until the end of the war. He comes of fighting stock. After the war he returned to New York, where he took charge of the John Kirch Company's cigar business, at Elmira, and was manager of this concern for three years, then engaged in the cigar trade and livery business. He next moved to Tioga county and there took a farm of fifty acres, on which he lived for nine years. When he took this place he was in debt three thousand five hundred dollars, and after nine years' hard work sold this farm to pay off his debt. He came to Nebraska in 1885, landing here with seventy dollars in his pocket and a family of four children. After getting settled he bought horse feed, groceries and provisions, and had absolutely nothing left. He first located on Boiling Springs flats, and remained there for three years, then settled on his above mentioned homestead. Here he worked very hard and went through many hard times, living in a sod house without floors for five years before he was able to put up a better dwelling.

July 4, 1861, Mr. Seager was married to Miss Elvira Walker, a native of Tioga county, New York, born in 1837, her death occurring in Nebraska in 1902. Four children were born of this marriage, namely: Clara, now Mrs. George Hawver; Hattie, wife of Chris Holts; Adison (deceased), and John.

Mr. Seager has seen this locality grow from its early development, and has had an active part in its success. He does not want any more frontier or homesteaders' experiences, and is glad that those times are past. He has always been a Republican, but has never sought public preferment, devoting his entire attention to his home and family.

JOHN A. STRANDBERG.

John A. Strandberg, who has passed through pioneer experiences in Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is the owner of a fine farm in Trognitz precinct. He has a wide circle of acquaintances and is held in the highest respect and esteem throughout the community in which he resides.

Mr. Strandberg was born in Sweden, January 5, 1870, and was reared in his native province. He came to America when but fifteen years of age, the family joining the father in Kansas, whither he had preceded them, and in 1888 they all moved to Cheyenne county, with the exception of John, who joined them in 1891, having spent two years of the intervening time in Colorado. The father filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in section 18, township 16, range 52, also took up a Kincaid claim of one hundred and sixty acres. The balance of the section named is now in the possession of John A. Strandberg, the subject of this sketch. The country was entirely unimproved land, and they had hard work during the first few years to get it into condition to raise crops, but worked hard and faithfully to develop a good farm, and have succeeded in a marked degree. There are now over seventy-five acres under cultivation, and they run quite a large herd of cattle and other stock, including a number of ranch horses, with which all their work is accomplished.

Mr. Strandberg's parents are now dead, the father's death occurring in 1900, and the mother following him a year later. There were the following children left besides our subject: Charles E., living on a homestead adjoining his brother's farm. Ida C., married to J. J. Johnson, now residing in Kimball county, Nebraska. Annie, married to John Johnson, living in Sheridan, Wyoming, and Rena, who lives with Charles. John A. is the eldest of the family, and he was married at Sidney, on October 13, 1893, to Klara Ternstrand, whose parents are deceased. Our subject and his estimable wife are the parents of the following children: Clarence V., Charles E., Martin T. and Alfred E. and Esther.

Mr. Strandberg is active in local affairs, and is a loyal supporter of the Republican party. He is of the Lutheran faith.

HENRY VON BARGEN.

Henry Von Bargen, whose honest life and unflagging industry has been crowned with a large measure of success, came of that race and blood which has been so prominently identified with the affairs of this country. He was born in Hanover, Germany, in 1866 on a farm. He is a son of Frederick Bargen, who was a farmer, and who worked in the cement factories of the old country. His mother's name was Richter Bargen. Both parents died in their native land.

Until the age of sixteen years, Mr. Von Bargen remained in his native land, where he received his education. He then decided to seek his fortunes in the new world, and coming to America, landed in New York city in June, 1882. He did not tarry long in that section of the country, but came west, settling in Sibley county, Minnesota, where he remained for seven years following the occupation of the farmer.

In 1889 the subject of this sketch came to Box Butte county and located on the farm which is his present home in section 1, township 26, range 49. Here he built a sod house, and for seven or eight years lived the life of a bachelor. The first two years he worked his farm with a team of oxen. He did not escape the periods of drouth which were so frequent in this section of the country. Finding it impossible to make a living out of his farm during this period, he employed his time at grade work in Wyoming. During the seasons of 1891 and 1892 his crops were fair, and he began to realize the success which his unremitting efforts merited. Mr. Von Bargen is now the possessor of a fine ranch of one thousand acres of land, one hundred and fifty acres of which he has under cultivation, the balance being pasture and grass land. He has erected a pleasant house and substantial farm buildings, and has a good well and wind mill.

The marriage of Mr. Von Bargen and Miss Annie Donner occurred in 1897. She was born in Pomeran, Germany, where her father lived and died. Her mother is still living and resides in America. Mr. and Mrs. Von Bargen are the parents of three children: William, Emil and Carl.

In political matters Mr. Von Bargen is a Republican. Since taking up his residence in Box Butte county he has done a great deal toward the development and improvement of this part of the state, and has always taken a keen interest in the affairs of the locality in which he resides. His career should be an excellent example to the young men of the present generation, for in it they can see what thrift and economy, honesty and integrity can always accomplish.

A. J. WITHERS.

A. J. Withers, who is extensively engaged in farming, is one of the pioneer settlers of Deuel county. He has a wide acquaintance in the vicinity, and is universally respected and esteemed.

Mr. Withers was born in Blair county, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1846. There were eight children in his father's family, six boys and two girls, and in 1856 the family came to Ogle county, Illinois, where they settled on a farm and made that their home for many years. Our subject enlisted at Mt. Morris, Illinois, in Company I, Fourteenth Illinois Cavalry, in February, 1863. He went through the Knoxville siege, was on the Morgan raid through Ohio and Indiana, and was thrown into Andersonville prison and kept there for nine months, suffering terrible privations with others held there. He was also in the battle of Atlanta and other large engagements. In May, 1865, he was mustered out at Springfield, Illinois. His father and one brother were privates in the Thirty-fourth Illinois, another brother was in the Ninety-second Illinois, and still another in the Fourth Cavalry. His father had also been through the War of 1812, enlisting at the age of eleven years, and serving as "powder monkey." When the latter enlisted in the Civil war he was sixty years of age, and one brother of our subject was but fifteen years old.

After leaving the army Mr. Withers traveled through different parts of the country, finally coming to western Nebraska in 1885. He homesteaded on section 22, township 15, range 46, and proved up on a quarter section, adding to his original tract afterwards, and now owns half a section of good land, using one hundred and twenty-five acres as a farm, and the balance as a stock ranch, running about eighty head of cattle and quite a number of horses. He has the place well improved, all good buildings, etc., and is classed among the prosperous and successful men of this region. He has been a resident of Deuel county during all the good, bad and indifferent times, and was one of the first homesteaders on the table land.

Mr. Withers was married on September 26, 1872, at Oregon, Illinois, to Miss Hattie Coggins, who is a native of that state. They have a family of eight children, who are named as follows: Thomas W., married and a ranch owner in Deuel county; Edith Olive, wife of Oscar Meyer, living in Cheyenne county; Harvey O., also married and living in Cheyenne county; Hattie Ethel, wife of Luther Allington, they residing in South Dakota; Myrtle May, Logan A., Sarah Locada and Leola Elsie, the four last mentioned living at home. All were born and raised on the home ranch, and form an interesting family group.

Mr. Withers is prominent in local affairs. He is a Republican and firm in his convictions.

ALBERT M. JACOX.

Albert M. Jacox, whose home is to be found at the postoffice of Thurman, Rock county, Nebraska, is a fair representative of the earnest and wide-awake young men who have come into this region and have wrought the revolution of settlement, making the wilderness a cultivated land, and the wild prairie a home of a great people. He is a farmer by choice, and is an honor to his calling.

Albert M. Jacox was born on a farm in Jefferson county, Pennsylvania, December 30, 1855, and from his early youth was familiar with hard work. His parents, Edward H. and Margaret (Davis) Jacox, were of German descent: his father, in addition to farming, followed blacksmithing for a living. When Albert reached the age of fourteen years he assumed the burden of his own support, and when he was twenty we find him in Madison county, Nebraska, engaged in farm work. In 1882 he established himself on a homestead in section 19, township 29, range 18, Rock county, and there he has lived to the present writing, building up a fine estate and becoming one of the solid men of the county. At the time of his coming here, the country was so thinly settled, and points of trade so remote, that he was compelled to go to Long Pine for the lumber needed in the construction of his first modest home. This was in the month of February, and the long drives were attended with not a little discomfort. He now owns a well appointed ranch of four hundred and eighty acres, of which seventy acres are under active cultivation, and the balance devoted to stock raising and the making of hay, for which there is always a brisk demand. There is a fine grove upon it, which he planted himself, and watched the growth of the trees with a solicitous interest. The flowing wells are of inestimable value on the farm, supplying an endless supply of excellent water for stock and irrigation if so needed. The Jacoxes have passed through dry seasons, and have shared in the experiences common to a new country, but they have never lost courage, and a large success has crowned their efforts.

Mr. Jacox takes a political position in line with the doctrines of the Democratic party with which he has long been associated. In 1886 he was appointer postmaster at Thurman, a position which he still retains. In 1896 he was elected as one of the board of commissioners of Rock county, and for three years he rendered very acceptable service to the people of the county. In strictly local affairs he is prominent, having served as school director for a quarter of a century. He has also been county assessor, and is known throughout the county as an industrious citizen and a reliable man.

Mr. Jacox was married March 5, 1883, to Miss Amy Dennis, whose people had removed from Iowa to make early settlement in Madison county, Nebraska. To this union have come the following children: Edward G., Charles F., Leroy C., James B., Melville Ray, William Guy, Minnie E., deceased, Amy May, Clarence David and an infant, unnamed. The husband and father comes himself of a prolific family, and was the youngest of a family of sixteen children born to his parents. Three of his brothers and two brothers-in-law served in the Union army during the Civil war. He is a member of the subordinate lodge of the Odd Fellows at Bassett and of the encampment at O'Neill.

L. K. NELSON.

In the person of the gentleman whose name heads this personal history, we find one of the sturdy old-timers who has passed many years on the frontier, going through all the different phases of pioneer life in the west, and coming out victorious in the struggle for a home and competence for his declining years. Mr. Nelson is well and favorably known throughout his section of Kimball county.

Our subject was born in Denmark, August 13, 1848, and grew up in his native land, following farming there during his boyhood and remained there up to 1872, when he came to the United States, settling in Lee county, Illinois, where he was among the pioneer farmers, and made that vicinity his home for about six years. He then went to Fremont, Nebraska, spent a short time there, and his next move was to California for three years, returning to Nebraska in 1889, and locating in Kimball county. Here he filed on a homestead, proved up on the land, and has occupied it as a home ranch since that time. He has a good farm of four hundred and eighty acres, besides other property in the county. Sixty-five acres are devoted to farming, on which Mr. Nelson raises good crops of grains, etc., and the balance of the farm is used for hay and pasture for quite a herd of stock.

Mr. Nelson was united in marriage to Miss Annie Gybgall, in February, 1875, in Illinois. Mrs. Nelson was born and reared in Germany, coming to this country as a young girl. The parents of both Mr. Nelson and his wife are deceased. They have a family of seven children, who are named as follows: J. M., Jr., and Vernon, both married and living in this locality. Katie, wife of Delbert Keith, residing in Denver, Colorado. Edward, single, Agnes, wife of Harry Luckhart; and Elmer and Gladys, also unmarried.

Mr. Nelson has always been one of the prominent public-spirited citizens of his community, and has done his full share in its up-building since coming to the region. In politics he is a staunch Republican.

CARL E. A. ESTLER.

Carl E. A. Estler, one of the best known citizens of Sioux county, Nebraska, is proprietor of a fine farm in section 10, township 31, range 55, where he has spent the past fourteen years of his career. He is numbered among the old settlers, and is foremost among those who have aided materially in the development of this region, and has always been closely identified with the growth of its agricultural and commercial interests.

Our subject is a native of Germany, born in 1871 in the city of Dresden. His father, Edmund, was a piano maker there, and the family were in very comfortable circumstances. When Carl was a lad of seven years his parents came to America with their little family, and after landing in New York city, struck out immediately for the west, locating in Geary county, Kansas, at a point about one hundred and thirty-eight miles west of Kansas City, where they lived for seven years. In 1885 Carl and the whole family went to Baltimore, Maryland, remained there for just one month, then to New York city, where part of the family still lives. Carl remained in New York up to the year 1894. He had served an apprenticeship as a cabinet-maker while a boy, and followed that employment while in New York city and for several years worked in a piano factory in that city. He returned to Kansas in 1894, spent two years there, and then came to Sioux county, Nebraska, where he took up a location near the head of Soldier creek, filing on a homestead. Here he went through hard times during the first years, and after a time went to Harrison and followed the carpenter's trade for several years. In 1904 he filed on a Kincaid homestead in section 10, township 31, range 55, which is his present location. He has put up good buildings and improvements, erecting substantial buildings, including a handsome and comfortable modern house, commodious barns, etc. The ranch consists of four hundred and forty acres, and he is engaged in mixed farming and stock raising, and is making a success of his work.

During Mr. Estler's residence in this part of the state he has done a great deal of carpentering, having built quite a number of houses, and is a skillful and conscientious worker, strictly honest in all his dealings, thereby gaining the respect and confidence of all with whom he has had to do. He has also taken a commendable interest in local affairs, has served as road overseer, also as constable, and in performing the duties of office has become familiar with the people and all the surrounding country, in the northern part of Sioux county. He is a loyal Republican.

WILLIAM C. COUCH.

William C. Couch a prominent resident of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, also a veteran of the United States army, is one of the leading men of his community. He occupies a pleasant home in Brownson precinct, where he owns a well improved farm and enjoys the respect and confidence of everyone in his locality. Mr. Couch was born in Lincoln county, middle Tennessee, on July 17, 1840. He is a son of Benjamin F. and Rebecca (Casey) Couch, who died in 1854, aged sixty-three respectively, in Madison county, Missouri. whither they emigrated in 1850. Mr. Couch carried the mail between Frederickstown and Iron Mountain from the fall of 1863 until the spring of 1864, when he secured employment in the quartermaster's department of the Union army at Iron Mountain. In September he was captured in one of Price's raids, and carried as prisoner through De Soto, Potosi, Lexington, and on down into the country of the Cherokee and Choctaw nations. Escaping about November 24th he made his way back to Pilot Knob, December 4th, and resumed his duties. He enlisted at Alton, Illinois, in the Fifth United States Volunteer Infantry, and served all over the west, being at times at Fort Leavenworth, Fort Riley, Fort Kearney, Fort Collins, Fort Halleck, Fort Reno, Fort C. F. Smith, Fort Laramie, Fort Phil Kearney, Fort Saunders, Fort Morgan, Fort Sedgwick, Fort McPherson and other parts. Much of the time he was wagon master of the regimental train. He also made a trip of inspection in the service of the government, in company with General Grant and General Sherman and other famous army officers, and had intimate acquaintance with many of the noted men of those days. On October 11, 1866, he received honorable discharge from the army at Fort Kearney, Nebraska, and remained at that fort up to June of the following year. He next went to Fort Fetterman, remained a short time, then came to Cheyenne county with the wagon train and there turned over the train to Colonel E. B. Carter, who was stationed at the mouth of Lodgepole creek during the month of July of that year. Mr. Couch was in the employ of the government up to September, 1868, then worked at overland freighting during the time there were so many encounters with the Indians in western Nebraska, and he had several serious experiences and a number of narrow escapes from them. He was wounded a number of times during skirmishes with the redskins, and was extremely fortunate in getting out of the affrays without severe injury. For several years he followed freighting, travelling all over the western part of Nebraska, between Sidney and the Black Hills, and saw every phase of a frontiersman's life. After giving up this work in about the year 1883, he filed on a homestead in section 4, township 13, range 49, on Lodgepole creek, on which he settled permanently. He purchased additional land in the vicinity which he still owns. His present home is on section 20, township 14, range 50, also situated on the creek, and here he has a good home and well improved farm and ranch, owning six hundred and forty acres, all good land. Until retiring in the fall of 1908 he engaged in farming and stock raising. He keeps about one hundred head of cattle and from twenty-five to fifty horses the year around. A view of the residence and the large stone barn for which the place is distinguished is to be found on another page in our work.

Mr. Couch was married on June 13, 1875, at Cheyenne, Wyoming, to Miss Arabella Hutchings. Mr. and Mrs. Couch have reared several adopted children, and they form a happy and congenial family, occupying a pleasant and comfortable home, all being popular members of society in their community.

In political faith Mr. Couch is a Democrat.

FRANK RIHN.

Frank Rihn, a highly respected citizen and old settler of western Nebraska, is among the prominent farmers of Union Valley precinct, Cheyenne county, where he owns a valuable estate. He resides on a fine farm and ranch of six hundred and forty acres, a large part of which is under good cultivation; he well merits the success which has come to him from his labors and the high station which he holds as an agriculturist and worthy citizen.

Mr. Rihn was born in the village of Westhouser, Alsace, Germany, then a part of France, November 15, 1853, and lived to the age of fourteen years in his native province. Then with two older brothers he came to America, sailing from Havre, France, in September, 1868, landing in New York after a voyage of nineteen days. Our subject was the eighth in a family of nine children, six boys and three girls, born to their parents, who lived and died in Alsace. The three boys settled first near St. Jacobs, in Madison county, Illinois, where our subject lived with and worked for an uncle for one year; then he was employed for two years by William Faires, a well known farmer of that region. Later he spent one year in St. Louis, driving a delivery wagon for a brother who was engaged in the bakery business. He then returned to Illinois, entering the employ of his uncle again. He remained in the employ of his uncle for some years, during which time he sowed ten acres of wheat on his own account, having in the meantime bought a horse. For the following five years he worked for Nicholas Michaels, in whose employ he remained until he came west in 1884. In the fall of 1884, he came to Nebraska and filed on a homestead and tree claim, near Sidney. He remained in Nebraska but a short time, however returning to Illinois. In the spring of 1885 he settled with his family permanently in Cheyenne county. He was the first settler on the North Divide, passing through all the pioneer experiences of the early period of Nebraska settlement. He saw settlers come into the region, strive hard to build up homes, fail and abandon their homesteads, while others were more successful and remained through the early years and secured a competency. He was one of the latter class, and although he had a hard time to get along during some years when crops were failures, and there seemed to be no way to make a living, yet he stuck bravely to his farm and is now one of the well-to-do men of his locality. He has a good farm, with a complete set of substantial buildings, located in section 30, township 16, range 49, and farms about one hundred and sixty acres, running about seventy head of cattle and fifteen horses. An especially substantial stone dwelling has replaced the old sod house in which the family at first resided. A large and convenient barn was built in 1907. A view of the place will be found on another page in this work.

Mr. Rihn was married to Miss Minnie Branger, born in Madison county, Illinois, the wedding taking place on February 16, 1882. Together they went through pioneer times in Nebraska, and raised an interesting family of eight children, who are named as follows: Mary, Katherine, Lena, William, Edwin, Julia, Emma and Joseph, all living at home at the present time. Katherine and Lena are successful teachers in the county.

Our subject has always been active in local and county affairs, having been the first assessor of his precinct, and also served as justice of the peace for a number of years, and was county commissioner during the years 1903-1904 and 1905, proving a faithful and efficient public official. For many years past he has been a member of the school board in district No. 138. Politically he is a Democrat. In religious matters he was reared in the Catholic church

 WILLIAM COLMAN, DECEASED.

Prior to his demise the gentleman whose name heads this personal history resided on his valuable estate on section 33, township 31, range 46, Sheridan county, Nebraska, and was well known throughout this locality as a successful and prosperous agriculturist and stockman. Mr. Coleman was born in county Antrim, Ireland, in 1837, and raised on a farm there. He remained at home up to 1859, when he was married to Miss Rachel Gaston, a native of Antrim county also, born in 1840, daughter of John Gaston, of French descent.

The week following their marriage the young couple set out for America, landing in New York in May, 1859, and their first home was at Bristol, Rhode Island, where Mr. Colman worked in the sugar refinery for one year.

The following year they came to Lenawee county, Michigan, where he bought a twenty-acre farm and had a very nice little home, remaining there for four years. In 1864 they lived near Valparaiso on a farm, where he did lumbering and teaming. In April, 1879, they moved to Knox county, Nebraska, and took a homestead, and there our subject did well for seven years. However he was anxious to get where his children could take up homesteads, so in 1885 the family came to Sheridan county and took pre-emption on their present place and also took up a timber claim located a short distance south of it. The family lived in a tent on first coming to the locality until they were able to put up a log house, being compelled to haul the logs from Pine Ridge. On coming here they drove through the country from Knox county with a team and wagon, and came across the country from Indiana to Knox county in the same way, the trip taking four weeks on the road. Mr. Colman was in poor health, and they traveled this way in the hopes of benefiting him. After settling here they steadily improved the farm and lived on it up to the time of his death which occurred November 18, 1903, from Bright's disease. He had taken a trip to the coast in 1903 in hopes of finding relief, but it was of no avail, and in his death the community suffered the loss of one of its most influential and public-spirited citizens. He was always first in the offer of aid when there was a question of improving the conditions of his locality and was generally beloved by all who knew him. The family still live on the home farm, and continue in stock raising in the same manner of the father, not depending entirely upon crops, so did not experience such heavy losses as many of the settlers in this locality did during the dry years. In 1891 the crops were destroyed by hail storms and he became somewhat discouraged, and did not buy any more land from that time on. The farm contains six hundred and forty acres, of which two hundred acres are under cultivation, but his family only farms a small piece now, running a bunch of stock on the balance of the farm. His widow and son William live on the homestead and are contented to remain, not caring to go back east to live. Mrs. Colman returned to Indiana for a visit in 1884, but found a great change and everything seemed unfamiliar, so was glad to return to this part of the country where they had built up a pleasant home and found new friends. They have gone through their share of pioneer experiences, and helped build up two counties in this state, and the name of Mr. Colman will always be a familiar one to the early settlers in this section of the country. When he first settled in Knox county he had to freight for about sixty miles, and during the winter of 1883-'84 freighted to Fort Pierre, South Dakota. On one trip he got caught in Chamberlain and was compelled to stay all winter, as the river was neither frozen or open and there was no way in which to cross.

Mr. Colman's family consists of the following children: Margaret, Elizabeth, Anna, Jennie, Hannah, Nancy, John, Myrtle, William, Katie, May, Eva and Emma, two of whom died in infancy. Mr. John Colman is now serving a three-year term as county commissioner. He was elected in the fall of 1908.

CHARLES STEWART.

Among the highly esteemed citizens of Dawes county, a man of sterling character and strictest integrity, we mention the name of Mr. Charles Stewart, who resides on section 24, township 33, range 51, where he has spent many years in building up a good home and farm, and incidentally gained an enviable reputation as a leading old settler.

Mr. Stewart was born in Lee county, Iowa, in 1861, on a farm. His father, Erastus Stewart, was of old American blood, from Indiana, and followed farming all his life, he having married Miss Elizabeth Woods, of Iowa. Our subject was raised in Iowa, where he received a good education, attending the common schools, and later the Commercial College at Ft. Madison, Iowa. After leaving college he taught school in his native state for three years, also in Nebraska, after he came to this state, following the work for twelve years here in the neighborhood of Whitney and in that town. In 1885 he left home and came to Dawes county, locating on a pre-emption in section 23, township 33, range 51, and remained there until he had proved up. His first building was a dugout, and he later put up a log cabin, and lived there for several years. In 1887 he moved to section 24, where he took up a homestead and proved up, building up the place in good shape, and also has taken a Kincaid homestead additional. The log cabin in which our subject lived while proving up on his pre-emption is now being occupied by another party who is homesteading a claim. Mr. Stewart lived in a dugout for about ten years, and while there went through drouths, and many discouragements, losing his crops several seasons, and that was the hardest times in his career, and he would not care to go through the same experience again. He now owns a ranch of thirty-two hundred acres, located along the White river, Big Cottonwood creek and Dry creek. Here he has running water the year around for his stock, and he has all of his ranch fenced. There are comfortable and substantial buildings on the ranch, and he has two windmills. He is engaged quite extensively in stock raising, running a large number of cattle and horses for market.

Mr. Stewart was married in 1885, to Miss Belle Anderson, daughter of Salvadore Anderson, a farmer of Pennsylvania. To Mr. and Mrs. Stewart the following children have been born: Grover C., Claude J. and Clem W.

Mr. Stewart devotes his whole time and attention to the building up of his home and ranch, and has met with deserved success. He is a loyal Democrat.

CAPT. H. T. SWEET.

Captain H. T. Sweet, one of the leading pioneers of Dawes county, Nebraska, resides in his pleasant home in Chadron, where he has always been highly esteemed as one of the foremost citizens and public-spirited men of his community. He is the owner of valuable property in that town, as well as in different parts of Dawes county, all of which has been accumulated by dint of perseverance and good management.

Mr. Sweet was born in Vermont in 1833. His birthplace was within eight miles of the famous Bennington battlefield. His father, John Sweet, was of English descent, and his mother was Lucy Exford, also of American blood, born in Vermont, both later settling in Nebraska, where they died. The father was a Methodist minister, and followed that calling all his life.

Our subject grew up in Vermont and at the breaking out of the war enlisted in the Second New York Infantry, and later was with the Twelfth New York Cavalry, and followed a soldier's fortunes for over four years, building up a brilliant record for himself in the army. He saw service in Vermont, North and South Carolina and Tennessee. Was in the Peninsula campaign, with Sherman to the sea, also at Bentonville. On March 8, 1865, he was severely wounded at Wise Forks in North Carolina. At the close of the war he had won the title of captain and quartermaster. At the close of the war he returned to Vermont and remained there for some little time, then came to Illinois, where his wife had moved some time previous, while he was still in the war, and there he followed rail-roading, being employed on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway as trainman, also was on construction work for eighteen years, and was obliged to resign his post on account of ill health. He first came to Nebraska in 1880, and came through the western part of the state, footing it from Valentine to White river. He spent the first few weeks camping out in the locality, and finally located at Lone Tree creek, north of Whitney, and was the first white man to settle in that part. He first built a sod shanty and lived in it for a few years, and started in the stock business. In the fall of 1886 he was joined by his family, and remained on the farm up to 1903, then moved to Chadron, selling his place, and has since made his home in town.

Mr. Sweet was married in 1853 to Betsey A. Camp, of Vermont. To Mr. and Mrs. Sweet were born seven children, namely: James Henry, John, Eva Estelle, William, Nancy, Frank and Frederick. Mrs. Sweet died in Nebraska, while the family still lived on the ranch. In 1902 our subject was married again, to Elizabeth O. Griffith, a pioneer on Ash creek, there being no children by this marriage. Mrs. Sweet is the owner of a fine ranch in that locality and built it up in good shape by her own individual efforts and is well known as an old settler in that vicinity, and pioneer in Dawes county. By her first marriage she had four children: Isaac, Sherman, John and Maud Griffith.

Mr. Sweet has always taken an active interest in local affairs, and has been a delegate to numerous conventions, also served on the central committee, representing the Republican party.

LUTHER G. PITTS.

Luther G. Pitts, one of the very few really "old-timers" of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, left in that section, resides on his valuable estate in Potter precinct. He has watched this region grow from a barren prairie to its present fertile state, and has been an important factor in that growth and development, having taken an active and leading part in every movement started to advance the public good since locating in western Nebraska.

Mr. Pitts was born in Kalamazoo county, Michigan, twelve miles from the city of Kalamazoo, on March 27, 1852. When he was a small boy he went with his mother to Branch county, Michigan, where they spent a few years, and then went to northern Michigan. At that time he was fourteen years of age, and he soon afterward began working in the lumber camps in that vicinity, on log drives, etc. He later went from Michigan to Iowa where he spent two years, then came to Cedar county, Nebraska, lived there for four months, and from there came to Cheyenne county, arriving here October 7, 1885. He filed on a homestead on section 34, township 13, range 52, and later took a Kincaid homestead on section 6, township 12, proving up on one and still lives on the other. He passed through all the early Nebraska times, starting with very limited means when he landed here, his sole capital being a team, wagon and a dollar and fifty cents in cash, and from this small beginning has accumulated his present valuable ranch. He has been engaged in mixed farming and stock raising, cultivating about fifty acres, and runs over two hundred head of stock. The ranch contains nine hundred and sixty acres, all fine land, with plenty of pasture and hay land, some timber, and a good water supply.

In March, 1882, Mr. Pitts was united in marriage to Miss Ruth Hysell, at Pentwater, Michigan. Mrs. Pitts died August 1, 1900, leaving a family of seven children, who are named as follows: Nettie, wife of Calvin Morfort, living at Cheyenne, Wyoming; and the balance at home; Lillie, Elga, Ray, Eunice, Roland and Oren. They are all bright and intelligent, and have been a great help to their parents in carrying on the home ranch. Mr. Pitts is a loyal Republican, deeply interested in county, state and national affairs. He is a man of superior ability, up-to-date and progressive in every way, and a great reader, keeping thoroughly abreast of the times. A man of strict integrity, who justly takes a pride in his honesty, and the fact that all he has was made honestly, he is a splendid type of the highest grade of Nebraska's citizenship. He stands high in the esteem of all who know him, and among the business men and banks of the county his word is regarded as good as a bond.

JOHN A. WILSON.

During the quarter of a century that the gentleman here named has resided in Keya Paha county, he has been an important factor in the development of the agricultural and commercial resources of the county, and he stands in a foremost place among the old settlers and substantial citizens of Garfield precinct, where he owns a pleasant home and a very valuable farm property.

Mr. Wilson was born in Tippecanoe, Boone county, Indiana, on August 16, 1850. His father, William Wilson, was a miller by trade, of Irish stock, and his mother, Martha Reed, was of German descent. Our subject was the fifth child in a family of ten, all of whom came west to settle on homes of their own. He was reared and educated in his native county, and at the age of seventeen years started out for himself, working at milling until twenty years of age, but was compelled to quit that work because of failing eyesight, and took up farming. In 1873 he went to Iowa, and remained there until 1884, then immigrated to Keya Paha county, taking a homestead on section 17, township 32, range 21, which his son occupies while he resides on a homestead of two hundred and sixty acres in section 25, township 33, range 22, which he uses for a horse ranch. He has bought more land from time to time, and now is proprietor of three hundred and twenty acres, all good farming land, cultivating about ninety acres, and has twelve acres of fine alfalfa, eight under irrigation, and in 1908 cut forty tons from two and a half acres of the latter. He has set out an orchard of six hundred apple trees, also a great deal of small fruit, and from this source receives an annual income of six hundred dollars each year, and this will increase each year as his trees grow larger and bear larger crops.

He has an irrigation plant in operation with which he can irrigate about ten acres of his orchard, and without a doubt his is the finest orchard in this portion of the state, a fact in which he takes much pride.

Mr. Wilson keeps thirty head of horses all the time, which he raises for the market, also other stock for farm use. He has a fine residence and home, and everything that goes to make up a comfortable and pleasant rural life. When he first landed in this county he had a hard enough time to get started. He has gone through all the pioneer experiences, beginning with only seventy-five cents in money, living in a dugout for several years, then a log house, and many times not knowing how he was going to earn enough to keep his family from want. At one time he and his family lived for six weeks on nothing but potatoes, and although those times are long since past and they are now surrounded with every comfort their thoughts often go back to the time of their hardships and privations and have no desire to again go through them.

Mr. Wilson was married in Indiana in 1870 to Miss Rebecca Trout, of German descent, and they are the parents of the following children: John Henry, James, Jennie, wife of David Overstreet, of Keya Paha county; and Harry, all living near the old homestead. One son, Harvey, their first born, was drowned while the family lived in Iowa.

All of Mr. Wilson's time is devoted to caring for his farm and orchards, and he has never taken an active part in politics, although he has always been a strong Democrat. The family belong to the Freewill Baptist church of Springview, and take an active interest in its advancement and prosperity.

BERNHARD UHLKEN.

Bernhard Uhlken, a prominent farmer and ranchman of Dawes county, and a man whose unremitting efforts toward success have been rapidly rewarded, was born in Oldenberg, Germany, in 1856, a son of a clothing merchant of that place. The early years of our subject's life were spent in his native land, where he worked as a laborer and farmer. He was married in Germany to Miss Minnie Molstad in 1889. She was born in Germany in 1865. This happy union was blessed with four children, Bernhard, Johanna, Minnie and Sophia.

Realizing that the opportunities to be found in America were extremely inviting to those willing to embrace them, Mr. Uhlken accompanied by his family immigrated to this country in 1893. He spent two years in Saline county, Illinois, where he hired out. He was economical, saved his money, and learning of the great opportunities which western Nebraska held out to the ambitious and thrifty, he came west to Dawes county in 1895, where he purchased his present farm in section 9, township 30, range 50. There was nothing but a log house on the place when it came into his possession, but to a man possessing the thrift and energy of Mr. Uhlken this was no obstacle. He went to work with a strong will, and in a remarkable short space of time began to realize the reward of his untiring efforts. He now has a substantial and commodious stone house, a barn, forty by sixty-six feet, and good sheds. He has added adjacent lands to his original possessions, and is now the proprietor of a ranch of eight hundred and twenty-seven acres of good land. One hundred and twenty acres of this he has under cultivation, eighty acres are of fine timber land, while the balance is pasture and hay land.

While Mr. Uhlken has worked hard and devoted his time and energy toward making for himself and family a comfortable home in Dawes county, he has taken a lively interest in local affairs, and is a man who enjoys the respect and esteem of the surrounding community. Since coming to Dawes county his success has been most remarkable, and his upright and honorable career should be an encouragement to the young men of the present generation, as in it they can see what thrift and industry, honesty and integrity can always accomplish.

JOSHUA H. BROWN.

Joshua H. Brown, a prominent resident and old-timer of Deuel county, Nebraska, makes his home in Chappell precinct, where he has a very extensive ranch and pleasant surroundings. Mr.

Brown was born in Mercer county, Illinois, July 6, 1841. His father was one of the earliest pioneers of that county, settling in the region in 1831.

Our subject grew up in his native county, living there until he was twenty-one, enlisting in Company H, Eighty-fourth Illinois Infantry, on July 22, 1862. He saw hard service as a soldier, taking part in the battles of Perryville and Stone River, and was through the entire campaign march from Louisville to Nashville under General Buell, following Bragg's army. His company went into winter quarters at Nashville in December, 1862. At the battle of Stone River he received quite a severe wound, but was only disabled for a short time, and never left his regiment for a day. Afterward he was in the battles of Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, through the Atlanta campaign and the battles of Franklin and Nashville, seeing every phase of army life and suffering all the hardships of war. He was mustered out of service at Springfield, Illinois, in June, 1865, at that time returning to Mercer county, remaining there up to the spring of 1888, following farming all of the time. While living in that locality he was prominent as a public-spirited citizen, and served as sheriff of his county, holding that office during 1879-1880.

Mr. Brown first came to Nebraska in the fall of 1885, when he took a tree claim, locating in Deuel county, afterward spending considerable time away, and then settled permanently on a homestead on section 18, township 13, range 44, in the spring of 1888. This homestead is now his home farm, and he is proprietor of eleven hundred and twenty acres altogether. He has improved his ranch in fine shape, having about two hundred acres under cultivation, and is engaged extensively in the stock business, keeping about one hundred head of cattle and a bunch of horses and mules. He is one of the wealthy men of his region, and highly esteemed as a friend and neighbor.

On January 1, 1868, our subject married Mrs. Mary Rodgers, whose maiden name was Mary Dilley, born and reared in Mercer county, Illinois, their marriage occurring there. They have a family of six children living, and had the misfortune to lose a little girl in 1881, when she was a baby a year old. The living children are named as follows: Vinnie R., wife of A. A. Bradley, now living in Kansas; Gus B., married, and occupying a farm of his own which adjoins the ranch of his father; Cyrus D., Joshua Logan, Vernice and Benjamin F., attending the Agricultural College at Lincoln, Nebraska. The three older sons all have homesteads of their own in the county, on which they have proved up.

The whole family are exceedingly bright and well educated young people, nearly all having been teachers in Deuel county at one time. They are a most interesting group, of whom their parents are justly proud.

Politically Mr. Brown is a stanch Republican, and takes a leading part in local affairs. He has built up a fine home and ranch from the wild prairie land, and has good buildings, timber, etc.

OTTO PERSO.

Otto Perso, a prosperous and highly respected farmer of Davison precinct, Cheyenne county, has a well kept and comfortable estate in sections 1 and 2, where he has spent many years of his career. He owns a ranch consisting of eight hundred acres, and is one of the well-to-do, progressive farmers and ranchmen of his locality.

Mr. Perso was born in Monroe county, Wisconsin, May 16, 1865. His father, Ferdinand Perso, a native of Brandenburg, married Mrs. Minnie Zibbell, whose husband had died on the voyage to America. Otto followed farm work and attended the country schools until he came west, arriving in Cheyenne county in the fall of 1886. He immediately filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in section 2, township 16, range 50, and proved up on the place, and later added to it, until his boundaries enclose the acreage above mentioned. He cultivates one hundred and thirty acres, growing small grains, and raises considerable stock as well, having seventy-five head of cattle and a small bunch of horses. He makes a specialty of the raising of high-grade Hereford cattle, and has some fine animals of this breed at the head of his herd. A typical westerner, he is a recognized authority on stock in his section of the country, having had a long experience in ranching. His buildings are far above the average of western country dwellings and his house is furnished in keeping with outward appearance. A large stone barn shelters his stock and a new granary has a capacity for storing large crops of grain. The place is the subject of one of our finest illustrations, which will be found on another page of this work.

Mr. Perso was married December 12, 1893, in Monroe county, Wisconsin, to Miss Emma Harr, a daughter of John and Caroline (Slaver) Harr, natives of Germany. She was born and reared in La Crosse county, Wisconsin, where her father died several years ago, her mother still living in Wisconsin. Four children have been born to our subject and his estimable wife, who are named as follows: Edith, Vida, Ralph and Edwin, all at home. Mr. Perso was one of a family of nine children, seven of whom are still living, and Mrs. Perso is one of fourteen children, all of whom are living at the present writing.

Mr. Perso is actively awake to the interests of his community, and aids materially in its advancement along commercial and agricultural lines, also taking a keen interest in local and county politics, voting the Democratic ticket. He is a member of the Sidney lodge, Modern Woodmen of America, and with the family, a member of the Methodist church.

HENRY SCHURMANN.

Henry Schurmann, one of the younger residents of Brown county, Nebraska, is well known as a progressive farmer and worthy citizen of his locality. He is a native of Kansas, born at Yates Center, November 3, 1881. His father, Rudolph Schurmann, was a prominent farmer in Dodge county, living for many years about a mile and a half east of the town of Scribner, coming to this state from Indiana, where he was born, his father settling there in the early days as an emigrant from Germany and a well known Lutheran minister, also following that calling at times after locating in Indiana. Our subject's mother was born in Germany, coming to America about 1870. She was a lady of most estimable character and charming personality, and her death, which occurred on March 3, 1906, was deeply deplored by her devoted family and a host of friends. Rudolph Schurmann only survived his wife by about one year, when he was also laid to rest.

In 1868 the father of Rudolph Schurmann settled in Iowa county, Iowa, and there the latter grew to manhood, when he was twenty-one leaving his parents' home and emigrating to Scribner, Nebraska. He traveled the entire distance by team with a covered wagon, camping out along the way, the trip taking about ten days, and upon reaching Dodge county immediately homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres, which he proved up on, and later relinquished on eighty acres, retiring from his farming operations in 1896, when he purchased a house in Scribner and made that his home until the time of his death. He was one of the leading citizens of that place, serving as postmaster from 1896 to 1900 under the McKinley regime. After locating there he bought a half interest in a meat market and later secured the entire business, running the establishment for two years then sold out. His wife's health was poor much of the time, and in 1903 they took a trip to Germany, leaving in May of that year and returning in October.

Our subject lived at home until he was fourteen years of age, then worked out on farms in the vicinity for three years, at that time going to Casper, Wyoming, where he was employed on a sheep ranch owned by P. Nicheleyson, remaining for one year, then returned to Brown county. In the spring of 1900 he rented his brother's farm, which lies four and a half miles southwest of Ainsworth, harvested one crop, which he sold to his brother, then came to Scribner on a visit and from here went to Washington and obtained the position of night watchman in a saw mill, and spent about a year there. He returned to Nebraska and worked for Tom Seals on the latter's farm near Ainsworth for about one year, in the spring of 1903 again entering the employ of Squire Jones, helping him trail a herd of three hundred cattle to Pierre, South Dakota, and on the return trip bringing seventy-five head of horses with them. In July of the latter year he began working for Joseph Bishop, engaged in farming and was with him until April 1, 1904.

In the spring of 1906, Mr. Schurmann came to his present location, in section 15, township 29, range 22, which at that time was owned by his wife's mother. The place contained one hundred and sixty acres, and to this he has since added another quarter section, and has made a fine farm of it. He is interested to a large extent in grain raising and dairying, having a fine herd of cattle, and is making a success of his undertakings. The place is improved in splendid shape with good buildings, having a fine house, large barns and all necessary buildings, including a concrete milk house, barn, house and other buildings being supplied with running water from two good wells and windmills, supply tanks, etc. There is a nice grove surrounding the residence part of the farm, and every convenience, such as telephone service, mail route, etc. A view of the place will be found elsewhere in this work.

Mr. Schurmann was married on March 14, 1906, to Miss Floy E. Hutchinson, born at Kasson, Minnesota, daughter of Charles M. Hutchinson and Rosalie Dudley Hutchinson, both natives of Ohio. Mrs. Schurmann's father was a carpenter, and her childhood days were spent in her native state, the family coming to Nebraska in October, 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Schurmann are members of the Lutheran church of Scribner, and are highly esteemed in the community. He is a Republican and takes an active part in party affairs as well as the general advancement of his community.

C. H. KUHNS.

C. H. Kuhns, the popular and efficient postmaster of Maxwell, and one of the most competent officials who has ever held that office, is also a business man of enterprise and capability.

Mr. Kuhns is a native of Missouri, and came to Nebraska in 1872 with his father, Jerry Kuhns, from Jasper county, Iowa, who took up a tract of land in Fillmore county and began farming and building up a home. The family remained on this farm for some time, and in 1883 our subject moved to Lincoln county and obtained employment as a clerk in one of the stores of North Platte, holding this position for five years. He was industrious and energetic, and kept hard at work, saving his money, and in 1894 he opened up an establishment of his own in Maxwell. His entire capital was three hundred dollars in cash, and although this was not a very large start he began in a small way and gradually increased his stock and by giving the people what they desired and strict honesty in all his dealings, built up a thriving trade in this and neighboring localities. He now has a wide patronage, doing a heavy business with the farmers all over Lincoln, Logan and adjoining counties. He now owns the store which he occupies, a comfortable modern dwelling house, and other town property, and is one of the prosperous business men of the town, and a worthy citizen. In 1899 he was appointed postmaster at Maxwell under President McKinley, and later re-appointed by President Roosevelt, and has faithfully performed his duties in the discharge of this work. He also takes an active part in all local commerce and has served acceptably the people of his community in acting as treasurer of the Maxwell schools for two terms. He is also a notary public, having held this position for two terms, and has represented his locality on the county central committee.

He was married in 1891 to Miss Minnie Brown, daughter of I. W. Brown, who is a veteran of the Civil war, serving for four years and four months in the Second Kansas Volunteer Cavalry. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kuhns, namely: Vernon, Raymond and Martha.

Mr. Kuhns is a stanch Republican.

JOHN W. BARTLEY.

John W. Bartley, residing at Old Indian Crossing, on the Snake river, is an old settler and highly respected citizen of Cherry county, Nebraska, with his home on section 5, township 30, range 35.

Mr. Bartley was born on a farm in Boone county, Iowa, August 24, 1868, and has spent all his life in farming. His father, James Bartley, was an American, of Irish descent, and served in a Kansas regiment during the Civil war. He married Rebecca Case, a native of Ohio, and they had a family of five children, our subject being the third member. At the age of fifteen he started out for himself, coming to Holt county, Nebraska, where he worked out for two years. In 1885 he came to Cherry county, working on the Hart ranch, and remained for three years, then went to Montana where he followed ranching for six years. In 1898 he returned to Nebraska and the following year took up his present ranch as a homestead, engaging in horse raising, later adding a herd of cattle. He keeps about seventy-five horses, and seventy-five head of cattle, and has been very successful from the beginning. Mr. Bartley now owns a section of good land, and his mother, who keeps house for him, has a claim of four hundred and eighty acres lying south of his ranch, which he farms for her. He is well satisfied with the result of his labors since coming here, and intends to make this his home for the future. His entire time is devoted to the building up of his home and ranch, and although he is interested in local affairs which tend to the development and advancement of his locality, he does not take any active part in public affairs. In political affairs he is a Democrat, and actively interested in the welfare of his party.

FRANK I. MEYERS.

Frank I. Meyers, whose fine farm in Sioux county is a credit to his locality, is a man of untiring energy, and is classed among the substantial agriculturists and ranchmen of the community. He has cleared a wild timber and prairie tract and has improved it in good shape, now being owner of four hundred and eighty acres and classed among the prosperous and leading citizens.

Mr. Meyers was born in Fayette county, Iowa, in 1866, on a farm. His father, John Meyers, was born in Pennsylvania and came west, where he was an early settler in Sioux county, locating here in 1886, before the railroad was laid through the section, and he was obliged to freight from Crawford and Chadron. His wife's maiden name was Frances Augerner, born in Austria. Our subject was raised in Iowa, where he was obliged to help in carrying on the home farm, and when he was about nineteen years of age the family came to eastern Nebraska, locating in Dickson county. He learned the blacksmith's trade, and has worked at it almost constantly all his life, off and on. Three years were spent in Montrose, Sioux county, Nebraska, where he had a blacksmith shop, and he settled on his present homestead in 1890, still working at his trade, having a shop on his farm, which he has run for about eighteen years. He also worked hard to develop his farm and build up a good home, and succeeded splendidly, accumulating a fine property, all of which has been gained by his own unaided efforts and strict attention to duty. He has about forty acres under cultivation, raising good crops of small grain, and he keeps quite a good deal of stock. Besides his homestead, Mr. Meyers has a piece of land which he took under the Kincaid act, his home being located on section 15, township 33, range 54.

Our subject came to this region with but eighteen dollars in money and one horse as capital, and from this small beginning he has become one of the well-to-do men of his locality. He has met with some failures, and experienced different hardships in building up his home, one instance of which was in 1894, when he lost his blacksmith shop and all its contents by fire, entailing a loss of several hundred dollars. However, he has rebuilt it, and made many improvements since that time. Mr. Meyers has always taken an active part in the upbuilding of his locality, and his business and social standing is beyond question.

PETER LINGWALL.

Peter Lingwall, an extensive farmer and stock raiser of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, makes his home on section 2, township 13, range 52. He is the owner of six hundred and forty acres of land, and has forty head of cattle and about fifteen horses, besides quite a good deal of smaller stock, on his farm. He cultivates about forty-five acres, raising small grain, and has met with remarkable success in his agricultural and stock raising operations.

Mr. Lingwall was born in Sweden on May 24, 1849, grew up there and came to America in 1868, at the age of nineteen years. He first settled in Illinois, remained there for about eleven years, then came to eastern Nebraska in 1879, and after farming there for some years struck out for the western part of the state, landing in Cheyenne county finally in 1889, and settling on a school section, located in township 14, range 52. He has since acquired additional land, and his home ranch is now situated in section 2, township 13, range 52. He has put up all good buildings and improvements, and has a fine property and good ranch. His postoffice is Sidney, which is also his nearest trading point.

Mr. Lingwall was married at Columbus, Nebraska, August 26, 1880, to Anna Prince, and they have a family of three children, namely: Peter Olaf, now married and living in Potter; John, living on the home ranch, and Anna still with her parents. The family have a very pleasant home, and enjoy a host of warm friends and are prominent in the affairs of their community. Mr. Lingwall is a Republican.

CAPT. JOHN S. RICHMOND.

Captain John S. Richmond, one of the enterprising and energetic citizens of Brown county, Nebraska, is one of the early settlers of this region and has spent many years in building up a good home and farm for himself, while aiding materially in developing the agricultural and commercial resources of his locality.

Mr. Richmond was born in Middletown, Butler county, Ohio, November 25, 1838. His father, Sheldon Richmond, was a wool carder by trade, born in Montpelier, Vermont, and his mother, Elizabeth Currick, a Kentuckian, was born near Covington. There was a family of five children, our subject being the third member. He was reared in his native state, the family moving to Indiana, near Valparaiso, in Porter county, about 1848, and later to LaPorte county, where they were among the pioneer settlers. In 1856 they moved to Sangamon county, Illinois, near Old Berlin. At the breaking out of the Civil war our subject enlisted in Company I, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, the first company accepted and sent into service from the state. He saw service at Chattanooga, Nashville, Vicksburg, Savannah and through the Carolinas, and then went to Washington where his company was color company with the flag wreathed in flowers at the grand review. He was wounded in battle near Atlanta, being hit with a twelve-pound shell, rendering him unconscious and keeping him in the hospital for a month. A comrade throwing the shell out of the breastworks before it burst was all that saved the lives of many of them. During the time he served as a soldier he had risen from a private to be captain of the company, and earned the reputation of a brave and faithful leader. He was mustered out at Louisville and discharged at Springfield.

After the war Mr. Richmond went back to Illinois, and was married December 20, 1866, to Miss Jennie Parker, a native of Sangamon county, Illinois. Three children were born of this union, namely: Lou, wife of George A.

Fairman, a druggist in Ainsworth; John F., in the drug business at Salt Lake, Utah, and Henrietta, deceased. The mother died July 24, 1894. In 1873 the subject came to Nebraska, settling in Saline county, where the family was among the pioneers. There he farmed until 1884, when he came to Brown county for the purpose of engaging in stock raising. Here he settled on a homestead in section 32, township 30, range 24, and built the first frame house south of Johnstown and dug the first well in that vicinity which is kept intact today as it was when first dug, including the buckets twenty-four years old. He now has a ranch of six hundred and forty acres, cultivating one hundred acres of this and the rest is in pasture and grass land. He engages principally in stock raising, and has built up a good home and farm.

Mr. Richmond is prominent in politics, a strong Republican, and always attends the county and state conventions as a delegate for his party. In 1888 he was elected county commissioner and served one term. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, although the charter of the post at Johnstown was surrendered because of lack of membership.

PETER LEEF.

Peter Leef, a progressive farmer of Deuel county, resides on the northwest quarter, section 26, township 14, range 44. He is the owner of a fine tract of land, and is a gentleman of untiring energy, perseverance and strict integrity, who well merits his success and high standing as a citizen.

Our subject was born in Sweden, December 7, 1843, lived there until he was a young man twenty-five years of age, then came to America, landing in New York city on July 14, 1868, and coming to Knox county, Illinois, where he lived for fourteen years, working as a coal miner and farmer. From there he moved to Iowa, remained for five years, then came to Nebraska, settling in Deuel county in March, 1887. He immediately filed on a homestead on section 30, township 14, range 43, proved up and succeeded in improving the land in good shape. He later took additional land and now lives on section 26, township 14, range 44, owning the entire west half of the section. He has erected good buildings of all kinds, put up fences, built wells and planted a large number of trees on his ranch, and has one of the best equipped farms and ranches in the vicinity. He has about ninety acres cultivated, and runs quite a bunch of cattle and horses.

Mr. Leef is an old-timer on the table land, being one of the first to settle in the locality, and since his arrival here has taken an active part in the development of the community, passing through all the pioneer experiences and hardships that fell to the lot of the early settlers. He went through the hard years when he was hardly able to make a living, but stuck to his farm, and is now reaping the reward of his many years of perseverance and faithful effort.

Mr. Leef was married in Sweden in the spring of 1868, shortly before striking out for the new world, taking as his bride Miss Martie Seastrom. Together they crossed the sea to seek a competence and build up a home. They have had a family of seventeen children, nine of whom are now living, named as follows: Martie Christina, wife of Otto Amberg, they residing on a ranch adjoining our subject's; Amanda, married to William Moon, living in Denver, Colorado; Jennie, now Mrs. Pat Marvin, residing at Julesburg, Colorado; Emma, wife of Charles Frogd, of Julesburg, Colorado; Annie, wife of Swan Friskopp, living in Deuel county; John, single; Eric, married, also living in this county; Ida, single, and Albine, the two latter living at home. Mr. Leef is a staunch Republican, and is deeply interested in local and national affairs.

CHARLES W. WRIGHT.

One of the best appearing farms in Loup county, one that pleases the eye and shows evidence of the most intelligent care, is that of Charles W. Wright. The passer-by never fails to note the fine orchard, the forest trees growing on this farm, and the comfortable residence. As an old settler Mr. Wright has done his share in advancing the interests of the county and he is referred to as one of the thrifty old timers.

Charles W. Wright was born in Miami county, Ohio, in 1854, and was the son of William B. and Samantha (Tutt) Wright, the former a native of Kentucky, and the latter of Ohio.

Charles W. Wright remained at home assisting in the work on his father's farm in Miami county, Ohio, until 1878, when he came west to Nebraska, engaging in farming in Nemaha county. In 1883 he came to what is now Loup county, before the village of Taylor was started and even before the organization of Loup county. He located a homestead two miles southwest of where Taylor now stands, put up a sod house and lived alone and "batched" for the first ten years, the nearest railroad town being North Loup, sixty or seventy miles distant. Mr. Wright experienced all the discouragements of pioneer life, but he fought them all successfully. When he came he had to drive across country from the distant town of Tecumseh, in Johnson county, Nebraska. He well remembers the county seat fights that have vexed the people of Loup county and his participation in the making of that interesting history. The drouth years were years of hardship for the pioneers and Mr. Wright had his trouble with the rest of his neighbors; one year a total failure of crops and several years when the loss was only partial. But his pluck and industry brought him success, as is evidenced by his finely improved farm of three hundred and twenty acres all thoroughly fenced on all road lines and also with cross fences. Mr. Wright sold out his personal property a few years ago and went to the Pacific coast, but returned to Loup county, saying it was good enough for him.

Charles W. Wright was married in the year 1893 to Miss Lillian Adams, whose father, Henry W. Adams, is an old settler of Loup county. Mr. and Mrs. Wright have three children: Henry, Frank and Cecil, all at school and at home making an interesting family group.

ELI E. LEWIS.

One of the pioneers of Keith county who has attained marked success is Eli E. Lewis. Mr. Lewis was born in Springfield, Illinois, April 12, 1849, his father being Henry Lewis, a farmer by occupation and a native of the east, probably Virginia; he died when Eli was only four years old; his mother, India Slater, was a native of Indiana.

Mr. Lewis received his early training on farms in Illinois, going to Fulton about 1866 where he lived until he was about twenty-six years of age. In 1875 he came to Iowa, settling in Cass county, in an entirely new country, where he was one of the first of the pioneers. He made his home in Iowa for about eight years, removing thence to Colorado and later to Carbondale, Kansas, where he became salesman for a coal company; after two years, he moved to Keith county, Nebraska, in 1885 and thus became one of Nebraska's pioneers. He built a sod shanty on his wild prairie farm and commenced operations in the primitive way of the pioneer; this proved to be across the line on another tract of land; he moved his dwelling and found himself after a careful survey within a few feet of the line, so he built on a third site before he found a permanent abiding place. For six months he "batched it" on his homestead, and was then married to Miss Ella Graham, whose father, James Graham, a native of Pennsylvania, was a farmer and pioneer of Iowa and came to Nebraska with the first settlers; the mother was Lovina McCracken, also a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis have had two children: Mary, now teaching in their home district, and Charles, who assists his father in the work on the ranch. In December, 1908, Mr. Lewis bought four hundred and eighty acres in the daughter's name, comprising the east half of section 27 and the southeast quarter of section 21, township 16, range 41.

Mr. Lewis has worked faithfully to achieve success and has accomplished things in a masterful way. He broke forty acres of land in 1886 and tried farming, but owing to drouth and crop failures he concluded that he could do better at stock raising. And this has been his policy ever since. He has a fine ranch of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres along Clear creek, but he cultivates only about eighty acres of land, devoting the balance to pasturage and hay. Mr. Lewis has certainly performed well his share in the advancement of the community in which he lives. He has held the office of assessor and overseer and has been school director for twelve years. In political sentiment he is Republican.

EDWARD J. SCHILL.

Edward J. Schill, a prosperous and much respected farmer of Sheridan county, Nebraska, is a man of progressive ideas and good business judgment, well known throughout the locality in which he resides as a citizen of true worth.

Mr. Schill was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1866, and raised on his father's farm there. He is a son of Joseph Schill, a native of Germany. His mother, who was Miss Margaret Martin, is a native of Canada, of German descent. When our subject was eighteen years of age he came to the United States and struck out for the west, stopping in Indiana, where he spent two years engaged in farming. He drifted along farther west, and in 1886 landed in this county, putting in the next few years railroading through the western part of the state. During one summer he worked on a railroad in Colorado, and then took a homestead in section 29, township 28, range 46, in Sheridan county, living on this through the winter and working out on ranches during the summer months. In 1890 he started in farming for himself, raised a fair crop, also got a good crop the following year, remained here up to 1896, when he left the farm and came to the sand hills. By this time he and a brother had gotten together about eighty head of stock, having purchased them in the fall of 1895, and they tried farming and stock raising. In this venture he met with fair success. He then settled in the sand hills permanently, and since locating here has devoted his entire attention to stock raising, keeping both cattle and horses, running altogether about four hundred and fifty head. He does most of the work on the ranch himself, but is obliged to hire men during haying time to assist him in putting this up. He is doing well, and is satisfied with the locality, intending to remain here until he has more money than he needs and is not obliged to work. He has plenty of hay and grazing land for his stock here, and leases a portion of his range land.

RESIDENCE OF ELI E. LEWIS,

Mr. Schill was married in 1902 to Miss Nann Blair, a native of Illinois, born in 1881, daughter of David Blair, who came to Illinois from Pennsylvania in 1866, and later settled in eastern Nebraska, coming to this county in 1892. The postoffice in Mr. Schill's locality is named after him. He is not a party man and does not take any active part in political affairs, but votes for the best man.

PAUL WUNDER.

While the gentleman whose name heads this personal history is one of the early settlers of Sioux county, Nebraska, he is a comparatively young man, and for the time he has been engaged in the farming and ranching business he has succeeded admirably, and is now one of the well-to-do and progressive men of his locality. Mr. Wunder has always lived with his father and assisted in the operation of the latter's extensive estate, and has, since the death of Mr. Wunder, Sr., on July 17, 1902, assumed entire control of his property, which he has managed to the best advantage, and is rapidly coming to the front as one of the foremost residents of his county. He lives on his Kincaid homestead and manages his father's estate on section 11, township 33, range 54.

Paul Wunder was born in Illinois in 1875. His father, Andrew, was a native of Germany, grew up and was married there in 1865 to Miss Barbara Wunder, who is now seventy years of age and quite active. They raised a family of six children, as follows: Maggie, Kate, Peter, Paul, Frank and Henry, and also Kate and Peter, both deceased. After they had been married three years Mr. and Mrs. Wunder came to America, settling in Illinois, where the father followed farming for about nine years, then moved to Iowa and farmed there for eight years, Paul growing up in that state. They next came to Platte county, Nebraska, and farmed for two years, and in 1888 landed in Sioux county, settling on what is now their home ranch. Here they built a small log house and occupied it for many years, going through all the pioneer experiences in developing their farm, meeting with many discouragements and failures in getting started. They saw many hard times, losing crops, then gave up trying to farm and began in the cattle business, which has proven very successful. The ranch now contains twelve hundred and forty acres, all fenced and cross-fenced, and with good buildings and improvements. There are about fifty acres under cultivation, on which good crops are raised.

When Mr. Wunder first located here he landed at Harrison, coming over the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, and settled here at once, where he commenced to improve his claim. Mr. Wunder is a strong Democrat in his political views.

ROBERT H. WALTZ.

Robert H. Waltz, one of the prosperous and successful citizens of Chadron, Dawes county, Nebraska, has lived in this vicinity for the past many years, and is well known as a good business man and progressive agriculturist, and has done his full share in the development of his locality.

Mr. Waltz is a native of Harrison county, Missouri, born in 1857. His father, William Waltz, was a farmer and old settler in Dawes county, coming here in 1885. He was born in Germany, and was married in Ohio to Susan Swan, of American blood, born in Ohio. Our subject was reared in Missouri, where he helped his parents in the farm work and attended the country schools during his boyhood, and in 1885 came to this county by team from Valentine, and after he had been here for six months was joined by his father. He had camped out at night during this time, and many nights slept through severe snow storms. He located on section 9, township 33, range 48, near Chadron. The family lived in a tent at first, and put up the best log house in his region, of commodious size—eighteen by twenty feet and one and a half story high. This house is still in good condition and it is the intention of Mr. Waltz to preserve it as a reminder of the early days he spent here. He built up a good home and farm, owning twelve hundred and eighty acres in all, and has thirty acres of irrigated land. He moved to his farm in section 15 in 1900, and has good buildings and all improvements, and everything in good shape. His house is fitted with every modern convenience, with the water piped through the place. He has been engaged in the ice business for some years past, and made a great success of it. His farm extends along the Bordeaux creek for about a mile, and three-quarters of a mile on Pope creek, so he has plenty of water front to supply ice for his business. He has built up a nice property, but has also been through many hard times, and now deserves the success which he has attained. In the fall of 1891 he was burned out, losing his barn, grain, horses and machinery, which was a severe loss to him at that time. On May 26, 1908, Mr. Waltz had a severe wind storm which blew his barn down and also his ice house, but he has erected fine ones in their stead. He is a hard man to down and never gives up.

Mr. Waltz was married in the fall of 1885, to Miss Ida Brown, daughter of Austin Brown, an old timer in California and Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Waltz have three children, namely: Renny and Ralph, twins; and Harvey, the former being the first pair of twins born in Dawes county. Mr. Waltz has given his children every advantage and they are all well educated.

Although Mr. Waltz is a staunch Democrat he has never had the time to devote to public matters, but lends his influence to the building up of his home community and giving his whole energy to the work of carrying on his farm and home.

JOHN JENIK.

John Jenik, a progressive and enterprising farmer, is one of the early settlers of Cheyenne county. He went onto a wild prairie tract, and has succeeded in building up one of the valuable estates of the locality, and is considered one of the substantial agriculturists of his community. He has been intimately identified with the development of that region and has gained an enviable reputation as a citizen.

Mr. Jenik was born in Bohemia, May 3, 1865, and came to America when ten years of age, with his parents. The family settled in Washington county, Kansas, remained for quite a number of years, and he helped his father build up a good home in that state. In 1887 he came to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, locating on a homestead in section 6, township 13, range 47, and after several years sold out that place and purchased his present farm in section 14, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres. He has since added to this, and is now proprietor of eight hundred acres in all, of which he cultivates about seventy acres, and runs about fifty head of cattle and ten horses. He has erected good buildings of all descriptions on his ranch, has it all fenced, and is doing splendidly in his grain and stock raising operations.

Mr. Jenik was married to Miss Annie Koles, on April 19, 1892, in Cheyenne county. Mrs. Jenik was born in Marshall county, Kansas, the 23d day of August, 1872, and came to Cheyenne county the same year she married our subject. Her mother is still living in Kansas, and the father is dead. Mr. Jenik's father and mother still live on the home ranch on section 12. To Mr. and Mrs. Jenik have been born the following children: Annie, Victoria, John and Angeline Odessa, all at home, and they are a charming and interesting group.

Mr. Jenik is a Republican politically, and takes an active part in all local public affairs. He has served as road overseer in district No. 2, and is school director of district No. 144.

OLIVER J. HYDE.

Probably one of the best known former residents of Keya Paha county is the gentleman above named, who has retired and is now living in Ainsworth, where he has a comfortable and pleasant home, highly esteemed by his fellowmen. Mr. Hyde is also a carpenter by trade, and has worked in this line all over the county. Mr. Hyde was born in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, in 1831. His father, Joseph Hyde, of English descent, was born in Connecticut, and all his life followed farm work, and he married Miss Amanda Jinks, also a native of Connecticut. They had a family of six children, our subject being the fifth in order of birth, and at the age of nine years he started to make his own way in the world, obtaining employment as a sailor on the lake boats and continuing at this business for six years, then worked on the canal for three years. He learned the carpenter's trade in Erie, Pennsylvania, when he was eighteen, and from that time on almost constantly followed that work. He has followed his trade in thirteen states in the Union, and is a thorough master of his business. He moved from Pennsylvania to Indiana, then to Wisconsin, where he enlisted in 1863 in Company F, First Wisconsin Cavalry, serving for a year and a half.

At the close of the war he located in Iowa and worked as a carpenter, next went to Washington where he spent a year and a half, then returned to Iowa. In 1883 he came to Keya Paha county, settling on section 8, township 32, range 22, and has made that his home ever since. The second year he lived on the place he planted a fine grove of trees around his home, carrying some of them from the river. The place is now well timbered with young growing trees. He has a few orchard trees, most of which are small fruit. He has lived through some of the hardest times of the country, but has only lost one entire crop since coming here. He had some fine farming land, and his corn crop averaged about thirty-five bushels per acre. His farm consisted of two hundred and eighty acres, and of this he farmed sixty-five acres, using the balance for hay and pasture. Besides farming Mr. Hyde has built some of the first buildings in Ainsworth, and has the distinction of having erected the first church ever put up there.

Mr. Hyde was married in 1857 to Miss Abigail L. Bowerman, born in the same county our subject was, in 1838. To them have been born the following children: Estelle, Abbie, Anna and Cleo, the last three named married and settled near the old home.

In February Mr. Hyde sold his farm and in May he removed to Ainsworth, where he is enjoying a well earned rest after years of an active and successful life. An interesting event, and one enjoyed but by very few in this life of uncertainties, was the celebration by Mr. and Mrs. Hyde of their golden wedding anniversary on November 19, 1908. Mr. Hyde is one of the leading old-timers of this section of the state, and has taken an active part in the development and growth of his locality. He is a Republican.

GUSTAV JOCHEM.

One of the prominent and successful younger ranchmen of Blaine county, Nebraska, is the gentleman whose name heads this review. He was born in West Prussia, Germany, in 1879. His father, John Jochem, was a native of the fatherland and served in the German army. The mother's maiden name was Wilhelmina Bomgaardt. In 1881 the family emigrated from their native land, coming to America, lived for a time in New York city, and from thence they went to Kendall county, Illinois, where they remained for about five years. Thence they removed to Omaha, whence, after about a year, they moved to Blaine county, Nebraska, settling on a homestead in what is known as German Valley. This was in the early days of 1887, and our subject became one of the pioneers of the territory, and with the family he experienced all the hardships that usually come to pioneer life.

Mr. Jochem was married in 1902 to Miss Louise Schipporeit, daughter of Christian Schipporeit, one of the old settlers of Blaine county. Mr. and Mrs. Jochem have been blessed with four children: Edwin, Oscar, Freda and Louise.

In 1901 our subject started out for himself, and by hard work and good management has established himself on a fine financial basis and he has a splendid ranch home. In 1903 he took a homestead on section 9, township 24, range 22, and made this the nucleus of the farm he now occupies. He owns eight hundred acres and leases and operates a school section of six hundred and forty acres. His ranch is well improved with good house, barns, fences, well and windmill. He has a large grove started and an orchard of fruit trees, with a variety of small fruits.

Mr. Jochem has been moderator of his school district and has held other positions of trust and responsibility in his community, having won the high regard of his associates by his public spirit and enterprise. He has done his part toward the material development of the locality in which he lives.

EDWARD R. WESTING.

The gentleman above named is one of the well known residents of Adams county, Nebraska, an extensive land owner and prominent stockman of his locality. He is a man of excellent business capacity, broad mind and energetic character, and has exerted his influence for many years past in the upbuilding of the community of Heartwell, where he made his home up to 1908, and is held in the highest esteem by his fellowmen. With his family Mr. Westing occupies a beautiful home in Hastings.

Mr. Westing was born in Grant county, Wisconsin, and raised there. His father, William Westing, was a farmer and an old settler in that state, his death occurring there in 1874. In 1891 our subject came to Nebraska, accompanied by his brothers, Samuel A., now of Kenesaw, and Charles, of Grant county, Nebraska, all three brothers now being large land owners. All own extensive ranches and engage in farming and the stock business. Our subject bought a tract of four hundred acres of land in 1890 located just west of the town of Heartwell, section 17. He resided on this place for eight years, then left and spent one year in California, but returned in 1899 and erected a fine residence in Heartwell, where he lived until 1908. He has added to his acreage of his farm right along since first coming here, and is now owner of about three thousand acres in Kearney county. He has been engaged in raising, buying and shipping high-grade cattle and hogs all this time, and for a number of years bought at Heartwell Station as a shipper. He now feeds from one hundred to two hundred cattle each year, besides from two hundred to four hundred hogs. He also farms a large part of his land, and feeds his crop all out, besides being obliged to buy about ten thousand bushels of corn each year to run his stock on. In the spring of 1907 Mr. Westing had in his herd three steers which weighed a total of six thousand pounds, also twenty-nine head averaging seventeen hundred pounds each, and he has the distinction of being one of the foremost stockmen in this section of the country. He thinks Kearney county one of the best farming and stock counties in the world, as there is so much corn raised right at home and plenty to be had at all times, while the market holds about steady all the time and never gets wild. There is a good deal of hay raised here, too, which makes it easy for the large stock feeders, and Mr. Westing has many acres devoted to hay land and raises all he feeds on his farm.

Our subject was married in 1894 to Miss Jennie Moon, daughter of George Moon, a well known citizen of Easton township, this county. Mr. and Mrs. Westing have two children, Elmer, aged eleven, and Hazel, eight years of age. Mr. Westing's father and mother were both natives of Germany, who came to this country when quite young and settled in Ohio, and later moved to Wisconsin.

For many years Mr. Westing was justice of the peace here, also was a member of the town board for a number of years. He has served on the school board of Heartwell for several years.

In 1908 Mr. Westing bought property in the College addition to Hastings and has erected a fine residence, where he makes his home.

SIMON P. WITTERS.

Simon P. Witters, one of the prominent ranchmen of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is one of the well known old-timers of that region, having located in western Nebraska during the early part of its development, and beginning with very little except his strong hands and brave heart to build up a home and accumulate a competence from a tract of prairie land. He has succeeded remarkably well in his different enterprises, and is now one of the leading citizens of his community.

Mr. Witters was born in Hancock county, Ohio, on January 18, 1854. When he was two years old his parents moved to Tippecanoe county, Indiana, where they lived for about thirteen years in Wea township. Our subject received the education usual to the youth of those times and was of great help to his father on the home farm during his boyhood.

Our subject came to Nebraska in February, 1885, settling in York county, and lived there for about a year, then came on to Cheyenne county, filing on a homestead in section 4, township 14, range 48, which is now the home ranch. He has since added considerable land to the original homestead, owning in all at the present time eleven hundred and twenty acres, and has it well improved. He engages principally in ranching, although he has about one hundred and twenty acres under cultivation. The ranch is stocked with a large herd of cattle, Mr. Witters being well known as a breeder of Hereford stock, of which he has some fine specimens on his place.

A view of the dwelling, together with a drawing of the original "soddy," is to be found elsewhere in this work.

On December 27, 1881, Mr. Witters was married to Miss Lizzie Whisler, in Tippecanoe county, Indiana, she born in Ross county, Ohio, November 14, 1858. Our subject's parents, John and Nancy A. (Kraft) Witters, are both dead, but his wife's father and mother, Jacob and Martha (Cummins) Whisler, are now living in Cheyenne county, having settled here in 1898. Mr. and Mrs. Witters are the parents of five children, namely: Alva O., who married Viola Clark, is now living in Colorado and is the father of one child; Gertrude, wife of Milo E. Webster, resides in Cheyenne county, west of Dalton; Newton E., Harry E. and John L., living on the home ranch. The family have a pleasant and comfortable home, and are highly esteemed by their associates.

Many and varied have been the experiences of Mr. Witters since coming to Nebraska. As late as the fall of 1890 there was considerable uneasiness on account of Indian troubles. This occurred at a time when the men were away at work, and the women and children were alone.

Mr. Witters has been most successful in his ranching enterprises since locating here, and also has taken an active part in the public welfare of his community. He is a Republican and prominent in party affairs in the county, state and nation. The family are members of the Methodist church. Mr. Witters affiliates with the Modern Woodmen of America at Sidney.

ISAAC NEWTON KNOWLES.

Isaac Newton Knowles, one of the active and hustling citizens of Rock county, Nebraska, has a homestead farm in Harrison precinct and is numbered among the prosperous agriculturists of this portion of the state. He passed through pioneer days and though suffering much from the drouth, never lost courage or faith in the future of the country round about him. He was always ready to turn his hand to any honorable work that he might earn his living, and became quite noted as a house mover in the seasons when the earth was burning brown and bare under a blazing sky and rainless clouds, and farming was not to be contemplated.

Mr. Knowles was born on a farm in Gibson county, Indiana, August 15, 1854, a son of William and Cynthia (Kimball) Knowles, both of whom came of old American stock, and inherited the best traditions of a Pennsylvania ancestry. He has two full brothers and three sisters and one brother of half blood, and was the second born in this family. Reared and educated in his Indiana home, he had a thorough training in such work as was common to a wooded country—cut trees, grubbed stumps, made rails, split boards and grew up into a strong and sturdy manhood.

Mr. Knowles was married October 1, 1879, to Miss Mary Allen, whose parents were born in Ireland. Her father, John Allen, was a life-long farmer. To Mr. and Mrs. Knowles were born the following children: Andrew, Charles, Cynthia, John, Joe and Newton. While in Indiana they lived on a rented farm, though Mr. Knowles had bought a small tract of land. It was difficult to meet the conditions of success in so old a country, and in 1886 the Knowles family is found in Rock county, Nebraska, where they bought a farm one mile north of Long Pine. It was a quarter section of desirable land and has proved a very remunerative investment. During four years Mr. Knowles was overwhelmed by the drouth, and lost all his crops. Later on he came to his present farm and made a homestead entry on section 12, township 30, range 20, on which he has put all the improvements—house, barn, granaries, trees and other necessities. At this writing (1906) he owns four hundred and eighty acres, and in addition is cultivating another half section. He makes horse breeding a specialty, and has some seventy or eighty horses and mules on the place. He is milking about twenty cows, and is widely known as one of the best dairy and stockmen of Nebraska. In political matters he has affiliated with the Populist party in former years, and takes a keen interest in whatever concerns the general welfare of his home and country. He affiliates with the Modern Woodmen and with his family is a member of the General Baptist church. A view of the family home and surroundings is presented in another part of this work.

WILLIAM M. HARNAN.

William M. Harnan was born in Peoria county, Illinois, October 12, 1868. He is a son of William and Mary (Halligan) Harnan, both born in Ireland. The former came to America in the forties, settling in Illinois, and later located near Grand Island, Nebraska, where he started farming, but owing to drouths and grasshopper raids he lost nearly everything he had. His wife's death occurred in November, 1893, and he survived her only five years, leaving a family of eleven children, of whom our subject is the tenth member.

Mr. Harnan came to Cherry county in 1889, locating on Mud Lake, taking a homestead and living on this for six years. In 1894 he bought his present home and has been engaged in the cattle business ever since settling here. When he started in he had only twenty-seven dollars, and for several years he and his brothers "batched it" on the ranch; he always acting in the capacity of cook for the outfit. He endured some hard times during the early days, losing considerable stock in blizzards and from other causes, but he gradually got ahead and is now owner of a ranch of four hundred acres of deeded land and a homestead of four hundred and eighty acres. He keeps about three hundred head of stock on the place and gives them good shelter. He is living in a sod house at present, but by the time of the publication of this volume will have a commodious residence of concrete blocks. In 1898 Mr. Harnan moved to property near Bassett, Rock county, and remained there, farming for about three years, and then returned to Cherry county, leaving two brothers on the Rock county farm.

Mr. Harnan was married December 26, 1900, to Miss Mary M. Russell, born in Whiting, Iowa, in 1876. Her parents moved to Nebraska in the spring of 1890, the father losing his life by accident the following September. The mother has a claim adjoining her daughter's home, which comprises some highly valuable land.

Since coming to this locality our subject has done exceedingly well, although he has had many discouragements and losses at different times. He now has a fine farm and comfortable home overlooking the beautiful valley of Snake river. He takes an active interest in all matters of local interest and is always ready to do his share toward advancing the interests of his community. Politically he is an independent voter, always casting his vote for the best man on the ticket. Fraternally he holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America.

J. V. AND D. HARRISON.

The above named gentlemen are among the well known residents of Indianola, Nebraska, the former being at the head of the live stock business of Harrison & Harrison, and full manager of the same, while the last named is manager of their merchandise store in this city.

Messrs. Harrison are natives of County Donegal, Ireland, and came to the United States when young men, and were raised on their father's farm, where they were engaged in the breeding of pure bred Shorthorn cattle. In 1885 they went into the ranching business, also opening a general merchandise establishment in Indianola. On their ranch they handled several hundred grade cattle, but in 1892 closed these out and went in for a pure bred Angus herd, starting without any experience in this line, buying a small herd of these cattle in Kansas, and soon after bought another herd in Iowa, and a few years later purchased a herd in eastern Nebraska. This made a herd of two hundred registered cattle, and they now have one hundred fine animals, most of them being Blackbirds, Erickes, Prides, Queen Mothers and Barbaras, all from the very best strains. The first four mentioned are the best Angus strains in the world. This firm has raised more good Queen Mothers and Barbaras than any other breed. Their sales have been at best prices, and at the first combination sale they topped three out of five, receiving two hundred and fifty dollars for one cow. They sell bulls at their farm, receiving one hundred and one hundred and fifty dollars for an animal as a yearling or under, and their cows are sold when about two years of age. Every man who comes to their place is pleased with the stock and never goes away without purchasing. They ask a reasonable price, and insist on getting it, never cutting the established figure. They have sold stock to parties all over Colorado, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota and the Dakotas, but mostly in Iowa and Nebraska. Two years ago they sold thirty-eight bulls within a radius of fifty miles from their home. They keep in touch with conditions at the home and foreign markets, take records of prices at the Chicago market, which competes with the world, and in this manner know just exactly how things are going all over the country. They have found that the Angus cattle are the best for beef in quality, weight and prices obtained at all times, and hence are the best grade for the farmer. At the present time their herd is headed by an imported Pride bull, which was the first selection out of fifty head imported by Charles Esher, of Irwin, Iowa. He was bred in England, and is called Squire of Theskston. Their second herd bull, Scotch Eric, a Trogan Erico, was bred by the noted breeder, L. McWhorter, of Aledo, Illinois. The get of Squire Theskston proves that he is one of the best bulls at the head of any herd, and has a remarkable record as a sire. On their ranch of one thousand acres situated half a mile from Indianola they keep their cattle, which is called the Alfalfa herd, being one of the best herds in Nebraska. Only a short time ago Harrison & Harrison refused one hundred dollars per acre for the part of this ranch which lies near Indianola. On this they have eighty acres of alfalfa and are constantly increasing it, with the aim of raising enough to feed their cattle. They recently made a trip to Iowa and purchased five Blackbird cows, paying as high as five hundred dollars for one animal, which they added to their herd. The firm is starting in the horse business now, beginning with registered Percheron mares, and they recently sold two of these mares for eleven hundred dollars. They always have on hand some of the best trotting stock of the Morgan-Wilkes and Electioneer strains, one of which sold in Omaha for the round sum of one thousand dollars, and also have a number of fine ponies. They bred Nebraska Chief and sold him to Mat Hedland, of Holdrege, Nebraska, and this horse is a prize winner wherever shown.

The Harrison brothers are the type of men who have made the sons of Erin famous the world over in all departments of business. They carefully study the subject in hand in all its bearings and then aim to produce the best the market affords and to produce from this start better than the original stock, and are honest and fair in all their dealings.

J. V. Harrison is married, but has no children. D. Harrison has a son, John T. Harrison, who resides on the ranch and takes an active part in the raising and development of the splendid stock placed there by his father and uncle. Several years since J. V. Harrison visited his native country, and was greatly impressed by the wonderful changes which had taken place there. Small towns had sprung up and many improvements added, so that it was hard to recognize it as the same place where he spent his boyhood years.

LARS E. FODNESS.

Lars E. Fodness, a popular farmer and leading citizen of Box Butte county, presents in his own career a striking illustration of the field of opportunity this new western country offers the ambitious children of the old world, as well as the rich results which have long waited on industry and integrity. He was born in Valdres, Norway, on a farm, in 1865. His father, who was a farmer, came to America with his family, arriving July 4, 1872. They settled in Alamakee county, Iowa, where his father rented a farm and spent two years. They then went to Stanton, Nebraska, where they lived for one year, and finally located in Boone county. Here they settled on a homestead and are numbered among the prominent pioneer citizens of that county.

The early days of our subject's life were spent on his father's farm, where he assisted materially with the work, starting in the harvest fields at the early age of ten years. He received his education attending the country school, which was held at the neighboring houses.

In 1894 Mr. Fodness was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Johnson, a native of Norway. Her parents were pioneers of Box Butte county, having settled here in 1887. Mr. Fodness's wife had taken a homestead in section 6, township 26, range 48, and after their marriage they settled on this place and started the work of making it a comfortable home in which to pass their lives. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fodness: Lewis and Ludwick, the latter deceased. They have an adopted son named Walter.

The first building the family lived in was made of sod, but Mr. Fodness set himself to the task of erecting a more commodious building. He has worked with unremitting zeal and has met with a great measure of success. He is now the possessor of six hundred and forty acres of well appointed land, which is well fenced, and upon which are good farm buildings, wells and windmills. He cultivates about ninety acres. His first two years were trying ones indeed, his crops being almost total failures. He went to Pine Ridge, where he chopped wood and hauled it to Alliance in order to help make a living.

Mr. Fodness engages in the raising of horses and cattle, of which he has over sixty-five head. In matters of politics he adheres to Republican principles, and takes a lively interest in local affairs. Through years of adversity and prosperity he has held the handles of the plow, working out for himself a comfortable home and giving his energies to the upbuilding of the locality in which he resides.

EDMOND ROOT.

Edmond Root is one of the leading old settlers of Cheyenne county. He is a farmer and stockman, thoroughly understands both lines, and has gained an enviable reputation throughout his community as a man of upright character and industrious habits. Mr. Root is a successful horseman and widely known as a dealer and breeder of fine animals.

Our subject was born in Kalamazoo, Michigan, August 27, 1862. He was reared and educated in Michigan, living in his native locality until he reached the age of twenty-five and then in 1887 came to Nebraska, locating in Potter. He later filed on a homestead in section 14, township 16, range 52, the tract comprising one hundred and sixty acres, on which he proved up and later sold. He next took a Kincaid claim in section 6, township 13, range 51, filing on this on the 28th day of June, 1904, which is his present location. He owns four hundred and eighty acres, and has developed a good ranch, using most of the land as hay land and pasture for quite a herd of stock, a few cattle and about seventy-five head of horses.

Mr. Root has gone through both good and bad times since coming to Nebraska, and during the early years passed through the usual experiences of the pioneers in that region in getting his home started, but is now comfortably situated financially and is a prosperous, progressive and successful rancher and horseman.

Mr. Root takes an independent position in politics, although he has strong Democratic tendencies.

ARTHUR SCATTERGOOD.

Among those who have in a large measure contributed to the success of the city of Johnston, Nebraska, the gentleman whose name heads this personal history takes a leading place. Mr. Scattergood was born at Burton-Trent, Staffordshire, England, May 8, 1841. His father, Robert Scattergood, was a brick manufacturer, and his mother, who was Mary Oakton, was a lineal descendant of the Offlows of Derbyshire, whose ancestors can be traced back nine hundred years. The father also comes of proud old English stock, the ancestors being known for eight centuries. Our subject was reared and educated in his native land and married there on June 11, 1865, to Miss Caroline Blake, also of pure English stock.

In 1882 Mr. Scattergood came to America, sailing from Liverpool July 22 on the steamship Alaska, and landing in New York city August 1st. He came directly west to Omaha and in the winter came to what is now Brown county. On February 25th he located on a homestead in section 18, township 30, range 23, where his first house was a shanty twelve by fourteen feet, in which he lived alone for a time, the family following three years later. Here he built up and improved his farm, the original piece of land containing one hundred and sixty acres, and from this has grown to a ranch of four thousand acres. He has loaned considerable money on land in the vicinity, and as hard times came on the owners, unable after ample opportunity to redeem, relinquished their land, and much of his property comes from that source. He started here with small capital, bringing with him less than two thousand dollars, and has made the balance through his thrift and good management, now being numbered among the largest land holders in this part of the state. During the dry periods of 1893-'94 he started the town of Fairfax, South Dakota, at one time sending fifteen families there to settle. He owned the first hotel and the first four stores put up there and still owns much property in that place. He organized and opened the first bank in Johnstown, established in 1887, and is active in the building up of the place. Mr. Scattergood has been justice of the peace for many years, and also held the office of school director for a long time, being deeply interested in all educational movements in the locality. Politically he is a Republican and a member of the Episcopal church.

His family consists of one son and four daughters, named as follows: Arthur W., an attorney, of Ainsworth; Eva, Clara, Bessie and Mabel, all born in England.

J. E. BURGE.

Among those who have recently come to Holdrege and taken up their residence here none has met with greater success in a business way or manifested more true public spirit and gained the esteem of his associates by his honesty and persistent labors than the subject of this personal history.

Mr. Burge is a native of Louisville, Kentucky, born April 26, 1875. He came to Hold-rege in 1899 with the Burlington railway as train dispatcher. Previous to this he had been connected with the Rock Island road as dispatcher, and in 1902 he resigned from the railroad service to take up the telephone business. He was one of the organizers of the Phelps County Telephone Company, formed in December, 1902, and since that time has held the office of vice-president and general manager of that company. It is largely owing to his business ability and "push," combined with his obliging ways in dealing with the public, that during the year 1906 the Bell Telephone Company capitulated and sold to the Phelps County Telephone Company their rights here and have withdrawn from the county. In March, 1904, this company began operations by putting up ten thousand feet of aerial cables and providing for four hundred telephones, and in one and a half years they have grown to fifteen miles of aerial cables and have in operation seven hundred and fifty city telephones and twenty-two hundred county telephones, with exchanges at Holdrege, Funk, Loomis, Atlanta and Holcomb, and long distance connections nearly all over the state of Nebraska and adjoining states. The business has grown to immense proportions, and its service is of the very best to be found anywhere. The company has a capitalization of sixty thousand dollars, with W. H. Cowgill as president, our subject vice-president and general manager and E. P. Dunlop as secretary and treasurer, all of whom are prominent and successful business men of Holdrege.

A. I. SCRIBNER.

A. I. Scribner, one of the oldest settlers in Sheridan county, Nebraska, is a successful stock raiser and farmer, who has acquired a snug property by dint of faithful efforts and honest labor. He has seen all the ups and downs of pioneer life in the west, and although often meeting discouragements has steadily kept onward and richly deserves the success he has attained.

Mr. Scribner was born in Washington county, Iowa, in 1847. His father, Abraham Scribner, was a farmer, and died when our subject was a lad of five years, and in 1857 the mother moved to Stark county, Illinois, with her family of six children, all of whom are now dead except himself and brother. The family was one of the earliest to settle in Washington county, and after the father's death his widow gave up her farm and from the time he was ten years old he has made his own way in the world. Up to the time he was eighteen years old he never received any wages for his labor, merely getting his board, and attending school during the winter months, then only part of the time. He has always had a hard time and knows what it is to be thrown on his own resources and obliged to go out among strangers from the time he was little more than a baby. In 1865 he went to Oregon, where he spent six years, working out by the month there, and in 1871 returned to Washington county, Iowa. The following year he took up a homestead in Webster county, Nebraska, and at that time buffalo were still running so thickly through that region that the settlers were afraid they would ruin the crops by roaming through them, but in about three years they were almost cleaned out. He improved his farm and lived on it up to 1884, then his health failed and he decided to make a change and came to Sheridan county, where he liked the looks of the place so well that he filed on a tree claim in section 20, also an pre-emption on section 17, township 30, range 45, and still owns these places. Here he engaged in farming and continued at it until he was unable to buy seed, losing several crops in succession, and one year after putting in two hundred and fifty acres of grain did not even get back enough for seed. He then began to gather stock, and has followed that line of work ever since. He rented his farm and moved into the sand hills, remaining there up to 1900, then came back to his old place and went to farming and stock raising, now operating six hundred and forty acres of land, all fenced and improved with good buildings, etc., one hundred and sixty acres being under cultivation, and he raises large crops of grain, selling only his wheat and feeding out the balance on his farm, running one hundred head of stock.

Mr. Scribner has seen his share of the hard times in a new country and does not want any more frontier life. He is satisfied with what he has accomplished and would not care to go east to live. Many times he wanted to leave the place and would have sold out had he received a good offer, but is now thankful he could not get away. When he first came here he filed on the first pre-emption in this precinct and was one of the first settlers in this valley. During the years 1885 and 1886 he went to Webster county and stayed for two and a half years in order to give his children the advantages of better schools, and this and the time spent in the sand hills is the only time he has left his farm since settling on it.

Mr. Scribner was married in 1876 to Miss Ellen Smelser, born in Washington county, Iowa, in 1857, a daughter of David Clark Smelser. Mr. and Mrs. Scribner have a family of six children, named as follows: Bertha, Omar, Ira, Effie L., Cora and E. Ross, all born and reared in Nebraska. Mr. Scribner is a Populist in political sentiment, but does not take an active part in politics.

ILUS COUCH.

Ilus Couch occupies an enviable position among the extensive ranchers and prominent settlers of the valley of the South Platte river, where he operates a very large and growing stock business. Ilus Couch was born in Tiskilwa, Bureau county, Illinois, October 7, 1857. His father, Benjamin C. Couch, was a native of New Hampshire, born in the village of Boscawen, September 19, 1822. His parents were natives of England. Our subject's mother, Martha J. Calf, was also a native of Salisbury, New Hampshire, born March 3, 1825, and died December 31, 1860, when he was but three years old.

The subject of our sketch was reared in the state of his nativity and attended the common schools. At the age of fourteen he started to work out at farm labor and various other employments. In the spring of 1882 he married, came west and followed farming for two seasons in Carroll county, Iowa, after which he came farther west to Clay county, Nebraska, in the spring of 1884, and remained during the summer. In August of that year he located a homestead in Keith county, his present place, and built a house, his family joining him in the fall. The country was very new and when they arrived in Ogallala they found it to be a typical wild west town. Pioneer days were full of trying experiences and many hardships and losses of crops, but our subject kept at his improvements and made a grand success.

The first crop in 1885 was a good one and this helped to give the family a start, but in 1890 and 1894 the crops were poor and Mr. Couch gradually turned his attention from farming to cattle and horse raising. He has now a splendid ranch comprising eighteen hundred and fifty-eight acres along the South Platte river and running back into the hills. He cultivates only about fifty acres of this, devoting the remainder to his extensive cattle and horse business. He has fine buildings, has the farm well fenced and has a fine grove of forest trees and some apple, plum and cherry trees. Our subject has been an interested witness of the growth of this region. When he first settled here his house was one of the only two between Ogallala and Big Springs, twenty miles distant, and for three months Mrs. Couch never saw a woman in all the country.

The marriage of Ilus Couch with Miss Charity Horton occurred in Buda, Illinois, February 9, 1882. The bride was a native of Illinois, a daughter of Eli and Mary (Hamilton) Horton, natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. Couch has done his share toward making the present high material standard of prosperity which obtains in Keith county, and he has taken a prominent place among the old settlers. His interest in political matters has been earnest and practical and he has held various offices of trust and responsibility. He has served as school treasurer for five years and has acceptably filled other minor offices. He is independent in politics and a member of the Ogallala lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. A view of Mr. Couch's comfortable residence with its fine grove, large barn and pleasing landscape surrounding, is presented for inspection on another page.

WALTER R. KENT.

The above named gentleman is a leading citizen of Sheridan county, residing in township 26, range 46, where he has built up a comfortable home and valuable estate.

Mr. Kent is a native of Highland, Wisconsin, born in 1863, and is a son of Patrick Kent, who came from Ireland in 1844 and settled in Wisconsin immediately after striking this country, remaining there on a farm all his life, and it was there that our subject was raised and educated. There was a family of eleven children, of whom he was the ninth, and at the age of eighteen he started out for himself, securing a position as a teacher in a district school, which occupation he followed for three years, one year of which he served as principal of a high school, then resigned. He is a graduate of the Highland high school, of Highland, Wisconsin, and later of the State Normal School at Platteville, Wisconsin. He came to Nebraska in 1886 and took a pre-emption in section 17, township 25, range 47, and established a farm, remaining until proving up, and six months later took a homestead and still lives adjacent to the latter place. While he was holding down this claim he was engaged in teaching, and for a year and a half was cashier of a bank at Alliance, Nebraska. In this way he managed to make a living and save a little money, and had just started to farming on a larger scale when the dry years commenced, and through loss of several crops and other misfortunes got in debt and was obliged to go back to teaching to make this . . . He held his land for ten years without doing much in the way of improving it, and would have sold it at different times had he received a good offer. In 1897 he bought some calves, and this was his start in the cattle business. He gradually added to his herd until he now runs about three hundred head, and also is extensively engaged in the horse business, keeping about one hundred and fifty head all the time. Since he began this line of work he has been very successful and steadily increased his holdings and improved his farm, but during the early years here he went through hard times. He tried hard to farm his land, but found that conditions were against him. He had a large portion of his land in hay and pasture, and sold his hay, but could not make anything by so doing and was unable to get enough off it to pay the taxes, and that decided him on starting in the stock raising business. Most of his land is valley land and he cuts about four hundred tons of hay on the ranch, all of which is fed out to his stock. He has some alfalfa and intends to seed more of this, as it makes good fodder for cattle and hogs. He has dealt considerably in the latter animals, but quit that branch of the work in 1906.

Mr. Kent was married in 1904 to Miss Laura Gibbs, a native of this state, born in 1877. She is of English descent, her father, George Gibbs, having come from that country when a young man, settling in Nebraska in the early stage of its development. Mr. and Mrs. Kent have one child, William Walter, having lost twins, Ellen and Elizabeth, their death occurring in January, 1907, at the age of two months.

Mr. Kent has resided on his present farm continuously since 1897, excepting for two years, 1901 to 1903, when he was serving his county as superintendent of schools, although he personally superintended the management of his ranch at that time. He owns thirteen quarter sections of deeded land, and in addition to this leases land adjacent to his ranch, and has just completed a fine dwelling on this place. Mr. Kent is a Republican and always takes an active interest in party politics. He has held local offices and is at present postmaster at Long Lake, a position he is well qualified to fill.

HENRY PILSTER.

Should the reader ask for a representative type of the successful and energetic western ranchman, who has spent many years of his life in building up a home and reputation by honest industry and good management, we would mention the gentleman above. Mr. Pilster is a man who embodies all the attributes of a careful and capable manager of things, and wherever he is put would make a success through his sheer determination and perseverance in the object to be attained. He relived his first year. There were practically sides in section 23, township 33, range 51, and is one of the well known and worthy citizens of Dawes county.

Mr. Pilster was born in the kingdom of Hanover, Germany, in 1853, on a farm. His parents lived and died in that country, where the father followed the life of a farmer. Our subject remained at home until he was fifteen years of age, then came to America, landing in New York city in 1868, and from there went to Boston, where he remained for three years, learning the cooper's trade with a man named Leopold Charley. He went to Pittsburg in 1879 and there built a house, which he afterwards traded for a one hundred and twenty-acre farm, soon selling the land for a good round sum, and in the transaction got a house to boot in Pittsburg.

In 1886 Mr. Pilster came to Nebraska and settled in Dawes county, and after a short time disposed of his property in Pittsburg and put the money in improvements on his ranch here, having taken a pre-emption in section 15, township 33, range 51. His first building was of frame and he built a large cellar, in which he lived during the first winter, remaining there only one year, then moved to his present location. Here he has a ranch of four hundred and sixty acres, all deeded land, and he also leases some land adjoining his ranch. He has put up good buildings, corals, fences and improvements, and has a fine property. Besides this ranch he has four hundred and eighty acres of Kincaid homestead land, on which he now resides. He is engaged in the stock business quite extensively, running one hundred and fifty cattle, and has made a great success of his undertaking in spite of many drawbacks.

In 1877 Mr. Pilster was married to Miss Huldah J. Stuebgen, whose father was a well known farmer and hotel keeper of Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, born in Saxony, Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Pilster are the parents of nine children, named as follows: Edward Henry, William August, John Adam, Edith Jane, Minnie Maria, Sadie Jane, Emma M., Flora Virginia and Mabel Belle. The family are popular in their community and enjoy a peaceful and happy home.

 PETE LECHER.

Pete Lecher, who resides in a comfortable home in Dawes county, is one of the old-timers of western Nebraska. He owns a nice property, which he has gathered together by dint of his industry and good management, and is held in high esteem by all with whom he has to do.

Mr. Lecher was born in Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, in 1861. His father, John Lecher, was born in Germany and married there to Maggie Thomas, then came to this country to carve out their fortune in the new world. They settled in Wisconsin and there our subject was raised and educated, brought up on a farm until he was twenty-three years of age, then left home and struck out for himself, coming to eastern Nebraska and locating in Platte county, farming there for seven years. He came to his present location in Dawes county in 1894, purchasing a farm in section 14, township 33, range 48, which was partly improved land, and at once put up a house, barn and windmills. The place was well supplied with good water, being located on Big Bordeaux creek. He now has four hundred acres, farming one hundred acres of this, and has plenty of pasture, lots of natural timber, and altogether a fine farm. He plans to devote most of his attention to the raising of fine grade stock and to the dairying business, and is engaged in the latter work to quite an extent, making about ninety pounds of butter per week. He is also engaged in the ice business, putting up large quantities every winter to supply the town of Chadron and vicinity. During the first years in this region he had a hard time to get along and for quite a long time was only able to make a living by getting out stovewood from Pine Ridge.

Mr. Lecher was united in marriage in 1882 while living in Wisconsin to Miss Maggie Schommer, whose father was a prominent farmer and old settler in that state, and came from Germany to the United States when a young man. To Mr. and Mrs. Lecher have been born the following children: Casper, Annie, Katie, Barney, John, Jerry and Noah. All that are large enough are good workers, assisting their parents in the dairy, ice and general farming business.

FRANK C. BATES.

Frank C. Bates, residing near Lodgepole, is one of the pioneer settlers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska. He has become widely known as a prosperous farmer and well-to-do ranchman, is a worthy citizen and enjoys the comforts of a rural home. He has followed the occupation of a farmer all his life, and has done his full share toward the development of the resources of the county where he chose his home in the early years.

Mr. Bates was born in Wayne county, New York, January 30, 1858, and remained in that state until he was twenty-nine years of age, then came to Cheyenne county, arriving in that region in April, 1887, took up a homestead in section 20, township 15, range 47, on which he followed farming for many years. He now lives in section 24, situated one mile northwest of Lodgepole, where he has a fine one hundred and sixty-acre farm and engages in mixed farming and stock raising. Mr. Bates has owned several farms since coming to Nebraska, built them up and then sold out at a good profit, and has helped materially in the development of the locality.

Our subject was married in his native county in the state of New York on April 22, 1883, to Miss Carrie A. Deuel. She is also a native of that state, and her mother is now living with our subject, the father being dead. Both Mr. Bates' parents are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Bates are the parents of two children, Louise and Ruth, both at home.

Our subject is prominent in local affairs and takes an active interest in county and state politics.

E. D. FORD.

E. D. Ford, who has been identified with the agricultural interests of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, for many years, and is the owner of a valuable estate, was born in Harrison county, Missouri, in 1877, and when six years of age came with his parents to this county. His father, James B. Ford, was of Irish stock, born in Ohio, where he followed the carpenter's trade during his early life. He was an early settler in Iowa, and during the Civil war enlisted in an Iowa regiment and served for three years under General Grant. After the war he returned to Iowa and was there married to Miss Hannah Dennis, a native of Iowa, and to the couple two children were born, our subject being the only one living. At the age of eighteen years he started out for himself, going into the Dakotas, where he followed farming for some years. He came to Nebraska in 1883, where he grew up, and in 1903 bought his present home, located in section 35, township 33, range 20. Here he has one hundred and sixty acres of good land, with eighty acres under plow and the balance in hay and pasture. He is engaged principally in mixed farming, and does not deal in stock to any great extent.

Mr. Ford and his father have done much toward the development of this county. They lived in a log house for many years and went through many hard times during the dry years. However, he has succeeded in getting together a comfortable property. They had the usual pioneer experiences here and in Missouri, but prospered through good management and industry. After the father's marriage he lived in Missouri for ten years, then came to Keya Paha county. In 1902 he sold out his place here and moved to Colorado and died there a short time afterwards. Our subject was married in 1900 to Miss Gertrude Ewing, of old American stock, raised in Nebraska. They are the parents of two children, named Bertha, aged six years, and Harold, aged three years. They enjoy a pleasant and happy home, surrounded by a host of good friends, and are highly esteemed throughout the community in which they reside. All of Mr. Ford's time is devoted to the care and management of his farm and home, and he has never taken an active part in public affairs. In political faith he is a Republican.

C. W. JOHNSON.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is one of the representative citizens of western Nebraska, being one of the organizers of the Potter State Bank, and a director in the same institution. He is also a prosperous and successful business man, and a "booster" for his town, county and state. Mr. Johnson is at present engaged in a number of different enterprises, carrying on a large general merchandise business in Potter, where he makes his home, and also has large ranching and farming interests, and is among the large growers of small grains in the county. C. W. Johnson was born in Sweden, February 21, 1864, where he grew to the age of six years, then with his parents came to America, settling in Andover, Henry county, Illinois, where the family lived for two years. They then emigrated to Montgomery county, Iowa, remained for three years, and from there to Republic county, Kansas, finally coming into Cheyenne county, Nebraska, in 1887, where the father homesteaded in Banner county in the spring of that year. Their location was in the southwest quarter of section 30, township 18, range 53, and they also took up a timber claim in section 34, which they later sold, but still own the homestead. Mr. Johnson's Banner county ranch is considered one of the most valuable properties in the west, and on this place he runs about three hundred head of cattle and sixty horses, with plenty of hay and pasture land for all his stock. The place contains twenty-seven hundred and twenty acres, and besides this large tract he leases a half section in the vicinity. The ranch is supplied with a complete set of good buildings and all improvements.

In 1897 our subject engaged in the mercantile business in Kirk, Banner county, and carried this on for a number of years. While living in that vicinity he was appointed postmaster of Kirk and held the position for fifteen years, remaining there until 1906, when he sold out his store and came to Potter, purchasing the general merchandise establishment of B. F. Thornburg. He is doing a good business and has a large patronage from the surrounding country. On April 21, 1886, our subject was united in marriage at Scandia, Kansas, to Ellen Nelson, who was born in Denmark and came to America in 1878. Mrs. Johnson's parents are both dead, but our subject's father and mother are at present living on the ranch in Banner county, which is owned jointly by father and son. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, eight of whom are now living, named as follows: Joseph G., Seola C., Victor, Clarence W., Leonard J., Lulu, Fred, Ervin (who died in 1905) and Nora, all living at home and making a most interesting family group. Mr. Johnson is one of the well known and leading citizens of his community and has served in numerous local offices, including justice of the peace and notary public. In political views he is a Republican. He affiliates with the Ancient Order United Workmen and is a member of the Methodist church.

HENRY JOCHEM.

Henry Jochem was born in Plano county, Illinois, May 24, 1882, and was reared on a farm. His father, John Jochem, was a native of West Prussia, Germany, and saw service in the army of the fatherland. His mother was Wilhelmina Bomgaardt, also a native of Germany.

Our subject came west with the family to Omaha and thence to Blaine county, Nebraska, in 1887, where he found his first home in a sod shanty with a hay roof, and became conversant with the ways of pioneer life. When he was seventeen years old our subject left home, going to Grand Island, where he spent five years engaged in agricultural pursuits, two years of which time he was on rented land. In 1904 he returned home, purchasing a small farm on which he lived about a year, and then sold out, doubling his money. He then took a Kincaid homestead in Blaine county, in section 22, township 24, range 22, in the German valley.

Mr. Jochem was married in 1905 to Miss Mollie Kaiser, whose father, Gottlieb Kaiser, was one of the pioneer settlers of the territory and whose biography will appear elsewhere in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Jochem have been blessed with three children—Ella, Vena and Ora.

Henry Jochem, although still a young man, has achieved success and has accomplished it all as the result of his own efforts and planning. He has a splendid ranch of five hundred and sixty acres, one hundred and fifty acres of which he cultivates, and three hundred and twenty acres are deeded land. He has a good house, large barns, well and windmill, groves of forest trees and a fine orchard. He has made an enviable record as a man of energy and rare good business judgment and is willingly accorded a leading place among the old settlers of his locality.

JAMES BURNS.

James Burns, of Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county, Nebraska, is a man whose history invites reflection on the secret of success in the great western country. There are very few men who have come to this section with assured financial standing, and those who have gained wealth and affluence are very largely those whose native industry, shrewd business insight and daring have brought its due reward. Success means in Nebraska more than it does in the older east. Here it means pluck, courage and self-reliance. There it may mean the bolstering help of friends and favoring circumstances, and the subject of this sketch is a self-made man in the truest sense of the word, as he has been through every phase of western life, having at various times followed freighting, farming, ranching, etc., and well deserves his present prosperity.

Mr. Burns was born in St. Louis, Missouri,

February 22, 1864. He was left an orphan at the age of four years and has no knowledge of any living relatives. He was taken into the family of Alfred S. Weeks, of Hudson, Mc-Lain county, Illinois, and remained with them until he was twenty-one years old. During boyhood he attended the country schools at such times in the year as did not interfere with his helping in the farm work of his foster parents, and when he became of age entered the State Normal School at Normal, Illinois, continuing for a year and a half, his only start when he left Mr. Weeks's family being the suit of clothes he wore. There was a good library in the Weeks home and of this the orphan boy availed himself. He worked his way through school and acquired his learning by dint of self-denial and hard work. After leaving school he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a severe illness came to Nebraska, locating at Kearney, where he attended the institute for a short time and from there lived at the home of friends north of the town of Kearney, where he taught a three months' term of school. In the spring of 1886 he came to Sidney, landing there on March 17th, and pre-empted a claim just across the state line in Colorado. He held this claim and worked at different points in that section of the country, riding range for the Powell & Whitney ranching outfit. During the summer of 1888 he had the misfortune to be bitten by a rattlesnake and was laid up for some months, and after recovering abandoned his claim, selling the deeded land at less than the pre-emption value. He next took a homestead on Cedar creek, along the North Platte river, improved it to quite an extent and after proving up on it sold to the Belmont company.

Mr. Burns came on his present ranch on part of which Mrs. Burns had filed prior to her marriage, in 1895. Part of it was the original homestead of M. S. Boyer. There are eight hundred acres of land, all in one body, with five hundred acres of the tract under Chimney Rock ditch. One hundred acres are under cultivation, two hundred in alfalfa, and the balance is used for hay land, as Mr. Burns runs a large herd of cattle and quite a bunch of horses. The ranch is fully improved with good buildings and everything necessary for the operation of a model farm, and is one of the most valuable properties in the county. In addition to this extensive ranching interests, Mr. Burns owns town property in Bayard. A view of the ranch residence, with Chimney Rock in the distance, is to be found elsewhere in this work.

September 18, 1895, Mr. Burns married

Mrs. Ora E. Boyer, whose maiden name was Ora E. Maylan, daughter of William Maylan, a veteran of the Civil war and a prominent old frontiersman. The mother was a native of Worth county, Missouri. Our subject has a family of four children, namely: Clinton W., Alice A., Haldane and Catherine O. They are a most congenial family and have a pleasant home and large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Burns is a Democrat and has taken an active part in local politics since locating here, having held the combined offices of county clerk and as clerk of the district court, serving from 1900 to 1904. Cheyenne county was strongly Republican and the fact that Mr. Burns received the office against strong opposition goes to prove his worth and popularity in the opinion of the people. He is also school treasurer of district No. 50. His lodge affiliations are at Sidney, where he is a member of the Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen and the Knights of Pythias, of which he served as chancellor commander two years.

QUINTON ROBERT McADAM.

Among the varied interests of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, stock raising and farming take a leading place. In fact, it may be said truthfully that it is the principal industry of that section. Many of the agriculturists have engaged successfully in this line, and the gentleman above named takes a prominent place among the number. He is the owner of a well improved place consisting of eight hundred and eighty-six acres, and is a substantial and highly esteemed citizen of his county.

Quinton R. McAdam was born in Argenteuil county, province of Quebec, Canada, August 18, 1865, and grew to manhood there. He came to the United States in 1890, direct to Potter, Nebraska, and after spending just three days there went on to Cheyenne, Wyoming, and worked in that vicinity for three years as a carpenter. He then went to Denver and was in the employ of a wholesale commission house for about four years. Returning to Cheyenne for two years, he worked in the Union Pacific railroad shops prior to engaging in business for himself. He was associated with his brother Andrew, contracting and building, and about this time they invested in ranch and cattle interests. A year after engaging in business with his brother, Robert came to Cheyenne county to take charge of the ranching interests, while Andrew attended to the building operations, following later. Robert filed on one hundred and sixty acres on section 34, township 15, range 52, which is now the home ranch, and together with his brother Andrew they own nearly two thousand acres of land, part of which is situated on Lodgepole creek and is mostly hay land. The partnership was dissolved in January, 1907, each taking his share of the cattle, the land having been owned severally from the beginning. Robert farms about one hundred and ten acres, running one hundred and sixty-six head of cattle and twenty horses and is prospering in his venture. He has the property well improved, the buildings being constructed of stone. The dwelling, remodeled in 1908-'09, is partly constructed of concrete and is a commodious and convenient dwelling. We are pleased to present a view of the ranch buildings on another page of this work.

On January 7, 1896, Mr. McAdam married Miss Catherine M. Gordon, near La Chute, Canada. She was born and reared in that country, and both parents are still living there. Mr. McAdam's parents are both dead.

Mr. McAdam has gained a deservedly high station as a citizen and has always taken an active part in local and county affairs. In political views he is a Republican, except in local issues. Members of the Presbyterian church in Canada, they, finding no congregation of their denomination at Potter, have united with the Methodist church. Mr. McAdam is a member of the Modern Woodmen order at Potter.

GEORGE E. RUSSELL.

Among the younger members of the farming community of Gillaspie precinct, Cherry county, the gentleman above named takes a leading place. He has met with marked success as an agriculturist, and enjoys the esteem and respect of his fellowmen.

Mr. Russell was born in Monona county, Iowa, November 13, 1871. His father, Isaac N. Russell, was of American stock, a farmer and stock raiser, and came to Nebraska in 1889 with his family, locating in Cherry county, where he died September 14, 1900, and where his wife still resides. Our subject is the eldest in his father's family of four children, and was raised in Iowa until he was eighteen years old, and at the age of twenty-one started out for himself. He took up a homestead in 1894 in section 6, township 29, range 34, where he resides and to which he has since added four hundred and eighty acres, making a ranch of six hundred and forty acres of good land, well improved with good buildings and fences. He has about seventy-five head of cattle and thirty horses, and devotes his time to joint farming and stock raising, using besides his own land a section adjoining, which belongs to his wife.

When Mr. Russell came to this region he had very little capital to start with, but by dint of his industry and perseverance he has built up a fine farm and valuable estate, and is satisfied that he has done much better here than he could have done in Iowa. He has seen much of the ups and downs of an old settler's life, but late years have been better and he has been able to forge ahead at greater speed and is now recognized as one of the prosperous and successful men of the county. He has almost six hundred and forty acres of fine hay land, and from this he cuts a splendid crop each year. Much of his farm is under lease to tenants, who cultivate the soil.

Mr. Russell was married September 29, 1896, to Miss Myrtle Doyle, born in Missouri in 1879, whose father, Theodore Doyle, formerly lived in this county, but is at present residing in Frontier county. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Russell, named as follows: Ruby, Dora, Theodore and Mildred, all born and reared in Cherry county. There is but one drawback to the location of Mr. Russell's farm, which is the distance to the nearest school, located four miles from his home, an inconvenience prevalent in the sparsely settled ranch country.

Mr. Russell is a Republican in political faith and in November, 1907, was elected county commissioner by that party.

G. A. ANDERSON.

Among the enterprising and prosperous business men of Holdrege, Phelps county, Nebraska, none is better known or more universally respected than the subject of this review.

Mr. Anderson first learned the carpenter and cabinet trade with his father, A. J. Anderson, now a farmer and resident of Sheridan township, Phelps county, where our subject's three brothers are also successful farmers. Few men have enjoyed the mechanical and manual training that has fallen to the lot of Mr. Anderson. For four and a half years Mr. Anderson was carpenter and foreman of the house of correction at Chicago. For eleven years he was instructor in the carpenter and cabinet department of the Illinois state reformatory for boys at Pontiac, Illinois, where his class consisted of from sixty to one hundred and twenty pupils, one-half of each day being given to manual training. The reports of the institution showed that sixty-five to eighty per cent. of the boys so trained followed the trade afterwards as a life work. For four years he was superintendent of construction for the Illinois state reformatory. Three and one-half years was spent with the Boland & Gormley Hardware Company, one of the most extensive of its kind in Chicago, as expert on fancy building hardware. He learned the trade of machinist at the McCormick Reaper Works, also in the Malleable Iron Works as a molder and brass finisher, and for several years was in the cabinet department of the Kimball organ factory, and while in Chicago worked on many of the finest residences being built at that time.

In 1904 Mr. Anderson came to Holdrege, Nebraska, and since then has been engaged in contracting and building, and has put up some of the finest residence buildings here, including the Carnegie library.

Mr. Anderson was married to Miss Amelia Christianson, daughter of C. M. Christianson, one of the pioneer settlers of Sheridan township, who at his death left over a section of land to his children and a reputation as a devout Christian, having been an active member and official of the Swedish Mission church during his life. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson have no children.

Since Mr. Anderson's residence here he has earned the confidence of all with whom he has been associated, and enjoys an enviable reputation as a citizen.

SAMUEL KNORI.

Samuel Knori, residing in section 35, township 33, range 56, is one of the old-timers of Sioux county, and has watched the development of that region from almost a barren prairie to a fertile farming community, and has given liberally of his time and influence in effecting this change. He is a hard-working, industrious and worthy citizen and in spite of many discouragements has managed to accumulate a comfortable property, and is one of the substantial agriculturists of his locality.

Mr. Knori was born in Switzerland in 1867 on a farm. His father, Andrew Knori, lived and died in that country, following farming all his life. Our subject grew up there, coming to America in 1891, landing in New York in May, and immediately struck out for the west, settling in Wisconsin, where he secured employment in a cheese factory and followed that work for two years. He then came to Sioux county, Nebraska, locating in Sow Bellie creek, where he filed on a homestead and proved up. He had nothing to start with, and his first dwelling was a dugout, in which he "batched it" for eight years. He went through many hard times during those years, but gradually improved his place, and succeeded in developing a good farm. In 1901 he settled on his present farm, situated on section 35, township 33, range 56, which was not altogether unimproved land, and is lying along Big Monroe creek. He now owns a ranch of twenty-two hundred and fifty acres, and is engaged almost wholly in stock raising, keeping both beef and dairy cattle, and is one of the most prominent ranchmen of his locality. His ranch is all fenced and well supplied with running water the year around. He raises some crops, having about one hundred acres cultivated, with the balance in hay land and pasture. He has considerable irrigated land and raises a great deal of alfalfa. When Mr. Knori first started farming in this vicinity his only team was a pair of oxen, which did all his work for two years. He has had severe losses from drouths, etc., and in 1894 was burned out, losing property to the amount of three hundred dollars, which was a severe setback for him at that time.

In 1901 Mr. Knori was married to Miss Elizabeth Noreisch, a native of Germany, born in Germany in 1881, and who came to this country with her parents, who were old settlers in Sioux county and a sketch of whom appears in this volume. Mr. and Mrs. Knori are the parents of four sons, named as follows: Samuel, Manuel, Lewis and Gustave.

Our subject is one of the leading men of his community, always active in local affairs, and is one of the substantial old-timers of his county. Politically he is a Democrat, but always votes for the best man. He is prominent in school matters in his township, at present serving as moderator.

L. H. BORDWELL.

L. H. Bordwell, of Cheyenne county, resides in Sidney, Nebraska. He is one of the earliest settlers in this locality, and can recount with accuracy many of the pioneer experiences of the settlers of this region who braved the hardships and privations of those days, and has gained the confidence and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Bordwell was born in Cazenovia, New York, December 29, 1845, and grew up in that state. His father and mother were natives of Connecticut and Massachusetts, of English descent, both now being dead.

In 1865 Mr. Bordwell came west to Chicago, where he remained for one year, then came to Omaha and spent seven years, engaged in real estate business. From Omaha he came to Cheyenne county, landing here in 1874, and since that time has lived here continuously. He homesteaded a tract of land situated in section 28, township 14, range 49. After locating here he passed through all the various changes that struck this region, going through the good, bad and indifferent times, but in spite of many hardships kept up his courage and stuck to his determination to build up a good home and fortune by his own efforts.

In 1869 Mr. Bordwell was married to Margaret A. James, born in Hannibal, Missouri, and at the time of her marriage to our subject resided near Blair, Nebraska. Mrs. Bordwell died in 1901, leaving a family of three children, namely: Harry M., born in Omaha, Nebraska, in 1871, and the other two, Frank J. and Vinnie E., born in this county in 1875 and 1884, respectively.

VAL ASHBAUGH.

Val Ashbaugh, who is widely known as a bright and progressive tiller of the soil, has done much to aid the farmers of the west to a better understanding of the conditions under which their work must be carried on if they wish to attain success. He has a good farm in Brown county, and for many years has devoted his entire time to the building up of his home and farm, and is recognized as a prosperous and successful agriculturist. Mr. Ashbaugh was born in Mercer county, Ohio, June 28, 1863, of American stock, his father being a farmer by occupation. There were nine children in his parents' family, of whom he was the eighth member in the order of birth. He was reared and educated in his native state, and at the age of twenty-one years he came west and filed on a homestead in sections 14 and 15, township 30, range 23, putting up a small house built of logs, in which he lived for several years. His first team with which he broke up land was a yoke of oxen, which he used for two years. He saw many hard times, witnessing the dry years, having two total losses of his crops, besides losing his barns by fire in 1901. He worked hard and faithfully to overcome all difficulties, and now owns a fine farm of four hundred acres, one hundred of which are under cultivation, and the balance in pasture and hay land, including three acres of thrifty alfalfa. He has built up a good home and is well satisfied with the result of his labors. Mr. Ashbaugh was married in Mercer county, Ohio, October 2, 1883, to Miss Martha Fast, a native of Ohio, daughter of Daniel and Andora (Kiser) Fast, who were farmers and of American stock. Mr. and Mrs. Ashbaugh have six children—Nettie, the wife of James Crane, foreman of Plum creek section 52, Chicago & Northwestern railway; James, Mary, Eli, Willis and Lloyd. For the past six years Mr. Ashbaugh has been moderator of his school district, and has taken a deep interest in all school work. He is a Democrat politically, a Modern Woodman fraternally and in religion an adherent of the United Brethren church.

WILLIAM P. THORP.

Mr. William P. Thorp, of Burwell, Nebraska, is one of that city's substantial citizens and leading men. He conducts a real estate business there and has done his full share toward building up the section of the country where he chose his home by bringing many settlers to the state who have taken up land and established farms and homes. Mr. Thorp is credited with accomplishing more along the line of inducing emigrants to this state than any other four men in Nebraska.

Mr. Thorp was born in Clay county, Missouri, in 1855. His parents were of English descent, natives of Kentucky, who settled in Missouri in 1821, and there our subject grew up and was educated. His boyhood years were spent among the pioneers of the west and he grew up a sturdy, independent frontier lad, early learning to depend upon his own efforts and also to assist his parents in the building up of the home farm. In 1890 Mr. Thorp settled in Nebraska. He bought three hundred and sixty acres of land in Loup county, situated ten miles west of Burwell, and there followed farming and stock raising until 1897, when he moved to Burwell and established himself in the real estate business. For some time he owned and operated a general store here and made considerable money out of that enterprise. He is well known all over this part of the state and greatly admired for his excellent business ability and upright character, and is numbered among the well-to-do men financially of the county.

In 1880 Mr. Thorp was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Taylor, a native of Missouri, and they are the parents of four children, two of whom are living, namely: Clara and William T. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church of Burwell, and they are held in high esteem by every one in their community. Mr. Thorp has always taken an active interest in politics in his locality, and while living in Loup county served as county commissioner for seven years. In 1902 he was elected a member of the state legislature and served one term. He is a Democrat and a strong party man.

JOHN D. OETKEN, DECEASED.

John D. Oetken, who was, in his lifetime, a bold and enterprising spirit, and who came to Dawes county in 1892, where he did much toward the development of this section of the state, was born in Oldenberg, Germany, in 1875. His parents were prominent farmers of that place.

The greater part of our subject's life was spent in his native country, from which so many of our thrifty and enterprising citizens came. Here he received his education and learned the bricklayer's trade, which occupation he followed in several different parts of Germany.

In 1868 Mr. Oetken and Miss Tomma Lottman were married and to this union ten children were born: Henry, George, Sena, Mollie, Minnie, Fred, Emma, Marie, John and Johanna, the last two dying in the old country. Some of Mr. Oetken's older children came to the United States in the early days and settled in Iowa in 1884 and 1887 and some of them live in that state now. It was not until 1892 that our subject, in company with two of his children, Fred and Minnie, came to America and located in Dawes county, Nebraska. In 1893 the wife and the three children, Mollie, Emma and Marie, came over the ocean and joined him in Dawes county, where the father had prepared a home for them in section 21, township 30, range 50.

When Mr. Oetken first settled on his farm in Dawes county there was nothing but a common board shanty on the place, and here he no improvements, but to one of his race and blood this was no obstacle. He set to work with a determination characteristic of the German race and in a wonderfully short space of time his place began to show the fruits of his untiring labors. He erected a comfortable home for his family, a good barn, three windmills and two good wells. On two occasions his crops were destroyed by hail, but with all the hardships he experienced in making a new home in this western country he was not discouraged, but struggled on, and met with the success which was justly due his efforts. From time to time he secured adjoining lands, and engaged in the raising of cattle, horses and mixed farming.

During his lifetime in Dawes county Mr. Oetken took a lively interest in the affairs of the locality in which he resided, and did much toward the development of the county. In 1902 he passed away, leaving an estate of seven hundred and sixty acres, containing an abundance of good pine timber, which is now well looked after by his son Fred. He left behind him a host of loyal friends, who will ever honor his memory.

W. H. RADFORD.

W. H. Radford, of Newark township, Kearney county, is one of the well known stockmen and ranch owners of Nebraska. His ranch comprises thirteen hundred and sixty acres of fine valley land, located on the Platte river, and consists of fine farming and meadow lands, all on the military reservation of Fort Kearney. He is looked upon by the residents of his locality as one of the leading and most successful ranch owners of this part of Nebraska. Mr. Radford is a genial, kindly man, industrious and obliging, and highly esteemed as a good neighbor and a worthy citizen.

Mr. Radford was born in 1852 at Somersetshire, England, and came to Canada with his parents in 1854. Later they went to New York state and thence to Iroquois county, Illinois, where he was reared.

In 1876 he came to Nebraska, settling in Kearney county on a farm, and one year later homesteaded where he now lives, on section 30, township 8, range 14. He has been engaged in stock raising and mixed farming ever since locating here, and has accumulated a valuable estate, his ranch at first containing one hundred and sixty acres, to which he has added constantly until he is now proprietor of thirteen hundred and sixty acres, as above stated. Of this about three hundred and sixty acres are in meadow, seven hundred acres in pasture, and the balance cultivated. He keeps about three hundred head of cattle and feeds all the grain and hay he raises, besides being compelled to buy more. His cattle are good grades, and he has thoroughbred Hereford males in his herd. He runs a large number of hogs annually, and handles only Berkshires crossed. He has dealt in the red hogs but prefers the Berkshire for all purposes, having at the head of his herd a pedigreed boar, and runs from fifty to three hundred hogs all the time. In 1908 Mr. Radford went into the Poland China strain and handles only that breed now, believing it to be the best of all. Mr. Radford raises five hundred tons of hay each year, and the place is abundantly supplied with good water, this combined with the fine valley land making it a splendid stock farm. His corn crop is always of the best and he has never had a failure in the thirty-one years he has been here, getting an average yield of thirty-five to forty bushels per acre. He raises some wheat and oats, the latter averaging thirty bushels for the past ten years, and has had a yield of one hundred and fifteen bushels per acre some years. He has twenty acres of fine alfalfa and cuts good crops each season, while he has so much Al wild hay that he does not need to sow alfalfa. There is seventy-six acres of red-top grass on his ranch which makes splendid fodder for cattle.

Mr. Radford was married in 1883 to Miss Lizzie Shaad, of Crawford county, Ohio, and to them have been born the following children: Boyd, who married Miss Meluzenia Gormley, daughter of William W. Gormley, whose sketch appears in this book; Budd, aged twenty-two years; and Nora, aged twenty. Since 1905 our subject's sons have been equal partners with their father in the stock and ranching business, and take a deep interest in the work. In this way he has kept them at home, and it would be a good plan for more farmers to try this method of keeping their sons on the farm, as it makes them ambitious to do the best possible and is a very good thing for both parents and children.

Mr. Radford takes an active interest in local public affairs. He has been road overseer for nine years, school director and treasurer for several terms, also town clerk for two years. Politically he is an Independent. We present a picture of Mr. Radford's residence on another page of this volume.

W. G. WILSON.

W. G. Wilson, known throughout Sheridan county as an energetic and prosperous business man and ranchman, resides in section 9, township 24, range 45, where he has a pleasant home and owns a valuable property.

Mr. Wilson was born in Jefferson county, Iowa, in 1851, and is a son of Joshua Wilson, a farmer, and native of Indiana. He married Frances Templeton, born in Ohio of Irish-American stock, and they had a family of twelve children, of whom our subject is the second member, and all living at this writing. At the age of twenty-one he started in to make his own way in the world, following farm work for a couple of years, then taught school for three years, spending part of his time in different work after he quit teaching. He journeyed through Montana, Washington and other western states, working on railroad grades, etc., for four years, and in 1887 came to Sheridan county, taking a contract for four miles of Burlington & Missouri grade, and after he had finished this work made up his mind to stay in Nebraska. He had here plenty of room, range and water, and thought no one else would care to locate in the region, so filed on a homestead on section 9, which he still holds. There was then only one house between his own and the town of Whitman, and his idea was to build up a big cattle ranch. He bought forty-two head of cattle in 1888, and that was his start in the business. He put up a sod house and lived in it up to 1901, then built a fine brick residence, bringing the brick from Box Butte county, as he could not stand the idea of living in a frame or sod house. He succeeded in his venture from the first, and now has nineteen quarter sections of land, besides leasing other land, nearly all of which is valley land lying along the railroad, and he can load his stock within a mile of his ranch. He runs three hundred head of cattle and the same number of horses, and thinks this is the best stock country he ever saw, and he has had wide experience all over the western states. Since he came here the region has developed considerably, and he is contented to stay as long as he cares to run a ranch, the dry seasons here really being better for him than wet ones.

Mr. Wilson was married in 1904 to Miss Mabel Taylor, born in Iowa in 1870. She is a daughter of J. C. and Nancy J. (Gray) Taylor, natives of Ohio, who settled in Iowa in the early days. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson had one child, Francis, who died in infancy, and one living, Mabel Louise, born December 25, 1907.

When Mr. Wilson located here Alliance was not located, but was started during the same fall, and has grown to be a thriving town. Antioch is his postoffice and Reno his railroad station, and his nearest trading post is Alliance, Nebraska. Mr. Wilson is popular in political circles, serving two terms as county surveyor, and refusing a third term because he could not devote the time necessary to the work. He could do considerable in this line of work; but his stock and ranch takes up all of his time and he prefers to attend to that business in preference to any other. He is a Populist, having voted that ticket ever since coming to this country. He has been justice of the peace for a number of years.

Among the business enterprises which contribute in a marked degree to the prosperity of Maxwell, Lincoln county, as a business point, the general merchandise store conducted by L. E. Story occupies a leading place. This is one of the best equipped establishments of its kind in this locality, and its proprietor is well known to the people of the county for his honest business methods and careful attention to their needs.

Mr. Story was born in Pennsylvania in 1870. His father was Charles A. Story, from Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and during the Civil war was a captain in a Pennsylvania regiment. Our subject came to Nebraska in 1879 and located on a farm near Amherst, Buffalo county, remaining on that place up to 1892, and for a time was in the agricultural implement business, and although he was very successful he decided to enter into the mercantile line of business, and in 1898 came to Maxwell and together with W. A. and W. H. Merrick, formed the firm of W. H. Merrick & Company, and opened up a fine general merchandise store in November of that year. The firm does a large business, their trade extending for twenty miles south and thirty miles north of the place, and they are steadily increasing their already complete stock, branching out with new lines, and making it one of the up-to-date establishments in this county.

In 1897 Mr. Story married Miss Edna Merrick, daughter of W. H. Merrick, an old settler of Kearney county, Nebraska, having located there in 1878. He has held the office of county commissioner of Kearney county for some years, and was also a merchant of Newark, Nebraska, carrying on a store there from 1888 until 1901, when he sold this out and started in business at Amherst. The Merricks are an old family, who for generations past have lived in New Jersey, and this branch came to Rockford, Illinois, in the pioneer days of that state. Mr. and Mrs. Story have a family of three children, two sons and one daughter, all of whom are at present attending school.

Mr. Story takes a commendable interest in all affairs which tend toward the advancement of conditions in his locality, and is highly respected and esteemed by his fellow associates. In political faith he is a Democrat.

EMANUEL M. ROSENBAUM.

Emanuel M. Rosenbaum, who resides on his fine farm in section 36, township 33, range 48, is one of the old-timers of Dawes county, who came here about 1893, and in the years since then has succeeded in building up a good home and farm by dint of his industry and persistent efforts. He is one of the well-to-do farmers in his locality, and enjoys a pleasant home surrounded by every comfort of rural life, and is held in high esteem as a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Mr. Rosenbaum was born in Washington county, Virginia, in 1860, on a farm. His father, Joel Rosenbaum, was of American birth, of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock, born in Virginia, and he married Nancy Ramsey, also of American stock. Our subject grew up in Virginia, assisting his parents in the work of carrying on their home farm, attending the country schools where he received his early education. At the age of twenty-two years he came west to Washington county, Nebraska, and began farming near Blair, and spent eleven years in the eastern part of the state. In 1887 he was employed on the railroad, and that fall went to work in Douglas county, Nebraska. He came to Dawes county in 1893, first living on a farm south of his present location, remaining on that land for about nine years, living there continuously with the exception of one summer which he spent in Wyoming. Since coming here he has been engaged principally in farming, and at times has undergone severe losses in dry years, when all crops failed utterly. He was often discouraged and thought of moving away, but managed to stick to his farm, and gradually improved it, and is now glad he stayed. He owns a valuable tract of land located in section 36, township 33, range 48, having under his control nearly the whole section. He is engaged mostly in stock raising, and the fact of his being on Big Bordeaux creek makes it an ideal stock ranch, furnishing plenty of good running water for his stock and irrigation purposes.

In political views he is an independent voter, and bound by no party lines.

WILLIS RECORD.

Willis Record, residing on section 12, township 12, range 36, is one of the well-known old-timers of Keith county. He settled in the region during the pioneer days, and has gone through all the "old" Nebraska times, remaining to share in the success which has come to those who worked hard and faithfully to bring about this end.

Mr. Record was born in Morgan county, Indiana, in 1836. His father was a native of Kentucky, a farmer by occupation, and he married Margaret Reynolds, they living in Indiana for many years, and our subject was reared in that state. When he was twenty-six years of age he enlisted in the army, as a private in Company H, Seventieth Indiana Regiment, under Colonel Benjamin Harrison. On August 15, 1862, he took part in the skirmish at Bowling Green, Kentucky, later was in the Army of the Cumberland, in the Atlanta campaign. While he was on the latter expedition he was stricken with fever and afterward was sent to Lookout Mountain and Chattanooga. He was promoted from private to second lieutenant, but resigned from the post.

After he returned from the war, in 1865, he followed farming in Indiana, and was elected sheriff of Morgan county, serving for two terms, and later was elected county clerk, acting in that capacity for one term. In 1877 he went to Iowa, settling in Dallas county, and there farmed for five years, next moved to Calhoun county and remained up to 1886, when he came to Nebraska, locating in Keith county. He filed on a homestead south of Paxton, put up a house and other buildings and opened a farm. He experienced hard times during the first few years, while the drouths were general throughout that region and it was almost impossible to raise a crop. Mr. Record did contract work, putting in irrigation ditches in different parts of the neighboring counties. In this way he was able to improve his place, and gradually built it up in good shape, getting into the stock business on a large scale, and has done exceedingly well of late years. He has a valuable ranch, supplied with every improvement, good buildings, and plenty of good wells, etc., and he is recognized as one of the progressive and prosperous farmers and stock men of his locality.

Mr. Record married Melitta Williams, of Morgan county, Indiana, in 1858. She was a daughter of John Williams, a prominent farmer of that region. Her mother was Elizabeth Pruitt. Mrs. Melitta Record died May 25, 1903. Our subject has one daughter and one son, Laura and Charles Lincoln, the latter in partnership with his father on the farm and ranch. He was born in Indiana in 1860, spending his boyhood in Indiana and Iowa, coming to Nebraska in 1888. He also took a homestead and proved up on it, father and son combining the two places, and have made a fine ranch out of the two properties. Charles Record married Miss Lillie Everett in Iowa, in 1883. Mrs. Record is a daughter of William Everett, of Perry, Iowa, a veteran of the Civil war, who served in the Twenty-sixth Indiana Infantry. Six daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Record, namely: Edna Fern, Mary M., Harriet L., Athel Annie, Lucile and Pearl.

NEWTON T. WHITE.

Newton T. White, who occupies a foremost place among the intelligent and prosperous farmers of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, has a fine farm and home in Custer precinct. He has devoted all his life to farming, secured a thorough knowledge of the business, and has prospered in a marked degree by good management and industry.

Mr. White is a native of Tennessee, born on a farm near Athens, February 12, 1858. His father, Daniel White, followed farming all his life. He was a soldier in his Confederate army, and married Miss Susan Pace, whose people were among the first in eastern Tennessee. Both parents died in Arkansas when our subject was three years of age, the father at Little Rock, while in the army, the mother prior to the beginning of the war. Newton was reared by an aunt until eight years of age and with her he went to Louisville, Kentucky, about 1862, and to Washington county, Indiana, about three years later. After reaching a mature age he followed farming as an occupation, opening up a farm for himself in Washington county, in 1876, where he lived up to 1884. At that time he came to Keya Paha county, settling on a homestead on section 29, township 33, range 20. He sold this after a short time, purchasing three hundred and twenty acres on Burton creek and occupied this until it was lost during the dry years. Moving to Cherry county in 1896, he conducted a hotel and livery stable for three years and then returning to Keya Paha county purchased his present farm which consists of three hundred and twenty acres, with three hundred and sixty acres under lease, of which about one hundred and twenty-five acres are under cultivation. The father and one son are engaged in raising Shorthorn cattle, having a herd of twenty-five, all registered. They also keep over thirty horses and a large number of hogs. Beside his farming interests Mr. White owns property in Springview, and moves in town during the winter to give his children the benefit of the city schools.

Mr. White was married at Plattsburg, while still living in Indiana, September 17, 1877, to Miss Ophelia Hatbaugh, daughter of Robert and Mary (Jackson) Hatbaugh, of German-American stock. Four children have been born to them, named as follows: Carl M., Jesse L., Bruce H. and Edwin D., all living on or near the old homestead.

Our subject is a strong Republican and a firm believer in party principles, but he has never taken an active interest in politics, his whole time being given up to the management of his farm. He is a member of the Methodist church and the Knights of Pythias, of Springview.

NELS LARSON.

Nels Larson, one of the prominent farmers and stockmen of western Nebraska, is a man of untiring energy and good business management, residing on section 24, township 13, range 53, Chambers precinct, Cheyenne county, where he occupies a high position as a leading citizen.

Mr. Larson was born in Denmark, July 26, 1863. He grew to the age of nineteen years in his native land, following farming as an occupation most of the time and then came to the United States, sailing April 12th from Copenhagen to New York on the Tingvallia. He came direct to Blair, Nebraska (whither a brother had preceded him), arriving in that vicinity May 5, 1882. He resided in Holt county three years and two years in Washington county, engaged in farm labor, then came to Cheyenne county, arriving here in March and making homestead entry the same month. For about seven years he was out of the county following railroad shop work, for three years at Missouri Valley, on what is now the Northwestern line; two years in Cheyenne, and an equal time on ranches near Blair. In the fall of 1904 he filed on a Kincaid homestead, and now has four hundred and eighty acres, all well improved, and is one of the well-to-do residents of the county. The place is fitted with good buildings and he farms fifty acres, using the balance as a stock ranch, running quite a herd of cattle and a small bunch of horses.

Mr. Larson was married May 10, 1907, in Union precinct, Kimball county, Nebraska, to Miss Carrie Nelson, a native of Denmark, whose parents are both dead.

Politically Mr. Larson is a Democrat, and while he has always taken a commendable interest in local affairs, has never sought office other than school service, acting at present as moderator of school district No. 17. His post-office is Potter. He votes independently of party lines and is a member of the Lutheran church.

SWAN FRISKOPP.

Swan Friskopp, who is well known in Deuel county as a progressive agriculturist, where his character and ability command respect and retain confidence, was born on a farm in Sweden, and grew up there.

Mr. Friskopp is the youngest member of his father's family of three children, and has one brother still living in Sweden, while his only sister lives in Dawson county, Nebraska. Both father and mother spent their entire lives in that country, dying there several years past. He left home in 1882, striking out at once for America, taking passage on an emigrant steamer. His first location was at Kearney, Nebraska, where he spent several years, and then came on to Deuel county, landing here in 1887. He had been through the country in 1884 and taken a homestead on section 20, township 13, range 43, and has now made permanent settlement on the land. He put up a rough shanty and other buildings, and kept "batchelor's hall" for a number of years, going through many hardships and discouragements in the failure of crops, etc. He had little capital, and was obliged to work out part of the time in order to lay by a little money with which to put improvements on his farm, and has seen every phase of the early Nebraska times.

Mr. Friskopp now owns six hundred and forty acres, farming about one hundred and forty of this, and the balance is used for pasture and hay land for his stock, of which he has eighty head of cattle and sixty horses. His place is well improved with a complete set of good buildings, fences, well and windmill, etc., and every appointment evidences thrift and painstaking care in its operation.

On August 30, 1895, Mr. Friskopp was married to Miss Annie Leef, in Cheyenne, Wyoming. Mrs. Friskopp was born and raised in Knox county, Illinois, and is a most charming and intelligent lady, the mother of five children, named as follows: Laura S., Alice G., Anna Irene, Velma, Viola and Royal J., all at home, and forming an interesting family group. Mr. Friskopp has always taken an active interest in school affairs, and has served his township in various capacities as a public officer. In politics he is a Republican.

WILSON J. TEETERS.

Among the prominent ranchmen of Cherry county, Nebraska, the gentleman above named deserves a foremost place. Mr. Teeters is the owner of a valuable estate situated in section 10, township 29, range 34, and has made his home near here for the past ten years.

Mr. Teeters was born in Steuben county, Indiana, November 26, 1875, a twin brother of Willis J. Teeters, whose biography is to be found elsewhere in this work. His father, John Teeters, was a farmer and old settler in the eastern part of this state, arriving in Burt county about 1879. The mother's maiden name was Mary Russell, who died in Nebraska March

RESIDENCE OF WILSON J. TEETERS.
Cherry County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF WILLIS J. TEETERS,
Cherry County, Nebraska.

13, 1888, at the age of forty-six. One of a family of seven children, Mr. Teeters was reared in Nebraska. He attended the country schools, and during his spare time assisted his father and brothers in the work of carrying on their farm. During our subject's young manhood he and his brothers worked in partnership in Burt county, engaged in farming and they are still to some extent interested in cattle in common and are to some extent individual owners. In 1898 he came to Cherry county and settled on a homestead in section 2, later on section 10, township 29, range 34, where he now resides. He put up a sod shanty for his home, and lived in this for some time. His first farm contained eighty acres, and he soon took up an additional eighty, also another piece in section 2, township 10, range 11. He farmed part of this land and engaged in stock raising to some extent, meeting with good success in whatever he undertook. In 1904 he took four hundred and eighty acres of Kincaid homestead land, and he now owns a ranch of fourteen hundred and forty acres, all good land, and with his father and brothers is interested in over fifty-two hundred acres. He has a good set of farm buildings on his place, good wells and windmills, and all fenced. He is now devoting his entire attention to stock raising, and runs a herd of a hundred head of cattle and about thirty horses.

Mr. Teeters and his brothers, Jefferson D. and Willis J., of whom sketches appear in this work, have invented and secured a patent on a rotary cycle mower which gives promise of being a very successful invention. This is constructed so that each section runs on a chain belt, thus doing away with any reciprocal motion, which is the principle on which ordinary mowers run.

In 1900 Mr. Teeters was married to Miss Katie Herron, daughter of Lewis and Ellen E. (Morrain) Herron, the latter having died when Mrs. Teeters was a little girl about three years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Teeters have a family of three children, who are named as follows: Wilson J., Jr., born January 19, 1901; Benton Ray, born December 3, 1902, and Myrtle Adelia, born October 10, 1904.

The family is highly esteemed throughout the community in which they reside, and enjoy the friendship of a host of neighbors. A view of the family residence is one of the interesting illustrations in this work.

WILLIS J. TEETERS.

Willis J. Teeters, a prominent ranchman of Cherry county, Nebraska, resides on his valuable estate, section 2, township 29, range 34, where he has a pleasant and comfortable home. Mr. Teeters is considered among the early settlers in this region, and is one of those who have contributed largely of their time and influence in building up the locality in which they chose their home.

Mr. Teeters is a native of Steuben county, Indiana, born November 26, 1875, and is a twin brother to Wilson J. Teeters, whose sketch appears on another page in this volume. He came to Cherry county when a young man of about twenty, and located on the homestead on which he now resides, and at once went to work building up his farm and home. He has a finely improved ranch of seven hundred and twenty acres, well stocked, and has been most successful in accumulating a nice property in the comparatively short time he has lived here. In common with his brother he runs about four hundred cattle and eighty head of horses. A view of the residence and surroundings will be found on another page in this work.

Mr. Teeters was married October 26, 1904, to Miss Blanche Miller, daughter of Gregory Miller, a farmer living at Clearwater, Antelope county. Mr. and Mrs. Teeters have two children: Ethel Mary, born November 23, 1905, and Norval, born August 14, 1907.

Mr. Teeters is a man of superior intelligence and marked business ability, supplemented by industrious habits and a level head. He is of an inventive turn of mind, being associated with his brothers in the perfecting of a rotary cycle mower, which they expect to put upon the market.

LOUIS H. DEAVER.

As an industrious farmer and honest and worthy citizen, the gentleman herein named is known throughout Cherry county. He is the owner of a well improved property in section 4, township 31, range 34, and well deserves the success which he has acquired through many years of hard work and perseverance.

Mr. Deaver was born in Madison county, Nebraska, February 12, 1873. His father, Henry Deaver, was an American, a farmer by occupation, and served in an Indiana regiment during the Civil war. In a family of eleven children our subject was the fifth member, and at the age of thirteen started out to make his own way in the world, obtaining employment on farms in this state, where all his life has been spent. When he was twenty-four he started in farming for himself in Stanton county and remained there for two years, and then he made his home in Antelope county for four years from whence he came to Cherry county. Here he took up a homestead in section 4, township 31, range 34. Since then he has taken up additional land amounting to four hundred and eighty acres, also three hundred and sixty acres of section 32, township 32, range 34, this being a part of the Heyne ranch, of which he was foreman for a number of years. The owners of the Heyne ranch, which is now reduced to four hundred and eighty acres, located here in 1898, and have run the place since that time. Mr. Deaver has good buildings and improvements on his home farm, and has also quite an orchard of fruit trees set out and growing well. He has prospered from the first, and is one of the progressive and up-to-date farmers and ranchmen of the county.

In 1897 Mr. Deaver was married to Miss Louisa Cleveland, a native of Ohio, but reared in Wisconsin. They have one child, Phyllis Joy.

Although Mr. Deaver takes a commendable interest in politics he has never had the time to devote to active participation in the game, and has never held any office. He is a Republican in sentiment; in fraternal relations he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Cody.

E. S. BYFIELD.

E. S. Byfield, editor and proprietor of the Indianola Reporter, which is recognized as one of the most reliable news mediums of this locality, is foremost among the younger business men of the thriving town of Indianola, Nebraska.

Mr. Byfield was born in Pueblo, Colorado, and is a son of William Byfield, of McCook, who is the owner of a large ranch and elevator at Redwillow, besides one hundred and sixty acres of fine land on which he has built a beautiful residence, adjoining the town of McCook. He is also a heavy feeder, running from six to seven head of cattle every year. He is a large grower of grain, but in 1906 his crop consisted of one hundred acres of sugar beets, yielding fourteen tons to the acre, four thousand bushels of corn, and three thousand bushels of wheat. He feeds about five hundred hogs and four thousand lambs annually. His beet crop realized forty-six dollars per acre last year, and showed him a nice profit. He pays twenty-one dollars per acre for labor, seed, etc., and had the beet tops to feed his stock, which make the best kind of fodder for them. He states that this crop never has failed him, even during the dryest seasons. He does not use the land for the same crop every year, but raises corn and beets alternately on the ground, and in this way obtains better results. He also has one hundred and twenty acres of fine alfalfa which yields him a splendid crop. He has farmed in Kansas and in his native land, Ontario, Canada, and from this wide experience is satisfied that the Republican valley is the best place for breeding and raising stock, also feeding, that he has ever seen. He was one of the first settlers of Redwillow county, coming here in 1872. Later he moved to Colorado, coming back to Redwillow county in 1885 with his family, of whom our subject is the eldest member. He first located at the junction of the Republican river and Redwillow creek. With him were J. F. Black and John Lonecker, who settled near his homestead, and both of these gentlemen still live in this county.

Our subject received his early education in the public schools of McCook, attending these until he reached the eleventh grade, and then entered Franklin Academy, from which he was graduated in 1904, and during the time he attended this academy he was also employed in the Free Press office at Franklin, gaining much practical knowledge from his connection with this paper. He spent one and a half years with the Danbury News, a leading newspaper issued at Danbury, Nebraska. Two years ago he purchased the Indianola Reporter, and in this short time has built the paper up and made it one of the best papers Indianola has had for years. He is an earnest advocate for the advancement of the best interests of his locality, and takes a foremost part in all public matters of the times. He is a young man of sterling qualities, and promises to become one of the prominent members of his chosen profession.

ERIK RASMUSSEN.

Erik Rasmussen, a prosperous farmer of township 26, range 48, Box Butte county, has made his way to success by perseverance and diligence, supplemented by honest dealings. He is a man of wide experience, his career has been a busy one and he still has apparently many years left to enjoy the prosperity which he has attained since locating in this section of the country.

Mr. Rasmussen was born near Bergen, in the Province of Nordfjord, Norway, his birthplace being near the seacoast, where his parents owned a farm, the father spending his entire life in that vicinity. The mother still owns an interest in this homestead in the old country. Our subject grew up there, and at the age of seventeen years left home and started out for himself, following the life of a sailor for about seventeen years, working on ships that took him all over the world. He visited nearly all foreign countries, including the East Indies, Australia and South America. After a trip to New Zealand in 1881 he returned to Norway and remained at home for about two years, then took passage on an emigrant steamer for America, arriving in New York in the spring of 1886. He struck out across the country for the west, and landed in Albion, Nebraska, on July 7th, of the last mentioned year, spent one week there, then went to Hay Springs, and soon afterward located in Box Butte county. At that time Hemingford boasted of only two stores, one of which was a hardware store which was conducted in a sod shanty. He filed on a homestead in section 8, township 26, range 48, and for a time worked on the railroad, doing grade work. He began to improve his claim, putting up a sod house, and "batched it" for nine years, gradually developing a good farm and cultivating his ground with a team of mules. The drouth seasons came on and he suffered the loss of nearly all his crops. His first good crop was in the year 1888, when he had a good yield of sod corn, and the following year was also a good one. The year of 1890 was a complete failure and he was compelled to go out by the day to earn money to make a living. He met with many hardships and discouragements, but stuck to his farm, proving up on it, and in 1893 returned to Norway to look after some business affairs which arose on account of the death of a brother there. After being absent a few months he came back, continued to improve his place and bought more land, and is now the owner of a ranch of six hundred and forty acres, cultivating one hundred and forty-five acres of this, and using the balance as a cattle ranch. He raises quite a good many horses, also cattle each year for the markets. Mr. Rasmussen has a fine estate, well supplied with good buildings, having a nice story and a half house, large barns, and other necessary outbuildings.

Mr. Rasmussen was married in Iowa in 1895, to Miss Julia Lewison, who was born in Norway, coming to this country with her parents when a young girl, the family settling as pioneers in Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Rasmussen have been the parents of five children, who are named as follows: Elida, Hilda, Simon, Marion and Samuel Lewis, the last named dying at the age of twenty-one months.

Our subject has always lent his best efforts to the building up and improving of conditions in his locality, helping to establish the schools, and taking an active interest in all local school and political matters. He is a Republican in politics.

DAVID H. SHULTZ.

David H. Shultz, a gentleman of superior education and splendid characteristics, is widely known and highly respected alike for his genuine worth of mind and heart, his upright business methods, honesty, and his friendly and courteous spirit. He resides in Potter, Nebraska, where he is engaged in the real estate business.

Mr. Shultz was born in Marklesburg, Pennsylvania, on March 9, 1843, and lived in his native state for thirty-three years. He was educated at Juniata University, and after coming out of college spent a number of years engaged in educational work at the Juniata Theological Seminary. He went to Lena, Illinois, in 1876, and served as pastor of a Lutheran church there for two years; from there he was transferred to Lanark, Illinois, following the same work for an equal length of time. He was then called to Rising City, Nebraska, and there organized the first Lutheran church, also at Surprise, and also the Bethel church in York county. He afterward organized a church at David City, and served as pastor for one year, then removed to Potter, where he again organized a church and became pastor. He was a faithful worker and was greatly beloved by his parishioners, but on account of failing eyesight was compelled to give up the work. Mr. Shultz is distinctly an organizer, building up the waste and desolate places. He has shown great strength in drawing together weak congregations and making them self-sustaining. After retiring from the ministry he engaged in ranching in 1894, taking up a homestead in section 32, township 16, range 53, which he has since sold. He later purchased a section of table land and a hay ranch on Pumpkin Seed creek, containing in all ten hundred and forty acres, which is devoted to ranching interests, and while he resides in Potter and carries on an extensive real estate business, he also personally supervises his ranch. Mr. Shultz takes an active interest in the welfare of the county and state, and is particularly interested in its progress along educational and religious lines, having been a prominent educator nearly all his life. When an effort was made by another denomination to purchase the Lutheran church at Potter, during the dry period in the early nineties when the congregation was scattered, Mr. Shultz influenced the synod to send out an energetic and active minister, and together they rejuvenated the organization and they now have a strong and growing congregation.

Mr. Shultz has been married twice, his first wife dying in Potter, March 24, 1907, leaving no children. She was a lady of most estimable character and charming personality, and her death was sincerely deplored by a large circle of friends.

Mr. Shultz is a Republican in political views, and lends his influence for good government.

GEORGE HAAS.

Constant industry, careful management and unswerving honesty are the secret of the noblest success possible on American soil. He who can work hard, plan and manage well, and stand "four-square to all the winds that blow," may be rich or poor, but he will be honored and respected by all who know him. Such a man is George Haas, who has borne his full share in the making of western Nebraska, and well merits an honored place among its pioneer and early settlers. Mr. Haas was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, August 4, 1847. His father, George Haas, Sr., came to American shores with part of his family about 1853, settling in Ohio on a farm, our subject following his father to this country in 1862, sailing from Hamburg in May and after a stormy passage of fifty-three days, landed in New York. Up to 1878 he made Ross county, Ohio, his home, having there a farm of forty-four acres, with a comfortable little house.

He came to Nebraska in 1878 and settled on a farm near Johnstown and remained there for five years, then bought his present homestead in section 9, township 30, range 23, where he has lived continuously since. He has seen hard times since coming here, going through the dry years when he lost two crops entirely and experienced all the discouragements of those years. He has now built up a good home and farm, owning one hundred and sixty acres, one hundred and fifteen acres of which is in a high state of cultivation, and all improved with good buildings including comfortable house, large barns, granary and other farm buildings, with his land all fenced and fitted with an ample supply of modern farm machinery. He devotes all his time to the building up of his place and well deserves the success he has attained. There is a grove of over a thousand trees on his place, affording shade in the summer and a windbreak in the winter.

Mr. Haas was married in 1870 while living in Ohio to Miss Phoebe Lamenshimer, a native of the state of Ohio. To Mr. and Mrs. Haas have been born the following children: Effie, Lizzie, Fred, Kate, John, Okey, William, Charles, Albert and Minnie. The family are highly esteemed in the community in which they reside, and are popular members of society.

Politically, Mr. Haas votes with the Democratic party.

HENRY E. GOODALL.

Henry E. Goodall was born in London, England, September, 1849. His father, Thomas Goodall, was an importer of olive oil and remained in this business all his life. His mother, Ann Aldrich, was a descendant of Henry Aldrich, who was dean of Christ Church College, Oxford, England, in 1636. A great many of her people were college professors and clergymen. Our subject was reared and educated at a private school in Leeds, England, and after leaving this school he studied law with two different law firms. He also worked in the John Fowler Company steam plow works.

In 1872 he left Liverpool for America, embarking on the 26th day of March and coming direct to Nebraska. Our subject and his partner told the trainmen that they wanted to go as far as the train would take them. The last rail was then laid to Harvard, Clay county, and here he filed on a homestead on section 14, township 7, range 7. He has built up a home, improved it and proved up on the claim which was his home for ten years. Part of this time our subject drove an ox team, which was the first team he had ever learned to handle. The first building on his claim was a sod house, in which he lived for many years, and while living here he witnessed the grasshopper raids. After losing three crops by hail our subject leased his farm and moved to Clay Center, where he lived for some time. He was deputy clerk for one year, and deputy clerk of the district court.

He was married in 1885 to Miss Carrie A. Boyd, only daughter of Robert W. Boyd, an attorney at Eddyville, Iowa. In November, 1887, he moved to the town of Grant in Perkins county, where he opened the first abstract office in the county, and went into the real estate business. In May, 1889, he was admitted to the bar before Judge A. H. Church, and has practiced law continuously ever since. He was elected county attorney in Perkins county and has served as county attorney in both Perkins and Keith counties.

Feeling the need of a change, our subject bought a ranch in Keith county, where he has resided for several years. This ranch is located at Korty, between Ogallala and Paxton, in the South Platte river valley. He has all improvements on this ranch, good buildings and fences. Here he does considerable farming, having one hundred and forty acres under cultivation. The ranch comprises one thousand nine hundred and fifty acres, on which are growing numerous shade and fruit trees. He also has property in Ogallala, which town our subject calls his home. He moved from Grant to Ogallala in 1897, engaging in the practice of law. Here his wife, who is a woman of remarkable literary attainments, became owner, editor and publisher of the Republican Argus, a weekly paper published in the town of Ogallala. Our subject has taken an active part in the affairs of his community for over thirty-six years and has watched the growth and advancement of the region in which he has resided and is regarded as one of the most progressive of the old settlers of the state. He has taken an active part in the development of the county and state in which he lives, and is a leader in all matters of public interest.

Our subject is an Episcopal churchman, and is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the State Bar Association. He has one son, Robert Aldrich Goodall, who was born October 8, 1891. Mr. Goodall is widely known throughout the state and is one of the most popular men in the state, where he is honored for his honesty of purpose and other sterling traits of character. He is a Republican in his political affiliations and has held many offices, the duties of which he has executed with great satisfaction to the people.

PHILIP CONARD.

Among those who have settled more recently in Garfield county, but nevertheless, during his short residence here, accumulated a nice property through his industrious habits and strict attention to duty, is the gentleman whose name heads this review. Mr. Conard owns a well developed farm in section 11, township 22, range 15, and is well known and highly respected in the community.

Philip Conard was born in Lee county, Illinois, in 1863. He is of German descent, his parents being natives of Pennsylvania, both dying when our subject was a small boy. He grew up in Iowa and Nebraska. In 1888 Mr. Conard came to Nebraska and settled in Rock county, where he took up a pre-emption of one hundred and sixty acres, remaining there up to 1892, then moved to Garfield county. Here he bought one hundred and sixty acres, also took three hundred and twenty acres under the Kincaid act, and now owns a valuable piece of property, engaging principally in the culture of small grains, and since locating here he has never had a crop failure and has made money. Mr. Conard much prefers this country to any in the east for the poor man, and says there is no excuse for a man not getting along who is willing to work and exercise good judgment in his line of business, and especially if he follows farming. His farm is well improved with good buildings, commodious barns and other farm necessities. He is a thoroughly practical farmer, employing modern methods in all his operations, and is recognized as one of the leading agriculturists of his locality.

Mr. Conard has never married. Politically he is a Republican, but has never aspired to office.

JOHN E. HUNT.

John E. Hunt, who although comparatively a newcomer in Morrill county, has been a resident of Nebraska for many years past, is owner of a valuable property in Bayard precinct. Mr. Hunt is a native of Knox county, Ohio, born June 9, 1848, a son of George W. and Elizabeth R. (Eirp) Hunt, natives of Ohio and the District of Columbia respectively.

About 1855 the family, consisting of five sons and three daughters, moved to Fayette county, Illinois, where they lived for about six years, the father engaged in farming. From there they moved to Christian county and remained in Illinois near Pana until 1875, when our subject left home and emigrated to Nebraska, his first location being Fillmore county. Remaining there for about fourteen years, he moved to Box Butte county, where he took up some land and farmed for nine years, improving a good place.

Mr. Hunt finally settled in Morrill, formerly Cheyenne, county, in 1898, purchasing a home in section 36, township 21, range 52, and afterwards acquired sufficient additional land to make a ranch of two hundred and forty acres, of which two hundred and twenty acres are irrigable. Here he has made a success in building up a good home and is fast becoming one of the wealthy men of his locality. He is progressive and up-to-date in his methods, industrious and thrifty and enjoys the esteem and respect of all who know him. Vigorous of mind and body, his epigrammatic expressions, short and crisp, are of never failing interest to his listeners. Quite a portion of his farm is devoted to grain raising and he also has plenty of hay land, with thirty-five acres of alfalfa. Besides his farming he raises considerable stock, having at present about one hundred and fifty head, including cattle, horses and hogs. He has improved his estate by erecting a good residence, large barns and other buildings and has a fine grove of tall trees surrounding the home buildings, with a thrifty orchard of a variety of fruit trees in bearing. A view of the dwelling in its fine grove and surrounding buildings is to be found on another page.

Mr. Hunt was married in 1872 to Miss Catherine Secrest. To them were born three children, Eva M., Lily M. and George H., but the wife and mother died in 1880. On December 27, 1886, our subject was married the second time to Miss Lily M. Gilmore, the first white child born in York county, Nebraska, where her parents were pioneers. The father, Jacob Rush Gilmore was a direct descendant of Benjamin Rush, of Revolutionary fame. He enlisted in the ninety-day service of the Union army in April, 1861, in Company D, Twentieth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at Pontiac, Illinois. Re-enlisted June 1, 1861, for three years, at Joliet, Illinois, and again April 9, 1865, at Black Run, Mississippi. He was discharged because of disabilities at Goldsboro, North Carolina. He participated in the siege of Vicksburg and was one of the few who escaped alive from the awful explosion at "the crater" at Fort Hill.

To Mr. and Mrs. Hunt have been born the following children: Susa Bell, now the wife of Arthur Jones, they living in Moorfield, Nebraska; John E., Jr., Omar T. (deceased), Col E. and Nellie Hattie, all at home.

Both of Mr. Hunt's parents are dead, while Mrs. Hunt's father resides in California.

Mr. Hunt is a staunch Democrat in politics and his opponents know he is not a passive one. When he goes into a campaign the opposing side knows it has a fight to the finish on hand. Together with his wife he is a member of the Methodist church and the Loyal Mystic Legion.

JOHN E. SANDERS.

John E. Sanders, widely known as a gentleman of enterprise and ability, is a prosperous farmer and ranchman of Davison precinct. He has followed farming since his boyhood, has a thorough knowledge of the same, and has met with marked success in his endeavors. He is one of the prominent old settlers of Cheyenne county, having lived there for the past twenty years, and since his residence there has done his full share toward the development of the resources of the county where he chose his home in the early days.

Mr. Sanders was born in Erie county, New York, August 19, 1853, and three years later, after the death of the father, the mother took her little family and emigrated to the state of Iowa, locating in Washington county, where John was reared and educated, receiving a good training; he followed farm work during his boyhood, remaining in Iowa up to 1883. After a year in Lancaster county, Nebraska, he returned to Iowa, where he remained five years. In 1889 he again turned westward, arriving in Sidney April 19. In the fall of that year he filed on a homestead in section 8, township 16, range 51. He proved up on the land and later took an additional Kincaid homestead of four hundred and eighty acres in section 6, which is now the home ranch. His first buildings were constructed of sod, and his start necessarily slow, owing to his limited means, but as he became able to raise good crops, he constantly improved his land with good buildings, and worked into the stock business until he is now one of the successful and well-to-do men of his community. At present he farms about two hundred acres, and runs from fifty to sixty head of cattle and sixty horses and mules. He is proprietor of six hundred and forty acres, all good farm and ranch land, with a good water supply, and every necessary piece of farm machinery. The dwelling was reconstructed in the spring of 1909, making a commodious country home. A view of the premises is shown on another page.

Mr. Sanders was married when he reached his twenty-first year, to Miss Elizabeth Pfeiffer, a native of Iowa, the event taking place in Brighton, Washington county, Iowa, on July 23, 1874. Twelve children were born to them, who are named as follows: Emmons H., married and living on section 12, west of his father's ranch; Edward C., owner of a good homestead on section 18; Frederick and John E., both deceased; Augustus R., who suffered an injury to his foot by a gunshot wound some years ago, is at home; Julia A., wife of George Moore, residing in Sidney; Myra A., married to Dan Aldrich, also living in Sidney; Grover C., who died in 1888; Leslie V., married and living in Cheyenne county; Luthera May, who sustained a severe bodily injury from a snake bite when eight years of age; with Sadie E. and Ida E., are living at home. They form a most interesting family, and are upright, energetic young people, and a credit to their parents, all filling useful places in the world. Mr. Sanders' mother is now living in Iowa, our subject and a younger brother being her only children by her first marriage.

In political views Mr. Sanders adheres to the Democratic party, is a loyal supporter of his political faith and one of the prominent old-timers of the region in which he has spent so many years. Mrs. Sanders is a member of the Methodist church.

MARTIN ROCHFORD.

The gentleman whose name heads this review resides in section 13, township 24, range 43, Sheridan county, Nebraska. Mr. Rochford was born in Rochester, New York, in 1869, and

RESIDENCE OF J. E. HUNT,
Morrill County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF JOHN E. SANDERS,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

was raised there of English stock, his father, Robert Rochford, being a miller by trade, both he and his wife having been born in England. When our subject was twelve years of age he left home and has made his own way ever since. At the age of sixteen years he was in business for himself, running a meat market in New York state, and followed that work up to 1887 when he came to Nebraska. Here he worked on ranches along the Platte river, a brother having located here before he came west. Soon after coming here he bought a bunch of horses and since that time has been engaged in the cattle and horse business, spending two years on the Platte river, then moving to the sand hills. In the fall of 1889 he went to Wyoming, but only stayed two years, returning then to the sand hills, remaining for three years, when he went to California looking for a new location, but found nothing to suit him there. He traveled all over the west, and in 1895 came back to Nebraska. He was engaged in the meat business in Hill City, South Dakota, for a time, but lost considerable money, and closed out his shop there.

Mr. Rochford has never used his homestead right here, but took a pre-emption and timber claim and rents these, but is unable to get a homestead with enough hay land to provide for his stock. He is now engaged in the horse business, has a hundred head around him, and is making a success of this line. He has always lived in this locality since coming to Nebraska, and although he has traveled a great deal through different cattle countries, considers that he can do better here than anywhere else. He has made considerable money at different times, but has spent a great deal in different enterprises, and when he needed more would return to this region and get a start again, but is now satisfied to remain permanently.

In 1898 Mr. Rochford was married to Miss Bridget Dunn, a native of Queens county, Ireland, whose parents never came to America. Mr. and Mrs. Rochford have four children, three of whom are now living, namely: Mary, Anna and Stella. The other child, Sarah, died at the age of six months. Mr. Rochford is serving as director in his school, but devotes most of his time to the building up of his home and ranch, taking no active part in politics, although he always votes the Republican ticket. His postoffice is Ellsworth, Nebraska.

JOHN R. LUCAS.

John R. Lucas, one of the prominent citizens of Cottonwood township, Phelps county, Nebraska, is an old settler in this locality and one of the pioneers who came here when the country was practically a wilderness, and has watched the development and growth of the county since its organization.

Mr. Lucas was born in Illinois in 1861. His parents, Thomas and Minerva Lucas, were natives of Kentucky, and moved from that state to Illinois during the latter's pioneer days. The father, Thomas Lucas, died in the fall of 1907 at the advanced age of eighty-seven years.

In the fall of 1879 his family came west to Nebraska and settled in Phelps county. Our subject first saw the county in 1878, his brother Manlius having come here as early as 1872, at which time there were only a few families in the county, and they went through all the privations and hardships which every pioneer experienced in those days. Buffalo, elk, deer and antelope roamed over the country in large numbers, and tribes of Indians still occupied the river banks and islands. The California trail passes through the lands now owned by our subject, along which for ages before Indians and probably the prehistoric races traveled to and fro from the valley of the Mississippi to the Rockies and beyond. Along this trail also went all who traveled to Denver, Pike's Peak, Salt Lake and California. During the height of the mad rush westward in the early days, as many as nineteen hundred wagons have passed this trail in one day, and many were the experiences of both settlers and travelers along the way. Mr. Lucas often finds relics of these days in cultivating his land, in the shape of iron tips which were used on oxen hoofs in traveling long distances, and also other curiosities, which vividly recall those primitive times. During the years when drouth caused the failure of all crops he was one of those who worked so hard to save at least a part of his products by irrigating, and people around his locality still tell of his endeavors along this line, and of the hard times they saw, when the daily wage paid to them each night was obliged to be used for keeping their families in bread.

Mr. Lucas' property now comprises about eight hundred acres of the finest river bottom land on the south side of the Platte, near Elm creek. He engages in both farming and stock raising, always keeping the best grades of animals, as he finds it much more profitable than those of scrub breeds. His farm is all fenced, and improved with fine substantial buildings, and all the modern machinery necessary for its operation. Besides this farm Mr. Lucas, together with his father and his brother, M. Lucas, is interested in about fourteen hundred acres of rich farming land in this same locality, which is used partly for farming and hay and pasture lands.

Mr. Lucas was married in 1887 to Miss Eliza Waller, of Kentucky, who died in the year 1892. They had one child, Francis.

Mr. Lucas is a Democrat politically. Since 1906 our subject and brother, M. Lucas, have bought three sections of land in Lincoln county. In the year 1908 our subject raised one thousand nine hundred bushels of wheat.

GEORGE K. COGDILL.

Prominent among the earliest settlers of Dawes county, Nebraska, a gentleman who has spent many years in building up a farm and home out of wild prairie land and solely through his own efforts and persistent labors become one of the prosperous citizens of the western part of his state, is George K. Cogdill, who resides in section 27, township 32, range 48. He was familiar with this section before there were any settlers in the region and no signs of towns or railroads, and has watched its development and growth from the very first, aiding very materially in its progress by his influence and help.

Mr. Cogdill was born in Gentry county, Missouri, in 1866. His father, Miles Cogdill, was a farmer and blacksmith, also a carpenter by trade, who settled in Missouri in the early days, and died there in 1872. Our subject grew up in that state, helping his mother in carrying on the home farm, and spent about five years in Stanberry, where he worked in different employments. When he was eighteen years of age he left home and came to Nebraska, being with a freighting outfit from Valentine, and in 1885 came out on another trip, and from here went to Wyoming, where he worked as a cowboy for six or seven years, and traveled all through that state, also Montana and northwestern Nebraska on horseback, camping out wherever he happened to be. He trailed three big bunches of cattle from Wyoming to Montana in 1889, and in 1891 trailed one bunch from Orange Junction to Red Water, Montana, for the H. S. outfit. In 1891 he went to Glendive, Montana, and from there to Chicago, paying a visit to his old home. Mr. Cogdill is a great lover of good horses and attributes his success to dealing in and training them; he has a fine lot of draft horses and roadsters on hand all the time. In the spring of 1891 he had filed on a homestead in section 27, township 32, range 48, and the following year took possession of it and started in to improve the place, which was nothing but a wilderness. His house is built of some of the first lumber ever cut on Big Bordeaux creek. His ranch consists of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres, located near the head of Big Bordeaux creek, and it has plenty of good natural timber of all kinds, running water the year round for his stock and domestic use, and there are wild fruits of all kind on the farm. It is one of the best farming ranches in the section, and he has it well improved, and all this has been accumulated from a start of nothing, which speaks well for his ability and good management.

In 1891 Mr. Cogdill was married to Miss Eva Clark, daughter of William Clark, who was one of the pioneers of Dawes county. Her mother was Miss Louisa Conick. To Mr. and Mrs. Cogdill the following children have been born: Denver, Hazel, Edna, Dale and Raymond.

J. J. McCARTHY.

J. J. McCarthy was born in Cork county, Ireland, in the year 1860. His father, Charles M. McCarthy, was a native of Ireland and lived and died in that country. His mother, Margaret Murphy, was also a native of that country and still lives there. Mr. McCarthy came to America in 1880, coming first to Louisville, Kentucky, where he remained one year. From there he went to Pottawatomie county, Iowa, where he spent two years, leaving there for Keith county in 1884. He obtained employment with the Ogallala Land & Cattle Company when he first came to Keith county and continued with said company until they closed up their cattle business in Nebraska. When Cleveland ran for President in 1884, Mr. McCarthy carried the ballot box from White Tail precinct to Ogallala, enduring many hardships. At that time there was only one bridge across the North Platte river from North Platte to the Wyoming line, the tall bridge at Camp Clark. At that time he was obliged to swim the North Platte river through snow, slush and ice.

In 1888 he was married to Miss May H. Holway, daughter of David P. Holway, an early settler of Keith county, who is now at Spokane Washington. Her mother was Susan E. Stanly in her youth. Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy have four children: Margarett, Eleanor, Marie and Justina.

In 1888, shortly after his marriage, he settled on a homestead sixteen miles from Ogallala, close to Keystone postoffice. The first house they built was of sod and still stands on the place. It was the largest sod building in Keith county when built and in those days it was considered a palace. He first went into horse raising and was in that business to a great extent until 1893, when a prairie fire that devastated fourteen western Nebraska counties, put him out of business. Mr. McCarthy has witnessed very hard times. During this great fire of 1893 he lost all his stock. At the present time he has a ranch of five thousand acres, but spends all his time at stock business.

Mr. McCarthy is a Democrat in his political belief and practice. He was elected county treasurer in November, 1907. He was Democratic candidate for state senator in 1904 in the thirtieth senatorial district. He has also been on the Democratic state central committee and was chairman of the county committee for years. He is a consistent member of the Catholic church. He is a charter member of the Ogallala camp, No. 2228, Modern Woodmen of America, and holds membership in the North Platte council, No. 1211, Knights of Columbus.

LEANDER L. HAMILTON.

The gentleman here named is widely known as one of the leading old settlers and influential citizens of Keya Paha county, Nebraska. He is extensively engaged in farming, his home being situated in Holt precinct, and he is a prosperous and progressive farmer.

Mr. Hamilton was born in Monroe county, Ohio, February 8, 1850. His father, James Hamilton, was of Irish-American stock, who was a farmer all his life; the mother, who was Elizabeth Long, bore a family of eight children, our subject being the youngest. When he was one year old his parents moved to Bureau county, Illinois, where he was reared and educated on a farm, and in the spring of 1866 the family went to Harrison county, Iowa, whence after eighteen months they moved to Pottawatomie county, where they lived several years. Leander remained at home and assisted his father in the farming for six years, then started a farm for himself in the vicinity of his home. He remained there until 1884, then came to Washington county, Nebraska, and lived there for four years, coming thence to Keya Paha county, where he took a homestead on section 25, township 34, range 21, and still lives on the same place. Here he went to work building up a farm and home, planted five acres of forest trees, besides six hundred apple trees which he set out in 1905. He now has one hundred trees in bearing, including apple and small fruits, and is proud of the fact that his is the best orchard in the county. During the first years he saw many hard pioneer experiences, as he had not much capital to start with, but worked hard and stuck to it through all the hardships and privations of the early days, and has been well repaid for his perseverance and industry. He is proprietor of seven hundred and twenty acres of land, two hundred and fifty acres of which are under the plow, with the balance in hay and pasture. He keeps forty head of cattle, and raises each year fifty hogs, and has just enough horses to use in carrying on his farm work. He has one of the best farms in the county, and has never had an entire failure of crops any year.

Mr. Hamilton was married in 1877 to Miss Geneva Lewis, a native of Wisconsin, reared in Iowa and Texas, whose people were of English-Yankee descent. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton are the parents of four children, who are named as follows: Amelda, wife of Fred Whitney, of Carroll, Iowa; Lila M., who married Fred Cherington, of Norfolk; and Charles A., living near the old home.

Mr. Hamilton is a Republican, but has never had time to taking an active part in political affairs. He is a member of the Methodist church.

JOHN BYERLEY.

John Byerley was born in the city of Davenport, Iowa, in 1862, and was the son of Jacob and Anna (Bracher) Byerley, both natives of Germany. The father came to America when he was seventeen years of age, and the mother when she was but a little girl. Mr. Byerley, Sr., was a carpenter by trade, but engaged to some extent in farming.

John Byerley was reared on the farm in Iowa, in Jones, Jackson and Clinton counties. He came west in January, 1884, and located his present homestead on section 26, township 21, range 20. When he came, the nearest railroad point was North Loup, about sixty miles distant, and the long trips for supplies were tedious and discouraging. Part of the way was through an extensive Bohemian settlement, and these people were unfriendly and inhospitable, and several times Mr. Byerley has had to go supperless to bed under his wagon because no one would provide him with a meal or bed. On his land he built a sod hut, ten by sixteen feet in dimensions, with a small half window for light, and a rude home-made door. He had very little money to live on. He had started from his home in Iowa with one hundred dollars, but this was eaten up by railroad fares, filing fees and in getting located. His first crop was sod corn, and, as Mr. Byerley had to be away working, the crop was about destroyed between the deer and the antelopes in the spring and the geese in the fall. His crops continued poor for a number of years and in 1894 there was a total failure, but in spite of all this, Mr. Byerley has stuck to it and has paved the way to success.

The subject of this sketch was first married in 1885, but his wife lived only two years thereafter. In 1890 Mr. Byerley was married to Miss Anna Meyers, whose father was an old settler of Loup county, but returned to Illinois, where he died. Mr. and Mrs. Byerley have five children, namely: Pearl, Claud, Bessie, Florence and Lola.

The history of any individual pioneer, when written in detail, reads like a romance. They pass through many trying experiences—experiences that seem overdrawn to the uninitiated. And the history of Mr. Byerley's pioneer life is no exception. He lived alone and "batched it" for months and months, improved his farm with very little hired help and worked early and late. All these years he was assisting, too, in the management of public affairs, helped organize and establish the school district, held various school offices, was assessor at different times and is now a justice of the peace. He has been public-spirited in every way and is esteemed and respected by all who know him. He has three hundred and twenty acres in his home farm and has land in other localities. By his thrift and industry he has built up a fine home place, has a good house, barns, farm implements and all necessary improvements. He has several good groves of forest trees and a nice orchard. It can be truly said that Mr. Byerley is one of the leading old settlers of Loup county.

HENRY E. RANDALL.

The prosperity enjoyed within the borders of Morrill, formerly Cheyenne county, Nebraska, is due almost altogether to the enterprise and thrift of the agriculturists of that region. Their well improved and well tilled farms evidence good management and painstaking care, and in no locality is this more apparent than in Bayard precinct, where the gentleman above mentioned resides. He is a substantial farmer and ranchman, who has acquired a good home by persistent industry and honest dealings, and is highly esteemed as a worthy citizen and progressive agriculturist.

Henry E. Randall was born in Trempeleau county, Wisconsin, April 25, 1869, where he grew to the age of nine years, at which time the family moved over the Mississippi into Minnesota, after a short time settling in Houston county, on Money creek. The father was James Randall, a native of Michigan, while the mother was born in Syracuse, New York, and died in Scotts Bluff county in 1886. James Randall served in the Civil war as a member of Company I, Thirty-sixth Wisconsin Infantry. He is now living at Gering, Nebraska. The entire family left Minnesota in the fall of 1885, coming to Butler county, Nebraska, and came on to Scotts Bluff county, which at that time was a part of Cheyenne county, the following spring. Our subject took a homestead in section 22, township 20, range 52, proved up on it, and has constantly added to his original quarter section until he is now owner of five hundred and sixty acres, two hundred acres of which are under the Chimney Rock ditch. He has improved the tract, erecting good buildings, built fences and has good wells, windmills, etc. About one hundred acres are cultivated, with one hundred acres in alfalfa, which in time will be doubled. The balance of the ranch is in hay and pasture land for about one hundred and forty head of cattle and a small bunch of horses.

On December 24, 1891, Mr. Randall married Miss Melissa Belden, who was born in Kansas, and came to Nebraska during girlhood. Her parents now live near Redington, in Morrill county. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Randall, Gerald, Gladys and Mack. In political faith Mr. Randall is a Republican, taking a deep interest in local, county and national politics. He is at present serving as director of school district No. 50. Fraternally he is a member of the Bayard lodges of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen.

DAVID CRUICKSHANK.

David Cruickshank, one of the early settlers of Keith county, lives on a fine farm home on section 24, township 13, range 41. He has a fine large ranch of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres, and is one of the most successful stock raisers of western Nebraska.

Mr. Cruickshank was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in the parish of Oyne, October 4, 1852, a son of William and Annie (Law) Cruickshank, natives of Scotland and farmers by occupation, who both died in their native land. Our subject was reared and educated in his native land, remaining there until 1885, when he sailed from Liverpool in the Liberia April 27, landing in Boston. On this trip he had in his charge fourteen fine blooded horses, all Clydes, which were consigned to owners in the United States. For about three years Mr. Cruickshank lived in Blandinsville, McDonough county, Illinois, whence he went to Fort Collins, Colorado, remaining for about four months. Thence, in 1888, he came to his present location in Keith county, joining the little band of pioneers who had settled in that territory. He began farming in a very primitive style, building a sod shanty to live in and breaking his first land with a team of oxen. The years passed and although there were many disappointments in the yield of the farm, yet he has prospered and has developed a fine home and farm and built up a fine stock business. He runs about one hundred and forty head of cattle, cultivating only one hundred and sixty acres of this one thousand two hundred and eighty-acre ranch, most of the land being devoted to grazing purposes. A fine frame dwelling of six rooms was built near the old "soddy," so many years the family residence, in the fall of 1908, a dwelling of which he may well be proud. It is the subject of one of our illustrations on another page.

Mr. Cruickshank was married in Aberdeen, Scotland, February 7, 1880, to Miss Maggie Keith, a native of Aberdeenshire and daughter of William and Christina (Sim) Keith. This marriage has been blessed with the following named children: David, Jr., married and living on a ranch near the home place; Anna, wife of Frank Drake, a farmer of Dawson county, Nebraska; William (deceased); John, Jessie, wife of William Hecht, a meat dealer of Kearney, Nebraska; George, Bessie and Walter.

Mr. Cruickshank has been one of Keith county's most prominent and progressive citizens and has taken a deep interest in the growth and affairs of his community. He has done his share toward the material development of the locality in which he has lived for so many years. He is Republican in political views and religiously is a Presbyterian. In his younger days he was personally acquainted with George Cruickshank, then a very old man, Great Britain's most famous cartoonist, though no kinsman unless in a very remote degree.

GARDNER H. FOLSOM.

Gardner H. Folsom is one of the well-to-do farmers of Cherry county. Mr. Folsom was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, January 16, 1857, and reared on a farm. His father was Rodney Folsom, of English descent, his forefathers having emigrated from England in 1637. His mother was Charlotte Macomber, of Scotch-Irish descent, born in Vermont. During the Civil war Rodney Folsom served in the One Hundred and Ninth New York Regiment, and died in St. Lawrence county in 1873. Our subject is the third in a family of five children. He started in life for himself at the age of eighteen years, following all kinds of work, in 1876 going into the pineries of Wisconsin, and at the end of ten years was head sawyer at a salary of four dollars per day.

In 1881 he was married to Miss Jennie Kyen, born in Norway in 1859. Her father was Siven Kyen, and her mother, Christine Ross, they coming to America in 1867 with their family of four children, of whom Jennie was the second. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Folsom: Lottie, wife of Newton Gates, of Gordon; and Pearl C.

In 1886 our subject came to Cherry county, locating on his present home, taking a pre-emption and tree claim, holding the latter until 1904, also taking by purchase an additional seven or eight hundred acres. His ranch now comprises four hundred and eighty acres of deeded land and a homestead, situated in section 30, township 35, range 37, on which he has erected one of the finest ranch houses in the county. He controls by lease and otherwise about seventeen hundred acres of land, and is constantly improving his property, running one hundred head of cattle and eighty-five horses.

Mr. Folsom has met with reverses at different times, having been burned out, losing even all clothing, so that the family was obliged to wrap themselves in blankets until clothing could be borrowed from the neighbors. He was one of the old settlers in this locality and in the early days his wife cooked the family meals over a fire built in a hole in the ground as a substitute for a stove. They have had heavy financial losses, experiencing all the hard times that the pioneers saw, and Mr. Folsom yearns for more of the old-time frontier life, although Mrs. Folsom declares she has seen enough of it and prefers the comforts they are now able to enjoy. At one time in his career, Mr. Folsom went into the hotel business at Spencer, Wisconsin, coming out loser, having to work two years to pay his indebtedness before he could come west. He afterwards engaged in the cattle business with a partner and there lost considerable money, being obliged to dispose of a part of his land to get out of company debt and settle the estate.

Mr. Folsom is a Republican. He has been justice of the peace and has held other local offices.

CAPTAIN JAMES S. ROBBINS.

In the person of Capt. James S. Robbins, of Wallace, Lincoln county, Nebraska, we find the genial postmaster of that place, popular as a public official, and highly esteemed as a worthy citizen.

Mr. Robbins was born at Sodus Point, Wayne county, New York, April 25, 1838, going to Richland county, Ohio, with his parents in 1839, and afterward to Huron county, that state, where they lived for fifteen years. They next moved to Hillsdale county, Michigan, when he was eighteen years of age, and three years later he left home and went to DeKalb county, Illinois, following teaching at Malta for some time. On May 7, 1861, he enlisted in the Thirtieth Illinois Infantry, serving for three months, then re-enlisted in the Ninety-fifth Illinois and served up to the close of the war, being mustered out August 21, 1865. During all of this time he was with the Army of the Tennessee, and took part in the battles at Pittsburg Landing, Corinth, Vicksburg, the Atlanta campaign, at Franklin and Nashville. He was at the capture of Fort Blakely, and received severe wounds at Vicksburg and Nashville, having the almost unparalleled record of his regiment, never making a march or fighting a battle in his absence. At the storming of Vicksburg the Ninety-fifth Regiment lost two hundred and sixty-two men killed and wounded in the short space of fifteen minutes. Our subject comes of a long line of fighting men, his grandfather, Serel Robbins, having been a soldier in a New York regiment during the war of 1812, in a company recruited from Wayne county. His father and mother, Lyman and Mary E. (Porter) Robbins, were natives of Oneida county, New York. He has an uncle, Reverend Samuel F. Porter, who is a minister of the Congregational denomination and lives at Oberlin, Ohio, now ninety-four years of age. Mr. Robbins came to Nebraska after leaving the army, in 1865, locating in Nemaha county, and lived there up to 1893, then moved to twelve miles south of Wallace, where he settled on a homestead. In 1898 he was appointed postmaster under McKinley, and moved to Wallace. He was the first postmaster at Grant, now Tallmade, Nebraska, appointed in 1867, and acted in this capacity for two years. Afterward he served as justice of the peace and assessor in Nemaha county. In 1880 he went to Tecumseh, Johnson county, where he was elected city clerk, and a member of the city council for several years. He was county commissioner for Lincoln county, from 1900 to 1903, and also served as county assessor, elected to that office in the year 1903 and his term expired January, 1908. He has always voted the Republican ticket, attended county and state conventions, and taken an active part in party affairs. He has followed teaching nearly all his life, and began this work while living in Hillsdale, Michigan, in 1858, and afterward taught in Lincoln county for many years.

Mr. Robbins was married in 1861 to Miss Elizabeth H. Robb, of Warren county, Indiana, daughter of Robert Robb, who settled in Johnson county, Nebraska, in 1868. Her oldest brother, Washington, served with him in the Civil war. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins have one son, Herbert Clay, who owns a ranch of twelve hundred and eighty acres situated in Lincoln county. This is owned in partnership with his father, and is used for a stock ranch, raising cattle, horses and hogs, and is located near the Redwillow creek. One daughter, Annie B., wife of C. E. Wheaton, lives with her husband on a ranch in Hayes county. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins only raised two children, but have an even dozen grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Wheaton have eight children, four boys and four girls, and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. have four, three boys and one girl.

GUSTAVE NOREISCH.

The gentleman above named is one of the well known old-timers of western Nebraska, having come to that region when the country was a barren prairie, just beginning to be settled by those brave pioneers who came here prepared to suffer all kinds of hardships and privations in order to carve out for themselves a name and acquire a home and fortune for themselves, many of whom have remained to see the wilderness develop into a fertile tract and are now the owners of fine farms and are leading citizens of their locality.

Gustave Noreisch was born in Germany in 1850, was brought up on a farm and as a boy was taught to do all kinds of hard labor. When he was a young man of twenty-two years he entered the German army and served the regulation time, also following farming until 1884, when he decided to try his fortune in the new world, so took passage on an emigrant ship for America, arriving in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1882. He at once struck out for the western states, landing in Cuming county, Nebraska, and worked out as a farm hand in that vicinity for five years. He then came to Sioux county and took a pre-emption at head of War Bonnet valley, building a dugout, which was his home for about two and a half years. He purchased a team of horses the first summer and put in a few crops, but was completely hauled out, and was obliged to secure employment on the railroad to make a living for his family. In 1891 he settled on his present location, section 9, township 32, range 56, lying along Prairie Dog creek, and his first dwelling on that farm was a log house, which they occupied for a number of years. His ranch comprises twelve hundred and eighty acres, part of which is leased land, and he engages principally in stock raising. About ninety acres are under cultivation, on which he raises small grains, and receives a good yield each year. Mr. Noreisch has a good set of farm buildings, the place is well fenced, and every improvement has been put on by his own hands. He has met with many failures of crops and other losses, but has stuck to the place and is now one of the successful and prosperous men of his community.

Mr. Noreisch was married in Germany, in 1878, to Miss Louisa Westbrecht, whose parents spent their lives in Germany, as did our subject's father and mother. Together they came to the United States to seek home and fortune, and have raised a family of six children, all bright and intelligent young people, named as follows: Mary, Bertha, Emma, Augusta, Matilda and Martha.

GEORGE W. POOLE.

Through exceptionally good management and persistent labors the gentleman herein named has acquired a well developed estate, and is enabled to enjoy the comforts of modern farming. He is of a progressive nature, has had a wide experience in his line of work, and every detail is looked after and personally supervised. Mr. Poole's pleasant home is in Deuel county, and he is one of the best known settlers in western Nebraska, known throughout the region as one of the oldest educators in point of years in this part of the country, he having been connected with the public schools here for eleven years, and previous to that was a teacher in Colfax county for fourteen years.

George W. Poole first saw the light on August 22, 1858, born in Wyandotte county, Ohio, and lived there until he was twenty-two years of age, at that time his father, mother, brother and two sisters coming to Nebraska, locating about eight miles northwest of Schuyler, where the father took a homestead and farmed for a number of years. The latter died in Colfax county in June, 1900, and his widow still survives, she living in Schuyler at the present time. Our subject made Colfax county his home up to 1894, then came to Deuel county, following farming and school teaching nearly all of his years. After four years in this vicinity he filed on a homestead on section 34, township 16, range 45, proved up on the land, and now has a ranch of three hundred and eighty acres. He has two hundred acres of this cultivated and raises splendid crops, using the balance as a stock ranch, running a bunch of horses and cattle.

Mr. Poole was married in 1894 to Anna Bott, born and reared in Colfax county, Nebraska. Her parents are still living in the state. Four children have come to bless their union, and they are named as follows: Anna Marie, Freda, Vera and Julia, who form a most interesting family group.

Politically Mr. Poole is a Republican, and is at present serving as assessor of Deuel county. He is a broad-minded man in all respects, and one who has won the respect and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact by his many sterling qualities.

CLARENCE V. CASSELMAN.

Among the younger residents of Brown county who have met with marked success in the agricultural pursuits, we mention the name of Clarence V. Casselman, who occupies a finely improved estate in section 15, township 30, range 23. Mr. Casselman was born in Grundy county, Illinois, May 8, 1875, and was reared and educated there until ten years old, when he came to Nebraska with his parents. His father, Charles Casselman, of German descent, was one of the oldest settlers in Brown county; the mother of our subject, Mary Patterson in maidenhood, was of Scotch lineage, her parents coming to this country some time prior to her birth. There was a family of six children, Clarence being the second, and he began for himself when he reached the age of twenty-two years, following farming as an occupation. He tilled rented land for about five years, then bought a farm in 1903, settling on the southwest quarter of section 15, and here he has a farm of three hundred and twenty acres, eighty of which lie in section 22, cultivating two hundred acres of this, with the rest in pasture and hay land. He has his place well improved, and employs thoroughly up-to-date methods and machinery in its operation.

Mr. Casselman was married December 23, 1896, to Miss Georgia Curry, born in Wisconsin, and daughter of James and Mary (Patten) Curry, old settlers in Nebraska. To them two children have been born, namely: Frank E. and Velma.

Mr. Casselman is a highly esteemed citizen of his community, and is well known as an energetic and enterprising young man who richly deserves much success in the work in which he is engaged. In political sentiment he is a Democrat; fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, his home lodge being at Ainsworth.

B. D. HAYWARD.

The State Industrial School at Kearney, Nebraska, is an institution of which the people of the state are justly proud. They feel that every dollar spent in its construction and operation goes directly to the promotion of the public welfare. It deals with a class of boys who are more unfortunate than criminal, changes their conditions, and in a great majority of cases makes honorable and upright men out of what very largely found themselves as "misfits" in a world that seemed to them hard and cold and cruel. It is an educational, not a penal institution, and the endeavor is to so educate the mind, the hand and the heart, that the boys on whom its influence falls may be able to go out into the world and become honorable members of society. It has a magnificent plant consisting of three hundred and twenty acres of fine and mostly rolling land, two and a half miles west of the city of Kearney, on which are erected seven large buildings, consisting of five family or grade buildings, an administration building and an industrial building. In addition are many structures for farm purposes, such as horse and cow barns, hog houses, chicken house, boiler house, engine room, green house, paint shop and pump house. The various buildings are situated on elevated land, and the general view of the surrounding country is unusually good. This great interest was for four years under the management of Mr. Hayward, whose name heads this article, and who won many laurels for its rapid growth and development.

B. D. Hayward, whose name appears above, became superintendent of the State Industrial School in April, 1903. During the following four years he won a standing for himself in the work of industrial education second to no man in the work. He had previously been engaged in educational work for fifteen years as superintendent of schools at St. Paul, Nebraska, where he also practiced law for ten years, having graduated at the Law College of the University of Nebraska. He is a native of Pomeroy, Ohio, as is also his wife, who had been a teacher for twenty years, and was devoted heart and soul to the educational and uplifting processes that prevailed in the State Industrial School under her husband's care.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayward and their enthusiastic co-workers set their faces determinedly against the idea so widely prevalent that this was a penal school and the boys prisoners. Results proved the wisdom of this course; and citizens of the state as they visited this school and came to know of the good done there, changed their ideas and came to know the institution as the Haywards made it, an intellectual benefaction to the neglected and homeless. The character of this work was wonderfully advanced by the abandonment of the country school idea, and the grading of the students under the public and city school system.

At the close of the fourth year in the service of the state, Mr. Hayward moved to Lincoln, Nebraska, where on October 16, 1908, he opened the Nebraska Military Academy, having a magnificent building and campus, and a most flattering enrollment of cadets. At the close of the first month of school the academy building was totally destroyed by fire. Only a few days of school were lost, however, a temporary location being secured at once, and plans being made promptly for the securing of a permanent location. After receiving many most complimentary offers from other cities for the removal of the academy, Mr. Hayward has decided to stay in Lincoln, and will begin shortly to rebuild on the original site. By next September the academy will be housed in three new buildings, entirely separate except in front, where the appearance will be much the same as before. The academy already enjoys a liberal patronage, in spite of its misfortunes; and the prospects for next year are gratifying.

EDWIN M. SEARLE, SR.

Edwin M. Searle, one of the most prominent of the early settlers, claims Allegany county, New York, for his birth place, having been born there January 1, 1849. The Searle family came from England in Colonial days. His father, Steadman B. Searle, was a farmer, and his mother, Angelina Rice, was from old American families of the state of New York, her grandfather having been a quartermaster in Washington's army. He came as a pioneer from Vermont to Allegany county in 1800 and cleared a farm. Our subject's father came to Indiana about 1825 and married in Logansport, where his wife's people had settled in the early thirties as pioneers of that state.

Our subject enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Indiana Volunteer Infantry, serving through Tennessee, Alabama and Kentucky. After leaving the army he went to a school at Syracuse, New York, where he learned telegraphy, following that and railroad-ing in Peru and Attica, Indiana, and came to Nebraska in 1867, where he held a position as operator on the Union Pacific railroad at North Platte. The road was being built to the coast with the terminal of that line in Keith county. He worked at North Platte for two months and then took an office out on the line and worked for the company until 1884; part of this time he worked as agent at Paxton, served for a time at Ogallala, to which town he came as agent in 1879. Keith county was organized in 1874 and our subject was on the board of county commissioners. He was elected county treasurer, which office he held for four years. He was also county clerk four years and served two more terms as county commissioner. When school district No. 1 was organized, taking in all of Keith county, Mr. Searle was elected first school treasurer. He resigned from the operating department of the railway in 1884, and was appointed agent of their land department for Keith county. This department included Lodgepole in Cheyenne county, and all the land in Colorado to range 46, about one million acres. The head office was at Ogallala, with branch offices at Julesburg, Colorado, and Chappell, Nebraska. He has been in the real estate business since then. He filed on a homestead, which is now a part of the town site of Ogallala, in 1876, and proved up on it. He is also interested in ranching and stock raising, having a fine ranch of two thousand acres, one and one-half miles west of Ogallala in the valley of the South Platte river, on which he has two hundred and fifty acres seeded in alfalfa, ranging nine hundred cattle and one hundred horses. He also has a ranch in McPherson county in the forest reserves which he uses for a summer range. His son, Edwin M. Searle, Jr., is associated with him in the real estate business.

Our subject has made his home in Keith county for the past forty-two years and is well known and highly respected by all the residents of that county. Buffalo and Indians were the only inhabitants when he first came to Keith county, and he has seen herds of one million buffalo at one time. Herds of antelope were also common sights when he came to the county. One spring a herd of buffalo was to be seen extending from Cottonwood Springs on the east to Sterling, Colorado, one hundred and sixty miles on the west; the herd averaged one mile wide by one hundred and sixty miles long, for which trainmen who made the run through it can vouch.

Mr. Searle was married in the Wyoming hotel, Omaha, December 24, 1868, to Miss Eliza Gifford, Reverend Kuhus, a Lutheran minister, officiating. Simeon Gifford, the father of Mrs. Searle, was a farmer and old settler of Iowa and Minnesota, who died while in the United States army at Fort Snelling, Minnesota. Her mother was Jane Savage before her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Searle have three children: Charles F., in the insurance business at Council Bluffs, Iowa; Edwin M., Jr., associated with his father; and Archie L., who is in business in Omaha. While Mr. Searle was living at Paxton, a big Indian saw Mrs. Searle and her baby sitting on the platform and offered Mr. Searle five ponies in trade for his white squaw and papoose. At times the Indians made war on the white settlers, marauding parties throwing trains off the track six miles west of Paxton in November, 1869, and had previously burned a train at Lexington two years before.

A trail was opened up from Texas to Ogallala by the Texas cattlemen in 1874, this being the most western station of the railway and the nearest place from which to ship cattle. Herds of three hundred thousand head were trailed to Ogallala every year from 1874 to 1882, which made Ogallala the typical western cowboy town it was. During the early days of Ogallala from two thousand to three thousand cars of cattle were shipped east in a season of sixty days.

Mr. Searle is a type of the pioneer who succeeded in spite of all discouragements and is now prominent in all matters pertaining to the welfare and progress of the town of Ogallala. He is Republican in politics, a member of the Congregational church and a member of the Masonic order and the Workmen, and is a Grand Army man.

FRED BRATZ.

Among the representative farmers and ranchmen of Cheyenne county, who have aided materially in its advancement and development since its early settlement, a prominent place is accorded Fred Bratz, who resides on his well improved estate in section 10, township 16, range 48, Union Valley precinct. He is a gentleman of energetic character and well merits his success and high standing.

Mr. Bratz is a native of the village of Helgerdhausen, Wurtemberg, Germany, born on the 14th of January, 1859, and grew to manhood in his native land. His parents, Michael and Barbara Bratz, spent their entire lives in Germany, and died there, the mother in 1899 and the father in 1907.

Our subject started out for himself when he was a young man of twenty-three years, taking passage at Hamburg for America on the emigrant ship Harmonia, and after a voyage of twelve days, landed in New York city in October of 1882. He joined a brother and sister in Hancock county, Illinois, where he spent two years at farm labor and one year farming for himself; he then came further west, settling in Cheyenne county, pre-empting one hundred and sixty acres, and later took a homestead on section 10, township 16, range 48. He has remained on this place ever since, now owning a fine ranch of four hundred and eighty acres, of which he cultivates one hundred and twenty-five acres, and uses the balance as pasture and range for his cattle, keeping one hundred head of cattle and quite a number of horses. He has built up a good home, and the whole place is well improved with a neat concrete cottage, a large new barn, and other good buildings. There is a fine orchard, groves and an abundant water supply, and altogether he owns one of the valuable properties in the section. We are pleased to call attention to an engraving of the home and surroundings in the illustrative section of our work.

February 16, 1892, Mr. Bratz was united in marriage to Miss Annie Wettrich, in Cheyenne county. She was born in Burlington, Iowa. Her parents, Fred and Elizabeth M. (Reil) Wettrich, were natives of Germany; their deaths occurred in Illinois, where they had spent the latter years of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Bratz are the parents of one child, Otto, born on the 24th of March, 1896, a bright, sturdy boy, who is making good progress in his school work.

Mr. Bratz is active in local affairs, and is devoted to the interests of his adopted land. He is a Republican politically, and lends his influence for good government. At present he is serving as treasurer of school district No. 54, and is a leading citizen, highly esteemed by his associates. He was reared in the Lutheran church.

ENOS CHASE.

Among the interesting characters typical of a western life, and a man who has had many and varied experiences during his career as a pioneer in a new country and throughout his sojourn among the sturdy settlers of the west, the gentleman whose name heads this personal history occupies a foremost place. Mr. Chase is a genial, whole-souled individual, a wonderful story teller and enjoyable companion, beside enjoying the reputation of a leading old settler and one of the prominent citizens of his community. He resides on a very valuable estate in Dawes county, Nebraska.

Mr. Chase is a native of Grant county, Wisconsin, born in 1850, and raised on a farm. His father was Levi R. Chase, a farmer and miner, and an early settler in Wisconsin. He married Miss Lucinda Brown, and when our subject was but eleven years old the father died, and the following year the mother was also called away, leaving him at twelve years of age to fight the battle of life alone. Since that time he has supported himself unaided, working out on farms and at anything he could find to do, and remained in Wisconsin up to the time he was twenty-one years of age. He then moved to Illinois, where he farmed for a time, then to Iowa, and there settled in Allemakee county. He lived there for several years, also spent seven years in New Albin, Iowa, and there engaged in general work and owned two lots in the town.

In 1892 Mr. Chase came to Dawes county, Nebraska, and filed on a homestead of eighty acres, on August 15th of that year. This homestead was located in section 31, township 31, range 47, and was entirely unimproved property. He at once started to build up a ranch and home, but was able to do very little at first owing to the fact that he was utterly without capital. However, he went to work with a will, and his first work was to build a sod house, fourteen by sixteen feet in size, also sod stable and chicken house, the former sixteen by twenty, and the latter twelve by fourteen, also a cow barn sixteen by fourteen, all of which were comfortable and substantial, and were in use for a number of years. He "batched it" for a year, and in 1893 his family joined him and they helped him in his work of improving the farm. The time was spent in cutting timber and hauling it, breaking up land, and doing all manner of work to raise crops and make a living for himself and family, and he proved up on the farm, remaining on it up to 1900, when he bought his present home in section 28, township 31, range 47. Here he has a finely improved, well-kept place, with good buildings, windmills, etc., and engages in farming and stock raising, both of which has been most successful. He has six hundred and forty acres of land in his farm, all fenced and all good land.

While still living in Wisconsin Mr. Chase was married to Miss Katherine Stubenhaver, whose parents came to America from Germany in their young days, and settled in Illinois, where she was born, and later moved to Wisconsin, where they were among the pioneers and where she grew to young womanhood. Mr. and Mrs. Chase are the parents of four children, namely: Luvina and Lucinda, twins; William Stewart and Lizetta. The family is highly respected and popular among their fellow citizens.

Mr. Chase is a leader in local affairs, and always lends his aid and influence for the benefit of his community. He has held different school offices for many years. In political sentiment Mr. Chase is a Republican.

On another page will be found a picture showing scenes on Mr. Chase's ranch.

RESIDENCE OF FRED BRA'TZ,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

A. A. COLSON.

The gentleman above named is one of the prosperous business men and farmers of Sheridan county, Nebraska. He has lived in this part of the country for many years past and has watched the development and growth of the region from the early days.

Mr. Colson was born in Newburgh, Maine, in 1859. His father, Ambrose Colson, of American blood, was also a native of Maine, and never left his home county until he was seventy years of age, always running a large farm there. Of a family of fourteen children our subject was the youngest, his father having married twice. When he was twenty-one years old he started west, coming to Norfolk, Nebraska, in 1879. The railroad ended there, and he went still further on into Pierce county, but the land did not look good to him there, although he remained for several years working rented land, then moved into Dawes county. In the spring of 1885 he filed on a pre-emption on section 11, township 31, range 47, and moved on it. He also took up a tree claim in the same section, "batching it" there for four years. He was obliged to mortgage the place to get the money to prove up on it, and then the dry years came on and he lost both places. He tried farming but ran out of seed and was unable to buy more, so went into the Black Hills. He took twelve cows with him and sold them, receiving sixteen dollars per head, which just put him out of debt. He stayed in the hills for a year, then returned to Sheridan county, locating ten miles south of Lakeside and filed on a homestead and later sold that, in 1901 moving to his present place at Bingham, where he bought three acres of land in the town site. He afterwards took his additional one hundred and sixty acres of homestead rights, which was all the land he could get in the locality, as it was all taken or leased around the place. Here he engages in farming and also runs a general merchandise store at Bingham, carrying a good stock of dry goods, groceries, flour and feed. He also has the Bingham postoffice, and is doing well in his different enterprises. Of late he has erected a fine hotel at Bingham, where he also conducts his store and postoffice in the same building.

In 1888 Mr. Colson was married to Miss Melissa Clark, born in Martin county, Minnesota, in 1871. Mrs. Colson is a daughter of William Clark, an early settler in Iowa, now a farmer in Dawes county, Nebraska. To Mr. and Mrs. Colson the following children have been born, all living at home: Pearl, Lulu and Ida. Mr. Colson is a Republican, always interested in local and county affairs, but never seeking public preferment.

RICHARD HIBBERD.

The above named gentleman is among the foremost business men of Kearney, Nebraska, where he has been engaged in the contracting and building trade for the past twenty-five years and more. He is a manufacturer of building, paving and sidewalk brick, and has an immense plant covering twelve acres, fitted with a new dryer which works day and night to fill orders for his work. He has a complete up-to-date outfit, and the yard will turn out from eight to ten million brick this year. Mr. Hibberd established this business in 1880, when he came to Kearney to erect the first building for the State Industrial School, assisting his contractor, W. L. Van Alstyne. They put up this building in sixty days, but with present facilities and improved methods, much less than this time would have been required.

Mr. Hibberd is a native of England, and learned the builder's trade there with his brother, John Hibberd, the family having rented and lived on one farm in North Staffordshire for over four hundred years, and was in the brick manufacturing and contracting business there for several generations. The family have always been strong Catholics, and one of the oldest families in England to adhere to this faith through all the struggles against this religion for centuries past.

Mr. Hibberd came to America in 1863, and settled in Whiteside county, Illinois. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Forty-seventh Illinois; was in the secret service also for some time. He was with the Army of the Cumberland under General George H. Thomas, first brigade, second separate division, and in the Fourth Army Corps. During his life as a soldier he did not miss a day of service and was at the battle of Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga, Chickamauga, Resaca, Pullen's Ferry, Spring Place, Kenesaw and in the Atlanta campaign and with the march to the sea under General Sherman. After he was mustered out, he was chief clerk to Colonel Frank Clendenin, in the Freedmens' Bureau, located at Americus, Georgia, and Savannah, Georgia. Mr. Hibberd first came to Nebraska in 1871, settling at Lincoln and began the manufacture of brick and did contracting work at Seward, Lincoln and David City. Prior to this he had a plant at Atkinson and Geneseo, Illinois. In 1883 he put in a plant at Omaha, while he was building the State Deaf and Dumb Asylum. In 1884 he sold this and returned to Kearney, and he has since resided here continuously. Since coming to this city, he has been building and supplying the brick for all the school buildings in Kearney, for the five new buildings at the State Industrial School, and for all the business blocks of any size in the city. He ships his product to Grand Island, Hastings, and all parts of the state. His son, W. E. Hibberd, now manages the brick yard, and two other sons, John C. and Charles F., are managers of the contracting and building end of the business. Another son, Adelbert L., works with the company, and is first lieutenant in the Second Nebraska National Guard, Company A, to which he gives a great deal of his time and attention. One daughter, Elma M., is a teacher in the Kearney public schools, and another, Lucy, is married to L. B. Clark, of Lincoln, Nebraska. Our subject was married while still in England to Miss Emma M. Gould, and the family is well and favorably known all through this community.

One fact which speaks volumes for Mr. Hibberd's character is that one foreman of his brickyard, Paul Beyer, has been with him in this capacity for twenty-eight years. During the panic of 1893 Mr. Hibberd lost heavily, but stuck to the town, and has come out all right. He has been a man of untiring energy and industrious habits all through his life, and has given his best efforts to whatever he has undertaken, and thereby achieved the greatest success, which he richly merits.

SOLOMON HARTZELL.

Solomon Hartzell, one of the most substantial agriculturists of Dawes county, Nebraska, lives on his fine farm in section 13, township 33, range 48. He is an old soldier, a man of patriotic spirit, untiring energy and active mind, and has done his full share toward the development of the financial interests of the community where he has chosen his home. He has a wide acquaintance and enjoys an enviable reputation.

Mr. Hartzell was born in Canton, Ohio, in 1831. His father, Adam Hartzell, was a brick-maker by trade who also followed farming part of the time, and was a pioneer in Indiana. He married Susanna Ringo, of Pennsylvania Dutch descent. When our subject was four years of age the family came to Indiana and settled in Wabash county on a farm, and there he grew up and was educated. At the age of eighteen he started to learn the carpenter's trade and worked at that for many years in different states. He was married in Michigan to Miss Louisa Hammond, his first wife, who died at Mankato, Minnesota. They had two children, both dead. He was married the second time at Mankato, Minnesota, to Miss Katherine Briton, and they were the parents of ten children. His second wife died in Chadron, Nebraska, and his third wife was Mrs. Mattie Herron, of Dawes county, the marriage being held in his own house.

During the time Mr. Hartzell worked as a carpenter he was in different states, including Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri, and in this manner became familiar with many different sections. He also spent some time in Colorado, and in 1884 came to Dawes county, driving by team from Valentine. He took up his present homestead and built a dug-out and "batched it" for a time, until his people could come and join him. His farm is located on Little Bordeaux creek, and consists of three hundred and twenty acres, of which he farms eighty acres, which is irrigated. He has made a success of farming as well as at the carpenter's trade, at which he has worked off and on all his life. He furnished the plans for the Dawes county school house, and helped build that structure.

When Mr. Hartzell was thirty-one years of age he enlisted in the Ninth Minnesota Regiment, Company E, and saw hard service through the west, fighting the Indians in Minnesota, and has a brilliant record as a soldier.

Mr. Hartzell is a man who keeps abreast of the times and he is identified with the Republican party politically, although deeply in sympathy with the Prohibitionists.

ALFRED E. WATKINS.

Alfred E. Watkins, one of the prominent young business men of Perkins county, engaged in the mercantile business at Venango, is a gentleman of intelligence and progressiveness.

Mr. Watkins was born in Will county, Illinois, in 1873. He is a son of Peter and Mary Phillips Watkins, both natives of England, who came to the United States during their youth, the former dying in Illinois in 1882, where he had spent many years engaged in farming, and there our subject was raised until he was fourteen years old. The family then came to Nebraska, settling on a homestead on section 25, township 9, range 41, which the mother and sons built up in good shape, Alfred remaining at home up to 1902, then came to Venango and started in the hotel and livery business, which he carried on for three years, building up a good patronage, then returned to the farm and lived on it for three years. In 1906 a brother, Frank Watkins, established a general store in Venango, and two years later our subject went in partnership with him in the business, and together they have increased their trade extensively and are doing exceedingly well in the work.

In 1902 Mr. Watkins was married to Miss

Martha Watkins, who is a daughter of W. J. Watkins, of Grant, Nebraska. Two children have been born to our subject and his estimable wife: Gerold, who died at the age of fourteen months, and Warren, who is now a sturdy lad of three years.

LOUIS E. TIFFANY.

Enterprise and perseverance, supplemented by honest industry, have been the stepping stones by which the gentleman above named has reached his present station. He is one of the prominent agriculturists of Keya Paha county, an old settler of that region who has aided materially in transforming a wilderness into a thriving farming district. Mr. Tiffany is widely known and universally esteemed in his community and enjoys a pleasant home and many warm friends.

Mr. Tiffany was born in Armstrong county, Pennsylvania, May 11, 1872, in the midst of the oil fields of that state. His father, John N. Tiffany, was of English-German stock, and died in Nebraska, August 22, 1895. He married Miss Henrietta Foust, who was born and reared in Pennsylvania, and they had a family of ten children, our subject being the ninth in order of birth. Four sons and one daughter came to Nebraska, where they built up good homes. When Louis was twenty-one years of age he began for himself, starting in the oil business at Pittsburg, drilling in western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio. In the fall of 1883 he came to Keya Paha county with his father, who took up a homestead on section 29, township 35, range 20, and in the early days they saw wild times in this region. Their homestead was about in the center of the tract for the horse and cattle rustlers of that time and they had a number of animals stolen, and as late as 1903 they were bothered with thieves, losing eighteen head of cattle. They were one of only two families who did not leave the neighborhood during the Indian scare of 1891. Mr. Tiffany and his father built up a fine farm and home, planted trees and built fences, and were among the influential citizens of the county. The former now has a farm of three hundred and twenty acres, mostly good farming land, and he keeps one hundred and twenty-five head of cattle and one hundred and fifty hogs. In 1906 he had eighty-five acres of the finest corn in the county, and his crops are always first-class. He has been successful in the stock business, and during the dry years that saved him from leaving his place, as he lost three crops in succession and had it not been for his cattle he would have had to quit the business. Their dwelling was the seat of Enterprise postoffice from 1890 to 1897, when his father served as postmaster. This was the third office to be established in the county.

Mr. Tiffany was married near Springview June 18, 1902, to Miss Lillie Carnahan, whose parents were Jasper and Rutha (Atkinson) Carnahan. For fifteen years Mrs. Tiffany was one of the successful teachers of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany have one adopted daughter, Minnie.

Our subject is and always has been a strong Democrat. He has never taken any active part in politics, as he has given his entire attention to the building up of his farm and home, although he is classed among the men who have had the interests of their community at heart and were willing at all times to aid in all matters wherein their locality would be benefited.

MACK RADCLIFF.

One of the leading old settlers of Cheyenne county, who has spent many years of his life in building up a home and fortune for himself, and who has incidentally aided materially in the development of the region where he chose his home, is found in the gentleman above named. Mr. Radcliff resides in Sidney, and with his family enjoys a comfortable home surrounded by many friends and acquaintances, and is held in the highest esteem by all.

Mr. Radcliff is a native of Cleveland, Ohio, born in 1854, on a farm. His father, Andrew Radcliff, was a farmer and laborer, who came to America from Ireland, when a young man, and his mother was also born in Ireland. When our subject was thirteen years of age he started out for himself, settling in Missouri, there following farm work for one year. He next went to Texas, and became a "cow-puncher," but remained only a short time, driving cattle over the line and into Kansas, and working as a "cow-puncher," as this vocation was called in early days. He gradually worked north, and in 1874 came into Nebraska, and worked on different ranches all over the western part of the state for many years, during the summer months sleeping on the ground and leading a rough cowboy's life. He was employed by a number of cattle outfits and liked the rough work and the exciting experiences which came to him.

About the year 1884 our subject took up a homestead situated thirty miles northeast of Sidney, and there put up a log house which he lived in for several years. He improved his ranch and built up the place in good shape, and now owns three thousand two hundred acres, and engages extensively in the cattle and horse business, running about four hundred head of stock. In 1894 he moved his family to Sidney in order to give his children the benefit of the better schools, and he has a good residence there and owns besides other town property, and is one of the prosperous and substantial citizens of his section.

Mr. Radcliff was married in 1884 to Miss Bertie Gast, daughter of Sam Gast, who is a pioneer in this state. Mr. and Mrs. Radcliff are the parents of three children, all born in this section, named as follows: Harriett, Clayton and Anne.

Mr. Radcliff is an active public spirited citizen, and takes a commendable interest in local affairs, serving his locality in different capacities for a number of years. He is a Democrat.

WILLIAM H. ROTHWELL.

William H. Rothwell, one of the leading old-time residents of Nebraska, has given liberally of his time and money to the upbuilding of the community where he makes his home, and he commands a high station as a worthy citizen and energetic business man. Both he and his estimable wife are descendants of good old Virginia stock, celebrated far and wide for their hospitality and cordiality to friend and stranger alike. Mr. Rothwell has a valuable estate and is proprietor of a model ranch, and his home and family both are worthy representatives of the good old Virginian stock from which they sprung.

Mr. Rothwell was born in Albemarle county, Virginia, in 1858, of English blood. His father, Warren, was a prominent farmer of that locality, and a soldier in the Civil war for two years, and died during war-time. Our subject's mother was Lucinda White, of Albemarle county, Virginia. He grew up in his native state until the age of thirty, engaged in the mercantile business at that time at Reunion, and operated a store there for over eight years.

In the year 1888 Mr. Rothwell came to Grant county, Nebraska, and took a pre-emption, going through pioneer experiences in the first few years. That place was situated twenty-five miles southeast of Hyannis, and his first dwelling was a sod house. He started to break up land with a team of oxen and used them for all his farm work during the first five years. He freighted through the country, making many long trips, camping out under his wagon many nights, and recites many interesting tales connected with those early days. At the first he tried to farm, but found it hard to raise good crops, so gradually drifted into the cattle business, and has met with splendid success in that line of work. He has added to his ranch until he now is owner of two thousand acres, consisting of plenty of range land for his cattle, some timber, and the place has a fine supply of good clear water. He has erected good buildings, fine house and commodious barns and sheds, and the entire ranch is fenced.

On May 14, 1884, Mr. Rothwell was married to Jennie M. Weed, daughter of George Weed, a prominent merchant and educator, and son of William Weed, one of the leading merchants of Richmond, Virginia, well known through the war times. Mrs. Rothwell's mother was a descendant of a prominent old American family, of Albemarle county, Virginia, her maiden name being Blackwell. The following children were born to our subject and his wife: Anna W., Carrie (dead), William A., George W., Ambler M. and Ethel May. Both parents and children are among the popular members of society in their community, and all are well liked and have hosts of warm friends.

Mr. Rothwell is a Democrat in his political views. He has always taken a leading part in local public affairs, and served as assessor of his township for two years after the county was organized.

JOSEPH GEORGE DENTER.

One of the best and most extensive ranch places in Keith county, Nebraska, is that owned by Joseph G. Denter, who is conceded to be one of the most successful stock men and farmers in the territory.

Mr. Denter was born in the small village of St. Jan in Bohemia, August 24, 1861, and came to America with his parents in 1866. The family sailed from Bremen and landed in New York after a voyage of seven weeks on the Atlantic. They came west by way of Baltimore and settled in Johnson county, Iowa, near North Liberty, where the father, Charles Denter, was a prosperous farmer; our subject's mother's name before marriage was Josephine Cerny.

Joseph G. Denter was reared and educated in the Hawkeye state and on March 3, 1886, he was married to Miss Mary Stirsky, a native of Bohemia, and daughter of Anthony and Dora (Cimburck) Stirsky, who came to America during Mary's infancy and settled in Lynn county, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Denter have four children, Max L., Belle and Frances, twins, and Mabel, the three girls being successful teachers of the county.

The same year they were married, our subject and his wife started overland for a new location in western Nebraska. They drove all the way from Iowa in a covered wagon drawn by a team of three-year-old colts, camping out, the trip lasting five weeks on the road. They brought two cows with them, and this was their small start when they settled on their present homestead in Keith county. They built a small frame house, broke some land and commenced laying the foundation of the prosperity that is now their portion in life.

"POPLAR GROVE RANCH," RESIDENCE OF J. G. DENTER,

They passed through all the trying experiences so common to the life of the pioneer—the years of drouth and crop losses from various causes and the hard times beginning in 1893, at which time they were the only family left in the locality of all those who had come from Iowa in the same year. Mr. Denter secured a few head of cattle and gradually worked into stock raising. He has now a grand ranch of one thousand four hundred and forty acres in the valley of the South Platte river and he cultivates about two hundred acres of the land, of which eighty-four acres are irrigated, with one hundred and ten acres in a tract on the river that can be put under ditch. Most of his ranch is devoted to grazing and hay production. The original small claim dwelling was later incorporated into a larger house, and both into the fine large ten-room dwelling constructed in the summer of 1908. There are large barns and outbuildings, a fine grove of Lombardy poplar and other trees and a number of apple and cherry trees, with considerable small fruit. We are pleased to call attention to a view of the elegant residence with its fine location and surroundings depicted on another page.

Mr. Denter is a Democrat in politics. He has been assessor, county commissioner for six years and has been a member of the school board for fifteen years. He is deeply interested in educational matters, and, in fact, in all things pertaining to the betterment of local conditions. He is a man of strong convictions and earnest endeavor and is respected by everybody who knows him. The family are members of the Congregational church.

ARTHUR E. BOWRING.

Arthur E. Bowring, a prosperous and enterprising ranchman of Cherry county, is a resident of Merriman precinct. He is a gentleman of more than ordinary intelligence and good business ability, and has gained a valuable estate by his thrift and industry, and enjoys the respect and esteem of his fellowmen.

Mr. Bowring was born in Crawford county, Iowa, of Scotch-English stock, April 20, 1873, and reared there until twelve years of age. His father, Henry C. Bowring, was a native of England and came to America at the age of twelve, settling with his parents in Canada where he remained until 1867. He started railroading at an early age and followed that occupation until 1894, when he moved to Nebraska, and was the man who laid the Chicago & Northwestern tracks through Woodbine, Iowa. He worked as a watchman there when Woodbine was the end of the road, and for four years was yardmaster for that road at Dunlap, Iowa. He also laid the foundation for the first roundhouse at Iowa Falls, and even after going to Nebraska continued at railroad work for some time. He laid the tracks east of Yankton as far as Gayville, South Dakota, and all his life was spent in this work almost exclusively up to 1894. Our subject was the seventh member of his father's family of ten children, and on reaching his twenty-first birthday he struck out for himself, although for some time previous to this he had been engaged in the stock buying business. In 1894 he took his present homestead, and his ranch now consists of one thousand three hundred and twenty acres, a large portion of it being good hay land. He and his father together run five hundred and fifty head of cattle and a number of horses, and they have over a hundred head of the finest Shorthorn calves to be found in this locality. All of his brothers have followed in their father's footsteps and worked on railroads since growing up. When Mr. Bowring and his father first landed in Cherry county it was in an entirely undeveloped state, and they have been among those who have watched its growth and improvement almost from the time of its organization, and have seen the ups and downs of a pioneer's lot. Mr. Bowring takes a commendable interest in all affairs of the community where he resides, attending the conventions and assisting in all matters which tend to the betterment of conditions in his locality. He served as county commissioner for three years from the third commissioner's district. Both he and his father are stanch Republicans. Mr. Bowring is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen and the Royal Neighbors.

BENDICK DANIELSON.

Bendick Danielson, one of the prominent farmers of Box Butte county, resides on section 9, township 26, range 48, where he owns four hundred and eighty acres of good farm and ranch land. He has been a resident of this locality for the past twenty years, and has developed a good farm and enjoys a comfortable rural home, and the esteem of all whom he meets.

Mr. Danielson was born in Norway, in the southeastern part, on a farm, in 1858. His father was a farmer and lived and died in his native land, and there our subject grew to manhood, following the work of a cabinetmaker by trade. He served for two years in the Norwegian army, and in 1882 left the land of his birth and came to the United States, landing in New York in September, 1882. He came directly west to Nance county, Nebraska, where he spent a short time, then went to Albion, in Boone county, and there followed the work of cabinet maker, having learned that trade when a boy in Norway. He worked in a furniture store for about four years after coming here, and in 1885 moved to Box Butte county, driving from Hay Springs with a wagon containing all his possessions. On this trip only a few houses were seen between Hay Springs and the place he located on. He had very little to start with and he first put up a rude sod shanty, and put in a crop of sod corn the first summer, also a few potatoes. He worked continually in building up his place and breaking up ground, working out in the neighborhood breaking land for others, digging wells, and also did railroading, working on the railroad grades on the roads being put through this section at that time. About three years were spent in the railroad yards at Alliance.

After Mr. Danielson had proved up on his claim, during the dry seasons he had a hard time to get along, and was obliged to work with a bridge gang, traveling through Wyoming, South Dakota and Nebraska, employed by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway Company. About 1892 the times began to get better and he devoted his whole attention to building up his place, and he gradually added to his acreage and is now owner of four hundred and eighty acres, engaging in stock raising, and farming on a small scale, raising Irish potatoes, small grains, etc.

In 1901 our subject had the misfortune to be burned out, losing the finest crop of grain he had ever raised (all of which was stacked), a good barn and other buildings, which was a very severe loss. He has rebuilt, and now has everything in first-class shape all over the place. He is one of the very foremost potato raisers in all Box Butte county.

In political sentiment Mr. Danielson is a strong Republican.

CHARLES D. GASTON.

Charles D. Gaston, one of the most highly esteemed of the old settlers of Keith county, was born May 2, 1859, in Halifax county, Nova Scotia. His father, John Gaston, was born in Canada, of Irish parents and lived there all his life, following the occupation of farming. He died about 1902 at the age of ninety. Our subject's mother, Marjoria Blackie, was also born in Nova Scotia, her people being of Scotch descent. Her mother was a Miss McKay, a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, who died in Nova Scotia at the home of Mr. Gaston at the age of ninety. Two uncles of Mr. Gaston attained the ages of ninety-nine and one hundred and six.

Our subject lived in Nova Scotia until he was twenty years old and received his education there. He came to the states in 1879, sojourning first to New Hampshire and Vermont. He learned the iron moulder's trade with a brother-in-law at St. Johnsbury, Vermont, but remained at this trade but a short time, because of poor health. In 1884 he came west, working at Moline, Illinois, from February to May, and then moved on to Keith county, taking a homestead ten miles south of Ogallala, part of the time living on his farm and the remaining time working in the town. The first building on the homestead was a sod house. He proved up on his homestead and farmed there for twenty years. During this time he lost many crops from drouth; in 1890 he planted one hundred acres and reaped nothing. For a time after this loss, he had to work out by the day in order to make a living.

He was married, November 15, 1887, to Miss Fannie Hull, a native of Rolling Prairie, Indiana, whose father, Adam Hull, was a farmer and old settler in Nebraska. Her mother was Catherine Walt in her youth. Mr. and Mrs. Gaston have had seven children: Raymond (deceased), Frank, Isaac A., Kitty M., Charles A., Kenneth and Doritt.

In the early days before Keith county was thickly settled, Mr. Gaston witnessed occasional shootings at Ogallala, and saw one man killed during the wild days when the cowboys sometimes shot up the town. At that time it was not an uncommon occurrence for a man to be shot in the street for apparently no reason.

In 1904 our subject came to Ogallala and opened a feed store, with his father-in-law for a partner. In 1907 he established a general store, the business having been successful from the start.

Mr. Gaston is one of the earliest settlers and has watched the growth of the county for many years and has done his part in building it up, engaging in numerous enterprises during that time.

He helped to construct some of the first buildings erected in the town of Ogallala, among them being the Methodist Episcopal church, which he assisted in dedicating.

He was prominent in the social affairs of the town in early days, having been one of a committee to arrange for the first masque ball ever held in Ogallala, a function that has not since been excelled.

Mr. Gaston has held many offices during his residence in Ogallala, among them being precinct assessor, which position he held in the early days, when politics first interested the settlers. In politics he is a Democrat, and is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Ogallala.

GEORGE J. DAVIDSON, DECEASED.

The magnificent estate which is known to have belonged to the gentleman whose name is at the beginning of this article is one of the finest and best ordered in the precinct of Brinkerhoff, Rock county, and is well worthy of comparison with any to be found in the state of Nebraska. It is conspicuous for the manner in which it has been cultivated and improved, and is especially notable from the fact that it is the only tree claim in a long distance that was able to meet the requirements that attended its proving-up. Mr. Davidson, deceased, had an ample tree culture, and he developed a grove that supplies all the fuel needed for the homes in which he and his son dwelt. The two Davidsons owned more than three thousand acres of land, out of which at least one section may be pronounced of the very best character of farm property. It all presents opportunities for a diversified farming that can take in every interest susceptible to Nebraska agriculture.

Mr. Davidson was born on a farm in Indiana in 1851, where his father, Thomas Davidson, had been living since he was nineteen years old. Born in Ireland, he early felt the inspiration of the larger and freer life across the ocean, and early came to the United States to make his home in the west. His wife, Isabelle Foster, was a native of county Durham, England, and was brought to this country when only nine years of age. George J. was the fourth member of a family of seven children that were born to his parents. They had their home on the White river, in Indiana, and there was much to do on a farm in a timbered country, and a full share of it came to him who in after years was to become the successful Nebraska agriculturist. The parental needs detained our subject at home until he was twenty-seven years of age when he struck out for himself, marrying, in 1870, Miss Amelia Doty, an American girl of German antecedents. Her people had settled in Pennsylvania on their arrival in this country, and here Mrs. Davidson was reared and educated. She is the mother of three children: Arlanda, Amelia and Ruth.

After his marriage Mr. Davidson bought a farm in Pike county, Indiana, on which he expected to spend his days. However, he found his health failing so badly that removal to a more favoring clime became imperative, and trial was made of what Nebraska might do for him. When he reached this state he was so weak he had to be lifted off the train. For a time he stopped in the eastern part of the state, but in April, 1883, he appeared in Rock county, and found himself so much improved that he took a pre-emption claim, on which he presently "proved up," and found himself the proprietor of real Nebraska dirt. With gaining health his courage increased, and he made a timber tree claim, and later still a homestead entry in section 29, township 31, range 20. His first residence was but a frame shanty twelve by sixteen feet, and perhaps would hardly be thought a possible home for a family today; but then it was enough, and the wind-searched structures in which dwelt a people winning their homes were thought equal to palaces in another land. When Mr. Davidson first located here his nearest neighbor was miles away—Bassett was only a postoffice, and wild game abounded. The vastness of the change wrought since his coming can not possibly be appreciated by one who has not witnessed such a transformation here or elsewhere.

Mr. Davidson, deceased, was a prominent citizen and took an active part in public affairs. He affiliated with the Republican party, and was an influential worker in both county and state politics. He was a delegate to the national Republican convention when President Harrison was put in nomination.

GOTTLIEB KAISER.

The subject of this sketch, Gottlieb Kaiser, lives on a lovely farm and is surrounded by all those comforts which tend to make a happy and contented old age. He was born in East Prussia, Germany, February 1, 1845. His father died when our subject was but a child and the mother died when he was but ten years old. When but a small lad he took to a seafaring life and was on the water as a sailor for twenty-four years. He sailed many seas, visiting Russia, England, South America and ports of Africa.

In 1870 our subject was married to Miss Mollie Sulies, also a native of east Prussia, Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser are the parents of twelve living children and two dead: Augusta, born in 1873; Louis, born in 1875; Adolph, born in 1877, now dead; Edward, born in 1879; Etta, born in 1881; Louise, born in 1882; Emma, born in 1883; Mollie, born in 1885; Lizzie, born in 1886; Franz, born in 1887, now dead; Mary, born in 1888; Magdelina, born in 1890; Max, born in 1892; and Minnie, born in 1896.

Mr. Kaiser came to America in 1885, and, coming westward located for four years at Columbus, Nebraska. In 1885 he came with a team of ponies and a covered wagon to his present farm in section 15, township 24, range 22, in Blaine county, and located a homestead. He had almost nothing to start with and had to live in his covered wagon most of the time during the first summer. He slept on a straw bed under his wagon, and had many a fight with bull snakes that sought to sleep in the straw of his bed. He had many hardships to undergo and one of the hardships was the death of one of his ponies, which left him badly crippled to do the work of the farm. His first small house was built of sods of the prairie and later he built a larger one of the same material. But now he has a splendid farm home—has four hundred and eighty acres of the best land in what is known as German valley. He has beautiful trees and his farm is thoroughly improved and up-to-date.

Mr. Kaiser had many hard trials in the pioneer days, but his native grit and his hang-on qualities and his persistent purpose to make a good home and farm have brought him success and prosperity. He is a man of sturdy, strong character, and merits the good esteem in which he is held by his friends and neighbors.

HARVEY H. KNIGHT.

Harvey H. Knight, one of the representative ranchmen of Keith county, Nebraska, resides in White Tail precinct, where he has a valuable estate and is one of the leading men of the community.

Mr. Knight was born near Quincy, Illinois, November 17, 1866. His father, James F. Knight, was a native of Kentucky, while the mother, Columbia A. (Wright), was born in old Virginia. Mr. Knight was a pioneer farmer in Coffee county, Kansas, settling there with his family about 1869, where our subject grew to manhood, attending the country schools during his boyhood, and was accustomed to all kinds of hard farm work and life on the frontier. Remaining in Kansas until 1887 he came to Keith county and filed on a homestead in section 12, township 15, range 38, and opened a farm. He built a sod house and sod barn, and about the only start he had was a pair of old mules and one wagon. At first he had a hard time to get along and make a living, but he worked at whatever he could find to do in the vicinity, and proved up on his claim, remaining there for about six years. During the dry years he was unable to raise crops of any kind, so he quit trying to farm and began in the sheep business, and carried that on with good success for eleven years. He moved to his present location in 1892. This is now a ranch of four thousand acres, on section 1 and surrounding sections, township 14, range 37, and is devoted to cattle raising, principally, at the present time, although this is comparatively a new departure for Mr. Knight, he having started this branch only in 1901. The ranch is admirably located for the purpose, lying in the valley of the North Platte river, and is well equipped with good buildings, fences, wells and windmills, also has a number of natural springs furnishing an abundance of good clear water the year round. There is a good grove of trees, and Mr. Knight has planted different varieties of fruit trees and small fruits.

Since locating here Mr. Knight has met with severe losses from different causes, the principal one being the burning of a bunch of sheep and other property in a prairie fire, this having occurred in 1893; but through all the good, bad and indifferent times, Mr. Knight has kept up good courage; and is now rewarded for his efforts in the possession of one of the best improved and most valuable ranches in the region.

On May 9, 1886, Mr. Knight married Miss Rosa Miller, born in Anderson county, Kansas, a daughter of Adam and Annie (Guy) Miller, natives of Ohio and Indiana respectively. The father was a pioneer farmer of Kansas, and settled in Keith county in 1887. Two children have been born to our subject and wife, Herman Henry and Annie May. The family have a pleasant home, surrounded by every comfort of rural life, and all are highly esteemed in the community. Mr. Knight is a Republican in politics and a member of the Ogallala Lodge, Modern Woodmen of America. Associated with him in all his cattle and sheep enterprises is a brother, William F. Knight, who was born near Quincy, November 15, 1861. He came to Keith county in 1888 and has since been one of its substantial citizens.

ANDREW W. ANDERSON.

One of the pleasant homes in Camp Clarke precinct, Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county,

RESIDENCE OF JEROME B. HAISTON,
Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF A. W. ANDERSON,
Morrill County, Nebraska.

is owned by Andrew W. Anderson, a well and favorably known citizen of that community, who has spent the past twenty years of his career there.

Mr. Anderson was born in the village of Jar-sos, province of Skone, Sweden, May 22, 1848, coming to the United States with his parents at the age of six years. Their first sojourn was at Galesburg, Illinois, where they spent one year, then moved on a farm at Andover. Here they lived for ten years, the father buying first ten acres, which he later increased to one hundred. They next moved to Iowa, settling in Garden township, Boone county, where the father bought one hundred and sixty acres, and here he died. Andrew Anderson was for twelve years a merchant in Slater, Iowa; selling his store in 1889, he came to Alliance, Nebraska, arriving here on April 19; he filed on a homestead on section 6, township 20, range 51, and proved up on a quarter section, later taking a timber claim, all of which he improved. He now owns over five hundred acres, all under the Alliance ditch, and has over one hundred acres cultivated, raising good crops of grain. He runs quite a bunch of stock, and has about twenty-five acres of fine alfalfa, with plenty of hay land. A large tract of his farm is set apart as an orchard, in which he has planted trees as follows: One hundred and sixty-five cherry trees, one hundred and twenty-five apple trees, one hundred and fifty plum trees, one hundred currant bushes and one hundred gooseberry bushes, all in fine growing condition.

Mr. Anderson has three brothers and two sisters living, both parents being dead. On July 5, 1876, he was married at Madrid, Iowa, to Miss Ulrica Cassel, who was born and raised in that state. They have no living children. Mrs. Anderson's remote ancestor, Baron Von Cassel, of Germany, came to Sweden under Johan Baner after the close of the thirty years' war and remained to become a citizen of that country.

Mr. Anderson is one of the leading men of his locality, taking an active part in all matters for the public good. He is treasurer of school district No. 44, also treasurer and secretary of the Alliance Irrigation Canal Water Power Company.

In politics he is a Republican and stands firmly for the principles of his party. Both Mr. and Mrs. Anderson are members of the Lutheran church. An omniverous reader, Mr. Anderson has stored his mind with a wide range of knowledge, taking delight in branches of scientific learning little sought by the general reader. He is ingenious with tools, having built part of their neat cottage home. He is a man of broad, liberal views and intellectuality, far above the average man of this section of the country. A view of his pleasant home, with its grove and orchard, is to be found on one of our illustrative pages.

JEROME B. HAISTON.

Jerome B. Haiston, one of the most extensive and progressive ranchmen of Davison precinct, is an old settler of Cheyenne county. He is a man of wide experience, and by his good management and industry, supplemented by honest dealings, has acquired a valuable property and become recognized as one of the substantial and worthy citizens of his community.

Mr. Haiston was born in Henry county, Iowa, on March 1, 1853. His mother, Catherine (Davison) Haiston, died when he was a small boy, and his father, Henry Haiston, was supposed to have died when he was thirteen years of age. At the age of three and a half years Jerome was taken into the family of J. B. Comerford, in Adams county, Illinois, and lived with them until he was twenty-one years of age, when he started out in life for himself. His sole capital consisted of a horse and saddle and a good suit of clothes; he began to work as a farm hand in Adams county, remaining there for several years. He was married there on the 8th of October, 1874, to Miss Mary D. Huff, who was a native of Augusta, Hancock county, Illinois, born May 16, 1856. Her parents, Abraham and Christina (Eckles) Huff, are now both dead. The young couple spent several years in Adams county, and in 1885 came west, settling in Cheyenne county, Nebraska, where they filed on a homestead in section 34, township 16, range 50, on which they have made their home ever since. There they went through pioneer experiences, suffering many hardships and privations in getting their home started, but sticking to their determination to succeed, and have been richly rewarded for their efforts, as one can see by glancing at the beautiful fields and broad acres surrounding their comfortable home residence. Mr. Haiston owns altogether eight hundred acres. He cultivates one hundred and sixty acres, raises small grains with splendid success, having good yields each season and a good quality of each variety of grain. He keeps about seventy-five head of cattle and twenty horses. During the early years he suffered severely by drouths, but had no losses from prairie fires nor from hail. An elegant new dwelling was erected in 1907, which was destroyed August 11 before being fairly completed. With true western grit, Mr. Haiston rebuilt a seven-room two-story house in the summer of 1908, and now has one of the finest country residences in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Haiston are the parents of the following children: John A., William F., Thomas O., Zilla T. (deceased), Minnie A., Mary E., Frank E., Charlotte M. and Mabel D. J. A., W. F., T. O. and Minnie A., the wife of Edward A. Mayer, are all married and well settled in homes of their own, and all are filling honorable positions in the world.

Mr. Haiston is a stanch Republican, and takes a leading part in party affairs. He is chairman of the board of county commissioners and was re-elected in November, 1908. He is at present serving as postmaster of the Higgins postoffice, which is located on his ranch. He is a member of the Frank Welch lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Sidney. On another page of this volume will be found a picture of Mr. Haiston's residence.

WILLIAM WELCH.

William Welch, residing on section 17, township 24, range 42, Sheridan county, is one of the men who settled in the sand hills a number of years ago, and through persistent efforts and industry has acquired a nice property and enjoys a pleasant home. He is a great admirer of this section of the country, and is contented to make Nebraska his home during the future, as he is satisfied with conditions and the opportunities, which are within the easy grasp of anyone of energetic mind and industrious habits.

Mr. Welch was born in Staffordshire, England, in 1861, coming to America with his parents when he was nine years of age, the family being among the early settlers in Nebraska. William was the third member in their family of seven children, and at the age of twenty he started out for himself, working on farms in Sarpy county, Nebraska, up to 1884, then came to Cherry county and took a homestead located twelve miles east of Gordon, just in the edge of the sand hills, remaining on that place for twelve years. He farmed there, keeping a few head of stock, and accumulated a ranch of four hundred and eighty acres of good land, but the dry years hit him, and for two years he had three hundred acres in crops and did not raise enough to pay for threshing, so he eventually lost his land and stock through these failures. He then went to work for the Spade ranch outfit, and remained with that concern for eight years, and in 1901 got started again for himself, buying one hundred and sixty acres of land in Sheridan county. He had some stock and went to work in that business, as he has had enough of all farming. He had thirty head of cattle when he took this place, purchasing them with money he earned in working for others in this vicinity, and he increased his herd until he now has two hundred head or more, and also has taken an additional four hundred and eighty acres of land. His place is partly fenced, and he raises some grain, but has to buy part of his hay for his stock, although he has a good piece of ground seeded to alfalfa and expects to make a success of this grass. When Mr. Welch came to Cherry county in 1884 he drove through from Sarpy county, Nebraska, and at that time there was not a broken road in the country.

Mr. Welch was married in 1883 to Miss Katherine Donahue, a native of the state of Nebraska. Her father, John Donahue, was born and raised in Ireland, as was also her mother, both now living in this state. To Mr. and Mrs. Welch have been born the following children, both born and raised in this locality: Ellen, aged twenty-four, and Patrick, aged twenty. Our subject is an independent voter, Democratic in national affairs, but does not dabble much in politics. His postoffice is Bingham, Nebraska.

HANS S. HANSEN.

Hans S. Hansen, whose pleasant home is located in section 3, township 26, range 49, where his genial countenance and friendly spirit have made him hosts of well-wishers, which his manly character and genuine worth have long retained, was born on a farm in the southeastern part of Norway in 1865. He spent the earlier years of his life in his native land, where he received his education and was reared to manhood.

After the death of his father, which occurred in the old country, our subject, in the company of his mother, started on the journey across the ocean to America, and while on this trip his mother died. He landed in New York city in 1885, and coming west located in Wisconsin, where he spent some time working in Oconomowoc and farming.

In 1888 Mr. Hansen came to Box Butte county, Nebraska, and settled on a homestead about five miles from Hemingford. Alliance was the nearest railroad station. Here he erected a sod shanty, and for five years lived a bachelor, working his place without the assistance of a team. He spent ten years at bridge construction work for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, and traveled through parts of Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana. In 1889 our subject purchased his present farm. During the years of drouth he experienced repeated failure of crops, but continued his work with a determination which never failed. He now has five quarter sections of good land, all of which is well fenced. He has a pleasant house on his land, good farm buildings, wells and windmills, and he has eighty acres under cultivation.

In 1905 Mr. Hansen and Miss Annie Nortness were married. She was born in Norway, a daughter of O. C. Nortness, a prominent old settler of Nebraska.

Mr. Hansen votes the Republican ticket. From the beginning he has taken an active interest in the affairs of the surrounding community, and as an old settler has done his share of the work toward the development and improvement of the country in which he resides. He is a man whose career is a striking illustration of the persistence, pluck and energy of his native blood, and shows what possibilities this new western country has opened to men of that hardy race, who could see an opportunity and had the courage to embrace it.

PETER KRUSE.

Peter Kruse, one of the wealthy and influential agriculturists of Dawes county, Nebraska, resides on one of the fine estates in his township. He has accumulated his fortune by his push and energy, and his high station as a citizen and farmer is well deserved.

Mr. Kruse was born in Schleswig, Germany, in 1846, on a farm. His father, Jacob Kruse, was a farmer, who lived and died in his native land. Our subject was raised there, coming to the United States in 1869, and after landing in New York city, traveled west to Clinton county, Iowa, and there followed farming for five years. He next moved to Goose Lake, Iowa, where he run a hotel and saloon for seventeen years, building up a good business, and made a good deal of money in that place. He was obliged to leave the town on account of serious sickness in his family, so sold out and came to Dawes county in 1889. Here he bought a farm in section 17, township 33, range 47, which at that time was perfectly unimproved prairie land, with scarcely an improvement on the place. He at once put up a house and began farming, and for a time went through hard times, witnessing the drouth years, when some seasons he was unable to raise even enough for seed the following year. He made a living by hauling and selling wood and hay from his farm, and as the times grew better was able to build up his farm and home. His ranch now comprises four hundred and eighty acres of good land, and he has a complete set of substantial farm buildings, and cultivates one hundred and twenty-five acres, with the balance in hay and pasture for stock, of which he runs quite a number. He has been unfortunate in many things, having lost his barn in 1902 by fire, including two sets of good harness, and even this was a very serious setback to him; but he has built a fine new barn, completed in the year 1908. Mr. Kruse makes his dairy pay him well, and has regular customers who take his output of butter at twenty-five cents per pound the year around.

Mr. Kruse was united in marriage in 1873 to Miss Anna Berrickson, of German descent, who came to this country when a young girl. Mrs. Kruse died in 1889, when the children were small, leaving a family of five, named as follows: John, Emma, Pete, Annie and Minnie. The two oldest are married. The other three still help the father with his farm work.

Mr. Kruse has always been prominent in local public affairs, and served on the school board as director of his district for ten years. In political sentiment he is a Democrat.

E. GUS LINN.

In compiling a list of the prominent business men of Kimball, Nebraska, who have been intimately identified with the upbuilding of the commercial interests of that locality and are widely and favorably known, a foremost place must be given E. Gus Linn. This gentleman has been engaged in business in Kimball for many years past, handling different enterprises, and enjoys the confidence and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Linn was born in Sweden, December 6, 1862, and was the third child in his father's family of five, the father still living in his native land, while the mother is dead. At the age of twenty Mr. Linn left Sweden and came to America, settling in Pennsylvania in June, 1882, where he spent six months, then went to Michigan and secured employment in the lumber mills. In 1884 he came to Nebraska, locating in Omaha, and was connected with a lumber company in that city for two years, then moved to Kimball to take charge of the Kimball Lumber Company, which was then managed by the W. T. Robinson Company. He remained in the employ of the concern up to 1893, then purchased the business, soon afterward adding hardware, implements, etc., to the stock. In 1907 he sold the lumber branch to the Foster Lumber Company, and he now has the largest hardware, implement, wagon and buggy establishment in the west, handling also paints, windmills, pumps and fittings to his line.

In 1892 Mr. Linn was elected county treasurer, and held the office for four years, receiving the election as county judge in 1897 and serving for two years. He is now county commissioner, elected in 1905. He has also been mayor of Kimball, holding office during 1907 and 1908, and is president of the Bank of Kimball and a member of the school board. Mr. Linn is a representative western "booster," progressive in his business methods, and possesses extraordinary ability as an organizer and leader of men. He is a Republican and strong party man.

On June 18, 1888, our subject was united in marriage to Anna C. Willing, at Sidney, Nebraska. Mrs. Linn was born in Sweden, coming to the United States as a young girl, and her parents are both dead. They have a family of seven children, all living at home, who are named as follows: Oscar G., Vernon E., Herbert E., Ernest A., John T., Frank W. and Kenneth.

HENRY C. KENYON.

The gentleman herein named has passed many years in western Nebraska, coming to Brown county when a young man, and here he has resided almost constantly for over thirty years, becoming thoroughly familiar with this section of the country and its opportunities and resources. Mr. Kenyon resides in section 4, township 30, where he has a good home and farm, and is highly esteemed as a citizen and fellow townsman.

Mr. Kenyon was born in Oneida, New York state, in 1865. His father, Milton Kenyon, was also a native of that state, born in 1822, and his mother, who was Melinda Manchester, was born there in 1825. His parents had a family of three children, he being the youngest, and he was reared in his native state until ten years old, then came to Minnesota, where the family spent a year in Steele county. From there they went to Omaha and remained one year, then on a farm near Omaha up to 1882. In the spring of 1881 our subject's father came to Brown county and took up a homestead in section 4, township 30, range 23. With him was a friend and neighbor, Tom Johnson, and they drove through the country into the county with a team and covered wagon, and were almost the first settlers in that locality.

The following year our subject came to Brown county with a carload of goods, but did not locate, returning to Ainsworth, where he worked for the Chicago & Northwestern railway, running between Johnstown and the former place. He continued at this for some years, spending part of his time at home and assisting his father in building up his home and farm. The latter died January 18, 1899, and his death was deeply mourned by all who knew him as one of the leading citizens of his community and a highly esteemed old settler of this locality. Their first house on the homestead was a sod shanty, in which they lived for two years, then built a log house. There were many hard times and discouragements to contend with during the early years, going through the drouth periods, when for several years they were unable to raise even a fair crop, but as times grew better the farm was gradually improved and added to until it now contains three hundred and twenty acres of good land, two hundred and fifty acres of which are in a high state of cultivation. It is all fenced, and has good buildings and is one of the well kept and valuable estates in the county.

In September, 1888, Mr. Kenyon was married to Miss Jennie Freeman, daughter of a farmer and old settler in this county, and to Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon have been born the following children: Carl, Guy, Blanche and Glenn. The family have a pleasant and happy home and a host of warm friends in the community.

ISAAC N. WARE.

Another one of Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county's old-timers is found in the gentleman whose name heads this personal history. Mr. Ware is a man of interesting personality, genial and whole-souled, and has the esteem and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact. He is a successful and prosperous agriculturist, residing in Camp Clark precinct, where he has a pleasant home.

Isaac N. Ware was born in Richland county, Wisconsin, April 5, 1859, the fourth in a family of five children. He was reared to the age of eighteen in that state, going from there to Henry county, near Newcastle, Indiana, where his parents spent one year, then moved to Lawrence county, Tennessee. Our subject's next move was to Nebraska, locating in North Platte, where he was overseer of a large ranch for two years, coming thence to Cheyenne county in the spring of 1887. He filed on a homestead on section 4, township 16, range 48, on which he proved up and improved, then sold it. Later he bought one hundred and sixty acres in section 12, township 20, range 51, all of which is under irrigation. Here he engages in general farming and is making a success of his work. His place has good buildings and improvements and he is a progressive, up-to-date agriculturist.

Mr. Ware's father, John Ware, is dead, and the mother, who was Mary Gross in maidenhood, is living in Hershey, Nebraska. He was married in Tennessee on January 18, 1879, to Miss Ella Wickard, who is a native of Indiana and sister of Mr. Joel Wickard, of Cheyenne county, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. They are the parents of five children, as follows: Grace, wife of C. C. Carrier, a native of eastern Nebraska, born May 17, 1884, coming into Cheyenne county at the age of four years, where his parents were pioneers. Mr. and Mrs. Carrier were married on June 28, 1905, settling on a farm adjoining our subject's homestead. They have two children, Clarence and Edwin. The remaining children of Mr. Ware are John Leroy, Charles, George and Horace, who are industrious, energetic boys, helping their father carry on his farm.

Mr. Ware is a Democrat in political sentiment and affiliates with the Bridgeport camp, Modern Woodmen of America.

ROBERT N. BIGGS.

Robert N. Biggs, who occupies a prominent place among the younger members of the farming and ranching community of Chambers precinct, is one of the successful men in that line in Cheyenne county, Nebraska. There he has built up a fine estate and gained an enviable reputation as a citizen and has a host of friends.

Mr. Biggs was born in Cloud county, Kansas, July 17, 1876. When he was four years of age his parents left that state, going to a farm near St. Joseph, Missouri, where they spent two years, and from there moved to Boulder, Colorado. After two years' residence at that place they returned to Kansas, where our subject grew to the age of eleven. Their next move was to Kearney county, Nebraska, and after living there for four years, removed to Kimball county, where they resided until 1901, at which time they came to Cheyenne county and filed on the place which is now Mr. Biggs' home ranch. This is situated on sections 34 and 27, township 13, range 52, consisting of six hundred and forty acres. About one hundred acres are cultivated, and he is engaged in stock raising on a large scale, dealing in both cattle and horses. The ranch is fitted with a complete set of substantial buildings and every improvement, and is one of the valuable tracts in the section.

Prior to coming to Cheyenne county Mr. Biggs traveled for a number of years, being engaged on different cattle ranches throughout nearly all of the central and western states.

On November 2, 1900, Mr. Biggs was married at Sidney, Nebraska, to Miss Mary Ann Patton, whose parents, John and Mary (Carse) Patton, resided on a ranch in Banner county, Nebraska, twenty miles north of the town of Kimball. Both our subject's parents, John and Florence (Rutledge) Biggs, are living, residing part of the time on their ranch in Colorado and at other times in Kimball, where they have a fine residence. Mr. and Mrs. Biggs have two children, Francis and John.

In politics Mr. Biggs is a staunch Democrat and takes an active part in local and school affairs. He has been a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen since 1896 at Kimball.

ROBERT A. EMANUELSON.

Robert A. Emanuelson, who enjoys the distinction of being one of the old settlers of Cheyenne county, is a gentleman of untiring perseverance, possessed of a broad mind and good business ability, as is evidenced by his success in the accumulation of the valuable property which he possesses, all gained through his own efforts. He has met with many hardships and disappointments since coming to Nebraska, but has surmounted them all, and is now one of the substantial farmers of that region. He is interested to quite an extent in the dairy business at present, shipping the cream from about twenty cows. He devotes considerable of his attention to that branch of agriculture.

Mr. Emanuelson was born in Wilmington, Will county, Illinois, January 9, 1861. He was reared there, attending the common schools, where he received a substantial education, and followed farming in that vicinity during his young manhood. Coming west to Nebraska, he located in Cheyenne county in 1886, taking up his residence in Lodgepole at first. He secured work as section hand in the spring of 1889 and in the fall of 1890 became foreman, which position he held until the spring of 1897, resigning to give his entire attention to his ranch. In 1886 he took up a homestead in section 2, township 16, range 47, which he afterwards sold to the Club ranch. He then moved onto section 32, township 14, range 46, and acquired additional land, until he is now owner of five hundred and sixty acres, two hundred and forty in section 32 and three hundred and twenty acres in the west half of section 29. The ranch is situated within half a mile of Lodgepole, on Lodgepole creek, and is a valuable piece of property. He cultivates about sixty acres, and uses the balance for hay land and pasture for his stock, running about seventy-five head of cattle and horses. His ranch is known as the Locust Grove ranch, taking its name from the large number of locust trees on the place. He has it all well improved with good buildings, fences and everything necessary for its proper operation.

We call attention to a fine view of the premises with late improvements, presented on another page.

On December 13, 1890, in Eagle precinct, Cheyenne county, Mr. Emanuelson was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Bohlken, who was born in Germany, coming to America with her parents when quite a small girl. Her parents, George and Katherine (Hemen) Bohlken, lived for seventeen years in Adams county, Illinois, prior to their coming to Nebraska. After one year's residence in Clay county they came to Cheyenne county in the spring of 1887. The father is now making his home in Bates county, Missouri. The mother has been dead for some years. Our subject and his estimable wife are the parents of eight children, who are named as follows: Anna, William, Ilene, Rosella, Robert, Charles, George and Margaret, all living at home. Our subject's parents, Charles and Mary (Miller) Emanuelson, still occupy the old homestead in Wilmington, Will county, Illinois.

Mr. Emanuelson is a Republican and is serving as village trustee at the present time. He was formerly a member of the board of county commissioners during the years 1901-1907, inclusive. He affiliates with the Odd Fellows at Sidney and the Modern Woodmen at Lodgepole.

ORRIN E. SMITH.

Among those who have in a great measure contributed to the success of Rock county, Nebraska, the above mentioned gentleman occupies a foremost place. He has resided in this region for many years, and is well known as one of the prominent citizens and public-spirited men. He has held the office of sheriff of the county ten years (five terms), and proved one of the most efficient officials the county ever had, being highly esteemed by all of the people.

Mr. Smith was born in Lake county, Illinois, August 29, 1851. His father, a native of New York, settled in Illinois when a young man, while his mother, Fatha Bower, was of German parentage. There were nine children in his father's family, and he was the third member. He was reared and educated in Woodbury county, Iowa, where his parents settled in 1852, having been among the oldest residents of that locality. He was brought up to do all kinds of work to be found in operating a farm, and early learned to depend upon his own efforts, and the training thus instilled into his mind stood him in good stead in the later years of his life. At the age of sixteen years he left home and began working out on farms in Iowa. He remained in that region up to 1884, when he came to Nebraska and settled on a farm near Newport, Rock county. There he took a homestead and remained for about eight years. He built two good houses and improved the farm in other ways. He also filed on a pre-emption and timber claim, planting a large number of trees, which grew into a fine grove. He endured hard work and suffered many discouragements and much loss, but was determined to succeed so persevered until at one time he was the owner of eight hundred acres of good land. He has always been more or less engaged in stock raising, and has been very successful in this line as well as in grain raising. He took a homestead in section 32, township 31, range 19, in October, 1901, and finally secured the entire section, of which he cultivates fifty acres, keeping the rest as hay and grazing land. Dairying is a branch of farming now receiving some attention from Mr. Smith, the product of about fifteen cows being shipped to the eastern creameries.

Mr. Smith was married in Iowa on Christmas day, 1875, to Miss Bridget McGann, who bore him two children, Ulla and Maud. Mrs. Smith died while the family lived in Newport, and in 1897 he married Miss Carrie Courtney, whose father, John Courtney, was an old settler in Rock county. Two children resulted from this union, De Cleo and Ella.

Mr. Smith is a Republican politically and one of the leading men in all affairs of local interest. A view of the home and recent improvements and additions is to be seen on another page.

GEORGE JESSEN.

The above named gentleman is an old settler of Cherry county, and is one of the most prosperous ranchmen in that part of the coun-

"LOCUST GROVE FARM" RESIDENCE OF ROBERT EMANUELSON, At Lodge Pole, Cheyenne County, Nebraska.

RESIDENCE OF O. E. SMITH,
Rock County, Nebraska.

try. He was born in Germany, October 10, 1854, and was reared there, and with his father, Christ Jessen, followed the occupation of carpenter upon reaching his fifteenth year. His mother, Catherine Detlefson, was also born in Germany, and neither his father nor his mother ever left Germany. George Jessen is the first of a family of seven children, of whom four are living.

Mr. Jessen was married in 1878 to Mary Rosine Peterson, who was born in Germany in 1852. Although her parents never left the old country, one brother came to America and located in Rushville, Cherry county, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Jessen left their native home in 1872, sailing from Hamburg July 29th on the steamer India, and after a voyage of seventeen days they landed in New York. Later he settled in Clinton, Iowa, where he was manager of a large stock farm for four years. Then for two years Mr. Jessen worked at his trade of carpenter in Iowa and in 1888 he moved to Cherry and took a tree claim and later a homestead one and one-half miles east of Merriman. This he sold and bought four hundred and eighty acres of deeded land and also has an equal amount of Kincaid homestead land. Mr. Jessen worked as section foreman for three years at Merriman and then spent three years in Douglas, Wyoming, in the same capacity. He then left the employ of the railroad and started in as a ranchman. He went to work with a will and today owns nine hundred and sixty acres in section 7, township 34, range 36, all of which is fenced and improved, and stocked with one hundred and seventy-five head of cattle and about thirty horses. Mrs. Jessen also owns in her own right one hundred and seventy-five acres. He takes great pride in building up his farm, has a comfortable home, and will be contented to spend the balance of his life in Cherry county.

Mr. Jessen is one of the first settlers in this locality and has seen many hardships since coming to Nebraska, and says that he has had all the frontier life that he wants. However, he is well satisfied with what he has accomplished and is now prepared to enjoy the comfortable home which he has built up for himself and family. He has five children, named as follows: Catherine, wife of Alf Pruden; Nannie, teacher in Cherry county; Minnie and William (twins) and Bertha. They all have musical ability, playing a variety of instruments in their home concerts.

Mr. Jessen is a Republican and always votes a straight ticket. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and of the Lutheran church.

JOHN A. ANDERSON.

The opportunities afforded honest industry to gain a footing in America were embraced by the gentleman whose name heads this article, and he is now one of the recognized substantial ranchmen of Sioux county, Nebraska. He owns a valuable estate in section 21, township 33, range 56, and has the place improved so that it is indeed one of the model ranches of the region, its every appointment being the finest, and every corner showing the most painstaking care and splendid management in its operation. He is also one of the old settlers of western Nebraska who has done his share in developing it into its present prosperity and has watched the growth and success that has come to the region through the efforts of those brave pioneers who have suffered many hardships in order to gain a home and competence in the far west.

Mr. Anderson was born near Christiana, in Norway, in 1866. He grew up in this western country in reality, coming here when a lad of fifteen years. His father was a farmer, born in Scotland. When John was a lad of fifteen years he left his native land and struck out for himself, taking passage on an emigrant ship bound for the new world, and after landing in America, traveled across the country to Cheyenne, Wyoming, where he secured employment with the Brewster & Emmons Cattle Company and rode the range for some time, finally going into Colorado, where he spent a short while in the mountains. In 1884 he came to Sioux county and remained through the summer, then returned to Colorado, finally coming back to Sioux county in 1885, being to and fro between the two points for a number of years, being constantly in the employ of the War Bonnet Live Stock Company as a cowboy. He was in the vicinity of Harrison when that town was first started, and saw the beginning of the first white settlement in Sioux county, also being one of those who was present when the county was organized.

In 1887, in partnership with B. E. Brewster and P. O. Brewster, also Nels Anderson, a brother, Mr. Anderson formed a partnership and the syndicate bought out the War Bonnet Live Stock Company, the ranch being located in War Bonnet creek valley, and they continued this company for twenty-one years. Their interests extended all over this part of the country, and was one of the strongest concerns of its kind in the west. Mr. Anderson was foreman and general manager of the company, and they were phenomenally successful in their operations. He finally bought out his partners in the fall of 1907, and is at present so of the extensive ranching interests. It consists of six thousand acres, located on Bonnet creek valley, lying along Pix and all of it is fenced and in first-class condition, supplied with a complete set of buildings. Our subject has about a hundred acres irrigated for hay land, large quantities of grass each season and a large herd of high-grade Hereford cattle on the ranch, and ships many carloads each year.

Mr. Anderson married Miss Emma in 1892. Mrs. Anderson was born in Laramie, Wyoming, and is a daughter of George Walker, a prominent old settler of that region. Our subject and his amiableness the parents of a charming family, of the following children: Mabel, Nellie, Jessie and Grace. They have a pleasant happy home, surrounded by all the comforts of rural life and are highly esteemed by the community as worthy resident citizens.

DR. H. J. ARBOGAST.

The above mentioned gentleman is a well known citizen of Bartley, Nebraska, a leading physician of Red Willow county, highly esteemed by all who know him. He has built up an enviable reputation as a successful and exceptional practitioner, and is a man of exceptional ability in his chosen profession.

Dr. Arbogast is a native of Tucker county, West Virginia, and came to Red Willow county with his parents when an infant. The Arbogasts lived in Tucker county, Virginia. There were seven generations of our subject's father was the seventh in order of birth of thirteen and four on his mother's side, two of whom are still living in the southern army, and all are still living in the now dead settled in this locality. He was Salem a farmer by occupation. There were twelve children in his father's family, and these only one has died. In his mother's family (the Teters) there were fourteen children, three of whom are deceased, and these facts show the great vitality of these pioneer American-German families. The Teter family also of German descent, but came to America and settled in Pennsylvania and Virginia before the Revolutionary war. Mrs. (Teter) Arbogast's grandfather on her mother's side is of the same family as Hon. Richard P. Bland, and bore that name, and served in the revolutionary war, and all the family were a part of the early history of this country. Dr. Arbogast was reared on his father's farm and educated at the Bartley high school, from which he graduated in 1899. He entered the University of Nebraska and took up the study of medicine, and graduated from this institution in 1905, at once beginning the practice of his profession in his home town, and has been very successful. He was appointed county coroner, and is serving his second term in that capacity. He is a Republican. In 1906 Dr. Arbogast was married to Miss Bessie Enlow, of Cambridge, Nebraska, daughter of W. E. Enlow and Mary Bird Enlow. Mr. Enlow has been one of the leading merchants of Cambridge since 1886, coming here from Illinois in 1884. He is a prominent Mason and highly respected in the community.

ISAAC ROUSH.

Isaac Roush, one of the leading citizens of Kimball county, is known well and favorably as the genial postmaster at Kimball, having held this position continuously for the past eleven years. He has the confidence and esteem of everyone with whom he comes in contact in a business or social way, and takes a prominent part in every movement for the advancement or benefit of his locality. Mr. Roush was born in Snyder county, Pennsylvania, on August 13, 1863, and was reared there to the age of nineteen years. He was the sixth member in order of birth in a family of nine children, and is the only one who chose Nebraska as his permanent residence. In 1882 he left his native state and settled in Elkhart county, Indiana, following farming in that vicinity for about two years, at the end of that time coming to Kearney county, Nebraska, and worked on a sheep ranch for three years. Later he was connected with the John Biggs Lumber Company for about three years. In the latter part of April, 1890, Mr. Roush landed in Kimball county, and was manager of the Biggs Lumber Company at Kimball until 1894. The following year he went into the L. E. Schaffer general mercantile establishment, and was with that concern until 1898. On January 1 of that year he was appointed postmaster at Kimball and has since then filled the office continuously and exceptionally well and is liked by all. Mr. Roush is a thoroughly good business man, self-educated and self-made in every sense of the word, well read and possessing superior attainments, keen perception and sterling qualities of heart and mind.

Politically our subject is a Republican. He is a member of the village board of trustees. Mr. Roush is unmarried.

ERNEST L. MYERS.

The gentleman whose name introduces this article is widely known as one of the leading business men of the thrifty little city of Newport, Rock county, Nebraska, which owes not a little of its present prosperity to the establishment of his lumber yard at that time, where he developed those peculiar characteristics that put him in the very front rank. His congenial spirit and friendly ways have made him popular wherever he is known, and his unquestioned honesty and square dealing have retained the friends his habits have won.

Mr. Myers was born in Union City, Pennsylvania, January 26, 1863, and was reared on a farm. The family belongs to an old American stock still represented in Union City. When Mr. Myers started in life for himself he was twenty-three years of age. For two years he was employed in his native town, and in 1888 he made his first appearance in Newport, Nebraska, where he was later to accomplish such substantial results. He made pre-emption entry on section 12, township 29, range 17, and devoted himself to the development of his claim. For two years he lived in a sod house and worked with a tireless energy to bring these virgin acres into a profitable cultivation. In November, 1885, he was married to Miss May A. Tillotson, and to this happy union have come two children, Ruth and Raymond.

In 1890 Mr. Myers opened a lumber yard in Newport, which was the second one to be established in the place, and from the first it has commanded a large and profitable trade. Ten years later he established the Bassett Hardware and Supply Company at Bassett, which has become a widely known and popular institution. In 1902 he opened the E. L. Myers Mercantile Company at Carns, with which he operates an extensive lumber yard and seeks to serve the general welfare of that prosperous and extensive region. Mr. Myers has a largely patronized general store at Newport, of which Mr. M. Paradise is the local manager, a worthy coadjutor of his resourceful and energetic principal. Mr. Myers, in addition to his extensive and complicated mercantile enterprises, gives much attention to the real estate business, and handles lands in Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska. He engaged in the hay business at Bassett in 1900, and this, like all his other enterprises, has proved successful from its inception.

It is hardly too much to say that Mr. Myers has done more than almost any other man in the development of this great section of imperial Nebraska, and the history of Newport is much in evidence to this effect. In 1890, when Mr. Myers located here his lumber yard, it was almost an abandoned western town, but his coming to it seemed to be the signal for a new awakening that has transformed the place.

In political matters Mr. Myers has been identified with the Republican party, and was elected to the general assembly on that ticket in 1895. The following year he was a delegate to the St. Louis national convention, and has served on the state central committee. He is a member of the governor's staff, participating in the presentation of the silver service to the battleship Nebraska, at San Francisco in the spring of 1908. He takes an active part in local affairs, and is an energetic citizen and upright business man. He is prominent in Masonic circles, being a member of the blue lodge at Bassett, the chapter at Long Pine, the commandery at Norfolk and the consistory and shrine at Omaha. He also holds membership in the Odd Fellows, the Woodmen, the Royal Highlanders and the Elks.

EDWARD R. YEAGLE.

Among those who have come to western Nebraska during recent years and through thrift and industry have accumulated a large amount of property and aided in the building up of the commercial and financial interests of the locality where he chose his home, the gentleman above named deserves prominent mention. Mr. Yeagle resides in Sidney, Cheyenne county, where he is engaged in business, and is regarded as a worthy citizen and substantial business man.

Mr. Yeagle was born at Charleston, Virginia, in 1866. His father was of Southern blood, engaged in the general merchandise business in Charleston and well known through that section of the country. He married Amelia Yeagle. Our subject was raised and educated in the city of his birth, and was a clerk in his father's store as a boy and young man, and when about eighteen years old started out to make his own way. He spent some years as a sailor, during which time he made two trips around the globe. He afterward learned the cook's trade in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and followed the work in that state and later at Grand Rapids and Saginaw, Michigan. In 1895 he came west to Kearney, Nebraska, and there engaged in the restaurant business and run it for a year. Next he moved to Sidney, where he went into the same business, but his place was destroyed by fire soon after and he lost everything, as there was no insurance on the place or contents. However, he stuck to it and opened another restaurant there, and is doing well. His place is located on one of the most prominent corners of the town, and it is the first and best restaurant of the first class of the town. Aside from this business he has made a study of his line of work on Main street, where he intends to erect a stone hotel and knows the restaurant business having a man and his old settler and prominent farmer in the neighborhood. In 1897 Mr. Yeagle was married to Miss Emily Jamison, daughter of James Jamison, an old settler and prominent farmer of Amherst, Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Yeagle have two children, namely: Harold and Mabel. The family are well liked by all, and Mr. Yeagle is active in all local affairs in his community.

I. L. MERCURE.

I. L. Mercure, known throughout Hooker county, Nebraska, as a man of good citizenship and untiring energy in the pursuit of duty, is a resident of township 24, range 32, where he owns and operates an extensive ranch. He has been identified with the upbuilding of that locality for many years, and while acquiring his valuable estate has also gained for himself an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen. He is also a leading old settler of that region, and from its beginning has taken an active part in its development and commercial growth.

Mr. Mercure was born in New York state in 1844, in the town of Ticonderoga. He is a son of Joseph L. Mercure, of Canadian birth, who was a ship carpenter by trade, working on Lake Champlain. He married Charlotte Cossey, the United States American born. The father came to the subject man followed up in his native state, and as a young man followed the life of a sailor on different lakes, rivers and canals in the east, and continued a partner for over twenty years. He became a partner with his father in the shipyards, and in the business for about eight years, building canal boats. Mr. Mercure next started in the mercantile business, buying produce and shipping it into New York city, and carried on a large trade in that vicinity for ten years or more. He came to western Iowa, settling in Sloan, Woodbury county, where he engaged in the furniture business in partnership with a brother, and remained in that vicinity for two years, and remained in that vicinity for two years, then followed construction and building for several years, in that time helping to build the Chicago & Northwestern railway up the White river into Wyoming. He has the distinction of putting in the first mile of grading west of Thedford, Nebraska, on that line. In the spring of 1888 he, together with several others, went into Cherry county and took up government land, and there his daughter was the first teacher in their school district. He settled on Loup river, still continuing in the carpenter trade in Seneca, making that place his home for a number of years.

Mr. Mercure started in the cattle business in 1900, locating on his present ranch the following year, and has developed a fine property. He is proprietor of a splendid ranch containing three thousand acres, situated four miles southeast of Mullen, and on this place he has erected a fine residence, twenty-six by twenty-eight, which is one of the show places of the locality. He has also put up all good barns and outbuildings and has every improvement for operating a model ranch. He had the misfortune in 1907 to lose his house and entire contents by fire, suffering a loss of fifteen hundred dollars.

In March, 1867, our subject was married at Sandy Hill, New York, to Emma Cossey, born and reared in that locality. Five children were born of this union, namely: Minnie A., Nelson D., Myron O., Clarence P. and Fred R.

Mr. Mercure has always been one of the leading men of his community, active in public affairs, and has served as justice of the peace at different times, also has held the office of township assessor for several terms. He is a Republican in politics.

L. C. KINNEY.

L. C. Kinney, numbered among the prominent pioneers in western Nebraska, has built up a good estate in Kimball county, and there resides, surrounded by the comforts of life and esteemed by his associates.

Mr. Kinney was born in St. Johnsbury, Vermont, on July 9, 1843. He grew to manhood there, removing to New Hampshire at the age of twenty-three, and from there to different states in the east for several years, finally landing in Nebraska about 1882, coming here from Wyoming, where he had spent one year. He at once settled on the homestead which is now his home ranch in section 2, township 14, range 58. When he located here there was only one other settler near him and only five ranches in Kimball county (formerly included in Cheyenne county). Here he passed through all the early Nebraska times so familiar to the old settlers that there is little need to review the incidents, but managed to prove up on his claim and improve the same, slowly at first, but as the years grew better and conditions were more favorable for the development of the agricultural resources he was able to accumulate a little money and add to his original holdings, and is now proprietor of fifteen hundred acres, all good range and farm land, which he devotes to stock raising principally. He is known throughout this part of Nebraska as a thorough stockman, dealing extensively in high bred horses, handling at the present time from three to four hundred head. He has some very fine animals in his herd, knows every detail of the business, and stands high as an authority in breeding and raising standard bred trotting and pacing horses. He handles many Kentucky bred animals, and has produced some fine specimens of this breed. His name is familiar to horsemen all over the western states, and, in fact, throughout the states. His fifteen hundred acres of ranch above mentioned is located on both sides of Lodgepole creek, three hundred acres of which is under the best kind of irrigating ditches. This insures a good crop every year.

While living in St. Johnsbury, Vermont, Mr. Kinney was married to Miss Addie Webster, who is a descendant of the celebrated Webster family, the event occurring on March 20, 1856, and they are the parents of one child, Mabel, wife of Samuel E. Rutledge, residing in Denver, Colo. Our subject was one of a family of six children, of whom, beside himself, but one sister and a brother are living.

During his lifetime here in Nebraska Mr. Kinney has built up two distinct ranches, which are classed among the best, and he has taken a most active part in the development of this part of the state. On another page of this volume will be found portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Kinney.

FRANCIS McDERMOTT.

Among the prominent old settlers of Cherry county none is more widely known or highly respected than the man whose name heads this article, and who now resides on section 15, township 34, range 29.

Mr. McDermott was born in Leitrim county, Ireland, in 1875. His father, Bernard McDermott, was a native of Ireland, and worked there in the mills. His mother, in maidenhood, was Mary Daley. Shortly after the birth of our subject the family moved to Liverpool, England, where they remained until Mr. McDermott was twelve years of age, when the family moved to New York, where they remained a short time, then moved to New Jersey, and in 1885 moved to Cherry county, Nebraska.

Mr. McDermott's mother settled in Cherry county in 1886 and took up a homestead claim, which she later proved up on. She lived on this place up to her death, which occurred in 1903. When the family settled in Cherry county they took up farming and stock raising in a small way. They were handicapped because of a lack of money with which to operate. The first buildings erected were very flimsy, rickety affairs, and the only teams they had were small ponies. Then another thing they had to contend with was poor crops. The dry years came on and the crops were almost totally destroyed. However, this did not discourage them; they persevered, and as a reward for their industry and energy they today own one of the finest places in western Nebraska.

The place consists of five hundred and sixty acres, most of which is devoted to stock raising, which is carried on on a large scale. One hundred and sixty acres of the farm is under cultivation and produces good crops. The entire place is fenced and cross-fenced, and is thoroughly improved with all modern conveniences, a good dwelling house, good barns and outbuildings, and the place is well supplied with an abundance of good water.

Mr. McDermott has taken an active part in all public affairs in his neighborhood. He is highly esteemed in the community in which he resides. He has traveled and read extensively and is one of the best posted men in Cherry county.

A. A. GUSTAFSON.

A. A. Gustafson, residing on section 1, Divide township, has been a resident of this section since 1882, and is one of the best known old-timers in Phelps county. He is a farmer and owns a fine farm of one hundred and sixty acres, which is operated by his son Julius. Mr. Gustafson is a builder and contractor by trade, and one of the best in his line of work, and a man of sterling character, held in the very highest esteem by all who know him.

Mr. Gustafson was born in Sweden and raised there, in his young manhood learning his trade as a builder at Ostergotland, and followed the work there for several years, in 1872 coming to America and settling in Illinois. He first located in Nebraska in 1882, coming from Rock Island, Illinois, where he had worked as a contractor for a number of years. He at once bought his present farm and has built up a splendid place here, having erected a set of the being put through this part of the state, and he secured employment on the construction work and also started to build up a home, having filed on a claim, which is his location at the present time. His first dwelling was a dug-out, and later had a sod house, in which he lived for a number of years, then put up a new sod shanty. During the drouth years he witnessed hard times, part of the time being obliged to work out in order to make a living, spending some time at Kearney, and also at Greeley, Colorado. He was unable to raise a good crop on his land during the dry years, so gradually worked into the cattle business, and gathered together quite a bunch of stock and was most successful in this venture. He put good buildings and improvements on the farm, which now consists of eight hundred and forty acres, and he has four hundred acres devoted to mixed farming at the present time, the balance being in hay and pasture land. The ranch is about all fenced and every part of it bespeaks the good management of our subject. He has a large barn, forty by sixty, erected in 1908, and numerous other smaller buildings.

Mr. Weekly was married in 1885 to Miss Mary Maxwell, born and reared in West Virginia. Mrs. Weekly's father died in April, 1907. Eleven children have come to bless the union of our subject and his esteemed wife, named as follows: Goldie, Harry, Winnie, Addie, Mattie, Ward, Rose, Edna, Walter, Edith and Raymond, forming a happy and congenial family group. They enjoy a comfortable home, Mr. Weekly having recently erected a handsome residence, twenty-six by twenty-six, two stories in height, and their home is one of the most hospitable in the community.

Mr. Weekly votes independent of party politics. He has been assessor, and has always taken an active part in the upbuilding of his section. He is now on the school board, and has been an important factor in the establishment of the schools in the county.

DAVID A. CLOPTON.

David A. Clopton, who is closely identified with the farming interests of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, is a resident of Custer precinct, where he has met with marked success in operating his fine estate. Mr. Clopton is one of the old-timers in this region, and is widely known as an industrious and energetic farmer, universally esteemed as a worthy citizen.

Mr. Clopton was born in Green county, Iowa, May 15, 1859. His father, Isaac Clopton, a native of Illinois, of American stock, was an early settler in that county, and is living there at the present time. The mother was Nancy Salmon. Our subject was the fourth child in a family of twelve, and during his boyhood years assisted in carrying on the home farm, learning to do all kinds of hard farm work when a small boy. At the age of twenty-one years he began for himself, working for his father for four years, then took a farm in that vicinity, on which he lived for a year. In 1885 he came to Keya Paha county, and settled on a homestead on section 1, township 33, range 21, and still occupies this place. He lived with his brother-in-law until he had proved up on his place, planting four thousand trees on his homestead, also assisting his neighbors in starting their groves. He broke up seventy-five acres, which he farms, and has two hundred acres of hay and pasture, owning in all three hundred and twenty acres. He keeps fifty head of cattle, fifteen horses and quite a lot of hogs, and has good buildings and fences. He has one of the finest homes in the county and has accumulated all this property from a start of practically nothing, as all he had when he landed here was a team and wagon and two cows. He was one of the first settlers in this locality, and grew with the region, and is now considered among the leading citizens of his community.

Mr. Clopton was married in Springview, January 1, 1889, to Miss Katie Blakeley, whose parents, John and Lydia (Sampson) Blakeley, were pioneers in this county and still reside here. Mr. and Mrs. Clopton are the parents of the following children: Myrtle J., Ira B., Ray W. and Genevieve.

Although our subject has never taken a leading part in politics, he has given his aid for the best interests of the people of his locality, and aided materially in the advancement of the agricultural and commercial opportunities. He is a loyal Republican, having always voted that ticket, and a member of the Baptist church.

MR. AND MRS. OSCAR C. LUTZ.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. Lutz are numbered among the pioneers of eastern Nebraska, settling in York county in 1872.

At the time of their settlement much of York county was open for homestead settlement. However, they preferred to purchase railroad land, and secured a tract of four hundred and eighty acres in section 13, township 11, range 2 east, at a purchase price of five dollars per acre. They erected a frame dwelling on the land, hauling the lumber from Seward, a distance of thirty-five miles, and the same was afterward used as a public school building, and was the school house erected in the school district.

As there was no homestead land in the school district, their taxes on the school were very high, being one hundred and fifty dollars for a year or two. They were the sufferers from the grasshopper plague and lost their crops in the drouth years of the early nineties. Mr. Lutz first saw the valley of the North Loup while buffalo hunting in 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz are of genuine pioneer stock, their parents having settled in Mercer county, Illinois, in 1832, when that portion of Illinois was almost wholly unsettled, and wild game in abundance. Mr. Lutz and family came to Garfield county in 1898, where they now reside. Their first property in the county was the steam flouring mills of Burwell. Their present residence is on section 21, township 21, range 15 west, on a tract of eight hundred and forty acres, their residence being one of the best of elm and cottonwood in Mercer county, situated in a beautiful grove of elm and cottonwood. Mr. Lutz was born in Rock Island county, Illinois, March 14, 1845, and was born in Rock Island county, Illinois, October 12, 1853. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz were married November 1, 1870, the fruit of their union being five children, viz.: Orley L., who died in infancy; Mrs. Iola Lutz, of Custer county, Nebraska; Ora C., who died in childhood; Marie, who is a member of the Science church, and Mrs. Lutz is a Christian Science practitioner, having had much success in the practice of Christian Science. To the grand achievement of pioneers of Nebraska we are greatly indebted, and among the number we honor Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lutz.

GEORGE G. CLARK

George G. Clarke, one of the successful and prosperous farmers of Box Butte county, has acquired a fine estate and enjoys all the comforts of rural life. He is a gentleman of good business judgment, and has a gentle and amiable reputation as a worthy citizen and an excellent neighbor. His home is in section 27, township 24, range 49, and he had to freight all of his lumber fifty-five miles from Pine Ridge to his farm, and all of his lumber buildings were hauled about eighty miles from wood for fuel. He was hauled from the northwestern Crawford county.

Mr. Clarke, was born at Lockport, New York, in 1872. His father, J. W. Clarke, was of Scotch descent, a machinist by trade. His father married Christina Kailey, and they settled in Pennsylvania. The family came to Illinois during our subject's boyhood, remaining there up to 1883, and then came west to Nebraska, locating at North Platte, where they lived for seven years, when George left his parents' home and came to Box Butte county. For some little time he worked in Alliance, and later his mother moved there, and now lives in Aurora, Hamilton county. In the fall of 1891 he located on a ranch which belonged to his mother, and was situated ten miles southwest of Alliance. There he has lived ever since, building it up in fine shape, and has made money. When he first took the place all he had as a start was seven head of cattle and a pony, and was obliged to borrow money to begin work on the place, and during the first years had a hard time to get along, "batching it" for the first few years. He managed to secure some work in the vicinity to make a living and put on some improvements in the way of buildings, and soon got into the stock business. He freighted through the country for one year for the railroad, etc. He has been very successful in his stock raising ventures, and has made plenty of money during the past several years, owning a finely improved ranch of four hundred acres, and is called one of the well-to-do men of his locality. On June 26, 1898, Mr. Clarke was united in marriage to Miss Minnie J. Hawkins, daughter of J. C. Hawkins, who is a prominent old settler in this region. Her mother was Rebecca Anderson, and they settled in western Nebraska about 1887, living for many years in that locality, where Mrs. Clarke was reared and educated. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are the parents of two children, George H., aged five years in November, 1908, and Stella Minnie, aged four months.

NICHOLAS JACOBSON.

Nicholas Jacobson, owner of a valuable estate in Trognitz precinct, Cheyenne county, was born near the little seaport of Rone, in Sweden, August 6, 1862. His father was a farmer, and raised his family in his native country, where our subject assisted in the labor on the home farm, and was early taught to do all kinds of work, receiving the usual common school education of the children of his station in life. The father finally decided to come to America to seek a fortune and build up a home for his family, and leaving his family on the homestead, left his native land for the new world, and after landing in the United States he proceeded to Chicago, where he labored for two years, securing funds to send for his family. Shortly before their arrival he went to western Iowa, and here they resided some six months. They then moved to Saunders county, Nebraska, living two years near Mead before making a permanent residence in Cheyenne county. Here the father filed on a homestead in section 32, township 16, range 52, and still occupies that farm. In the fall of 1885 he sent for his family, and the mother came with her three children. Proceeding from Stockholm to Gottenberg, they took steamer for Hull, whence they crossed England to Liverpool; thence they sailed for New York on the City of Berlin, landing after a voyage of eleven days. After a two years' residence with his father in Cheyenne county, our subject filed on a homestead for himself, in section 32, township 16, range 52, and in 1900 secured three hundred and twenty acres in section 20, now owning a fine ranch of four hundred and eighty acres. Here he has gone through all the pioneer experiences, suffering losses from failures of crops due to the drouths, etc., but has worked hard and is well rewarded for his efforts. He farms about two hundred acres, and is extensively engaged in the stock business, running one hundred head of cattle and twenty-five horses. Of late years he has developed the dairy interests, shipping the cream from a herd of twelve to fifteen cows to Cheyenne. His place is well fenced, has good buildings of every kind and every improvement in the way of farm machinery, wells, windmills, etc. The barns, with all their contents and three fine horses, were lost by fire in August, 1907. He has planted orchard trees, besides having different varieties of small fruits. His homestead is one of the best kept and most prosperous appearing farms of the locality, and he enjoys a good competence as a result of his many years of hard labor. A view of the home is to be found on another page of this work.

Mr. Jacobson was married at the age of twenty-four years to Christina Jacobson, the wedding taking place at Hastings, Iowa. Mrs. Jacobson was born and reared in Sweden, coming to this country in 1885, her parents still residing in Sweden. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson are the parents of twelve children, nine of whom are living; the two eldest are married and settled in homes of their own. They are named as follows: Mary, wife of Oscar Johnson, now living in Canada; Paulina, wife of Leslie Sanders, living on a ranch in Cheyenne county. Annie, who married Edward Anderson in July, 1907, died two weeks after her wedding day. The following are at home: Elmer, Ellen, Albert, Rose, Lillie, Roy and Mildred. They are all bright and intelligent children, and Mr. Jacobson is justly proud of his interesting family.

In local affairs he takes a leading part, keeping in close touch with all matters pertaining to the good of the locality. He is a Republican and firm in his convictions, keeping well posted on state, county and national politics. At present he is serving as director of school district No. 47. With his family Mr. Jacobson was reared in the Swedish Lutheran church.

AUGUST W. OLSON.

August W. Olson, owner of a fine estate in Trognitz precinct, has been a resident of Cheyenne county for the past twenty years, and during that time has become one of the successful ranchmen and substantial citizens of that region. Mr. Olson was born in Sweden, three-quarters of a mile from the market town of Verserum, January 1, 1852, living with his parents until he was a lad of sixteen years. He was reared on a farm, and followed the usual life of that country as a boy, receiving a common school education, and came to America with some friends in 1868. His first location was at Galesburg, Illinois, and he spent twenty-two years in that section, following the carpenter's trade; fourteen years of this time he was employed in the car shops of the Burlington railroad. From there he came direct to Cheyenne county, arriving here in the spring of 1888, and immediately filed on a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in section 28, township 16, range 52, and is now owner of the whole section, besides four hundred and eighty acres of land, all but one hundred and sixty acres of it adjoining his home ranch. He has gone through all the pioneer experiences in accumulating this property, and since coming here has remained continuously on his present farm. As a result of his faithful labor, his handsome farm and its well-kept appearance, all stocked with one hundred and twenty-five cattle and twenty-five good horses, is evidence of his prosperity. He farms about one hundred and seventy acres, raising good crops of small grains, beside having plenty of pasture. We call attention to a view of the home and surroundings presented elsewhere in this work.

Both parents of Mr. Olson remained in Sweden, dying at the ages of eighty and eighty-one. He was married to Miss Emma Erickson, at Galesburg, Illinois, March 6, 1884. She was also a native of Sweden, coming to this country with her parents in 1867; her father is at present living in Peoria, Illinois, with a daughter; the mother died soon after reaching America.

Mr. and Mrs. Olson are the parents of five children, named as follows: Minnie, wife of Charles Alquist, employed in the hardware business at Morrell, Nebraska; Frank Frederick, entered for a four years' course in the Knox Business College at Galesburg, Iowa; Ruth Agnes and Elsie, living at home. The family have a pleasant rural home, surrounded by every convenience, and are well liked by all in their community.

Mr. Olson takes an active and leading part in neighborhood affairs, is prominent in school matters, at present serving as moderator of district No. 47. Politically he is a Republican. The family was reared in the Swedish Lutheran church.

SAMUEL J. PALMER.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is well known as one of the most hospitable and congenial of men, a typical representative of the sturdy ranchman of the west, happy and contented with his home life and surroundings, and one whom it is a pleasure to know. He lives on section 35, township 34, range 50, where he has a comfortable home and everything in first-class order.

Mr. Palmer is a native of Butler county, Iowa, born on a farm in 1860. His father, John Palmer, was born in England, and was a pioneer in Iowa, who married Miss Louisa Jeffrey, also born in England. When our subject was a small boy his parents moved to Black Hawk county, where he grew up. He attended the country schools and during his spare time assisted his father in carrying on the farm work, remaining at home until he reached the age of twenty-two years, then located in Wright county, where he engaged in the livery and pump business, running the business for two years. From there he moved to Rock Valley, Iowa, where he run a pump business for one year. In 1885 he came to Dawes county, landing here in June of that year, driving from Rock Valley with a team and covered wagon. He had a tent along with him and every night pitched the tent and spent the nights in sleeping on the ground. With him were three other men also coming here to settle. After arriving here he located near Lone Tree creek, situated on a branch of Main creek, and there put up a shack and "batched it" for five years, and in the winter of 1890 or 1891 was married to Miss Nancy A. Sweet. Two years later they moved to his present ranch, in section 35, township 34, range 50, moving his buildings, and here has built up a good home and farm. He has all good substantial farm buildings, the place well fenced, and has good running water the year around. There is plenty of hay land, and he engages principally in stock raising, doing a little farming. He is now running one hundred and sixty cattle and twenty-five horses, and is doing well in his different enterprises. During the first years in this section he went through hard times, witnessing the drouths, etc., but stuck to it through all discouragements, and has made a good thing of it.

Mr. Palmer is a daughter of Henry Sweet, who settled in Dawes county in March, 1885. He is an old soldier. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer are the parents of the following children: Arthur, born November 27, 1891; Roy, now deceased; Ernest, born October 15, 1894; Eva, born August 17, 1897; Elsie, born December 28, 1899; Ruby, born October 4, 1902, and Thomas, born March 2, 1907.

WILSON I. CADY.

Wilson I. Cady, classed among the old settlers of Cherry county, although he has been in the section only since 1898, has since his residence here been a potent factor in the development of the agricultural resources of the county. He is known throughout the county as a prosperous and energetic farmer and a worthy and highly esteemed citizen.

Mr. Cady was born in New York state in 1833, and raised on a farm in Schenectady county. His father, Silas, and his mother, whose maiden name was Susanna Coffin, were both natives of that state, and when Wilson was a lad of ten years the whole family emigrated to Michigan, where he grew to manhood. He helped his parents carry on the farm and in the meantime obtained a somewhat limited schooling, learning early to depend upon his own labors and resources. In 1868 he came to Nebraska, and was among the pioneers near Tecumseh, Johnson county, where he spent thirty years, building up a good home from raw prairie land, and improved it in good shape, and the land is now worth one hundred red dollars an acre. He left that place and came to Cherry county in 1898, settling on section 2, township 25, range 27, and here he has also developed a fine ranch, consisting of eight hundred acres. He has seventy-five acres under cultivation and raises fine crops, besides running a considerable stock. The ranch is situated on Calf creek, and is beautifully located, having a fine water supply, plenty of timber, pasture and hay land, and altogether is one of the valuable estates in the county.

OLE A. DAVIG.

Ole A. Davig, who is classed among the leading citizens of Box Butte county, resides on section 9, township 26, range 48, where he has a well improved farm and comfortable home.

Mr. Davig was born in Norfjord, Norway, in 1864. His father was a farmer all his life, lived and died in his native land, his death occurring when our subject was a lad of ten years, and at the age of sixteen the latter left home and took passage for the United States. Immediately after landing on American soil he started for the west and came to Albion, Nebraska, locating in Boone county, where he had an uncle living on a farm, and he started to work on his place. One year was spent in working in the brick yards in that locality, and he remained there for about five years in all. In 1886 he came farther west and settled in Box Butte county, accompanying a party of eleven pioneers, and was obliged to pay one dollar for the privilege of walking out from Hay Springs with these people, marching behind a wagon whose driver acted as guide for the rest of the party. Mr. Davig selected a location in section 27, township 26, range 48, and started to improve his claim, hiring a man to break up a piece of ground so that he could put in some seed. He began to build a sod house, putting up a building eight by ten feet, with half a window fitted in the south side of the shanty, and here he "batched it" while getting a start by working out for his neighbors, doing anything that he found to do. His first team was a good pair of oxen, and with these he broke up his land and did all the work on his farm. He proved up on his claim, constantly improving his place, and now has a fine set of farm buildings, including good residence, barn, granaries, cattle sheds, etc. His house is a commodious frame building, twenty by thirty-two feet, with a good sod addition, sixteen by forty-six feet. His farm is well supplied with good water, pumped by windmills fitted with supply tanks at different points on the farm. Mr. Davig's ranch consists of six hundred and forty acres of deeded land, and he also owns one hundred and fifty-two acres of land in Sherman county, and this is also well improved. Also, he has seven hundred and twenty acres of leased land, which he operates in this township, and he is making plenty of money by his different enterprises. He is counted among the well-to-do residents of his locality, but has gone through many discouragements and hardships during the first years in this region, but was never obliged to mortgage his property as so many of the pioneers were forced to do. At one time he was compelled to travel on foot from his farm to Whitman, a distance of eighty miles east of Alliance, to seek for work, and on the trip he became so exhausted from hunger and fatigue that he could scarcely walk. He was so thirsty that he nearly died, and all the water he could find to drink was out of Duck Lake, which was nothing more than a mud hole.

In 1892 Mr. Davig was married to Hattie Robinson, a native of Mercer county, Illinois. Her father, E. G. Robinson, was a well-known farmer and liveryman, and one of the old settlers in Sherman county, Nebraska, where Mrs. Davig grew up among the pioneers. She came to the western part of the state and took up a homestead in Box Butte county in 1892 and proved up on the claim, and still owns it. She was a teacher in the schools in this county for some years prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Davig are the parents of the following children: Albert, aged fifteen; Margaret, aged thirteen; Archie, aged five years, and Clarence, one month old.

Mr. Davig is at present serving his township as road overseer. Mrs. Davig has held the office of school director for six years, and the school is situated on his farm. In political sentiments Mr. Davig is a staunch Republican.

Mr. Davig returned to his native land in December, 1904, on account of the death of a sister, who left three orphan children, two boys and one girl, named Osmes, Alfred and Amanda. Mr. Davig returned to America in April, 1905, with the children, and is doing an uncle's, and indeed a father's, part by them, educating them and rearing them along the lines of uprightness and that integrity of character that makes honorable and successful citizens.

JACOB PEDRETT.

The gentleman above named is one of the prominent stockmen of Kimball county, and a foremost citizen of his community, having done much to build up and improve conditions in his county. He has spent many years in Nebraska, has prospered financially through good management, and enjoys an enviable reputation as a business man and worthy citizen.

Jacob Pedrett was born in Switzerland, November 7, 1856, and grew up there. Both his parents are now dead, they having spent their entire lives in their native country. During his boyhood he followed farming, and at the age of thirty years came to the United States to seek his fortune. After landing in New York city he came directly west, locating near Hastings, in Adams county, Nebraska, where he engaged in the cheese and dairy business, carrying that work on for four years, then came to Kimball county, where he homesteaded a quarter section and proved up on it. He afterwards as sheepmen forced him out, and then one hundred and sixty acres on section ship 15, range 52. He settled on the and has improved it in splendid shape ing one hundred acres under cultivation. He runs a large herd of cattle and horses had a Kincaid claim of four hundred acres in the vicinity of his home ranch.

Mr. Pedrett is largely interested in business, being in partnership with the latter having a fine ranch adjoining village, and together they own a fine registered Hereford cattle, also a bunch of high bred horses. Both men are good judges and their cattle and horses are pronounced best in that section of the country. Mr. Pedrett was among the first to introduce registered stock in this region. He has made a success and is recognized as one of the prominent old-timers.

Mr. Pedrett was united in marriage to Louise Grothaus, in Hastings, Nebraska, 31, 1887. Mrs. Pedrett was a native of born April 10, 1864, and came to Nebraska in 1885. Five children were born to her, of whom are living, named as follows: Freda, Willie (who died at the age of six years), Louise and Harry, forming a very interesting family. Ulrich attended the State Agricultural School at Lincoln and graduated in 1906. Mrs. Pedrett's mother is still living in Germany, at the age of seventy-six years. Politically Mr. Pedrett is a Republican. He is active in local affairs, and has served as school director in his district for a number of years, and the office of assessor and road overseer.

kind in sight at that time. For ten years he lived there. In 1880 he was married to Miss May C. Kellison, this event taking place in the spring of that year, then came to Atkinson where he spent a year. He also took up a timber claim in Brown county on which he built a board shanty, the lumber for which was hauled from Niobrara City, a distance of one hundred and fifty miles. He spent his time in freighting from Oakdale to Fort Niobrara, making many trips which took several days on the road, camping out at night and leading a regular frontiersman's life. While he was working hard to build up his home and farm he met with many discouragements in the way of drouths, storms, and other destructive elements, and for four years lost nearly all of his crops, and during this time he was compelled to cut posts and wood, which he hauled a long distance to sell in order to make a living for his family. In 1897 he sold out his homestead and bought his last farm and from the beginning made a success of this enterprise. He built up his place in good shape and had a complete set of good farm buildings, fences, etc., and owned a valuable property. His crops were of the best, and grain of the finest quality, which was his chief product. At one time during the dry years he had a field of forty acres of corn from which he picked four bushels fit to use. When he first settled here, there were only three houses between his home and Stuart, and he watched the growth and development of this part of the state from its earliest beginning.

Mr. Allen's family consists of himself, wife and seven children, named as follows: Ed, Walter, Hattie, Loretta, Claude, William and Audrey.

Mr. Allen died July 19, 1906. He was working in the harvest field at the time and was at work behind the binder, when he was stricken without any warning, thus closing a life in the very midst of the activities which had made his life a success.

CHARLES ALLEN, DECEASED.

Charles Allen was one of the prominent influential citizens of Brown county, Nebraska, where he had a well-improved farm of six hundred and forty acres, and was farmed by the representative farmers of numerous counties. Mr. Allen was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1852. His father, Samuel Allen, was also a native of Irish descent, and his mother was the second member of six children of his native country, and he was raised in his family. The family came to the United States in 1870, settling in Saline county, Nebraska, the eastern part of the state. When Mr. Allen walked from Atlantic to Lincoln, Nebraska, he was one of the first to take up a homestead on section 22, township 22, range 17, and has proved up on his land. He has an excellent farm of three hundred and twenty acres, im-

MILTON HESSELGESSER.

Milton Hesselgesser was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, in 1875, his parents being Samuel and Mary Alice (Watson) Hesselgesser, whose sketch appears on another page of this volume. They were pioneer farmers and old settlers of Loup county, Nebraska.

Our subject came to the county with his parents and grew up on the farm, living on the old home place until 1892. He located a homestead on section 22, township 22, range 17, and has proved up on his land. He has an excellent farm of three hundred and twenty acres, improved in fine shape with good buildings, barns, fences, etc. Mr. Hesselgesser has been successful in his farming operations and has established himself firmly on the way to wealth and prosperity. He has taken an active interest in local affairs and has won his way to the high esteem of his friends and associates.

Our subject was married in the spring of 1892 to Miss Lottie Cronk, daughter of Adolphus Cronk, one of the old leading pioneer settlers of Valley county, Nebraska, now a resident of Loup county. Mr. and Mrs. Hesselgesser have been blessed with three children: Wayne, Earl and Lila, which form a most intelligent group.

WALTON A. KENASTON.

Walton A. Kenaston is one of the most prominent old settlers in northwestern Nebraska and has taken an active part in the development of that region. Walton A. Kenaston is a son of Dr. J. A. and Mrs. C. E. Kenaston, born in Marion county, Iowa, in 1858 and moved with his parents to Nebraska in 1868. His father took up a homestead in Cass county, half way between Plattsmouth and Lincoln, and lived there most of the time for twelve years. In the year 1880 our subject removed to Long Pine, Nebraska, which was unorganized territory at that time.

In the spring of 1881, Walton A. Kenaston was married to Minnie B. Gordon, who was a native of Massachusetts.

Mr. Kenaston took an active part in the affairs at Long Pine, and was one of the promoters of this place before it had a railroad and helped to organize the county of Brown. In February, 1883, with his wife and one child, Edward, and his brother Logan, he again moved over into what is now known as Keya Paha county, it being at that time a part of Brown county. In 1891 he moved with his family to Butte, Nebraska, and was one of the promoters of that thriving little city, and afterward helped to organize the county of Boyd out of a part of the Sioux reservation which extended into Nebraska, and which had been opened to settlement. He put up the second livery barn and first implement building in Butte and afterward engaged in the real estate business with T. S. Armstrong. He helped to establish and lay out the little town of Bonesteel, South Dakota, and built the first livery barn there.

In 1898 he sold his interests in Boyd county and again returned to Keya Paha county, where he has since resided, engaged in farming and stock raising.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenaston have a family of four boys, Edward, Orrie, Floyd and Willard; and two girls, Gracie and Nellie.

GEORGE KRETZ.

Among the representative farmers of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, who have aided materially in its development and advancement, a prominent place is accorded George Kretz, who resides on his well improved estate in section 10, township 13, range 50, Sidney precinct. He is a gentleman of energetic character, and well merits his success and high standing.

Mr. Kretz was born in Germany, in the village of Bruchsal, province of Baden, April 24, 1866, and grew to the age of thirteen years in his native town. In October, 1879, he started alone for the United States, sailing from Bremen on the Werra, then making her second trip. After a passage of eleven days, he landed in New York, where he spent four years in the wine establishment of Peter Leuk, and in George Gerhard's bottling works. He then went to St. Joseph, Missouri, and later came to Cheyenne county, arriving in April, 1883. He soon afterwards filed on a homestead in the southeast quarter of section 10, township 13, range 50, and later took up a Kincaid homestead in the same section, and is now owner of four hundred and eighty acres in all. He has built up a good home and has done well, having been largely engaged in stock raising. He has all good stone buildings on the ranch, and every appointment about the farm bespeaks careful attention to details in every part of the work. The milk house with its concrete tank is especially noteworthy. He has seen hard times, but is now on the high road to wealth, and well deserves his success, as he has spent all his time in developing his home. A new dwelling constructed in the spring of 1907 is a great improvement to the place. A view of the ranch buildings and rugged scenery surrounding it, is presented elsewhere in this work.

Our subject was married on April 25, 1900, in Cheyenne county, to Miss Mabel Spicknall, daughter of James Spicknall. The latter is a native of Dearborn county, Indiana, born April 19, 1844, and made that locality his home for twenty-five years. He enlisted in Company C, Fifty-second Indiana Infantry, on November 28, 1861, saw hard service for about a year and a half, and on account of serious illness was discharged from the army April 12, 1863. Returning to his Indiana home, he followed farming there some eight years; coming to Nebraska in 1871, settling in Webster county. He remained there up to 1888 and then moved to Cheyenne county, where he filed on a tree cla still owns, the place adjoining ou the same section. He married Cyn man, in Bladen, Webster county, 2, 1877, and from this union four sulted, of whom Mrs. Kretz is th lowed by Thomas A., Bertha M. Spicknall. WILLIAM M. DUGGER

Among the pioneers settlers in part of Nebraska, who has always share towards the upbuilding of th one has a better claim to distincti gentleman whose name heads this tory. Mr. Dugger resides in Lon cinct, Rock county, and is one of t citizens of that locality.

Mr. Dugger was born in Ogle nois, November 24, 1853. He is a Dugger, a farmer of Scotch-Irish in Kentucky, and his mother was Corder, of Kentucky, born of Fr Our subject is the third member i six children, and was reared and Adams county, Iowa, where the in the year 1865. He set to work improving the farm, planted trees, which have developed into a fine grove of many varieties, containing a good number of small fruits; a special feature of the place is the profusion of evergreens, some of which are neatly trimmed, giving to the smoothly cropped lawn a park effect. When he came to this place he had not even a team to start with. Bassett was so new that there was only one store building besides the section house, while Newport lacked even that extra one. His farm now contains three hundred and twenty acres of land, and he is engaged principally in stock raising, which he finds to be a very profitable enterprise. He is now in a position to enjoy his possessions and says that he does not care to go back to the old days when they had to endure so many privations on account of the drouth periods, and the many pests which troubled them. During those days Mr. Dugger sold nursery stock for a livelihood, and for a period of four years the wife was left at home alone much of the time, on one occasion for a whole fortnight, which was not agreeable in those lonely days. For a number of years he worked on the hay flats during the season which kept him away from home many days at a time.

Mr. Dugger is a strong Democrat, and has held different offices in his community, being assessor for several years. A view of the home and its beautiful groves and garden is to be seen elsewhere in this volume.

GERALD M. G. COOPER.

Gerald M. G. Cooper, a prominent citizen of Rushville, Nebraska, was born in London, England, in 1862. His father, George Armytage Cooper, was educated for the law, but drifted into business and later the lecture platform, becoming a speaker of ability, traveling all over the United Kingdom. Of a family of eleven children our subject was the youngest and received the rudiments of his education in Manchester, England, where he lived with his two youngest sisters during the time his parents were traveling. He was moved from Manchester to Grimsby, Lincolnshire, where he was for over a year under a guardian, a Mrs. Lincoln, whose memory he treasures with the utmost veneration, for she was a woman of noble character and bore some of the qualities of the great emancipator, of whose deeds he was to read in later years. After several years traveling with his parents, he was apprenticed to Charles Frederick Reynolds on the Barrow Herald, published at Barrow-in-Furness, Northwest Lancashire, where he was for nine years on the staff, the paper being the oldest established in that city of fifty thousand inhabitants. After severing his connection with the Herald he went to London to be with his parents, and gravitated to the office of Shepard & St. John, publishers of The Civilian and the Civil Service Competitor. Here he extended his knowledge of the business, particularly in book work. After being with this firm five years, he joined his brother, Godfrey C. Cooper, in business in High Holborn, where he became manager of a sportsman's outfitting establishment.

In the spring of 1892 Mr. Cooper came to the United States, coming direct to Gordon, Sheridan county, Nebraska, and filed on a homestead just across the line in Cherry county. He remained here five years, and drifted into the newspaper business on the Gordon Journal, where he ultimately acquired an interest with H. G. Lyon, and assisted in the work of publishing this paper for some time. In September, 1907, he moved to Rushville and bought the Recorder from Charles P. Bresee, paying a hundred dollars for the outfit, which consisted of an old army press and a hatful of type. This paper was first established May 8, 1895, by Dodge Hemming, and was afterwards owned by a company until it passed into the hands of Mr. Bresee, who sold it to our subject. When Mr. Cooper first took hold of the paper there was practically little or nothing to it. The subscription list was small, and everything had run down at the elbows. For the first six months it did not pay its expenses, but at the end of that time our subject threw off his coat and by dint of hard work and careful management he has built up the most modern plant in the county, doing a large job printing business and increasing the circulation to a remarkable extent.

Mr. Cooper was married in 1897 to Miss Emma Hetzel, whose parents are old settlers in Sheridan county, now living at Gordon. They moved from New York, where they came over from Baden Baden, Germany, to LeMars, Iowa, and from thence moved to Sheridan county, Nebraska, in 1886. Mr. Cooper now owns one of the finest residences in the county, besides his own office, and is blessed with two children—Vera Grace and Gerald Frederick Cooper.

The subject of this sketch is an efficient railroad man connected with the Union Pacific railway and well known all over that line as a popular and trustworthy employe, and has an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen in North Platte, where he resides.

Mr. McComber is a native of Syracuse, New York, and was raised and educated in that city. His father, William C. McComber, came from Vermont, and his mother, who was Miss Jerusha Tyler, was a native of the state of Massachusetts. When he had finished school he started out for himself and struck out west, locating in Denver, and began work with the Union Pacific railway in 1886. He remained there for two years, then moved to North Platte, Lincoln county, Nebraska, and since that time has been a conductor with that road. Previous to beginning with the Union Pacific he was with the Southern Pacific railway for about five years, and knows the work from the ground up, and has made a splendid success of his chosen profession. He is one of the most active men and earnest workers in the railway ranks, in all matters pertaining to that business, and for the benefit of railway employes. From 1898 to 1904, inclusive, he was general chairman of the Order of Railway Conductors for the entire Union Pacific system, in which organization there are about five hundred conductors, and eleven lodges, and he also served on the local committee of this lodge for a great many years. He has attended the national convention six times, and is always one of the committee of insurance appeals in that convention. He was appointed a member of the legislative committee, which office he has held for the past four years. In 1904, when the Nebraska state legislative committee was formed he was made chairman of that body, and is at present filling this position. This committee meets when the legislature holds its session, and the chairman remains at the capitol during that time.

Mr. McComber was married to Miss Nellie Fraser, a native of Rome, New York, whose father, Edwin Fraser, was a soldier in the Union army and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg. Mr. and Mrs. McComber have two children, Roy and Claude.

Mr. McComber is a man of active public spirit, and takes a commendable interest in all affairs relating to the good of his fellowmen. He is a prominent member of the Masonic lodge, and also of the United Workmen.

HENRY A. SHERMAN.

Henry A. Sherman was born in Worcester county, Massachusetts, in 1853, and was the son of John Adam and Katherine (Bigelow)
 Sherman, of English ancestry.

In 1872 our subject came west, going first to Nevada, where he worked on a sheep ranch operated by his relatives. He went to Oregon in 1874 and lived there for ten years, when he spent some time in Idaho. He was occu pied as a cowboy and roughed it in winter and summer through the states named, many a morning kicking away the snow that during the night had covered the blankets in which he was sleeping. In his travels he visited near ly all the Pacific coast states and he had many thrilling experiences with the Indians, who were almost always on the warpath, once dis covering the body of a white man who had been shot to death by an Indian bullet. In 1877 he crossed the Rocky mountains with a drove of seven hundred head of cattle.

In 1889 and 1890 our subject came into Ne braska, locating first in Deuel county, close to the Keith county line, where he bought school land and went to farming and hog rais ing. One year he lost one hundred and forty acres of crops, and becoming disgusted with this setback determined to try another loca tion. He settled on a homestead of wild prai rie land in section 4, township 13, range 39, in Keith county, and started to build up a new home. He broke up his land and built a house, which was destroyed by fire in 1902. The house has been reconstructed and our sub ject has now a fine home. He owns about seven hundred and twenty acres, with a Kin caid homestead of four hundred and eighty acres back in the hills and he tills about one hundred acres. The ranch is finely improved with buildings, wells, windmills, etc., and our subject is at present engaged in stock raising and dairying, at the present time milking about twenty cows.

Mr. Sherman's first wife died in Massachu setts, leaving two daughters, Carrie L. and Lettie E., both of whom were born in Oregon in a log cabin constructed by our subject. Mr.
 Sherman was married in 1890 to Miss Geor giana Rice, whose parents were old settlers and homesteaders of Keith county. The marriage was celebrated in the city of Ogallala.

Henry A. Sherman is a Republican in politics and takes an active interest in all such matters. He has especially aided in the establishment of the schools and has done all in his power to increase the educational facilities of the community.

JOSEPH C. JOHNSON.

In the person of this gentleman we have one of the oldest settlers of western Nebraska, and a man who is well and favorably known to all as a worthy and representative pioneer of the region.

Joseph C. Johnson was born in Caldwell county, Missouri, in 1842, and reared on a farm. His father was of Irish descent, and was a farmer and stockman, who settled in Missouri as a pioneer. He married Fannie Bryant, also of Irish stock. The family lived in Missouri until Joseph was sixteen years old; he then left home and went to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, landing at that place May 11, 1885, and began work as a teamster for the United States government, traveling over the plains. He was with a train of thirty wagons and a battalion of troops, going to Fort Laramie, and on this trip had a skirmish with the Indians, the encounter taking place at Horse Creek, Wyoming. He made subsequent trips across the plains, and during the winter of 1855 had an escort of troops to protect them from the herds of buffalo which would cross their path, as they would attempt to stampede the animals with the wagon train. He also crossed the plains to California, where he remained for three years, working in the mines near Hangtown for three months, then went to Santa Rosa valley and engaged in the stock business. While in that region he organized a company of twenty-four citizens, and on May 1, 1860, started to recross the plains, made a very successful trip, arriving at St. Joe, Missouri, on October 10. In coming through the mountains they were hindered in their progress to some extent by the heavy snows, and were obliged to reduce to one-third rations in order to make their supply last, and on reaching Salt Lake City were on the very last of their provisions.

In the fall of 1861 Mr. Johnson first served in the "six months state militia." Enlisted in Company G, Sixth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, and served with this regiment one year and six months, then veteranized in the Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry until the end of the war, most of the time on duty in Colorado. He received an honorable discharge June 13, 1866, and during his service was all through Missouri, Texas and Arkansas.

After his retirement from the army Mr. Johnson settled in Harrison county, Missouri, and engaged in business in Bethany, living in that vicinity up to 1884, when he came to Nebraska to what is now Deuel county, and took a homestead one mile east of Chappell, also bought a section of land from the railroad. Chappell was then a mere siding station. He built up a good home and ranch, the place extending from Lodgepole creek to the South Platte river, and devoted himself principally to stock raising. He is owner of seventeen hundred and sixty acres of deeded land, all fenced and improved with good buildings, and has one hundred acres of irrigated land. He has watched the growth and aided in the development of this region from its earliest settlement by the whites, and when he came here in 1884 was the only man to live in a frame house in these parts. At that time the section was known as Cheyenne county, and he was one of the first county commissioners, helping in the organization of Deuel county and the location of the county seat.

Our subject was married in 1870 to Miss Laura Lewellen, who was born and raised in Pennsylvania, of American stock. To them have been born the following children, all now filling honorable positions in life: Thomas, Helen, Cloy, Lucy, Mollie and Stella. Politically Mr. Johnson is a Republican.

ROBERT O. JONES.

Robert O. Jones, a progressive and enterprising farmer of Keya Paha county, Nebraska, resides on section 30, township 34, range 24, where he has a fine farm and home. Mr. Jones is among the early settlers in this part of the state, and has seen all the changes which have taken place in this locality from its beginning, and aided materially in the development and growth of its agricultural and commercial resources.

Mr. Jones was born on his parents' farm in Wales in 1856. His father, William Jones, followed farming all his career and lived and died in his native country, leaving a widow and five children, of whom our subject is the eldest. He left home at the age of twenty-five years and came to America. He spent a short time in New York and then came west, settling in Columbia county, Wisconsin he remained for six years. From there he went to Colorado and worked in the mines and concentrating mills for a time.

In 1887 Mr. Jones first came to Nebraska locating in Keya Paha county, purchasing his present farm. Here he put up a good house and has added to his farm until he is proprietor of four hundred and eighty acres of land, one-third of which is under cultivation, and he engages in stock raising, running a number of cattle all the time. He was here during the dry years, and experienced hard times, as did so many of the settlers in this locality, one year gathering twenty-five bushels of corn from a patch of twenty-five acres. He often became discouraged and was tempted to leave, but stuck to it, and has made a success, taking a foremost place among the successful and substantial farmers of Keya Paha county.

Mr. Jones has been a member of the school board for a number of years, also held the office of road overseer for some time. He is a Republican in politics.

F. A. CUSCADEN.

The gentleman above named is a native of Chillicothe, Ohio, born on September 11, 1880. His father, John A. Cuscaden, was born in New York city in 1838, of Irish parents, soon after they landed in America from the old country. John A. Cuscaden married Alice Jones, a native of Ross county, Ohio, who was emigrated from Virginia in the early part of the century from the subject of this sketch was born. In his younger years his father was a fisherman and an experient oarsman. They finally settled in Cincinnati, Ohio, in the late fifties, where he learned the trade of mechanical engineer. When the trade broke out in the country's war he answered his call by enlisting in the One Hundred and Seventy-fifth Ohio during the Volunteer Infantry and saw service during the struggle, suffering hard-ship and soon after his honorable discharge from the army he entered the Lebanon College, from which he was graduated in 1872. He was elected principal of the (Ohio) schools and taught there up to 1878. He was married to Miss Alice Jones, of Chillicothe, Ohio, who died after one short year of happy life. After sincerely mourning her death Mr. Cuscaden was married to Miss Gert

Two children were born of this union—Alex, born in 1886, and Thomas S., in 1893. The father continued his profession as a teacher in Omaha up to 1890, when he went into the Omaha postoffice, where he has since remained. In business ventures outside of his profession he was uniformly successful, owning considerable property in Omaha, as well as in central Texas.

Fred A. Cuscaden, the subject of this personal history, came to Omaha with his parents in 1884. He attended the public schools and graduated from the Omaha high school in 1898. His brother Robert left for Europe this year (1898) to complete his studies in music, and the chance was offered Fred to accompany him, but the profession of law called him to further study, and he entered the University of Nebraska as a law student in 1898, graduating from there in 1902 with the degree of Bachelor of Law.

In June of the latter year he married Miss Maude Macomber, second daughter of Judge and Mrs. J. H. Macomber, of Omaha, and to this union was born one child, Gertrude, in 1903.

It was while in the office of Judge Macomber that the opportunity was presented to him by the latter, who was a director in the Union National Bank of Omaha, of learning the banking business, and he became actively engaged in this business shortly afterward, continuing up to 1905, when he organized the Erickson State Bank and resigned his position with the Union National Bank to take entire charge of the new institution. At the opening of this bank the business of banking in Wheeler county was looked upon more as a speculation by a large number of people, and not a few doubted the wisdom of opening up in a country where no one had previously ventured. However, the new bank was started and prospered from the first, more than realizing the fondest hopes of the organizer.

Wheeler county, along with the rest of the state, has responded nicely to the call of good times, and as a county it has a much larger sphere to fill than is generally recognized. Its early builders have great faith in its ability, and their broad and fertile farms and ranches attest the statement that it is the place for the farmers of moderate means, which class is rapidly filling up the few remaining homesteads and buying up the cheap pieces of land. Farming and grazing of cattle form two of

RESIDENCE OF JOHN HENRY MEYER,
Keith County, Nebraska.

Wheeler county's most important lines of business. The country is especially adapted to dairying, and this industry brings a snug income into many homes yearly. As a county it is putting its best foot forward, and its soil is awakening to the touch of the practical farmer who can make two blades of grass grow where his predecessor failed on one. Mr. Cuscaden occupies a beautiful home in Erickson and is one of the leading citizens of his town.

JOHN H. MEYER.

John H. Meyer was born on a farm in the village of Oerdinghausen, Kries Hoya, province of Hanover, Germany, June 27, 1866. His parents were Frederick and Dora (Klusmann) Meyer. Our subject remained in his native land until he was about twenty-five years of age, serving three years in the German army. In 1891 he came to America, sailing October 22d from Bremen Haven on the Neurenberg and after a voyage of seventeen days landed in Baltimore. He at once came west and on November 10th joined a brother in Brule, Keith county, where he was employed in railroad work until 1895, when he came to his present farm in section 14, township 13, range 38.

On July 18, 1895, Mr. Meyer was married to a widow, Mrs. Holscher, who died in January, 1897, leaving three children—Frank, Fred and Margaretta Holscher. Mr. Meyer was again married September 27, 1900, to Miss Martha Tuenge. They have four children—Mary, Anna, Sophia and Henry.

Mr. Meyer settled on partly improved land and has labored constantly to make his farm one of the best in the neighborhood. He has done his work in a masterly manner and now has a fine ranch of eight hundred and eighty acres, with a large house, extensive barns and outbuildings, fences, orchards and groves. Since coming here Mr. Meyer has done his share toward the material development of his locality. In politics our subject affiliates with the Democratic party. He is a member of the Lutheran church.

A fine view of Mr. Meyer's substantial home and extensive buildings is to be found on another page of our work.

HERMAN A. PETERS.

Herman A. Peters, formerly one of the large ranchmen of Sheridan county, now resides in his comfortable home in Hay Springs, Nebraska, where he is numbered among the prominent and worthy citizens of this locality.

Mr. Peters was born in Edwards county, Illinois, in 1866. His father, John L. Peters, of German birth, was a farmer and his family of five children grew up in Illinois. Our subject was the fourth in order of birth, and was left an orphan at an early age, being obliged to get out and hustle for himself when he was six years old. When he reached the age of eighteen he began working out on farms near Hartington, Nebraska, and continued in this until the year 1884. During this time he had spent nine months attending a business college at Burlington, Iowa, then to Hartington, where he again worked out by the day, and the following year came to Hay Springs, taking a pre-emption seven miles southwest of the town. He proved up on this, having lived in a dugout for some time. He afterwards moved to the town of Hay Springs, where he was marshal of the village for three or four years. In 1889 he went into the hardware business and ran a store a short time, then sold out and began shipping horses in partnership with H. J. Simpson, under the firm name of Simpson & Peters, also loaning money, and was in this enterprise for two years. During the Indian war of the winter of 1890-91 they had a contract on Pine Ridge Agency for sixty days. They had forty-four teams there, and shod all the government horses. In 1901 he returned to Hay Springs and formed a partnership with C. D. Byram, under the firm name of Byram & Peters, and during the spring of 1892 the concern sold over thirty thousand dollars' worth of horses here. They also ran a livery barn, and in 1894 Mr. Peters bought out his partner and continued the business alone. The main part of the barn was sixty-four by sixty feet, with a shed twenty-six by sixty feet, and office sixteen by thirty-two, and he did a large business, but became tired of the business and soon sold out. In 1896 he built nine miles of irrigation ditch south of the Niobrara river, and there purchased land and opened a large ranch. Since that time he has been engaged principally in sheep, horse and hog raising, using his ranch of twenty-three thousand acres for this purpose, it being the largest ranch of deeded land in the county. He has a fine set of buildings on his place, has five hundred acres under irrigation, many forest and small fruit trees, three hundred acres of alfalfa and raises immense crops of grain—this year his yield amounted to ten thousand bushels of small grain and twelve thousand bushels of corn.

He runs eight thousand head of sheep, five mules, one hundred and twenty-five horses, eight hundred head of hogs and of cattle. Since putting the irrigation he has a lake of one hundred acres, deep, which is within forty rods from ranch. He has seventeen miles of water on the farm, five windmills and pumps, cuts one thousand tons of hay each year, and has the place improved with three sets of good buildings, all of construction, one of the new barns just being sixty by seventy-six feet. The ranch is situated in Sheridan, Dawes and Crook counties, and is owned by the Peters & Williams Company. H. A. Peters owns a controlling interest. Mr. Peters has a fine residence in Hay Springs, moved in 1904. This house is strictly modern, fitted up with every convenience, including furnace heat, water works, etc., and is one of the finest in the town.

Mr. Peters was married on February 24, 1897, to Miss Alice R. Rhodes, daughter of George H. Rhodes, who was cashier of the Bank of Hay Springs, now deceased. Mr. Rhodes was the organizer of that bank, established in 1886, and was the first bank in town. He died in the year that his daughter married our subject.

Mr. Peters is counted among the earliest settlers of this section, and has taken an active part in the history of the region from its beginning. During the early days he drove stage from Chadron into the Black Hills, and his first postoffice was at Bordeaux. He is a strong Republican and has attended many county and state conventions as delegate.

PETER N. SUMMERS.

Among the representative ranchmen and farmers of Sioux county who have aided materially in its advancement and development, a prominent place is accorded Peter N. Summers, who resides on his well improved estate in section 23, township 33, range 57. He is a gentleman of energetic character, and well merits his success and high standing.

Mr. Summers is a native of Illinois, born in Cass county in 1859. His father, Charles Summers, followed farming in Illinois and is now engaged in farming in the southeastern part of Nebraska. He married Sarah Alexander, of Illinois.

While our subject was a boy his parents lived in Iowa, later Missouri, and finally settled in Nebraska, and when he became seventy-five years of age he started out for himself, following farming in the southeastern part of this state, remaining there up to 1887. He then came to western Nebraska, locating near the South Dakota line in Fall River county, where he spent two years. That place was thirty-five miles from Harrison, and sixty-five miles from Crawford, and there he engaged in the ranching business, working as a cowboy, "punching" cows and horses for about fifteen years. He followed the regular frontier life, camping out on the plains many nights, scarcely knowing what it was to sleep in a house, and went through all the hard times known to the early settler in that region.

For a number of years Mr. Summers was located at Converse, Wyoming, engaged in the horse business, and made quite a little money in that line of work. He finally returned to Nebraska, purchasing his present ranch, which is situated at the head of Jim creek, close to Pine Ridge. The place contains fourteen hundred and eighty acres, all fenced, and supplied with good buildings. He cultivates about fifty acres and has some irrigated land, also plenty of hay and pasture land, running quite a large herd of cattle.

In 1884 Mr. Summers was united in marriage to Miss Mary Easley, of Fremont county, Iowa, whose father was an old settler in that state.

Mr. Summers has always taken an active part in affairs of his locality, and is an active public-spirited citizen. He is a typical Nebraskan, for while he has lived most of his life in the west, spending many years in South Dakota and Wyoming, he was always thoroughly familiar with Nebraska and took an interest in her welfare from the earliest years of settlement, having traveled over nearly every part of the state as a cowboy.

PRINCE C. G. LAING.

Prince C. G. Laing, an old settler of that part of Cheyenne that is now Morrill county, Nebraska, has done his full share toward the development and improvement of its fertile lands. He is owner of a valuable estate in King precinct, and is a prosperous and successful citizen who has the esteem and respect of all who know him.

Mr. Laing was born in Fremont county, Iowa, December 25, 1861, and while yet an infant his parents moved to Nebraska, locating south of Omaha, then to Sarpy county, Mr. Laing remaining in the latter vicinity until the spring of 1887, at which time he came to Cheyenne county, homesteading in section 1, township 19, range 49. He also took a tree claim in section 2, and at present has the home ranch in the northeast quarter of section 9, township 19, range 49, which was acquired by purchase, and consists of one hundred and sixty acres, about eighty of it being under irrigation. In all he has about four hundred and eighty-six acres of fine land. He has passed through all the early Nebraska times, meeting with many discouragements and often failure of crops, but stuck to his farm through all hardships, and has been well repaid for his endeavors. He has a well improved property, cultivating about twenty-five acres, and runs twenty cattle and the same number of horses.

Mr. Laing was married to Miss Alice M. Covalt on March 11, 1891. Mrs. Laing is a native of Nebraska, her parents, John and Charlotte (Keeler) Covalt, now residing in Cheyenne county, while Mr. Laing's parents, Charles G. and Louisa (Roberts) Laing, still live in Sarpy county. Five children have been born to this worthy couple, named as follows: Victor K., John A., Charlotte, Lena and Kenneth C., all living at home. They have a pleasant home, surrounded by a large circle of acquaintances. Mr. Laing is president of Brown Creek Irrigation Canal Company, and is also moderator of school district No. 3, taking an active part in all local affairs. In political views he is a Democrat.

MICHAEL BUTLER.

In driving through the country districts of Box Butte county, many well kept, highly cultivated and well improved farms are in evidence, and none are more carefully conducted or furnish a better opportunity for gaining a good livelihood than that owned by the subject of this review. Mr. Butler has spent the past twenty years of his career on this ranch, and has become well versed in all the modern methods of operating a model farm, and acquired a wide knowledge by experience and observation, to which his success is in a large measure due.

Mr. Butler was born in Milbury, Massachusetts, in 1855, and is of Irish-Scotch descent. His father was born in Ireland, learned the blacksmith's trade as a young man and followed that occupation in his native land for many years, then came to the United States, and worked at his trade a number of years. He came west in 1878 and farmed in Platte county, Nebraska. Our subject was reared in Massachusetts, and lived there until he was of age, working on the railroad as a young man, and after coming west, was a trainman in Wyoming, Dakota, Montana, Colorado and Nebraska. In 1885 Mr. Butler came to Nebraska, settling on a claim in Box Butte county, and was one of the earliest settlers in that part of the country. When he landed here he had some money which he had saved from his railroad work, and had a better start than most of the emigrants to this region. His first location was in the vicinity of Valentine, which was his postoffice and nearest supply point, but soon afterwards Chadron and Hay Springs were started and grew rapidly into thriving towns. He did his share in building the railroads through the region, and remembers well every movement toward the development and growth of the locality in which he took an active part.

Our subject has accumulated a nice property. He has lived on his ranch for the past fifteen years, and during that time has built it up in good shape, adding every improvement necessary in the way of buildings, fences, machinery, etc. He owns in all one thousand nine hundred and sixty acres, all deeded land, and, besides this, leases a large tract for ranching purposes. He has erected a handsome house, forty by twenty, fitted with many modern conveniences, and has another good frame house on the place. He keeps one hundred and fifty head of cattle and twenty horses. Mr. Butler raises some crops, and during the year 1907 had a crop of oats which showed a yield of sixty bushels to the acre, corn twenty-five, and potatoes one hundred bushels per acre.

In 1883 Mr. Butler was married to Miss Elizabeth Weber. Her father was of German descent, born in that country, a farmer by occupation and who settled in America during his youth. Mr. and Mrs. Butler have one child, a daughter, named Mary.

In political sentiment, Mr. Butler is a Republican.

CHARLES S. ANDERSON.

In compiling a list of the names of those who have spent many years of their life in western Nebraska, we mention that of Charles S. Anderson, who was born and reared in this state, and is a typical representative of his native soil. He has seen all the changes which have taken place here since its earliest settle- ment, and has been a part of its growth and development. Mr. Anderson is now a prosper- ous and successful young farmer, residing on section 10, township 14, range 51, in Brownson precinct.

Our subject was born in section 9, town- ship 14, range 51, Cheyenne county, on Sep- tember 15, 1874, and was reared and educated in his native township, attending the country schools. He was the second white child born in the county. His father and mother reside on the old home place, a farm adjoining his own. In 1902 Mr. Anderson left home and started farming on his own account, and is now owner of one hundred and sixty acres, which was originally a timber claim belong- ing to his father, John Anderson. He farms about fifty acres and keeps a small herd of cattle and stock for his own use. He is en- gaged in the dairy business, shipping the cream of a herd of twelve to fifteen cows. He is extensively engaged in poultry raising and has annually a large drove of hogs. Mr. Anderson's farm is admirably situated on Lodgepole creek, which furnishes a splendid supply of water for irrigating and farming purposes; twenty-five acres are already supplied with ditches and the entire farm, excepting a few acres in the southwest corner, may be subjected to irrigation. Since coming to this place he has had some discouragements in the way of loss of crops by hail and drouths, but has been generally successfully and is well satisfied with the result of his efforts, now enjoying a pleasant home and in a fair way to be the possessor of a competence for his declining years. A view of the home and sur- rounding buildings is to be found on another page of our work.

Mr. Anderson was united in marriage June 10, 1903, to Miss Effie Yoakum, the wedding taking place at Kimball, Nebraska. Mrs. An- derson is a native of Johnson county, Iowa, a daughter of David A. and Mary E. (Oldaker) Yoakum. Three children have been born as a result of this union, namely: Susie Lucile, Lowell Rupert and Ella Adelaide.

In national politics, Mr. Anderson is a Democrat, but in local issues entirely independent. He was reared in the Lutheran church. Fraternally, he affiliates with the Odd Fellows and Royal Highlanders, while Mrs. Anderson is a member of the Degree of Honor of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

EMERY H. HIGGINS.

Emery H. Higgins, representative of one of the oldest settlers in Nebraska, is a resident of section 12, township 23, range 29, Thomas county, Nebraska, and is one of the best known of the pioneers in Furnas county, where his parents settled in 1884. He has been identified with the upbuilding of the western part of the state for many years, and owns a valuable estate in Thomas county.

Mr. Higgins was born in Nemaha county, Nebraska, October 29, 1868, and his entire life has been spent in his native state, with the exception of short trips to different states. His father, Jonathan, came here in 1857, from Grayson county, Virginia. He freighted a good deal after coming to this state, from Nebraska City to Denver, Colorado, with ox teams, before the Union Pacific railroad was built through the country. He first settled in Nuckolls county, later removed to Furnas county, where he spent many years. He married Mary Good, a native of Indiana, who came west with her parents about 1860, and she was reared and educated in Nebraska and died in Nuckolls county, in 1881. The father is seventy-two years old and now resides in North Platte city.

Our subject received his education in the country schools in Furnas county, and from the time he was eight years of age worked on a farm, doing all kinds of hard work assisting his father in the development of a good home and farm. In 1898 he started for himself, purchasing land there and did very well, succeeded in building up a good home, remaining there up to 1904, when he came to Thomas county. Here he has a ranch of three hundred and twenty acres of deeded land, besides controlling six hundred and forty acres situated three miles west of Thedford on Middle Loup river. He has all of the land well improved, engages in stock and grain raising, and has made considerable money in his ventures.

While living in Furnas county our subject opened a place of one hundred and seventy acres in the Republican Valley east of Cambridge, making of it one of the best improved in the vicinity, and there he was married in 1904, to Jennie E. Carr, a widow, and most estimable lady of very charming personality, and they have two children, Clinton, aged nine years, and Eula, aged seven years. They have a pleasant home and are popular in neighborhood affairs. Mr. Higgins takes an active part in local government.

HENRY CRONBERG.

Among the prosperous younger members of the farming community of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, we mention the name of Henry Cronberg, born in Denmark, January 15, 1877, and who spent his boyhood years in that country, receiving a common school education, and early learning to do all kinds of hard labor. The whole family came to the United States about the year 1885, sailing from Hamburg to New York in the Bohemia. Settling in Nebraska, they took up a homestead in Brownson precinct, Cheyenne county, and began to develop a farm and build up a home on section 6, township 14, range 52. They went through the usual experiences of the pioneers of this region, having a hard time to make a living and suffering many discouragements, but managed to keep their farm through all their hardships. In 1889 occurred the death of the father, Hans Cronberg. The mother, who was Hannah Rasmussen, resides in Wyoming, where she has four sons and one daughter living, all prosperous and contented.

Our subject remained in Nebraska on the old home place, working faithfully, and has met with deserved success. He is now the owner of a good farm consisting of three hundred and twenty acres, lying along the banks of Lodgepole creek, the whole place being well improved with good stone buildings, fences and groves, and has about fifty acres under cultivation. Mr. Cronberg is quite extensively engaged in cattle raising, running about two hundred head with quite a number of good horses. Mr. Cronberg has an enviable reputation as a progressive ranchman, and is well-known throughout the county as a capable business man possessing superior attainments as a gentleman and scholar, esteemed by all who know him. Though a bachelor, he takes a commendable interest in local affairs, voting an Independent ticket. A view of his substantial residence and farm buildings is to be found on another page of this work.

R. M. SWINDELL.

R. M. Swindell, residing in Spring Grove township, is one of the prominent citizens and successful men of this section of Nebraska, and for many years past has been engaged in ranching and farming in Harlan county. He is a man of integrity and true worth, and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

Mr. Swindell is a native of North Carolina, where his family for generations has lived. His grandfather, John Swindell, was a sailor for many years, originally from England. In 1859 our subject's father, L. H. Swindell, left his native state and came west with his family. His wife was Miss Nancy Petty, also born in North Carolina, and is now living in Henry county, Indiana, active and enjoying a splendid health at the advanced age of eighty-five years. Her family were old settlers in North Carolina. Our subject's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Polk, lived to be over ninety years old, and all of her brothers lived to a great age. The Polks were relatives of James K. Polk, once president of the United States.

In 1870 Mr. Swindell came to Nebraska, from Henry county, Indiana, where he had lived for some years, and had farmed in Cass county up to 1885. Two brothers also came west with him, Frank settling in Kansas and was killed at Lincoln, Missouri, in 1890. The other brother, W. R., lives in Harlan county. On locating in Harlan county, Mr. Swindell bought one hundred acres of land and soon after added another quarter section to it, and farmed it that for a time. Since then land has advanced in value the proprietor of over four thousand acres, all in this county. He raises stock and also does farming, feeding all his crop on his ranch. He keeps about two hundred head of cattle on hand all the time and sells large numbers each year. He also breeds horses for the market, and sells from one hundred to one hundred and fifty each year. He is the owner of Colwell, a thoroughbred stallion, and owns other very fine animals. Mr. Swindell has been locating here, and much prefers this as a stock and grain raising state to the eastern sections, and as he has had experience in different sections he knows whereof he speaks. His entire attention is given to his ranching and farming interests, and it is no light task to personally manage his extensive possessions. He has some of his farms rented, and on each one is a comfortable and commodious tenant house and build-

Our subject was married in 1877, to Miss Mary Philby, of Iowa, and they are the parents of the following children: L. L., M. R., Willie, Flora, now Mrs. Baxter, and Ella, wife of C. D. Dexter, the two latter residing in Spring Grove township near their parents' home.

Mr. Swindell has always taken an active part in local affairs and is one of the leading men of his section. He is interested in educational affairs, and has served on the school board for many years, and as town treasurer, besides holding numerous local offices. In political views he is a Republican. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and Masonic lodges at Oxford.

G. A. HANSON.

G. A. Hanson, an old resident of Phelps county, Nebraska, who has watched the growth of this locality for the past many years, is an enthusiastic admirer of the region, considering it one of the very best farming countries known, with unlimited capacities under improved methods and more careful tilling of the soil than the pioneers were able to give it. Mr. Hanson is a resident of Loomis, where he is engaged in the agricultural implement business. He is also owner of a fine farm consisting of four hundred and eighty acres near the town of Loomis, most of which he rents out.

Mr. Hanson started in business at Holdrege in 1892, having settled in the county in 1879, coming to the locality as representative of the Chicago Broom Company as buyer for that concern, and he shipped about one hundred cars per year from this territory. He continued in the employ of that company up to 1888, then started in business on his own account, establishing a house in Loomis at first and later moving to Holdrege, remaining in the latter town up to 1895, then came back to Loomis, and has since made this his permanent residence. Here he has done exceedingly well, building up a good business, and enjoys the confidence of the entire community.

At different times Mr. Hanson has been a large landowner, purchasing his first quarter section in 1882, situated near the town of Loomis, then scarcely more than a village. During later years he has built on this land a fine residence, and now occupies it as a home. He is a man of energetic habits, of genial disposition, greatly admired by all with whom he has to do either in a business or social way. He takes a leading part in public matters in his community, has served as justice of the peace, and during the past several years has been a member of the town school board, acting as treasurer for a considerable time.

Mr. Hanson is a native of Sweden, coming to America at the age of fourteen years. He was married in 1893, to Miss Abbie Barnum, who is a daughter of Edwin Barnum, the latter well known in this vicinity, having held the position of postmaster at Loomis for eight years. He is now a resident of St. Paul, Minnesota. The Barnum family originally came from New York state, and are of the same stock as the celebrated P. T. Barnum, of world-wide fame as the originator of the modern circus.

C. W. TILTON.

C. W. Tilton, known throughout Rock county as one of the prominent citizens of that locality, is a prosperous and energetic farmer who has built up a valuable property there. He has resided on his present homestead for many years, and during that time by good management and industry has become one of the substantial agriculturists of his locality.

Mr. Tilton was born in Illinois in 1852, and was raised on a farm. His father, James M. Tilton, was of German descent, coming to Nebraska in 1884 and settling in Rock county on death occurring on the homestead in 1886. He a farm which he improved in good shape, his death occurring on the homestead in 1866. He married Susan Hardsty, also of German-American stock, whose parents were pioneers in Ohio. Our subject followed farm work as a boy, and after growing to manhood took a homestead on section 7, township 29, range 19, which is his present home. He is one of the few residents of this region who has not passed through sod house experience, although he has seen some pretty hard times and has suffered privations at different times during the early years. From 1893 to 1895, inclusive, he had the misfortune to lose three crops in succession, but he never once had any notion of giving up the struggle as he was sure that the country offered excellent opportunities to those who were willing to work and wait. Since better times have come he has prospered and is now owner of a fine quarter section, all well improved. He cultivates forty acres and has the same amount in pasture for quite a herd of stock which he keeps each year.

Several years ago Mr. Tilton planted three acres of trees, including apples, cherries and pears, which are now in fine bearing condition. He also has some splendid cedars on the ranch.

Mr. Tilton is unmarried. He devotes his entire time to the improvement of his farm, and has also taken an active part in local affairs doing all in his power to further the best interests of his locality. He is a Republican, but has never sought office.

PETE A. BOWER.

Pete A. Bower, a worthy and highly respected citizen of Ainsworth, is a pioneer settler of this section of Nebraska, and has done his full share toward the development of its commercial resources. Mr. Bower is a homesteader in these parts, and while he has done but little farming during recent years the greater part of his time has been devoted to the following of his trade, that of builder and contractor, and he has erected a large number of the residences in and around the town of Ainsworth.

Mr. Bower was born in Pennsylvania in 1852, and was reared on a farm there. His father, Thomas Bower, was of Pennsylvania Dutch descent, and he followed farming in that state up to 1884, then came with his entire family to Brown county, Nebraska. During his boyhood, Pete spent most of his time working in the iron foundries, following it up to 1879, when he came west and settled in Iowa, working as a farm hand for five years. He then came to Ainsworth and took a pre-emption, on which he proved up in due time, and when times were slack on his farm did carpenter work in Ainsworth and the surrounding country. In this way he was able to improve his farm, erected good buildings, and managed to make a nice income. He is thrifty and a good manager, and by hard labor and persistent efforts has gained a comfortable property and the respect and esteem of the entire community.

Shortly before leaving Pennsylvania Mr. Bower was married to Miss Leah Hoffman, also born and reared in that state. To them have been born the following children: Lydia, born in Iowa; Fred, Thomas, Pete, Amy and Oliver, the last mentioned five having been born in Ainsworth, and all educated in the public schools here. They are a very congenial family, and enjoy the friendship of a host of people.

W. W. AND GEORGE R. WERTZ.

The above named gentlemen, under the firm name of Wertz Brothers, dealers in cattle and hogs in Nebraska, and joint owners of a fine ranch consisting of one thousand one hundred and twenty acres situated on the Prairie Dog river, five miles southwest of Alma.

The Wertz brothers came from Ogle county, Illinois, where they were reared and where the father was a well known farmer. They came to this section and began in the stock feeding business in 1901, rapidly accumulating property and constantly widening their operations until at times they had a herd of two thousand cattle and the same number of hogs on the ranch. All of their cattle were brought from the West Slope and from the Sand Hills, this state, and nearly every year they had five thousand head which they purchased and fed, marketing them on the St. Joseph, Omaha and Chicago markets, being among the largest shippers in the west. The location of their ranch is the best in the world for the business, as there is no spot known where the climate is so favorable. Also, this region has never been swept by the severe storms which are so frequent west of McCook and east of Superior.

Prior to locating in Harlan county, Messrs. Wertz had been residents of Richardson county for about fifteen years, being engaged in raising and feeding business all of that time. They have exhibited specimens of their stock at different fairs and exposition in the county, and on one occasion had a car of fat yearling steers and heifers at the Interstate Stock Show at St. Joseph, Missouri, which took six first prizes and one second. These cattle were fattened at Alma and secured sweet prize at the Royal Stock Show which was held at Kansas City in 1906, two weeks after the fair at St. Joe.

Messrs. Wertz claim that the climate and the freedom from the mud and dampness, which is the chief drawback to the proper development of the cattle in that state. The position to know whereof they speak regarding these matters, as they have had considerable experience in both sections, and have been successful in a marked degree since locating here. They are classed among the wealthy and influential residents of their locality, and are classed among the largest handlers of cattle in Nebraska. Both are interesting companions and genial good fellows, and are well liked by all with whom they come in contact.

Both are members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Alma.

JOHN O. BELDEN.

John O. Belden, an industrious younger member of the farming community of Court House Rock precinct, Morrill township, formerly of Cheyenne county, has a fine estate on section 30. He has been engaged in agriculture and stock raising but comparatively a few years, but in that time has met with decided success, and is classed among the successful and progressive men of the locality. A view of his residence is presented on another page.

Mr. Belden was born in Cloud county, Kansas, April 6, 1878, and is a son of W. W. Belden, whose sketch appears in this volume on another page. He came to Cheyenne county with his parents in 1886 and grew up on the home ranch. After having an interest in ranch property on the tableland and elsewhere in the county, he bought his present homestead in 1907, situated south of the famous Court House Rock. One hundred and fifty acres of the land are under irrigation, the ditch and Pumpkin Seed creek passing through the ranch. It contains in all four hundred and eighty acres of good land. He has seventy acres cultivated, raising corn and other small grain, and also is engaged quite extensively in the stock business, running one hundred and seventy-five head of cattle and fifty horses. He has his farm improved with good buildings, considerable timber, and plenty of good water the year round, and everything bespeaks the utmost care and careful management in its operation.

On November 26, 1902, Mr. Belden married Miss Lovina Judd, and to them have been born four children, namely: Wallace, Mary, Lillie and Amanda. They have a pleasant and comfortable home and are highly esteemed as worthy citizens throughout the community in which they live. Mr. Belden holds the office of treasurer of the Court House Rock Ditch Company, and is also moderator of school district No. 7. He is a Republican in politics and a charter member of Baird Camp, No. 5141, Modern Woodmen of America.

FREDERICK J. HARR.

The gentleman above named is one of the prominent old timers of western Nebraska, who has spent the past twenty-five years of his career in that region, and during that time has become one of the leading citizens, watching the growth and development of the locality from almost its earliest stages of settlement. He has passed through all the good, bad and indifferent times so familiar to the pioneers of the state, and has come through it all with great success, now being proprietor of a fine estate in Davison precinct, Cheyenne county, where he occupies a handsome residence. He and his family are among the well-liked and influential residents.

Fred J. Harr was born in LaCrosse county, Wisconsin, on April 8, 1862. There he was reared and educated, his parents living on a farm. Here he learned to do all kinds of hard farm work, thus fitting himself for his later labors in this line. When he was twenty-two years of age, he left home and came to Nebraska, locating near Lincoln, securing employment on ranches and spent two years in that vicinity as a cowboy, becoming familiar with all the surrounding country in following that work.

In the spring of 1886 he came to Cheyenne county and filed on a homestead in section 8, township 16, range 50, and since then he has added to his original one hundred and sixty acres until he now owns five hundred and sixty acres of deeded land and controls one whole section of school land. He has one hundred and twenty-five acres under cultivation, on which he raises fine crops, being progressive and up-to-date in his farming methods. For the past few years Mr. Harr has been government crop reporter for this section of the country. He has his ranch fitted up with good substantial buildings of all kinds, and every necessary improvement for its successful operation, engaging extensively in the stock raising business. He runs about seventy-five head of cattle annually and quite a bunch of horses. A view of the remodeled dwelling, with the large stone barn and other buildings, is to be found on another page in this volume.

Mr. Harr was one of a family of twelve children, all of whom are living at the present time. The father, John G. Harr, died in Wisconsin, in 1904, but the mother, Caroline Slaver, in maidenhood, still resides in that state.

In April, 1887, our subject was married in Cheyenne county to Miss Hattie Hill, a native of Nebraska, where her parents, William and Arabella (Seman) Hill, were pioneers. The mother lives near Seattle, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Harr have a family of five children, named as follows: Ruth A., Florence A., Eva M., Mary A. and Vera F.

Mr. Harr takes a deep interest in state, county and local affairs, and is treasurer of school district No. 61. In politics, he is an independent voter. He affiliates with the Maccabees at Sidney, and, with the family, is a member of the Methodist church.

FRANK A. STEVENSON.

Frank A. Stevenson, for many years a successful stockman and agriculturist of Brown county, is the owner of a splendid estate consisting of two thousand seven hundred and sixty acres, conveniently located near the town of Ainsworth. He was one of the earliest settlers of this locality, is widely known and enjoys an enviable reputation as an enterprising and public spirited citizen.

Mr. Stevenson was born in Illinois in 1862, and was reared on a farm there. His father was of Irish descent and his mother a French Canadian. There were five children in the family, Frank being the second, and all were educated in the common schools of Harrison county, Iowa, where they settled during the early days. At the age of sixteen our subject left home and secured employment on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, spending five years in the shops of that company. In 1883 he came to Nebraska and filed on a homestead on section 31, township 32, range 21, put up a shanty and began to build up a farm. He met with fair success for several years, but during the drouth periods was unable to raise any crops, and lost nearly everything he had made up to that time. Conditions were very disheartening, and he had about decided to abandon his farm, but owing to certain circumstances delayed moving from time to time. Things began to brighten up considerably and prospects appeared more favorable, so he took a fresh start and determined to remain and make another trial. His crops were better than they had ever been and he was soon able to put up better buildings and also purchased land adjoining his homestead and increased his herd of stock constantly. He is now owner of eight hundred acres of cultivated land, and the balance of his ranch is used for hay and pasture for his stock, having at present two hundred and fifty head of high grade Hereford cattle on the ranch. He is considered one of the largest ranchmen in the vicinity, and is a thorough judge of his business, practical and up-to-date in operating his extensive ranching interests. He has erected a splendid set of buildings and has every improvement in the way of wells, windmills, fences, corrals, etc. All of this he has acquired by strict attention to duty, no capital to start with, and he has his success and the reputation of the leading citizens and one of the best men of the region.

Mr. Stevenson was married in 1884, to Miss Eliza Taylor, who is a native of Missouri and a daughter of Samuel Taylor, whose life history may be found in this volume on another page. Three children have come to bless our subject's home, namely: Pearl, George and Taylor, all bright and intelligent young people and well liked by all. They have a pleasant home and a host of friends in their community.

During our subject's early residence in this section he gave freely many dollars to help develop the community, and has been one of the foremost citizens in establishing and building up the schools and promoting the general welfare. He has also taken a leading part in local and county politics and has served in different capacities, holding the office of precinct assessor, besides other offices of trust in his township.

JEFF PATTERSON

For nearly a quarter of a century the gentleman above named has been a resident of Keya Paha county, and during that time he has closely identified himself with the history of the region. He has succeeded in building up a fine farm in section 21, township 33, range 22, and incidentally gained an enviable reputation as a citizen. Personally he is a man of untiring energy, honest principles and good business management, and is one of the well-to-do men of his locality.

Mr. Patterson is a native of Tennessee, born in 1853. His father, William Patterson, was of American stock and one of the pioneer settlers of Tennessee and later of the pioneer state in Iowa, enlisting in that company C, Thirty-sixth Iowa Infantry, and served until the close of the war. He returned after his discharge from the army, and followed farming here in 1867. He moved with his family into Missouri in 1867, where Jeff was educated. About 1888 they came to Keya Paha county and lived here up to the time of his death, which occurred several years ago. Mrs. Patterson's maiden name was Betsy Jones, also of American stock, and she died when Jeff was a small boy, leaving three children, of whom our subject was the second. He started to make his own way in the world at the early age of fourteen years, following farm work in Iowa and later in Missouri, also spent some time in Ohio, working as he had well merits of being one of the wealthiest. In 1884, to Miss Eliza Taylor, whose life history may be found in this volume on another page. Three children have come to bless our subject's home, namely: Pearl, George and Taylor, all bright and intelligent young people and well liked by all. They have a pleasant home and a host of friends in their community. During our subject's early residence in this section he gave freely many dollars to help develop the community, and has been one of the foremost citizens in establishing and building up the schools and promoting the general welfare. He has also taken a leading part in local and county politics and has served in different capacities, holding the office of precinct assessor, besides other offices of trust in his township.

there for one man for six years. In 1883 he came into Keya Paha county and filed on a homestead, and still occupies this tract as his home ranch. There was considerable natural timber on the land, and in addition to this Mr. Patterson has planted a large number of shade and fruit trees and now has one of the finest groves and orchards in the vicinity. His first dwelling was a building made of sod, logs and rough lumber, and he occupied it for eighteen years, then erected a fine frame residence.

During his early residence in this region Mr. Patterson passed through some hard times, suffering crop losses, etc., but never gave up hoping for better times, and he has been well repaid for his efforts in the accumulating of a nice property consisting of four hundred and eighty acres of good land, all lying along Cub creek. About one hundred and fifty acres are cultivated and the balance is used for hay and pasture for his stock, having a small herd of cattle and quite a bunch of horses and mules, making a specialty of breeding and raising the latter. He also aims to feed about a carload of hogs each year, which he finds a ready market for at Ainsworth.

In 1887 Mr. Patterson was married to Miss Geneva Dale, of Nesbit, Nebraska, who settled in this state with her parents when a young girl. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson are the parents of the following children: Ona F., Eva C., Lulu V., June M., William D. and Ezra Keith, all of whom are living at home at the present time.

Mr. Patterson is a Populist, and while he has never taken an active part in politics or held office, he is without doubt one of the leading old settlers of the country, and has done his share in bringing about the present prosperity enjoyed in the region.

JOHN STEVENS, JR.

John Stevens, Jr., of Arapahoe, Furnas county, Nebraska, is a son of Hon. John Stevens, who is a prominent resident of the same place and a native of Virginia.

Our subject is a widely known attorney with a practice extending over the entire western country tributary to Arapahoe, having established his office here in 1896, and in that time had become very successful in his profession. He is a native of Polk county, Iowa, where his father was a pioneer settler, and also was one of the first to settle in this part of Nebraska, coming here in 1878 and homesteading in Arapahoe precinct, later removing to Edison. He was one of the organizers of the Populist party in this county and was elected by his party to represent this district in the state legislature, serving during the years 1890 and 1892, inclusive, and is still active in supporting the principles of his party. Prior to his settlement here Mr. Stevens, Sr., was also an active worker in Polk county, Iowa, for the Greenback party. He is a prominent veteran of the Civil war, having been a member of Company A, Tenth Iowa Infantry, who served his country faithfully and well for three years, taking part in many battles, in the Army of the Cumberland, at Fort Donelson, Pittsburg Landing, and in the different sieges of Vicksburg. He is an interesting raconteur and relates many interesting adventures of his life as a soldier.

John Stevens, Jr., is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, and held the office of reporter for two terms, serving under the fourteenth judicial district. In 1896 he was elected county attorney and served one term. He has been unusually successful in his career as an attorney, gaining a large and lucrative patronage throughout the country. He is a brilliant orator and has been thoroughly fitted for his life work by a thorough education derived by years of study.

LOU WHEELER.

For the past twenty-five years the gentleman above named has made western Nebraska his home, and during the greater part of that time has been intimately associated with the agricultural and commercial interests of Brown county, where he has acquired a comfortable property by dint of industry and honesty. He has a nice home and owns a well cultivated farm of eighty acres located on section 2, township 30, range 21, and is one of the substantial and highly esteemed citizens of his community.

Mr. Wheeler was born in Wisconsin in 1868 and reared on a farm. He is a son of J. T. Wheeler, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this book, and is the sixth child in a family of thirteen. When he was about one year old his parents located in Iowa and he grew up there, attending the country schools. In 1880 the whole family came to Nebraska, settling in Hall county. They were practically without funds when they struck that region, and had a hard time to get along, experiencing every form of privation and hardship during their three years' residence in that vicinity.

While there they went through the drouth years, losing several crops during the dry times, and constantly getting worse off, finally leaving there without a dollar and worse off than when they landed. They then came to Brown county, arriving here in the spring of 1883. The father settled on a homestead, and after a short time our subject started for himself, securing employment on neighboring farms, and worked out until he was twenty years of age, then rented a farm and began to build up a home. He worked on rented farms for a number of years in different parts of the county, mostly on Buffalo flats. In 1889 he purchased his present farm and has improved it in good shape, now having a comfortable home and well equipped farm, also works quite a good deal of rented land. For the past several years Mr. Wheeler has been owner of a threshing rig in partnership with a brother, and they have operated this all over their section of the country, from this source deriving a nice income.

Mr. Wheeler was married in 1888 to Miss Stults, who is a daughter of M. D. Stults, one of the old-timers in Brown county. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, named as follows: Russell, Maggie, Willie, Dewey, Eddie, Hazel and a baby.

Mr. Wheeler takes a commendable interest in local affairs, is industrious and intelligent, and keeps well posted on the current events of the times.

GEORGE H. LAW.

George H. Law, widely known as an upright and industrious citizen, resides on section 4, township 12, range 44, Deuel county, where he operates a farm. He is one of the pioneers of the table land, and can recount many experiences of the early settlers there. He is energetic and progressive, has opened up a good farm in the locality, and has been an important factor in the development of the agricultural interests in the region, and well merits his success as a farmer and enviable reputation as a citizen.

Our subject was born in Livingston county, Illinois, on the 24th day of September, 1870. He was reared and educated there, coming to Deuel county, Nebraska, with his parents in March, 1886. The father homesteaded on section 10, township 12, range 44, and proved up in due time, going through the usual experiences of the earliest settlers in the section. In 1892 our subject filed on a homestead, proved up and then sold out. He came to the farm he now occupies, and here has made a success, cultivating about one twenty acres, and runs a small in that locality, he was appointed president of the state board of relief for the settlers who had suffered from loss of crops and were unable to make a living, and he was one of the most active in securing this help and assisting in their relief.

Mr. Moore was the leading spirit in establishing the Methodist Episcopal church in Macon, and was superintendent of the Sabbath school for twenty-four years, also acted as trustee of the church. For twelve years he served on the school board of the town. All this time his trade was increasing and he did well in a business way, constantly increasing his line of goods, and his success was due wholly to his energy and honesty of principle in dealing with the public, making him one of the most influential and highly respected citi-

In 1903 Mr. Moore came to Franklin and founded the Moore Mercantile Company in Franklin, taking in partnership his two sons-in-law, John Garrett, who formerly lived in Hexton, Colorado, and E. J. Briggs, of Trenton, Nebraska, where he owns a fine twelve hundred-acre ranch. They carried on this business up to 1906, then sold out to Messrs. Hesse & Co., who now operate the store. Mr. Moore also is owner of three hundred and twenty acres in Trenton, which is well stocked with cattle, horses and hogs, and his intention is to remove to this property in a short time and permanently reside there.

Mr. Moore has a family of two daughters and two sons. He is a member of the Masonic lodge. Ancient Order United Workmen and a prominent Grand Army of the Republic man.

JOHN T. WHEELER.

The gentleman whose name heads this personal history is one of the very old settlers of western Nebraska, coming here from Iowa about 1880 and settling at that time near Hastings, which then was a very small town with many Indian inhabitants. He moved to Brown county in 1882 and was among the earliest settlers in this region, voting at the first election ever held in the county. Since his early residence here he has been an important figure in the affairs of his community, and has passed through all the old Nebraska times, watching its growth from the primitive state into the thriving agricultural and commercial district it has now become.

Mr. Wheeler was born in Northhamptonshire, England, in 1831. His father, Benjamin Wheeler, was a soap and candle maker in that country, bringing his family to America when our subject was a lad of ten years. They crossed the Atlantic in a sailing vessel, experiencing the usual hardships during the voyage, spending several weeks, and sometimes even months, on the sea. After landing in New York city they came west, settling in Wisconsin in the town of Waukesha, which was at that time called Prairieville, and there John was raised, receiving a common school education and following farm work during most of the time, also threshing, teaming, etc., as a young man. During wartime he enlisted in Company G, First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, and with his regiment saw service at Fort Ellsworth, Virginia, and other points in the east, remaining with his company until the close of the war, then returned to his home town. He remained in Wisconsin for a short time, then moved to Iowa, settling on a farm, and spent ten years there, and as many were emigrating to Nebraska about this time, he joined a party who were traveling overland to that state, landing near Hastings, where he located on a homestead. There he started as the majority of the pioneers did, with very little money and a few household goods, team, wagon and a few tools, going through many hardships and much privation. The family witnessed the drouth seasons there, living in a sod house for a number of years, and many times hardly knew where their next meal was coming from, as they were unable to raise any crops during the dry years excepting a few vegetables and a very little grain. However, he remained on the place up to 1890, then came to his present location, owning at the present time a well improved quarter section, and is doing well. The farm is well supplied with good water, some timber and he has erected good buildings, and is succeeding in building up a very productive farm.

Mr. Wheeler was married November 15, 1855, to Miss Electa T. Palmer, who is now deceased. She left a family of the following children, namely: Emma Jane, Joseph L., Charles H., Caroline E., Alfred Benoni, Lucius F., Rosena H., James Franklin, Fred H., Ralph Waldo E., Harry Albert, Harvey U. and George C. All are now grown and settled in different parts of the country, and all are filling honorable vocations in life. Mr. Wheeler was again married on March 6, 1890, to Mrs. Elsie DeWitt, who was an early settler in these parts, her first husband being a pioneer homesteader, he dying during their early residence here, leaving his widow with a family of three children, as follows: Osa, Ira and Emma, all now married and living in homes of their own. Of his second marriage one child was born, Grace L., who is now a charming young lady. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler and family are held in high esteem in the community and have a large circle of friends.

J. G. MEYERS.

Among the leading citizens of Cheyenne county none stands higher in the minds of his associates than the gentleman here named. For many years he has been engaged in farming near Dixon, has developed a fine farm and enjoys all the comforts of a rural home and the esteem of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Meyers was born in the kingdom of Wittenberg, Germany, January 12, 1868, and grew up in that country. When he was seventeen years of age he came to America with his father, mother, three brothers and two sisters. They located in Sidney, Nebraska, and soon afterwards settled on a homestead about four miles southwest of the town of Potter, in Cheyenne county. There they started in the humble way of all the pioneers and rapidly developed a good farm, making good headway considering the different little discouragements they met with in the way of unfavorable weather conditions, etc. They saw some hard times, and after living on the homestead about three years the father was taken ill and his death occurred on Christmas day, 1888. The mother and children continued working the farm and succeeded in building up a comfortable home, and Mrs. Meyers and one daughter still occupy the place, which is situated on section 14, township 14, range 53.

Our subject began working for the Union Pacific Railroad Company about 1890, and remained in the employ of that concern for nine years, finally settling on a homestead on section 32, township 15, range 54, which originally belonged to his wife, and they have added to the farm until it now contains twelve hundred and eighty acres. Mr. Meyers has put about seventy-five acres under the plow, and raises considerable grain, also has a herd of one hundred cattle and other stock, including a nice bunch of horses. The ranch is fully equipped with good buildings of all kinds, and everything about the place is in fine shape, bespeaking good management and care in its operation.

Mr. Meyers was married to Miss Christina Stengel in December, 1905. Mrs. Meyers was born and reared in Germany, and came to this country with her parents when a few years ago.

Mr. Meyers is classed among the prosperous residents of his locality and takes a commendable interest in local affairs, lending his influence to the upbuilding of every enterprise which tends to its advancement and the welfare of those of his community.

In the latter year he bought the Johnstown Hotel and has run the place since that time, being very successful in the venture. He is a man of pleasant manners and good business ability, and has the faculty of making friends, which is a necessary quality in a man who successfully carries on a hotel business.

During his early residence here Mr. Deutler traveled all through this country as surveyor, having been elected county surveyor on the Republican ticket and serving two terms in that capacity. In this manner he became well acquainted with most all of the settlers in the region, making him one of the best known men in this part of the state. In 1905 he was Republican nominee for county treasurer, but was beaten by a small majority. He has always been active in local and county politics and is a staunch supporter of party principles.

In 1893 Mr. Deutler was married to Miss Lillian Beebout, whose father, William Beebout, is a well-known old settler of Brown county. Four children have been born of this union, namely: Jessie, Merle, Ellsworth and Clara, all born in Brown county.

MILO E. WEBSTER.

Milo E. Webster, one of the early settlers and prosperous farmers and ranchers of Davison precinct, Cheyenne county, lives on his finely improved estate of one thousand two hundred and eighty acres, where he has spent many years of his life. He is one of the pioneers who have gone through all the old-time "cow-men" and ranching experiences and come out successful in a wordly and spiritual way, gaining the esteem and confidence of all with whom he has had to do, and is now one of the leading citizens of his community.

Mr. Webster was born in the town of Sandsfield, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, September 3, 1860, receiving a common school education, helping his parents carry on the home farm, and after reaching manhood was employed in farm labor in his native county some five years. In 1887 he emigrated to the western country, arriving in Cheyenne county, Nebraska, in the spring.

He at once filed on a homestead in section 18, township 16, range 51, to which he secured complete title and then sold. He was employed for ten years on the Pomeroy ranch before starting into cattle raising for himself. In 1896 he purchased land in section 4, township 16, range 50, acquiring additional land surrounding until he now owns one thousand two hundred and eighty acres by purchase, and still occupies this farm. Here he has built up a fine home and ranch, having recently erected a large two-story, eight-room residence, which is tastefully furnished far beyond the average farm or ranch house in any of the western states. The barn and outbuildings are partly of stone and all are substantial and commodious. A view of the home and surroundings is to be found on another page.

Mr. Deutler filed on a homestead claim on his own account during this time, proving up on both, and in 1889 moved to Johnstown. For a number of years he farmed on rented land near the town, and later purchased a farm which he operated up to 1906.

Including a timber claim of one hundred and sixty acres in section 26, township 15, range 51, he is owner of one thousand four hundred and forty acres of good farm and ranch land, cultivating about a quarter of a section, on which he raises mostly small grains; he also deals extensively in stock, running one hundred and twenty-five head of cattle and twenty-five horses.

He makes a specialty of raising high grade Hereford cattle, and has quite a herd of fine animals of this breed.

Mr. Webster's father, Daniel Webster, is now dead, while his mother, who was Orpha Northrup in maidenhood, resides in Connecticut. Four of the five children in the family are living and of these Milo is second in order of birth. On February 14, 1907, Mr. Webster was married in Coulton precinct to Gertrude Witters, who was born in Indiana. Her father, S. P. Witters, of whom a sketch appears elsewhere in this work, came to Cheyenne county with his family in 1886.

One child, Clifford D., has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Webster. They worship with the Center congregation of the Methodist church in Davison precinct. Mr. Webster is active in local affairs, being a leading politician in state, county and national matters, voting an independent ticket. He affiliates with Sidney Camp, No. 1091, Modern Woodmen of America.

WM. SHATTUCK, JR.

Keya Paha county has no more enterprising or worthy citizen within her borders than the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this sketch. While he is a young man and not numbered among the real old-timers in the region, Mr. Shattuck has spent quite a number of years here, during which time he has acquired an extensive acquaintance and is esteemed and respected by his fellowmen.

Mr. Shattuck was born in Illinois, in 1879. His father, Wm. Shattuck, Sr., was owner of a good farm in that state. He was a native of Massachusetts, of American stock, and married Lucy Barney, also of the same birth and state, and they reared a family of three children, our subject being the second child. He lived at home until he was twenty-one, then started out for himself, following farm work in Boyd county, Nebraska, where he had located in 1895. He spent about seven years in that vicinity, then came to Keya Paha county and took up a homestead on section 24, township 35, range 18, put up a dwelling and proved up on the claim. He improved it in good shape and still makes it his home ranch, having ninety acres under cultivation, and engages in mixed farming and stock raising.

Mr. Shattuck is owner of a very fine registered French draught horse which is valued at one thousand five hundred dollars. He has had wide experience in the horse business and is considered a first-class judge of horses, having owned some very good animals since living in the region.

Mr. Shattuck was married in March, 1900, to Plausa Stoss, who is of Belgian stock, born in Omaha in 1879. They have two children, Ralph and Lucy. They occupy a comfortable home and our subject is classed among the leading young men of his locality, and considering the comparatively short time he has occupied his farm, has done exceedingly well. He is progressive and up-to-date in his methods of farming, and his success speaks well for his thrift and good business ability.

Politically Mr. Shattuck is a Republican but he has never taken an active part in politics, preferring to devote his entire time to the building up of his home and farm.

CHARLES C. NELSON.

Charles C. Nelson, classed among the prosperous and leading ranchmen of Morrill, formerly Cheyenne, county, Nebraska, is owner of a fine estate comprising one thousand three hundred and forty acres, situated on sections 29 and 30, township 19, range 51, and in addition to this property has three hundred and twenty acres on Cedar creek, both of which are "under ditch." Mr. Nelson is a genuine old-time stockman and cattle rancher, during a large part of his career following the range and becoming familiar with every phase of life on the western plains. His pleasant home in Camp Clarke precinct bespeaks the most painstaking care and good management in its operation.

Mr. Nelson was born in Windsor, Missouri, July 17, 1852, his parents having moved to Henry county, that state, in the forties. His father, James A. Nelson, was a native of Richmond, Virginia. The mother, Margaret A.

(Trinnier), was also a native of Virginia and died in Nebraska. Both parents were descendants of Irish stock. Charles Nelson, an only child, lived in Missouri until 1870, when he went to Texas, where for nine years he engaged in the stock business, riding the ranches in that state. He then came to Nebraska, settling in Cheyenne county, where he was employed by Tussler Bros., on the Merchant & Wheeler ranch, acting as foreman for that concern, he finally purchasing property in 1894, and operated it up to when he sold it. The ranch contained two thousand two hundred and forty acres and was stocked with three hundred horses and six hundred head of cattle. When he came to Nebraska he had no capital and started out one hundred dollars in debt at the beginning of his career. He took a home on Greenwood creek, proved up on it and sold. At one time he was engaged in liquor business at Bridgeport, but soon out and devotes his entire time to his ranch interests. The greater part of his land is devoted to hay, with two hundred acres alfalfa. During his residence in this region has met with some hard luck, but despite numerous drawbacks has managed to accumulate nice property, and is now in good circumstances and enjoys a comfortable home peace and plenty.

Mr. Nelson married Miss Alice Clark Windsor, Missouri, in 1874. Mrs. Nelson a native of Virginia, and after ten years happy married life she died leaving two daughters, Fredonia, wife of J. H. Clauges, mother of four children, now living at Bridgeport, the second daughter, Margaret, is the wife of Albert Cudy, living in Scotts Bluff. Mr. Nelson was married to Miss Lillian B. Franklin of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, in April, 1908.

Mr. Nelson was active in local affairs and without question one of the leading men in Cheyenne county. He is a Republican in politics, member of Frank Welch Lodge, No. 75 of Eureka Springs, and Accepted Masons, of Sidr We present a view of Mr. Nelson's residence on another page.

Mr. Phillips is a native of Cheyenne county, in this state, and later spent a number of years in Iowa, following nearly all of the time. While in Iowa he was active in local affairs, serving ten years as justice of the peace and various local offices. He is a veteran, having enlisted and served in the struggle. After returning to Nebraska, he only remained a short time in Cheyenne county, Iowa, where he farmed, coming to Nebraska with his family and settling in Tecumseh county. The subject was raised and educated in Iowa. Mr. Phillips came to Franklin county, settling on a farm of 160 acres, and engaged in stock raising. He afterwards spent some time in the eastern part of the state, returning in 1898 and purchased 40 acres, to which he has made various improvements and also bought adjoining his original tract. He now has 100 acres under cultivation, considerable hay and pasture land, a herd of Shorthorns, having registered cows and standardbred horses, which he expects to raise some more. The farm is well equipped with every convenience for his different enterprises, and is one of the prosperous and up-to-date farms in the county.

Mr. Phillips was married to Mrs. Douglas, daughter of Sanford Douglas, New York state, the latter a prominent pioneer. Our subject is the father of two sons, Carl and Carl, both now grown and home farm.

Politically Mr. Phillips is a Democrat. He has always been prominent in the community, serving for a number of years as justice of the peace in this county, also as treasurer and holding other local offices.

Mr. Bates was born in 1845, in New York state. He was of Yankee stock, his parents being farmers in New England, and he was raised and educated on a farm, living at home until he was thirteen years of age, then came with his parents to Illinois and after a few years spent in that state, coming to Nebraska and locating in Plattsmouth, arriving here shortly after the close of the war. Shortly afterwards Seth left home and started for himself, locating in Cass county, remaining there but a few months, then moved to Seward county. He was married there, in 1872, to Miss Martha Rickard, whose parents were of American stock, raised in New York state. To our subject were born nine children, six of whom are now living, named as follows: Ada, Bert, Dudley, Leed, May and Lloyd, all of whom are now grown and filling honorable positions in life.

Mr. Bates came to Rock county with his family in 1880, settling on the Niobrara river on a homestead. They traveled to their new home by team in a covered wagon, and upon landing here built a sod shanty in which they lived for several seasons, then built a house of logs and used this as a dwelling for many years. All household supplies had to be hauled from Oakdale, and during these tedious trips Mr. Bates was obliged to camp out by night under his wagon. They saw many hard times during these years, witnessing the drouths and unable to raise scarcely any crops, one year also having their entire season's planting hailed out. The country was very thinly settled, their nearest neighbor living three miles from their homestead. Mr. Bates had very little capital when he landed here, but through sheer persistence and energy he succeeded in building up a good home and accumulated a property consisting of two hundred acres of good farming land lying along the Niobrara river, on which he put good improvements, including a fine orchard and every comfort and convenience of rural life. He settled on Pine creek in 1901, purchasing a tract of one hundred and sixty acres. This place he put in first-class shape, and was getting along nicely, when the father was taken ill and died in December, 1905. Since his death Mrs. Bates has occupied the homestead and carried on the farm, assisted by her sons.

Mr. Bates was a man of exemplary habits, industrious and a good friend and neighbor, and his loss was deeply felt by all who knew him. He was always active in promoting the general welfare of his community, and he will long be remembered in the hearts of the old timers of the region.

F. A. ROWAN.

Among the successful and well-known citizens of Cheyenne county, Nebraska, who has made that region his home for the past twenty years, we mention the name of F. A. Rowan, residing on section 30, township 16, range 48.

Mr. Rowan was born in Butler county, Ohio, on September 5, 1862. At the age of four years he went to Illinois with his parents, settling in Woodford county, and there he grew to manhood, receiving a common school education, and helping his father carry on the home farm. The father still makes Illinois his home, now residing at Eureka, while the mother died a number of years ago.

In the spring of 1887 Mr. Rowan came into Cheyenne county, Nebraska. He at once filed on a homestead, taking the land as a timber claim, and now occupies the tract as the home ranch. He has succeeded in building up a fine farm, has erected good buildings of all kinds, and his ranch is one of the best equipped in the locality. It is situated on the "table," and here he has planted a fine grove of trees and has every convenience of modern farming in the way of machinery, etc. The place contains in all about nine hundred acres of deeded land, and besides this he has one section of leased school land which he operates in connection with his own ranch. About one hundred and sixty acres are under cultivation, and he has a large portion in pasture and hay land for about one hundred and fifty head of cattle and a bunch of horses.

Mr. Rowan was married in Cheyenne county, on February 1, 1893, to Miss Lottie J. Ravert, who is also a native of Ohio. Her parents were early settlers in Cheyenne county, coming here in 1887, where the father improved a homestead, he dying here some sixteen years ago. Mrs. Ravert is still living on her fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres, which was taken as a Kincaid claim. She is the mother of three children, Lottie, wife of our subject, William Lee, who is owner of a Kincaid homestead of six hundred and forty acres in section 7, township 17, range 48, this county, and Charles Neal Ravert, also a homesteader near Dalton.

Mr. Rowan has a family of five children, named as follows: Harold, Edna, Marjorie, Neal and Arthur, all living at home.

Mr. Rowan has taken an important part in the upbuilding of the region since he has lived here, helping establish the schools, and ing his influence in every instance to promote the welfare of the settlers. During the 1897-1902 he held the office of county commissioner in the county, and has always considered one of the foremost old time the region. He is an Independent in polit them, has become thoroughly conversant with the topography and development of this part of Nebraska. He is one of the leading citizens of his community, and has acquired a nice property by industry and good management, supplemented by honesty and integrity. He now resides in the town of Jamison.

Mr. Jamison was born in Atchison, Missouri, in 1861. When he was but one year old his parents moved to Nebraska City, making that their home for ten years, then went into Gage county and settled on a homestead, and there our subject was raised and educated. His father, Thomas B. Jamison, of Scotch origin, born in America, followed farming all his life, he now residing in Oklahoma. He married Sarah E. Hackler, who was of German descent, also born in America, died in Oklahoma March 6, 1906. There were five children in the family, our subject being the second in order of birth. One brother is now a practicing physician in San Francisco and one brother lives near his father's home in Oklahoma.

When our subject was of age he started for himself, engaging in farming and stock raising in Holt county, and there carried on the work successfully for eight years, then moved to Butte, Boyd county, Nebraska. At the time of their settlement in Butte, Mrs. Jamison was the first white woman in the town, as this was almost entirely an Indian settlement. Mr. Jamison bought a tract of land near the town, but devoted most of his time to politics. He was one of the organizers of Boyd county, drafted the bill which was presented to the legislature, and was the first sheriff elected in the county. He remained in the county up to 1903, taking an active part in its growth and development, then sold out his interests there and came to Keya Paha county, and soon after surveyed and located the town which bears his name. In partnership with two other men he owns the town site consisting of forty acres, also owns a homestead in Gregory county, South Dakota. At Jamison he is proprietor of a general store, carrying a four thousand dollar stock of merchandise, and enjoys a good trade from the surrounding country.

During his early residence in Nebraska Mr. Jamison saw some very hard times, at one time being obliged to burn hay to keep from freezing, as he was unable to get any other fuel. Often he became thoroughly discouraged, although he never felt inclined to give up, the difficulties which he passed through making him the more determined to succeed, which he has certainly done. During his career as a farmer and stockman he fed and shipped in one year seventy-six head of steers which brought his just one hundred dollars per head on the market. He has always been classed among the leading pioneers of the state, coming here as he did when a child and growing up with the country, and is now one of the wealthiest men of Keya Paha county. Since leaving Boyd county he has not taken an active part in politics, devoting all his time and attention to his different business enterprises. He votes a straight Democratic ticket and has always been a staunch supporter of his party.

In 1879 our subject married Miss Maggie B. Shirk, who was born and raised in Pennsylvania, and they are the parents of the following children: Orville J., Gracie Ellen, Della M. and Sarah, all of whom are married and settled in homes of their own excepting the last mentioned, who lives at home.

HENRY HUMMELS.

Henry Hummels, of Macon township, Franklin county, is a prosperous and widely known real estate dealer of that part of Nebraska. He also handles insurance, loans, etc. and has a wide reputation as a public auctioneer, officiating at nearly every large sale of live stock in the region, his services being in demand at every important sale held.

Mr. Hummels was born in Illinois. His father, Harmon Hummels, was a farmer in Menard county there, and came to Petersburg, Nebraska, in 1885, settling on a farm in Macon township, and on this homestead our subject has spent the greater part of his career, although he started in the real estate business at Hildreth in 1899 and has given the past ten years almost exclusively to his land deals. He advertises extensively in the Chicago and local newspapers, and lived in Hildreth for five years doing a nice business, then moved to Macon and since locating in the latter place has sold more of the land in this and adjoining counties, including Furnas, Redwillow and Frontier counties, than any agent in this section of the state. Besides Nebraska lands Mr. Hummels handles farm property in all of the different western states from Illinois to Colorado, making a specialty of settling homesteaders, and in this manner has been instrumental in bringing many settlers here from the east who have improved many fine farms and helped build up the locality.

In the insurance line Mr. Hummels represents some of the best old line companies, insuring against fire, lightning and accidents, and possibly writes more policies than any other agent in the county.

Mr. Hummels is enthusiastic about the future of Nebraska, and declares that people buy land here now will be able to double investments in the next year or two. At present time he has over forty thousand acres of picked land on his list for sale in this vicinity, and also has considerable land in South Dakota. He is a thorough business man and convincing talker and through honesty of purpose has gained the confidence of all whom he has any dealings by his straightforward principles. Mr. Hummels is a well-do man, and has accumulated his property through his persistence and strict integrity word and deed.

In political faith our subject is a Republican. He has taken a leading part in local affairs tending to promote the best interests of his community, and well deserves the success which has come to him as a reward of many years of labor. Mr. Hummels is a member of the local lodge of the Ancient Order United Workmen.

HENRY W. LOGAN.

For nearly a quarter of a century the gentleman above named has been identified with the history of the growth and development of western Nebraska, and his present prosperous condition evidences his earnest labors during these years. He now resides in the town of Norden, Keya Paha county, where he is engaged in the banking business and is regarded as one of the leading citizens and enjoys confidence of all with whom he has to do.

Mr. Logan was born in Jefferson county, Ohio, in 1847. His father, John, was of Irish blood, American born, and a farmer by occupation. He married Maria Wheeler, who was of old American stock. They were the parents of twelve children, of whom our subject is the fifth member, and all were raised in the country, receiving common school education. Henry started for himself when but a boy, following farm work, and became three miles from his parents' home, and engaged in sheep raising principally. He was very successful and came to Nebraska. Upon arriving in this state he located in Springview and established one of the first business enterprises in the section, carrying a stock of general goods and operated his store for six years, during that time doing a nice business. He sold his store, although he still owns a fine residence property there. In 1899 Mr. Logan Meholin, the latter having the business in 1887, which at the first bank in that end of Keya Paha and during the years 1892 to 1893 was the only banking institution in the county. Here our subject has been a successful business, doing a banking business, drawing his property many miles around the town of Norden. He is a thorough business man, conscientious, and stands very high in the estimation of his fellowmen, and is an authority on all matters of business pertaining to the good of the community.

In 1882 Mr. Logan was married to Mary L. Wolf, daughter of Thomas Wolf, who was a Quaker, and Emily C. Wolf, who was a Quaker stock. Mr. and Mrs. Logan have a family of four children, namely: Ernest, who is employed in his father's bank; Clarence, who is attending school at the Fremont College; Emma, who is deceased; and a daughter, Emma, who is deceased.

Mr. Logan was elected treasurer of Norden, Paha county in 1893, serving in that position for two terms. He has always taken an active part in politics, and is an ardent supporter of the Democratic party.

W. I. HIETT.

W. I. Hiett, a prosperous and successful citizen of Sidney, Nebraska, is the owner of a valuable estate on section 30, township 49, which he has put into fine shape. It is one of the best improved in the county, and is a man of keen business perception, formed on every subject of common importance, and takes a leading part in the promotion of every enterprise for the benefit to his community.

Mr. Hiett was born in Henning County, Virginia, May 21, 1847. His father, John Hiett, was of Scotch descent and lived in that portion of Virginia. Our subject grew up in his native state, coming west to settle in York county, Nebraska, where he remained up to 1892, then removed to Sidney, Nebraska. Here he filed on a homestead of 160 acres, which he still occupies, having added to his acreage since then, owning in all at present time three hundred and thirty acres. During the drouth seasons a number of his neighbors were driven to abandon their farms on account of the hard times, and Mr. Hiett also experienced some difficulty, but he was not inclined to be discouraged, and he managed to stick to his farm and to keep it in good shape, although he had several crops now cultivates eighty acres and keeps the balance for pasture and hay land, although the entire place is splendid farming land. He engaged in stock raising to quite an extent, running about fifty head all the time.

Mr. Hiett was married on December 13, 1874, to Dora Wilson, daughter of D. W. and Anna Wilson, old settlers in Illinois, where Mrs. Hiett was born and reared. Mr. and Mrs. Hiett have a family of four children, who are named as follows: Myrtle A., now a teacher in the public schools of Sidney, E. E. Hiett, who lives on a farm adjoining his father's, having a three hundred and twenty-acre farm; Estelle Verne and Herman Logan, the two last mentioned living at home and assisting in carrying on the farm.

Mr. Hiett is a man of superior attainments of mind, having a good education and one who has wide knowledge of affairs, having been an inveterate reader, and has for many years past handled numerous publications and standard works. He was a soldier in the Civil war, enlisting in the Fifteenth West Virginia as a private in 1864, and after seeing service in different states, was discharged from the army on August 16, 1865.

In political views Mr. Hiett is a staunch Republican and takes a deep interest in county and national politics.

SANFORD Q. SPAIN.

Sanford Q. Spain, classed among the prosperous and successful business men of Simeon, Cherry county, is also one of the very oldest settlers in that region. When he first came here his nearest neighbor was one and a half miles away and the second nearest a distance of twelve miles from his homestead. He has passed through all the old Nebraska times, and by dint of industry and economy has managed to acquire a valuable property, and enjoys a comfortable home and pleasant surroundings, besides an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and good neighbor.

Mr. Spain was born in Ohio in 1850. His father was a merchant in a small village there, and he raised a family of six children, our subject being the third in order of birth. When the latter was a small boy the family moved to Iowa, and at the early age of thirteen years Sanford left home and enlisted in the army, serving in Company I, Ninth Iowa Cavalry. He was with his regiment on marches through Arkansas, Texas and Missouri, participating in different engagements, and saw every side of a soldier's life. He remained in the service until the close of the war, then returned to Iowa and made that his home up to the fall of 1881. At that time he came to Polk county, Nebraska, settling in Osceola, and there engaged in the bakery business, carrying this on for five years. He next moved to Cherry county, filing homestead rights on a quarter section situated on Snake river, starting as most of the pioneer settlers did, with very little capital, erecting a sod shanty in which he lived with his family for a number of years, then built a log house. His first team was a pair of oxen which he used for all kinds of work, and despite many hardships and unfavorable conditions, succeeded in improving his place in good shape. He witnessed the drouth periods when he had hard work to raise any kind of a crop, also suffered from prairie fires which swept the region and at different times threatened the destruction of his farm buildings and other property. Many times he was obliged to fight these destroying fires night and day in order to save himself serious losses.

In 1890 Mr. Spain moved to Kennedy and there engaged in the stock business, continuing in this line of work up to 1905, when he settled in Simeon and opened a store, carrying a good line of general merchandise. He was also appointed postmaster of the town and has held this position during the past three years. He is considered one of the representative citizens of his locality, taking an active part in all matters pertaining to the best interests of the town, has held various offices of trust and served as justice of the peace for a number of years. He is now acting as school director. In political circles he stands very high, and has attended numerous conventions, acting as committeeman for several years. He is a Republican.

Mr. Spain was married in 1870, to Miss Mary Morgan, daughter of U. S. and Harriet Fry Morgan, who were for many years prominent farmers in Iowa, where Mrs. Spain was reared. Mr. and Mrs. Spain are the parents of the following named children: Rose, married and living at Spearfish, South Dakota; Grant, Nellie and Clement, all living in Valentine, Nebraska; Bessie, married and residing at Edgemont, South Dakota, while Nettie, Charles and Mary are still at home.

DAVID M. HUSTON.

David M. Huston, of Antelope township, Harlan county, is owner of a good farm in section 17, which consists of a homestead and tree claim comprising three hundred and twenty acres of good land. He settled on this in 1878 and has made this his home ever

Mr. Huston is a native of Ohio, born Bloomfield. His father, Frederick Huston, moved from Ohio to Peoria county, Illinois with his family in 1866, and there David to manhood. The father enlisted in the war and served in a great many different engagements, being with the Army of the Potomac on its various campaigns, and suffered all the hardships and privations of a soldier's career. After the close of the war he returned to Illinois and remained there up to 1886, when he came to Nebraska, locating in Harlan county. Mr. Huston, Sr., is an intelligent and well-read gentleman, still in good health, and is at present living with David on the latter's homestead. He is now in his eighty-fifth year.

Our subject has succeeded in building a good farm and comfortable home here though he has passed through some very trying times in accumulating his present property. During the early years he suffered all the discouragements incident to the life of the pioneer settlers, but states that conditions here are much more favorable for farming and stock raising than in Illinois, and he is in a position to know, as he has tried it in both states. Mr. Huston says that one man can work much land in Nebraska as would take two to work in Illinois.

In addition to his farming enterprises Huston owns a threshing rig in partnership with his son, J. J. Huston, and they operate all over the section and manage to make a good income during the season.

Mr. Huston was married to Miss Fanny Herndon, daughter of Joseph Herndon, who was an early settler in this county, coming here in 1882. He is a large landowner here and is well known throughout this part of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Huston are the parents of two daughters, Ella M. and Carrie E., and three sons, J. J., mentioned above, John and J. McKinley, all living at home and assisting their father in carrying on the farm. Mr. Huston has been assessor of his precinct for a number of years. He is also a member of the school board and active in all local affairs tending to the betterment of conditions in his locality, at present serving as president of the Antelope Fine Stock Company.

THEODORE SAGERT.

Theodore Sagert, an early settler and highly respected citizen of Sioux county, fought his way through many difficulties this land ever since. He is a man of keen business executive ability, and has proved his worth in many ways. Mr. Sagert was born in Brainerd, Minnesota, in 1862, and his parents moved to the old homestead there. The father, Theodore, assisted him in the business of farming all his life, and during the war Theodore assisted him in the business of bricklaying. At the age of nineteen he returned to America and came to Nebraska, locating in Page county, where he remained for two years, then moved to Leadville, Colorado. He lived in Denver for a short time, and after spending a short time in Page county, he came to Nebraska, where he spent the most part of his life. He was a pioneer in stock raising and stock raising in both states. He has worked as a partner in partnership with his son, J. J. Sagert, and after stopping at Chadron, Nebraska, he went into the Black Hills with his partner, C. H. Hollenbeck, and each picked out a location, Mr. Sagert a homestead on Horsehead creek, and proved up on the land. In 1886 he began railroading, following for five years. He was appointed roadmaster of the Black Hills division, and held that position for two years, receiving the appointment of division superintendent for the West Line into the Black Hills division, being on that line for the same length of time. He remained as such for six years, and during that time he supervised the building of the Deadwood branch, and was superintendent of the job. He is the oldest railroad man in this country.

In May, 1904, Mr. Sagert quit his position and settled in Harrison, Nebraska, where he has done much in the way of building up the county, one of the most important contributions being the building of the water works system. He has done all in his power to promote the best interests of the place in a commercial and educational way, and at present is serving as alderman of his ward.

Mr. Sagert was married in 1899 to Miss Freda D. Tripple, who was born in Hanover, Germany. They are the parents of two children, Emma and Freda, the latter now attending school away from home. The family have a pleasant home and are well liked by all who know them either in a business or social way.

JOHN JACOB GEISERT.

The subject of this sketch, John Jacob Geisert, was born in Baden Baden, in Germany, in 1868. His father, Matthew Geisert, lived and died in Germany, and his mother, Louisa Hornecker, was also a German. Mr. Geisert spent his youth in Germany, attending the German schools and afterward learning the trade of painting and paper hanging. He worked at these trades until 1886, and, in that year, he and the rest of the family joined an elder brother, who had emigrated to America at an earlier date. When this brother came to America in 1884, he located in Keith county, where he took a homestead on which the family lived after arrival.

Our subject worked as a clerk in a grocery store for two years, at the end of which time he began work at his trade, traveling through the states and visiting the cities of Buffalo, New York, Chicago and Denver.

In the fall of 1892 he was married in New York City to Miss Ernestina Bossert, who was a German by birth. Mr. and Mrs. Geisert have two children, Louise and Henry Jacob.

After his marriage Mr. Geisert came to Ogallala and followed his trade for a time, afterward going into business for himself. He opened a store in 1896, carrying a large and varied line of paints, wallpaper, furniture, carpets and the like. He also does contract work in painting and has built up an extensive business in this line. He has made a success of everything he has undertaken and has done his share in developing the natural resources of this region.

D. S. BATTERSHELL.

D. S. Battershell, another of the really old-timers of western Nebraska, is now owner and manager of the Paxton Hotel, the leading hostelry of the town of Paxton, and is held in high esteem as a public-spirited citizen. He has passed through every form of pioneer life since coming to this state, and during his residence here, covering a period of about fifteen years, has managed to gather together a comfortable property, and has made his influence felt in all matters of interest to the public.

Mr. Battershell was born in Indiana in April, 1863. When he was an infant his parents removed to Illinois, and he was raised in Champaign county. His mother and father were both natives of Kentucky, the mother now dead, while his father resides in Indiana. Our subject came to Clay county, Nebraska, in 1884 and farmed there for five years, then moved into Lincoln county, where he filed on homestead rights on section 26, township 11, range 33, and still owns this farm. He came to Cheyenne county in 1904, purchasing a piece of land on section 28, township 14, range 48, containing four hundred and eighty acres, and succeeded in building up a good home and developing a productive farm. This ranch he disposed of in 1907, and at that time moved into Paxton and engaged in the hotel business, which he also succeeded in carrying on at a profit.

In 1884 Mr. Battershell was married to Miss Laura Atkinson, who died in 1904, leaving a family of five children. In November, 1906, our subject was married to Clara Homer Kluckhuhn, and they have one child, Ada, a charming little miss.

Mr. Battershell is a Republican, and a staunch supporter of party principles.

H. G. GUMAER.

H. G. Gumaer, one of the early settlers of Nebraska, who has passed through all the pioneer experiences of the region, is now prosperous and successful as a result of many years of labor and persistence. He resides on his valuable estate situated on the North Platte river adjoining the old town of Oshkosh, where he is surrounded by all the comforts of rural life.

Mr. Gumaer was born in Waupaca county, Wisconsin, on October 31, 1856. He was the second child in a family of seven, three boys and four girls, and both father and mother are now dead. The former died while the family still lived in Wisconsin, about 1887, and the latter's death occurred when our subject was about nineteen years of age. Both parents originally came from New York state.

Mr. Gumaer left Wisconsin when he became of age, locating in St. Paul, Nebraska, in the spring of 1879, in company with his brother Alfred W., and they engaged in the lumber business at that place, their's being the venture of its kind in the town. In 1881 subject came to Oshkosh. He trailed a bunch of cattle from Howard to Deuel county, launched into the ranching and cattle business which he has followed continuously ever since. He selected a tract of land lying on the North Platte river, consisting of about one thousand acres, and has added every improvement to the place, and it is called one of the most valuable ranches in the region. He has it stocked with about five hundred cattle and a bunch of horses, and is rapidly becoming one of the wealthiest residents of the county. Gumaer is unmarried. He is a Democrat, was elected the first county commissioner of Deuel county, and again in 1903 was elected to the same office, and has served continuously in that capacity for the past six years. He is prominent in all county and state affairs.

Alfred W. Gumaer, brother of our subject, who was born in Wisconsin in September, 1854, is now living in Deuel county. He is in the United States custom service for several years, and is equally well known with G. Gumaer. He also is unmarried.

W. F. Gumaer, another brother, was born in Wisconsin in 1874. He came to Howard county, Nebraska, shortly after his father's death, and located at St. Paul, where he attended high school and graduated from that institution. He returned to Wisconsin, where he spent some years, and in 1906 came to Oshkosh. He was married here in the same year to a daughter of W. W. Bowers, and is now engaged in the general mercantile business.

Two sisters of our subject, Mrs. A. Covey and Mrs. H. B. Vandecar, are living in St. Paul, Nebraska, while another sister is the wife of H. L. Cook, residing at Lincoln. The other sister, Mrs. H. W. Potter, still lives in Wisconsin.

W H. PARRIOTT.

W. H. Parriott, who has devoted his entire career to agricultural pursuits, has met with pronounced success in Keya Paha county, Nebraska. He is owner of a fine farm there, has brought his land to a good state of cultivation and has aided in many ways in the development of the agricultural interests of his region. He is also one of the old-timers of the region, and has gained a high station through his integrity and industrious habits. He has a pleasant home on section 35, township 33, range 23, and there enjoys well served success.

JAMES SCOTT, DECEASED

A history or biographical wo the early days and the pionee Nebraska would not be comple sketch of the career of James S parted this life in 1894. James Scott spent a long and useful life in Keith county and by his death the community lost an upright and conscientious neighbor and citizen.

James Scott, deceased, was a native of Galway, Ireland, where he was born in 1830. He was reared and educated and married in his native land, taking as his helpmeet Sarah Britton, who was also of Irish nativity. This union was blessed with five children—Patrick, Martin, Delia, Kate and John.

James Scott came to America in 1880, and the balance of the family came the following year. For a time they lived in New Jersey, then later in Connecticut, from whence they came west to Wisconsin, settling on a farm. Here they sustained a severe loss by fire, losing house, household goods and all of the family records. The two sons, Patrick and Martin, were the first to try their fortunes farther west, coming to Keith county, Nebraska, in 1885. The next year the father and the rest of the family followed, locating on a homestead.

The boys worked on the section for the Union Pacific Railway Company and our subject ran the section house to help with the finances during the hard times and the drouth years.

Our subject's uncle, Tom Scott, came to the territory first in 1876, and November 26th located a homestead on the North Platte river. He lived there through all the years and was one of the prominent and successful old settlers of the region in which he located. He followed railroading a great part of the time.

James Scott was successfully engaged in farming and stock raising and built up a splendid home. The family now has a ranch comprising two thousand and eighty acres and one hundred and sixty acres of leased land, the farm being located on both sides of the South Platte river and extending back into the hills. The ranch is finely improved in every respect with good house, barns, spring, windmills, fences, trees and everything necessary in the conduct of a modern and prosperous stock and farm business.

James Scott passed through all the trying experiences common to the lot of the pioneer, but his persistent industry and constant endeavor left a good patrimony for his family when his death occurred.

SAMUEL H. OSBORNE.

Samuel H. Osborne, a very well known and highly respected citizen of Morrill (formerly Cheyenne) county, Nebraska, has a valuable estate in Bayard precinct, besides land in other localities near. He is one of the prominent old settlers in the region, and has passed through all the old Nebraska times, assisting in no small degree in the upbuilding and development of the vicinity.

Mr. Osborne was born in Licking county, Ohio, February 16, 1841, where he spent the first seven years of his life. In 1848 his parents, Joshua and Harriett (Rigby) Osborne, natives of Pennsylvania and Virginia, respectively, moved to Steuben county, Indiana, with their family of eleven children, seven sons and four daughters, and there our subject grew to manhood. He enlisted in Company H, Eighty-eighth Indiana Infantry, and was with Company A, First United States Engineers, for three years and three months, in active service all of that time in the Army of the Cumberland under Buell and later Rosecrans. He was discharged from the army at Nashville, Tennessee, having a brilliant record as a soldier. Three brothers were also in the service. One met his death in battle at Stone River, December 31, 1862; another brother was severely wounded at Huntsville, Alabama. Our subject was in the battles of Stone River and Perryville, Kentucky, at Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, and all the skirmishes between the latter place and Atlanta, Georgia. Here he turned back to Nashville under Thomas.

After the war closed Mr. Osborne returned to Indiana and remained there up to 1869, going at that time to McLean county, Illinois, and later to Iowa. In March, 1871, he came to Nebraska, and in October removed to Ottumwa, Iowa, where he worked for three years. Returning to McLean county, he followed farming until 1887, when he came to Nebraska, settling in that part of Cheyenne county which is now Morrill. Here he filed on a homestead on section 25, township 21, range 52, at that time entirely unimproved land. He pre-empted about three hundred acres in section 2, township 20, range 52, ninety acres of which were under irrigation; also acquired a Kincaid claim of four hundred and eighty acres in section 35, township 23, range 52. He improved these tracts extensively, having two irrigation ditches on the home place and has been engaged in grain and stock raising during all of the time he has been in the region. At the present time he has about fifty head of cattle and a small bunch of horses. He has a complete set of good farm and ranch buildings and every convenience and improvement for the proper operation of a model ranch. We call attention to a view of the home to be found in our illustrative pages.

Mr. Osborne is a Republican political active in local affairs, having served as of the peace for twenty-one years.

Mr. Osborne married Miss Emily W son in Oak Grove, Illinois, December 4, she being a native of McLean county, c state, a daughter of James and Polly (Henshaw) Benson. They have a fam four children, namely: Dale, married an living in Idaho; Thomas C. Osborne, m and living in Wayne, Nebraska, where l charge of the Presbyterian church; Eva and Dean H., living on the home ranch.

Mrs. Osborne is a member of the Chr church, while Mr. Osborne is a comra the Bayard Post, No. 350, Grand Army o Republic.

ANDREW NELSON.

Hopkins Bros. and their partners at the head of the red hog business. His get in 1906 won seventy-nine premiums at the different exhibitions out of ninety-two in which he had been entered.

Besides this celebrated animal Hopkins Bros. also own Red Prince Iam, by old Rea Chief Iam and dam Garnet, the latter being the sow that topped John Briggs & Son's sale held at Clay Center, Nebraska, in 1907, this sow bringing the fancy price of six hundred and ten dollars, purchased by Henry G. Warren, of Inland, Nebraska. Another splendid animal owned by Hopkins Bros. is Earl's Ohio Chief, sired by the six thousand-dollar Ohio Chief, and while the former is not a show hog, he is the sire of first-class stock and appeals strongly to breeders on account of qualities which make him a very desirable animal for market. At the present time Hopkins Bros. have on hand seventy-five pure bred hogs. Each year they hold a large sale at Holdrege, the sale taking place on the 17th day of February, and as it is advertised widely every breeder of note is well aware of the kind of stock which they will find. Some very high prices are realized for their offerings, and the demand is growing each year as breeders realize the superiority of pure-bred stock.

Besides the pure bred red hogs, Messrs. Hopkins feed and raise high-grade red Durocs for market. They have built up a paying business and their ranch is equipped with all the necessary buildings and conveniences, including pastures and pens for the accommodation of their stock. They have forty acres fenced off in three lots, with one ten-acre timber tract, also patches of alfalfa and grass land. The balance of the place is used for pasture. The ranch is elegantly situated, of the best soil, and everything is of the very highest class, both men devoting their entire time to the hog breeding business, which they declare is the best road they know of to success. They have the judgment to buy the best animals in the first place, and the industry and energy to develop from this stock something still better, and together with this ability they possess the necessary adjunct of proclaiming the merits of their herd in all its excellence from the housetops, so to speak, in order that all in need of such stock as they produce may know where to apply. They are among the leading advertisers of pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs in the country, and for these energetic and enterprising young men one is safe in predicting that their career will bring the profit and substantial reward which they so richly deserve.

WILLIAM MIKA.

Among the successful and prosperous farmers and stockmen of Cheyenne county, we give the name of William Mika, who is owner of a fine estate in section 18, township 13, range 47. He has made this region his home for the past twenty years and more, and during his residence here has built up a good home and gained the confidence and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Mika was born in Fort Madison, Lee county, Iowa, on the 21st day of September, 1859. The first ten years of his life were spent in that vicinity, then his parents gave him into the charge of an uncle, who took him to Hanover, Washington county, Kansas, and he remained there for five years, returning to his boyhood home in 1874, being called there by the serious illness of his father, who died January 1, 1875. He spent three or four years with his mother, then returned to Kansas, and was back and forth between Iowa and Kansas a number of times during the next several years. He was married at Hanover, Kansas, August 8, 1882, to Miss Catherine Hlava, and together they came to Cheyenne county, Nebraska, in the spring of 1887. Mr. Mika took a homestead on section 18 in the fall of the previous year, and they located on this land and began to develop a farm, starting as was usual with the pioneers in a sod shanty, and going through many privations and meeting many discouragements in the shape of failure of crops, etc., and it was a number of years before he was able to get ahead any, managing, however, to make a comfortable living. After times grew better he began to improve his place by the erection of good buildings, and adding land to his original possessions, so that he is now owner of about eight hundred acres, cultivating about one hundred acres and using the balance as a stock ranch, and running a large herd of cattle and small bunch of horses.

Mr. Mika has one of the pleasantest homes in his locality, and he has a charming family of children, two of whom are married and the rest living at home, named as follows: Mary, wife of Frank Oliverious, and Agnes, wife of Frank Stimka, both families living in Cheyenne county; Kate, Willie, Eva, Lillie, Frankie and Sophia, who assist their parents in carrying on the home farm. Mr. Mika's mother still resides in Fort Madison, Iowa, while both parents of Mrs. Mika died in Bohemia some years ago. Mr. Mika takes a commendable interest in local matters, and has done his full share as a good citizen of his community. In political sentiment he is a Democrat.

FRANK W. PEACOCK.

Frank W. Peacock, one of the substantial residents of Cherry county, has played an important part in the upbuilding of this region. He has been engaged in various enterprises during the years of his residence in this section and has been an important factor in bringing about its present prosperity. He is the owner of a good estate here, and well merits his success and high standing.

Mr. Peacock was born in Huron county, Ohio, in 1861. His father, William, was an old settler in Sheridan county, Nebraska, in England, and following ranching in this for many years. He married Ann Dickson, who was of Irish descent, born in America. They were the parents of six children, subject being the eldest, and all were reared in Ohio, receiving a common school education. Frank lived at home until he was two years of age, when he emigrated to Iowa, settling on a farm, which he carried on about a year, then came to Sheridan county, Nebraska, and homesteaded a tract of land some distance south of the town of Don. His first dwelling was a sod house with dirt floors, and he began as nearly the pioneers were obliged to do in those days handling ox teams, etc. He went through every part of pioneer experience, all of which were met with a sturdy determination and fortitude that would discourage one of the present-day farmers. He succeeded in proving up on his farm and worked faithfully to improve it in every way, meeting with losses caused by the drouth seasons, and one through his entire crop by hailstorms. He passed through eight hard years, during which he was unable to raise one good crop, then began to get a little better, he was able to make a little headway, and continued to live it up to 1898. At that time he undertook the management of the Balch ranch and acted as foreman of the place for two years. He was next employed on Shaddock's ranch in the same capacity for one year, both being situated in Cherry county.

In 1901 Mr. Peacock moved to Merriman and engaged in the hotel and livery business which he carried on for a time, then sold both and started a grocery and butcher business. This he kept for several months, then purchased his present store, into which he has a complete line of drugs. He built up a good trade and did a thriving business for three years, then sold out his drug stock. Mr. Peacock has met with considerable success in different enterprises, and is classed among

William J. Cooney was married in 1881 to Miss Laura Radcliffe, of Mt. Ayr, Iowa, her parents being from Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Cooney have been blessed with eight children—Eva, Lena M., Benjamin W., Emerson R., Bertha Lucile, William J., Laura C. and Olive Eona.

A. E. WHETSTONE.

Keya Paha county has no more enterprising or worthy citizen within her borders than the gentleman whose name appears at the head of this review. Mr. Whetstone has been a resident of this locality for the past nine years, and during that time he has acquired an extensive acquaintance, by all of whom he is highly esteemed and respected for his true worth of character.

Mr. Whetstone was born in Henry county, Illinois, in 1860, and reared there on a farm. His father, W. J. Whetstone, was born in America of German parentage, and followed the blacksmith's trade, also farmed much of the time. During the war he served in the Fifty-fourth Indiana Infantry for about eighteen months and saw much hard service in that time. He married Cynthia Barkus, who was a native of Indiana, and they reared a family of eight children, our subject being the third in order of birth. When the latter was about eighteen years of age he left home and began on his own account, emigrating to Kansas, where he spent one year, then came into Dawes county, Nebraska, following farm work in Kansas and later in Nebraska. After a short time in Dawes county he filed on a homestead and pre-emption, proving up on both tracts, and during those first years here he passed through pioneer experiences, seeing some pretty hard times. He lived in a sod shanty for a number of years, witnessed the drouths and met with many discouragements so common to the early settlers in the section, and although he often became disheartened he never gave up hope, but continued to devote all his efforts to improving his property and eventually succeeded in building up a good home there.

In 1901 Mr. Whetstone came to Keya Paha county, purchasing a partly improved farm of two hundred acres on section 16, township 33, range 24. He has been engaged principally in the stock business since locating here and has done well. At the present time he has twenty-five head of cattle and about seventy-five horses, besides quite a bunch of hogs. His farm is well supplied with substantial buildings and improvements of all kinds, and Mr. Whetstone is progressive and up-to-date in his methods of operating his ranch.

In 1883 Mr. Whetstone was married to Miss Corinne Crandall, daughter of Leroy and Elizabeth Golden Crandall, the former dying when Mrs. Whetstone was a small girl. Six children have been born to our subject and his estimable wife, named as follows: Bertha, Jennie, Harry, William, Mabel and Mildred, all living at home except two, who are married. Mr. Whetstone is a Democrat and while he does not take an active part in politics he evinces a great interest in local matters, and has been especially helpful in establishing and building up the schools of this locality as well as in other sections where he has made his home.

REV. M. E. DOLAN.

Rev. M. E. Dolan, pastor of St. Patrick's church in Chadron, Nebraska, who during the comparatively short time he has been engaged in ecclesiastical work here (about two years) has gained a host of friends and made his influence felt in many ways throughout the community, is highly esteemed by all regardless of religious faith, and under his guidance the parish of which he has charge has prospered in a marked degree.

Rev. Dolan was born in the city of Loc Ray, County Galway, Ireland, in 1872. When he was a child of five years his parents came to America and settled in Omaha, Nebraska. There our subject grew up, attending the public schools and later entered the Creighton University. He spent some time in St. Paul, Minnesota, where he took a theological course, and then went to Harvard University, thus preparing himself thoroughly for his church work. In 1904 he was ordained a priest of the Holy Catholic church, and for one year acted as assistant pastor in the church at O'Neil, Nebraska, and later in the same capacity at the new cathedral in Omaha.

In 1907 Father Dolan accepted the pastorate of St. Patrick's church in Chadron, and during his brief residence here he has become greatly beloved by the people of his congregation, always ready to lend a helping hand to those in need of his services, either as pastor or friend, and his labors are thoroughly appreciated by the entire community.

JAMES CHILDERS, DECEASED.

James Childers, deceased, was for ber of years prior to his demise a pro citizen of Cherry county, Nebraska.
engaged in various enterprises in the including the cattle business, ranchi restaurant and saloon business. He wa of active public spirit and did much his lifetime to help in building up the and his loss was deeply felt by the enti munity.

Mr. Childers was born near the t Mystic, Iowa, in 1858, and raised on there. His father, James, who was of descent, followed farming during all time. He raised a family of three child subject being the youngest, and he home until he was twenty years of a started for himself, coming to Tilden, ka, where he engaged in the mercanti ness and carried it on up to 1885. He to Cody from Tilden, opened a restaur built up a good trade, and at the sar bought and shipped cattle for market.
living in Cody he made a trip to Texa ing for a new location, but after look ground over thoroughly was unable anything that suited him, so decided back to Nebraska. He spent about on half years in the south altogether, t turned to Nebraska, and spent the fo years in Cody, Cherry county, until which time he moved to Merriman and in the saloon business, which he car up to the time of his death, when Clyde took charge of the establishment
ing his residence in western Nebras
Childers succeeded in accumulating a c able property. He was classed among settlers of these parts, coming here dur ing the hard times here taught for three years. He became very much discouraged with conditions at that time and made a trip to Missouri with the intention of trading his homestead for land there, but on looking the ground over was satisfied that this was the better place of the two and returned, determined to make a success, which he has accomplished in a remarkable degree, as is evidenced by his present holdings.

When Mr. Lance first ran for county clerk he was elected by a majority of seven votes. The second time he won over his competitor by a plurality of one hundred and twelve votes, and the third time carried every precinct in the county. He is now acting as chairman of the Populist committee, and has been secretary or chairman of the same ever since coming here. He is active in all matters of public interest, and his influence is felt in every movement pertaining to the welfare of the people of his community.

Mr. Lance was married in the spring of 1890 to Miss Carrie Sloan, born and raised in Iowa, and they have three children, namely: Laura A., Charles J. and Samuel S.

HERVEY FORD.

Hervey Ford, a leading citizen of Brown county, Nebraska, was one of the first men to settle on a homestead and build a house on Buffalo Flats. Mr. Ford was born on a farm in Coshocton county, Ohio, August 2, 1837. His father, Robert Ford, was born in Ireland, came to this country with his parents when but three years of age, grew up in Coshocton county, Ohio, and married Miss Sally Boyd, American-born but also of Irish descent. Our subject was reared in Ohio, assisting his father in the farm work, and attending school during the winter months. At the age of twelve years he started out to shift for himself, working on farms near his home until the breaking out of the war, when he enlisted in Company C, Fifty-first Ohio Infantry, September 3, 1861. After being thoroughly drilled his company was ordered south to Kentucky, and was with the Army of the Cumberland until 1863, marching all over the state of Tennessee. Through exposure and hardship he became afflicted with rheumatism and other diseases and received his discharge on account of disability. He recovered fully from this and in 1864 enlisted in the one-hundred-day service, going to Petersburg and Richmond, where he participated in the siege of those places, and during the summer of that year was almost constantly under fire from the batteries. After the war had closed he went back to Ohio and lived there until 1869, when he came west to Kansas, settling in Wilson, where he lived among the Osage Indians, leading a regular pioneer's life. He remained there for five years, going through all the rough experiences which fell to the lot of the sturdy old settlers of those days, then went on to Indian Territory, where he was engaged in farming on Indian lands for the Cherokees in that region for two years, then returned to Kansas. He was without money and obliged to make his living working at whatever he could find to do, for the most part hiring out to different farmers and ranchmen. He soon became dissatisfied with this, and, leaving Chautauqua county the 7th of June, came to Nebraska, arriving in Brown county August 8, 1880. Here he settled on a homestead in Buffalo Flats, driving through to Buffalo Flats with two yoke of oxen and covered wagon, leading a pony. After the rough journey of two months in the open he took up a homestead and went to work at once, erecting a log shanty sixteen by twenty-four feet, afterwards adding a sod room to it, making a fairly comfortable dwelling. He lived in this for some time, and then took up a tree claim, on which he now resides. He endured hard times while establishing his farm, experiencing much suffering during the winter of 1880-81, being snowed under in his shanty and unable to get out for supplies, which became so low that they were in danger of being entirely without food. At last he was able to dig his way out and secure more provisions to alleviate their hunger. During the summer of 1880 he had broken about ten acres of ground and the next year raised his first crop on this homestead. In 1882 his yield was thirty bushels of wheat to the acre, and from that time on he has produced good crops and enough provisions to supply his family. This place consists of one hundred and sixty acres, one hundred of which are under cultivation, and the balance in pasture. He enjoys a comfortable income annually as a result of his hard labor in the past and with his place well improved and well stocked, with a good set of substantial farm buildings, he can rest content, knowing he is provided for in old age.

In 1868 Mr. Ford was married to Miss Martha A. McMunn, a native of Ohio, of Irish descent. They have a family of three children, who are named as follows: Clemmie May, wife of Howard C. Lewis; Theron B. and Thadius K. Mr. Ford enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him, and takes a warm interest in all religious and educational matters in his locality. He has served district in different capacities, having been rector for a number of years past. Politically he is independent, voting for men and principles instead of party. He is a comrade of the Grand Army of the Republic. Portraits of Mr. and Mrs. Ford will be found on another page of this volume.

A. A. SCOUTT.

A. A. Scoutt, one of the successful business men and stock growers residing in Kearney, Nebraska, has made that region his home for the past fourteen years, and that time has won for himself an enviable reputation as a worthy citizen and prosperous agriculturist, and stands high in the estimation of all who have been associated with him in a business or social way.

Since coming here Mr. Scoutt has made a specialty of raising hay during the summer months and feeding sheep through the winter and in these different enterprises has been successful. During the season of 1907 he and put up twelve hundred acres of hay and the previous winter fed one thousand head of sheep and got them through in fine shape making him a nice profit when shipped to market. He is an enthusiastic admirer of the state of Nebraska, considering the crops of alfalfa and the feeding facilities of Buffalo county better than any place he has ever known and justifies the high price of land prevailing in Kearney especially, believing that there is a better chance to succeed or obtain better results from his operations.

Mr. Scoutt controls a large tract of land known as the Watson ranch, from which he secures his hay crop and also carries on his sheep feeding work there.

A brother of our subject, who lives in Chicago, Illinois, is a partner with Mr. Watson, owner of the Watson ranch, in the block machinery business, and their offices are located in that city, at 510 New York Life building. They have succeeded in building up a large business and are making money in it.

the pioneer Nebraskan, and has come through privation and discouragement a substantial and influential man. He resides on his elegant farm, but has retired from its active management, devoting most of his time to his home, and every comfort, and is preparing for the evening of his life the harvest of his earlier labors.

Mr. Manning was born in Anderson, Missouri, in 1857, and comes of good American stock. His father was a successful farmer, and the family lived in Michigan until our subject was nine years old, then he came to Denver, Colorado, settling on a ranch near that city. This ranch was situated six hundred miles from a railroad, and there they lived for a number of years following the range and roughing it through the summer, and went through all the vicissitudes of life on the frontier. During the years he owned ranches in that vicinity he carried on a successful business. In 1892 he came to Grant county, Nebraska, where the county was at that time very sparsely settled. He began to develop a farm through sod house experience, and during the first few years was obliged to haul all his alfalfa from North Platte, which was eighty miles distant from his homestead, making the wagon many times in all kinds of rough weather, often encountering dangers in the mountains of hordes of Indians and wild beasts who roamed the prairies. He occupied the farm up to 1904 and succeeded in building up a large herd of sheep each year, and was one of the leading ranchmen of his locality, his place being one of the best equipped in the way of good buildings and every modern convenience of a laboring nature.

In 1904 Mr. Manning left his ranch and moved to Denver, making that his home for four years, when he returned to Grant county and settled on a ranch which lies near his son's place, in township 22, range 37. Here he has six hundred and forty acres of land, with every improvement, and is very comfortably situated.

Mr. Manning was married in 1876 to Miss Mollie Dodd, of Colorado. They have one son mentioned above. Our subject has been a resident of Grant county off and on ever since it was organized. He has always taken an active part in county affairs, and was the first county clerk elected to the office, holding the same for four years.

VACLAV VACIK.

Vaclav Vacik was born February 8, 1851, in Strejckovicich, Krajs, Plaen county, Prestic, Bohemia, Europe. His father owned a very large farm there and was a dealer in horses, cattle and grain. They had the handsomest house and largest barns in the village of Strejckovicich. His mother was of German descent, a very charming and accomplished woman. There were four boys in the family and four girls, Vaclav being the youngest of the sons, and was always the pet of his mother. On one occasion several of the children came to the house to play, and while the family were in the house the youngsters set the barn on fire and everything was burned to the ground, and the fire even spread to neighboring houses. The Vacik family lost house, barns, grain, horses and cattle, and were completely ruined by the disaster. They started to build up their home again, and during the construction of some building the father was killed. He was at work and in stepping backward over a log fell and broke his neck, although he was not instantly killed, living about two hours after the accident, but not being able to speak before he died. He was fifty-four years of age at the time of his death. After the father's death Mrs. Vacik was obliged to go ahead and finish the building, and Vaclav was compelled to go out to work, as they were running into debt. His first job was working for a cousin at seventeen dollars a year and his board, and after a while was able to earn twenty-two dollars a year.

When our subject grew to manhood he more and more disliked the idea of being under the Austrian government, also the thought that he was compelled to serve as a soldier, so decided that he would leave home and come to America, and when but little more than sixteen years of age started out alone on his trip into the world, taking passage on an emigrant ship for America. His mother begged him not to leave his native land, but he told her that he could not bear the thought of having to be a soldier, which was his only object in leaving Austria. He left there on October 6, 1867, and was on the ocean thirteen weeks, landing in Baltimore, and from there came directly to Chicago, Illinois, arriving there on January 22, 1868. He was without money and had a hard time to get along, as he was unable to speak a word of English, and had been used to every comfort and luxury in his own home. For twelve weeks he was not able to secure any employment and in that time got into debt, having met some Bohemian friends who aided him, and he finally secured work from a Frenchman, for which he received three dollars and a half per week for sandpapering molding in a lumber yard. He continued in the work for one year, then went to Champaign county, Illinois, and picked corn on a farm, for which he received twenty dollars a month and board all winter. He returned to Chicago in the spring and began working for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railway. This was in 1869, and he held his position for two years, working in the freight yards, saving his money, and at the end of that time had considerable laid by. In 1871 he left Chicago, going to Columbus, Mississippi, but after a stay of ten days and not finding it pleasant to live where the negroes were so plentiful, he decided to try another location. He was told that he could do well in Alabama, so went to Mobile, where he expected to make a good living, but instead of bettering himself found conditions worse and more negroes than in Columbus. He began to think Chicago was not so bad a place after all, and got his partner to go back there, but their money was all gone by this time, and they were obliged to beat their way the best they could. They had to cross the Mississippi river from Columbus, Kentucky, to Cairo, Illinois, and stole aboard one of the steamers and got under a bed, being unobserved by any of the crew, arriving at their destination safely. On trying to leave Cairo they watched their chance and tried to board a freight train, but after Vaclav had thrown his grip in a car he was unable to board it himself and the train rolled away with all his clothes and possessions. He went to the station and tried to get the agent to give him a ticket, but the latter told him he could not do it, so after Vaclav had told him of the loss of his grip and described it the agent told him that the brakeman had found such a grip and gave it back to him, and you may be sure that he was a very pleased person on regaining possession of it. He again started on his journey, getting as far as Broadline, Illinois, and there hired out as a farm hand on the farm of John Alexander, spending a short time there, then went to Chicago, where he worked for a blacksmith on Michigan street, remaining there through the winter. He again got a job with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and continued with them up to 1872, and during this time he became acquainted with Miss Maria Chervenka, and they were married February 11, 1874.

Mr. Vacik made his home in Chicago for one year, then with his wife came to Wilber, Saline county, Nebraska, where Mrs. Vacik's parents resided. After about three years that vicinity they returned to Chicago when they had just gotten located there a big strike started and a man was unable to secure hardly any kind of employment. The strike is well remembered by most of the timers, as the state troops were called to suppress the mobs. After walking the streets for a whole month Mr. Vacik had the fortune to obtain employment at the present wage of one dollar per day, but being dissatisfied and returned to Wilber, Nebraska where he bought a farm of eighty acres for six dollars and eighty cents per acre also bought a team of oxen, cultivator and up a sod shanty, and began to farm. He was exceptionally well there at first, and soon changed, when he was able to trade an oxen for a team of horses, put up better trappings of frame, and rented land from a neighbor. He raised as high as twenty-five hundred bushels of corn one season alone, and crops were good. He finally got into the business, starting with a herd of two hogs and fifty hogs, fed them for two years when nearly ready for market they began to sicken and die. The first he noticed was one day when he took a load of the pens and was throwing it to the hogs that they appeared sick, and they began until he only had three of his entire drove. This was a serious loss to him and so he went back greatly, so he decided to try some part of the state, and moved west, locating through the advice of an agent named Kuiera, who had land advertised in the range 48, in Cheyenne county, and he went here in 1886. Here he started in full of and expected to raise a crop the same way as was used to do in Saline county, and he and sowed, but never reaped up to 1887 when he was fortunate enough to raise a crop. At this time the drouths began to take the region and people began leaving claims, there remaining only besides one subject, Adam Schimka, who had come here from Wilber county at the same time. After some of the old settlers came back and reside here.

Mr. Vacik had poor crops for a number of years, then times began to improve. In the year 1904 he had a fine crop of grain all ready to harvest when along came a storm and destroyed it utterly. Since then he has met with better success and has raised very good crop every year. He has ninety-three and sixty acres of land and believes is no better farming country than Nebraska. Mr. Vacik engages in quite extensively, having at the one hundred and fifty cattle and horses. The ranch is supplied with a set of good farm buildings, including sheds, granary, and handsome machinery. He is considered among the wealthy locality, and states that he is well and happy, and if any one wants to see him, his start to come and see him and them, as his life's history is too long to tell.

Mrs. Vacik was born in Nevers, Nebraska, July 4, 1854. She lived in a small town until twelve years of age and was very hard as a young girl, as she was an invalid most of the time, afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism. She was in the family and all the work of the home fell upon her shoulders, as she was poor and not able to hire a servant. She lived in a cottage and about their sessions were two cows and five chickens had about two acres of ground, on which she raised potatoes and other vegetables, and a rye, which the mother was obliged to cut. She had been a soldier for eight years, cutting the grain with a hand sickle. She was a rough rider in 1848, taking part in the Mexican war. Mrs. Vacik had younger brothers and sisters, only two of whom were living beyond childhood. After her father recovered from his illness she was able to work, receiving wages of twenty cents a day and obliged to find his meals. They were deeply in debt, having incurred a doctor's bill of over four hundred dollars, and were compelled to sell their chickens, grain and even the home, to pay the bills. After settling all obligations they had enough to bring them to America, leaving Prague on June 10, 1866. After arriving in Chicago and Maria secured work as a servant at one dollar per week. Her father could not get steady employment, got a handsaw and went from house to house and chopped and sawed wood, for which he received a few cents a day, and in this manner they managed to make a scant living. When Maria was fifteen years of age she went to work in a tobacco factory and at first received three dollars per week, and after a time making as high as eight dollars, and were so able to buy a home, purchasing a cottage on Burlington street, which was in the district afterwards swept by the fire, and the memory of the great Chicago fire is still fresh in her memory, as it started in the barn of one of their neighbors. Every one knows the origin of the fire—starting as the result of an overturned lantern when milking a cow, so it is unnecessary to repeat this story.

After the fire they were very fortunate in every way and saved up considerable money. They left Chicago and came to Nebraska, locating on a farm of eighty acres, which Mr. Chervenka purchased for eight dollars an acre, and they still reside on the homestead. He is now eighty-five years of age and enjoys good health. Mrs. Chervenka died eleven years ago at the age of seventy-three years, and one daughter lives with the father and cares for the home. Maria was married to our subject before coming to Nebraska, at the age of twenty.

Mr. Vacik and his family have become wealthy during the past few years, and they have a pleasant and happy home. Some bad luck has attended them, one instance being when their house was struck by lightning and burned to the ground, this misfortune occurring in 1891, and for some little time they were obliged to live in the cellar until another house was built. In the following year, after harvest time, his straw stacks caught fire and quite a loss was entailed. This fire was started Mr. Vacik's little son, who had crawled in a hole in the side of a stack where there were some little dogs which he wanted to see, and as it was dark he lighted a match, with disastrous results. During the same year he lost thirty-six head of cattle and three horses. In spite of all these misfortunes he has come out victorious and is still full of energy and ambition, and feels well repaid for all his labors by his present prosperity and peace.
